

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

1877

CONTAINING

THE PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES

OF THE

FORTY-FIFTH CONGRESS, THIRD SESSION.

VOLUME VIII.

WASHINGTON:
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.
1879.

VOLUME VIII, PART III.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD AND APPENDIX,

FORTY-FIFTH CONGRESS, THIRD SESSION.

Mr. HARRIS. I desire to say that if it meets the approbation of the Senate to go on and act upon the bill and dispense with further proceedings under the call, there being a quorum present, I shall not myself insist upon further proceeding under the call.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I wish to say that I have staid here at great inconvenience, to keep up a quorum of the Senate, and have tried to do it and not waste time in speeches; but if the Senate the moment two or three gentlemen are willing to come are ready to excuse all the rest, then I hope I shall be considered excused the moment you dispense with further proceedings under the call; and I shall beg leave to go home when I can do so without any contempt of the order of the Senate.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask for a statement of the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York moves that further proceedings under the call and under the order be dispensed with.

The motion was not agreed to, there being on a division—ayes 15, noes 19.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the motion of the Senator from Alabama as amended.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant-at-Arms will execute the order of the Senate as directed.

Mr. HARRIS. It is not in order I suppose to proceed with any other business pending this call.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is not, except to move to suspend the call or to adjourn.

Mr. EATON. I have had frequent occasion to say that I have very great confidence in the opinion of the Chair, but is not the Chair wrong? Let us reflect one moment. There is no call here. A certain resolution has passed ordering the Sergeant-at-Arms to perform certain duties, but on a vote had it is disclosed that there is a majority of the Senate present. There is a quorum here. Where is the rule that prevents our going on with the ordinary business when a quorum is here?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the rule and the Senator will see that pending the execution of the order of the Senate but two motions are in order.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is the parliamentary law too.

The Secretary read as follows:

3. No Senator shall absent himself from the service of the Senate without leave of the Senate first obtained. Whenever it shall be ascertained that a quorum is not present, a majority of the Senators present may direct the Sergeant-at-Arms to request, and, when necessary, to compel the attendance of the absent Senators, which order shall be determined without debate; and, pending its execution, and until a quorum shall be present, no motion, except a motion to adjourn, nor debate, shall be in order.

Mr. EATON. There is a quorum present. That is the very point that I make. There is a quorum here, and therefore we can go on with business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The quorum of the Senate have ordered the execution of the order, the last order of the Senate.

Mr. EATON. Upon my word I do not see that that is the rule at all. I think we have a perfect right to go on with the regular business whenever there is a quorum here. A quorum can do anything they choose.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. But we must go on with the call.

Mr. EATON. There is no call about it. The call is ended. There is a certain order that the Sergeant-at-Arms shall bring certain recalcitrant Senators here; but that is not a call of the Senate. It is an order made by a majority vote of the Senate, and therefore that majority of the Senate can go on with the business of the Senate, in my judgment.

Mr. HOWE. I think there is an order of the Senate being executed. That seems to me very plain. I do not recall what the practice is, but upon the plain reading of the rule it seems to me that the restraint upon the Senate continues no longer than until a quorum is present. Pending its execution and until a quorum shall be present, debate shall not be in order, and only the prescribed motions may be entertained and until a quorum shall be present.

Mr. PADDOCK. I move to suspend all further proceedings under the call. There is evidently a quorum present.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. That is disclosed by the vote. There is no question about that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nebraska that all proceedings under the call be suspended.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 14, noes 15.

Mr. PADDOCK. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MORRILL. I am paired with the Senator from Indiana, [Mr. McDONALD,] and having been excused for the night I decline to vote.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the roll-call; and the result was announced—yeas 15, nays 24; as follows:

YEAS—15.

Allison,	Conover,	Hill,	Paddock,
Bailey,	Davis of Illinois,	Howe,	Saunders,
Beck,	Ferry,	Jones of Nevada,	Thurman.
Cameron of Wis.,	Grover,	Kernan,

NAYS—24.

Burnside,	Edmunds,	Jones of Florida,	Maxey,
Cameron of Pa.,	Eustis,	Kellogg,	Merrimon,
Cockrell,	Garland,	Kirkwood,	Morgan,
Coke,	Gordon,	Lamar,	Spencer,
Davis of W. Va.,	Harris,	McMillan,	Teller,
Eaton,	Hereford,	Matthews,	Voorhees.

ABSENT—37.

Anthony,	Dawes,	Mitchell,	Sharon,
Barnum,	Dennis,	Morrill,	Shields,
Bayard,	Dorsey,	Oglesby,	Wadleigh,
Blaine,	Hamlin,	Patterson,	Wallace,
Booth,	Hear,	Plumb,	Whyte,
Bruce,	Ingalls,	Randolph,	Windom,
Butler,	Johnston,	Ransom,	Withers.
Chaffee,	McCreery,	Rollins,
Chandler,	McDonald,	Sargent,
Conkling,	McPherson,	Saulsbury,

So the motion was not agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now pending is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York [Mr. KERNAN] to the bill. Is the Senate ready for the question?

Mr. TELLER. What is the question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the amendment.

Mr. EDMUNDS. What has become of the proceedings under the call?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That still stands with the Sergeant-at-Arms executing the order of the Senate in that regard. A quorum being present, the Senate proceeds with business.

Mr. PADDOCK. Let the amendment be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be reported.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is a curious proposition. I thought the Chair ruled on that point and held that it was not in order to proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not rule on the question. The order is being executed by the Sergeant-at-Arms, but there being a quorum present the Senate proceeds with business, and the pending question is on the amendment of the Senator from New York. The Secretary will report the amendment.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out after the word "entry," in line 25 of section 6, the following words:

In case the health officer at any such port appointed by local authority shall refuse to adopt and observe the rules and regulations prescribed by the Bureau of Health for the inspection, disinfection, and treatment of vessels, their cargoes, passengers, and crews, or, in the opinion of the board of health, shall neglect or fail so to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to this amendment.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The yeas and nays have been ordered I think.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. THURMAN. I wish to say one single word on this amendment. As the bill stands it proposes to supersede the State police and the State sanitary laws, and that upon an idea that they have refused or neglected, without establishing any mode of deciding whether they have refused or whether they have neglected, even if we had the power to supersede them. I have the impression that the Supreme Court once said that in respect of the police powers of a State they were left untouched by the Federal Constitution. I am not willing to undertake to supersede them. I hope, therefore, and I speak it in the interest of the bill, that the amendment of the Senator from New York will prevail.

Mr. VOORHEES. This question was thoroughly discussed in the earlier part of the evening, when the Senator from Ohio was not present or paying attention to the debate which was going on. The question was raised then by the Senator from New York, and elaborately discussed by him, and in a feeble manner by myself and in an able manner by the Senator from Tennessee. It was then settled against the construction of the Senator from New York; that is to say, it was held by the Senate that the Federal Government was not precluded from making a regulation upon this question by the action or non-action of a State. The State might make no regulation whatever, and resolve to make none and legislate to make none; she might declare by legislative action that she would make none; and thereby as thoroughly shut out the Federal power from making the regulation which this bill contemplates as if the State had made all the regulations called for by public interests. Consequently the Senate fell back upon the principle evolved in the Constitution of the United States, that Congress has power to regulate commerce, and in that regulation is involved the question whether infected goods should be brought to our ports, whether in one State or another, or quarantined. A State may lay down certain regulations against the introduction of goods infected in this way, or a State may not, the Federal Government all the time having the power to regulate that whole question. If the Senator from Ohio had been as careful and as vigilant in his attention in the early part of the evening as he is now he would have heard this question debated and he would not have raised such a question after it had been fully debated and fully settled.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New York, [Mr. KERNAN.]

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MORRILL, (when his name was called.) On account of the pair that I have with the Senator from Indiana, [Mr. McDONALD,] having been excused the greater part of the night by the Senate, I decline to vote.

Mr. WADLEIGH. (when his name was called.) In the early part of the evening, as I have said, I paired with the Senator from Delaware, [Mr. SAULSBURY.] Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I refrain from voting.

The Secretary concluded the call of the roll.

Mr. HOWE. If there is not a quorum without my vote, I vote "yea."

Mr. WADLEIGH. I shall vote "yea," to make a quorum.

The result was announced—yeas 17, nays 24; as follows:

YEAS—17.

Allison,	Edmunds,	Morgan,	Thurman,
Booth,	Hill,	Oglesby,	Wadleigh.
Coke,	Howe,	Saunders,
Davis of W. Va.,	Kernan,	Spencer,
Eaton,	McMillan,	Teller,

NAYS—24.

Bailey,	Davis of Illinois,	Grover,	Lamar,
Beck,	Dawes,	Harris,	Matthews,
Burnside,	Eustis,	Jones of Florida,	Maxey,
Cameron of Wis.,	Ferry,	Jones of Nevada,	Merrimon,
Cockrell,	Garland,	Kellogg,	Paddock,
Conover,	Gordon,	Kirkwood,	Voorhees.

ABSENT—35.

Anthony,	Conkling,	McDonald,	Sargent,
Barnum,	Dennis,	McPherson,	Saulsbury,
Bayard,	Dorsey,	Mitchell,	Sharon,
Blaine,	Hamlin,	Morrill,	Shields,
Bruce,	Hereford,	Patterson,	Wallace,
Butler,	Hoar,	Plumb,	Whyte,
Cameron of Pa.,	Ingalls,	Randolph,	Windom,
Chaffee,	Johnston,	Ransom,	Withers.
Chandler,	McCreery,	Rollins,

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. EDMUNDS. My belief is that this last vote that we have taken is entirely irregular, because I believe the pending business is the call of the Senate until the Senate either suspends it or postpones it. Therefore on reflection I believe I shall not vote any more, apologizing to the Senate for voting this time, until we have disposed of the call by putting it off or suspending it, or something.

Mr. PADDOCK. I move that the proviso offered by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] be stricken out.

Mr. HILL and others. Oh, no.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. That has been concurred in.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That has been concurred in, and the motion to strike it out is not in order, unless something be added to it.

Mr. PADDOCK. I withdraw the motion.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOUR OF MEETING.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I move that when the Senate adjourns it adjourn to meet to-morrow at two o'clock.

Mr. SPENCER. I suggest one o'clock.

Mr. ALLISON. Oh, no; twelve o'clock.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I insist on two o'clock.

Mr. TELLER and others. Let us adjourn to twelve o'clock.

Mr. VOORHEES. I move that the Senate adjourn until twelve o'clock.

Mr. ALLISON. Is the motion amendable?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is amendable.

Mr. ALLISON. I move to amend by fixing twelve o'clock as the hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Iowa that when the Senate adjourns it be to meet at twelve o'clock.

Mr. EATON. I move to strike out "twelve" and insert "one."

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is just the motion that the Senator from Iowa made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa moved to strike out "two" and insert "twelve." The amendment of the Senator from Connecticut is in order. The Senator from Connecticut moved to insert "one" instead of "twelve."

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 23, noes 16.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 22, nays 19; as follows:

YEAS—22.

Bailey,	Coke,	Hill,	Morgan,
Beck,	Dawes,	Jones of Florida,	Saunders,
Booth,	Eaton,	Jones of Nevada,	Thurman,
Burnside,	Eustis,	Lamar,	Wadleigh.
Cameron of Pa.,	Garland,	McMillan,
Cockrell,	Grover,	Merrimon,

NAYS—19.

Allison,	Ferry,	Kernan,	Paddock,
Cameron of Wis.,	Gordon,	Kirkwood,	Spencer,
Davis of Illinois,	Harris,	Matthews,	Teller,
Davis of W. Va.,	Hereford,	Maxey,	Voorhees.
Edmunds,	Howe,	Oglesby,

ABSENT—35.

Anthony,	Conover,	McDonald,	Sargent,
Barnum,	Dennis,	McPherson,	Saulsbury,
Bayard,	Dorsey,	Mitchell,	Sharon,
Blaine,	Hamlin,	Morrill,	Shields,
Bruce,	Hoar,	Patterson,	Wallace,
Butler,	Ingalls,	Plumb,	Whyte,
Chaffee,	Johnston,	Randolph,	Windom,
Chandler,	Kellogg,	Ransom,	Withers.
Conkling,	McCreery,	Rollins,

So the amendment of Mr. EATON was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the motion as amended, that when the Senate adjourns it be to meet at one o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Pending that question I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Let us take up the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. We cannot take it up just now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Vermont that the Senate do now adjourn.

The Senate refused to adjourn, there being on a division—ayes 16, noes 18.

Mr. EATON. I desire to ask a question. Was my motion agreed to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Connecticut was agreed to fixing one o'clock instead of twelve. The question now recurs on the motion as amended, that when the Senate adjourns it be to meet at one o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Pending that motion I move that the Senate do now adjourn until twelve o'clock to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER put the question and declared that the noes appeared to prevail.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us divide, Mr. President, and see if we cannot get on with the appropriation bills some way.

The motion was not agreed to, there being on a division—ayes 12, noes 24.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the motion that when the Senate adjourns it be to meet at one o'clock to-morrow.

The motion was agreed to.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. VOORHEES. I will amend that motion by moving that we take up the Calendar. There are four hundred bills on the Calendar.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope that the Senator from Indiana will not antagonize a regular appropriation bill.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. Certainly not.

Mr. VOORHEES. There is no use in belittling a motion to take up the Calendar by anybody, even the great weight of the Senator from Illinois, especially as he is deeply interested in the Calendar.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I am willing to give it up.

Mr. VOORHEES. I presume the Senator from Illinois is willing to give up the interest he has in the Calendar.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. For the time being.

Mr. VOORHEES. He is willing to give up General McNulta and all the rest; but I want it distinctly understood that I do not waive an inch when the issue is made on the Calendar. It is a special order; it was the order afternoon, and was laid aside, and it is the special order in order now, and I antagonize every motion to take up anything else.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Indiana move to amend the motion of the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. VOORHEES. I insist on the regular order. It was laid aside this afternoon for the Senator from Tennessee to move to proceed to the consideration of his bill just passed. I care not who waives the deep and sacred rights on the Calendar, I shall not. Therefore I insist on the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa moves to proceed to the consideration of the general deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. VOORHEES. I insist on the regular order, which is the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is not in order.

Mr. VOORHEES. Why not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask for a division.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 36—

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President, I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope the Senator from Indiana will withdraw his call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. VOORHEES. I will not withdraw it, because there are not thirty-six Senators voting here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana calls for the yeas and nays on the motion of the Senator from Iowa.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion of the Senator from Iowa stands agreed to; and the deficiency appropriation bill is before the Senate.

Mr. PADDOCK. I move that the hour between one and two o'clock to-morrow be considered the morning hour, and that morning business be then received.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Regular order.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at four o'clock and thirty-five minutes a. m., Tuesday, February 25) the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, February 24, 1879.

The House met at eleven o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.

The Journal of Saturday last was read and approved.

CORRECTION OF THE JOURNAL AND RECORD.

Mr. KEIFER. I desire to correct the RECORD. I am recorded as having voted against the motion of Mr. BACON to lay on the table the internal-revenue bill. My vote should have been recorded "ay." I desire to correct both the Journal and the RECORD in that respect.

There was no objection, and the correction was ordered to be made.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ELLIS. I move that we take a recess at five o'clock this evening for the purpose of discussing the contested-election case from the first district of South Carolina.

Mr. HALE. I object.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I would inquire whether to-night's session is for debate only?

Mr. HALE. Let us have the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The subject-matter to which the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ELLIS] refers is a question of the highest privilege, and gentlemen can call up the case at any time. If there be an evening session the gentleman rising to call up that case will be recognized by the Chair. The Chair is compelled to recognize the gentleman who rises to a question of the highest privilege.

INTERNAL-REVENUE BILL.

Mr. HALE. Now let us have the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the unfinished business coming over from the session of Saturday last under the previous question, being the amendments of the Senate to the bill of the House (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to internal revenue. And the question is upon the last amendment, upon which a separate vote was demanded by the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. EDEN.] The amendment will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read the amendment, which was to add to the bill the following:

SEC. 22. That whenever and after any bank has ceased to do business by reason of insolvency or bankruptcy, no tax shall be assessed, or collected, or paid into the Treasury of the United States on account of such bank which shall diminish the assets thereof necessary for the full payment of all its depositors; and such tax shall be abated from such national banks as are found by the Comptroller of the Currency to be insolvent; and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, when the facts shall so appear to him, is authorized to remit so much of said tax against insolvent State and savings-banks as shall be found to affect the claims of their depositors.

That in making further collections of internal-revenue taxes on bank deposits, no savings-bank, recognized as such by the laws of its State, and having no capital stock, shall, on account of mercantile or business deposits heretofore received, upon which no interest has been allowed to the parties making such deposits, be denied the exemptions allowed to savings-banks having no capital stock and doing no other business than receiving deposits to be loaned or invested for the sole benefit of the parties making such deposits, without profit or compensation to the banks, if such bank has paid the lawful tax upon the entire average amount of such business or mercantile deposits.

That section 3408 of the Revised Statutes be amended by striking out all after the thirtieth line and inserting the following:

"The deposits in associations or companies known as provident institutions, savings-banks, savings-funds, or savings institutions, recognized solely as such by the laws of their respective States, shall be exempt from tax on so much of their deposits as they have invested in securities of the United States, and on $2,000 of each deposit made in the name of any one person, firm, or corporation; and the exemption provided for by this section shall equally apply to all savings deposits in any legally organized banks whatever. That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this section be, and the same are hereby, repealed."

Mr. EDEN. I move that the amendment of the Senate be non-concurred in.

The SPEAKER. The first question will be upon concurring in the amendment of the Senate.

Mr. GARFIELD. I ask unanimous consent of the House to make a verbal amendment in the Senate amendment—to insert the word "like" before the words "savings deposits," in the last part of the amendment; so that it will read:

And the exemption provided for by this section shall equally apply to all like savings deposits in any legally organized banks whatever.

Mr. EDEN. I object.

Mr. BUCKNER. Cannot a separate vote be taken upon the different portions of this amendment?

Mr. EDEN. I object to any separate vote.

The SPEAKER. The different clauses constitute one amendment of the Senate, which cannot be divided.

Mr. PRICE. I desire to ask a question—

Mr. EDEN. I object to debate.

Mr. GARFIELD. I move to lay the bill and amendments on the table.

Mr. BANNING. And on that motion I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. GARFIELD. Very well. The question was taken upon the motion of Mr. GARFIELD to lay the bill and amendments on the table; and upon a division there were—ayes 98, noes 122.

Before the result of this vote was announced,

Mr. HALE called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; there being 52 in the affirmative, more than one-fifth of the last vote.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 116, nays 147, not voting 27; as follows:

YEAS—116.

Bacon,	Deering,	Keightley,	Robinson, G. D.
Bagley,	Denison,	Ketcham,	Robinson, M. S.
Bailey,	Dunnell,	Lapham,	Ryan,
Baker, John H.	Eames,	Lathrop,	Sampson,
Baker, William H.	Evans, I. Newton	Lindsey,	Sapp,
Ballou,	Evans, James L.	Loring,	Sexton,
Banks,	Fort,	Majors,	Shallenberger,
Bayne,	Foster,	Marsh,	Sinnickson,
Benedict,	Frye,	Mayham,	Smith, A. Herr
Blair,	Gardner,	McCook,	Starin,
Boyd,	Garfield,	McGowan,	Stewart,
Brewer,	Hale,	McKinley,	Stone, John W.
Briggs,	Hanna,	Mitchell,	Stone, Joseph C.
Brown,	Harmer,	Monroe,	Strait,
Bundy,	Harris, Benj. W.	Morse,	Thompson,
Burchard,	Haskell,	Neal,	Tipton,
Calkins,	Hayes,	Norcross,	Townsend, Amos
Camp,	Hazelton,	Oliver,	Townsend, M. I.
Campbell,	Hendee,	O'Neill,	Van Vorhes,
Cannon,	Henderson,	Overton,	Wait,
Caswell,	Hewitt, Abram S.	Patterson, G. W.	Ward,
Chittenden,	Hubbell,	Peddle,	Watson,
Clark, Rush	Hunter,	Phillips,	White, Harry
Conger,	Humphrey,	Pound,	White, Michael D.
Covert,	Hungerford,	Powers,	Williams, Andrew
Crapo,	James,	Price,	Williams, C. G.
Cummings,	Jones, John S.	Pugh,	Williams, Richard
Cutler,	Joyce,	Randolph,	Willis, Benj. A.
Danford,	Keifer,	Rice, William W.	Willits.

NAYS—147.

Acklen,	Davis, Horace	Hooker,	Roberts,
Aiken,	Davis, Joseph J.	House,	Ross,
Aldrich,	Dean,	Hunton,	Saylor,
Atkins,	Dibrell,	Ittner,	Seales,
Banning,	Dickey,	Jones, Frank	Shelley,
Beale,	Durham,	Jones, James T.	Singleton,
Bell,	Eden,	Jorgensen,	Slemons,
Bicknell,	Eickhoff,	Kelley,	Smalls,
Blackburn,	Elam,	Kenna,	Smith, William E.
Bliss,	Ellis,	Kimmel,	Southard,
Blount,	Evins, John H.	Knapp,	Sparks,
Boone,	Ewing,	Knott,	Springer,
Brentano,	Felton,	Landers,	Steele,
Bridges,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Ligon,	Stenger,
Bright,	Finley, Jesse J.	Lockwood,	Stephens,
Brogden,	Fleming,	Luttrell,	Swann,
Buckner,	Forney,	Manning,	Throckmorton,
Burdick,	Franklin,	Martin,	Townsend, R. W.
Cabell,	Fuller,	McKenzie,	Tucker,
Caldwell, John W.	Garth,	McMahon,	Turner,
Caldwell, W. P.	Gause,	Mills,	Turney,
Candler,	Giddings,	Money,	Vance,
Carlisle,	Glover,	Morgan,	Veeder,
Chalmers,	Goode,	Morrison,	Waddell,
Clark, Alvah A.	Gunter,	Muldraw,	Walker,
Clarke of Kentucky,	Hamilton,	Muller,	Warner,
Clark of Missouri,	Hardenbergh,	Page,	Whitthorne,
Clymer,	Harris, Henry R.	Patterson, T. M.	Wigginton,
Cobb,	Harris, John T.	Phelps,	Williams, James
Collins,	Harrison,	Pollard,	Williams, Jere N.
Cook,	Hart,	Pridemore,	Willis, Albert S.
Cox, Jacob D.	Hartzell,	Rainey,	Wood,
Cox, Samuel S.	Hatcher,	Rea,	Wright,
Cravens,	Benkle,	Reagan,	Yeafoo,
Crittenden,	Henry,	Reilly,	Young, Casey
Culberson,	Hewitt, G. W.	Rice, Americus V.	Young, John S.
Davidson,	Herbert,	Robbins,

NOT VOTING—27.

Beebe,	Cole,	Killinger,	Riddle,
Bland,	Dwight,	Lynde,	Robertson,
Bouck,	Ellsworth,	Mackey,	Thornburgh,
Bragg,	Errett,	Maish,	Walsh,
Butler,	Freeman,	Metcalfe,	Wilson,
Cain,	Gibson,	Potter,	Wren.
Cladin,	Hiscock,	Reed,

So the motion to lay the bill and amendments on the table was not agreed to.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. GIBSON. I am paired with the gentleman from Maine, Mr. REED. If he were present, he would vote "ay" and I should vote "no."

Mr. BOUCK. I am paired with the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. CLAFIN. If he were here, he would vote "ay" and I should vote "no."

Mr. DAVIS, of California. I am paired generally with the gentleman from West Virginia, Mr. WILSON; but as I understand he would vote "no" on this question, I vote "no."

Mr. METCALFE. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. BLAND.

Mr. O'NEILL. My colleague, Mr. FREEMAN, is paired with the gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. RIDDLE.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs on concurring in the amendment of the Senate in relation to the tax on national banks and savings-banks.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 69, noes 91.

Mr. PAGE. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WAIT. I would like to have this amendment reported again in order that we may know just what we are voting on.

The amendment of the Senate was again read.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 125, nays 132, not voting 33; as follows:

YEAS—125.

Aldrich,	Davis, Horace	Keifer,	Robinson, M. S.
Bacon,	Deering,	Keightley,	Ryan,
Bagley,	Denison,	Kelley,	Sampson,
Bailey,	Dunnell,	Ketcham,	Sapp,
Baker, John H.	Dwight,	Lapham,	Sexton,
Baker, William H.	Eames,	Lathrop,	Shallenberger,
Ballou,	Eickhoff,	Lindsey,	Sinnickson,
Banks,	Ellis,	Lockwood,	Smalls,
Bayne,	Ellsworth,	Luttrell,	Smith, A. Herr
Benedict,	Errett,	Mackey,	Starin,
Blair,	Evans, James L.	Mayham,	Stewart,
Bliss,	Frye,	McCook,	Stone, John W.
Boyd,	Gardner,	McGowan,	Stratt,
Brentano,	Garfield,	McKinley,	Townsend, Amos
Brewer,	Hanna,	Mitchell,	Townsend, M. I.
Bridges,	Harmer,	Monroe,	Van Vorhes,
Briggs,	Harrison,	Morse,	Veeder,
Browne,	Hart,	Neal,	Wait,
Bundy,	Hayes,	Notecross,	Ward,
Burchard,	Hazleton,	O'Neill,	Warner,
Burdick,	Hendee,	Overton,	Watson,
Calkins,	Henry,	Page,	White, Michael D.
Camp,	Hewitt, Abram S.	Patterson, G. W.	Wigginton,
Caswell,	Hubbell,	Peddle,	Williams, Andrew
Chittenden,	Humphrey,	Phelps,	Williams, Richard
Clark, Alvah A.	Hungerford,	Pollard,	Willis, Benj. A.
Clark, Rush	Ittner,	Pound,	Willits,
Cole,	James,	Powers,	Wood,
Conger,	Jones, Frank	Pugh,	Wren.
Covert,	Jones, John S.	Raney,
Crapo,	Joyce,	Rice, William W.
Danford,		Robinson, G. D.

NAYS—132.

Aiken,	Dickey,	Hunter,	Rice, Americus V.
Atkins,	Durham,	Hunton,	Robbins,
Banning,	Eden,	Jones, James T.	Roberts,
Bell,	Elam,	Jorgensen,	Ross,
Bicknell,	Evins, John H.	Kenna,	Saylor,
Blackburn,	Ewing,	Kimmel,	Scales,
Blount,	Felton,	Knapp,	Shelley,
Boone,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Knott,	Singleton,
Bragg,	Finley, Jesse J.	Landers,	Slemmons,
Bright,	Fleming,	Ligon,	Smith, William E.
Brogden,	Forney,	Lynde,	Southard,
Buckner,	Fort,	Majors,	Sparks,
Cabell,	Franklin,	Manning,	Springer,
Caldwell, John W.	Fuller,	Marsh,	Steele,
Caldwell, W. P.	Garth,	Martin,	Stephens,
Campbell,	Gause,	McKenzie,	Swann,
Candler,	Giddings,	McMahon,	Throckmorton,
Cannon,	Glover,	Mills,	Tipton,
Carlisle,	Goode,	Money,	Townsend, R. W.
Chalmers,	Gunter,	Morgan,	Tucker,
Clarke of Kentucky,	Hamilton,	Morrison,	Turner,
Clark of Missouri,	Hardenbergh,	Muldrow,	Turney,
Clymer,	Harris, Henry R.	Muller,	Vance,
Cobb,	Harris, John T.	Oliver,	Waddell,
Collins,	Hartzell,	Patterson, T. M.	White, Harry
Cook,	Haskell,	Phillips,	Whitthorne,
Cravens,	Hatcher,	Potter,	Williams, James
Crittenden,	Henderson,	Price,	Williams, Jere N.
Culbertson,	Henkle,	Pridemore,	Willis, Albert S.
Cutler,	Herbert,	Randolph,	Wright,
Davidson,	Hewitt, G. W.	Rea,	Yeates,
Davis, Joseph J.	Hooker,	Reagan,	Young, Casey
Dibrell,	House,	Reilly,	Young, John S.

NOT VOTING—33.

Acklen,	Cox, Samuel S.	Killinger,	Thompson,
Beale,	Cummings,	Loring,	Thornburgh,
Beebe,	Evans, I. Newton	Maish,	Walker,
Bland,	Foster,	Metcalfe,	Walsh,
Bouck,	Freeman,	Reed,	Williams, C. G.
Butler,	Gibson,	Riddle,	Wilson.
Cain,	Hale,	Robertson,
Clatlin,	Harris, Benj. W.	Stenger,
Cox, Jacob D.	Hiscock,	Stone, Joseph C.

So the amendment was non-concurred in.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. GIBSON. I am paired with Mr. REED. If he were present, I would vote in the affirmative.

Mr. BOUCK. I am paired with Mr. CLATLIN. If he were present, I would vote "no."

Mr. ACKLEN. I am paired with Mr. LORING. If he were present, he would vote "ay" and I would vote "no."

Mr. ERRETT. My colleague Mr. KILLINGER is paired with my other colleague, Mr. MAISH.

Mr. DAVIS, of California. Mr. WILSON is paired with Mr. CUMMINGS.

Mr. METCALFE. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. BLAND. If he were present, I would vote "ay."

Mr. BURCHARD moved that the reading of the names be dispensed with.

Mr. HUNTON objected.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. EDEN moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. TUCKER. The amendments of the Senate having been finished, and the House having concurred in some and non-concurred in others, I ask that a committee of conference be requested on the part of the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 100, noes 70.

Mr. DANFORD demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

So the motion was agreed to.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MORNING HOUR.

Mr. EDEN. I ask by unanimous consent that the morning hour of Monday for the introduction of bills and joint resolutions for reference be dispensed with, and the House proceed with the regular order after the morning hour. [Cries of "No!" "No!"]

Mr. BAKER, of Indiana. What would follow if the morning hour were dispensed with?

The SPEAKER. Motions for the suspension of the rules.

Mr. WHITE, of Pennsylvania, and others objected.

The SPEAKER. The morning hour begins at twenty-five minutes to one o'clock; and this being Monday, the first business in order is the call of States and Territories, beginning with the State of Maine, for the introduction of bills and joint resolutions for reference to their appropriate committees, not to be brought back on motions to reconsider. Under this call memorials and resolutions of State and territorial Legislatures may be presented for reference and printing.

Mr. COX, of New York. I hope the gentleman who objected to the morning hour will withdraw it, as it is now too late to introduce bills for reference as there will be no time to act upon them.

Mr. BURCHARD. There is no objection to going to the second call of the States.

Mr. COX, of New York. Who objected?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. WHITE, and others.

HENRY WATERMAN.

Mr. RICE, of Massachusetts, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6472) for the relief of Henry Waterman; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Patents, and ordered to be printed.

CADET ENGINEERS.

Mr. WILLIS, of New York, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6473) in relation to cadet engineers in the Navy; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REAR-ADMIRAL.

Mr. WILLIS, of New York, also introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6474) in relation to the promotion of officers in the Navy to the grade of rear-admiral; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

NAVAL OFFICERS WHO HAVE BEEN DISMISSED.

Mr. WILLIS, of New York, also introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6475) in relation to officers of the Navy who have been dismissed from the service by sentence of court-martial or otherwise; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

COMMODORES ON RETIRED LIST.

Mr. WILLIS, of New York, also introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6476) in relation to the promotion of commodores on the retired list of the Navy; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REUBEN HOPKINS PLASS.

Mr. MULLER introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6477) for the relief of Reuben Hopkins Plass; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Claims, and ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS EAST RIVER.

Mr. BLISS introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6478) to establish a bridge across the East River and over Blackwell's Island, between the city of New York and Long Island City, State of New York, a post-road; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

CHANGE OF NAME OF VESSEL.

Mr. BLISS also introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6479) to change the name of the steam-propeller Nuhpa to Metropolitan; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

RETIREMENT OF BANK-NOTES.

Mr. COX, of New York, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6480) to retire national-bank notes, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and ordered to be printed.

WIDOW OF GENERAL WILLIAM GATES.

Mr. COX, of New York, also introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6481) for the relief of the widow of General William Gates, United States Army; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Claims, and ordered to be printed.

ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC SHIP-CANAL.

Mr. MCCOOK introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6505) to provide for printing the reports and maps of the surveys made by Commander Lull and Lieutenant Collins, United States Navy, for a ship-canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. MCCOOK. I ask that the bill and the accompanying memorial from the American Geographical Society be read.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill and memorial.

Mr. ALDRICE. Is that memorial in order under this call?

Mr. GARFIELD. It is a bill with a preamble reciting a memorial. I ask that it be read.

The SPEAKER. The reading during the morning hour does not carry it into the RECORD.

Mr. MCCOOK. I do not desire to take up the time of the House with the reading of this memorial. It is from a very important society and relates to a very important subject. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain the gentleman's request after the morning hour. The Chair desires to state here that if every bill read in the morning hour of Monday went into the RECORD the result would be to make a very large RECORD, filled with matters that should not go into it. Therefore the Chair has not allowed bills, the reading of which was called for during the morning hour of Monday, to go into the RECORD.

The reading of the bill and memorial was resumed and concluded.

The bill, with the accompanying memorial, was referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLICATION OF NAVAL REGISTER.

Mr. BACON introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 241) for the publication of the Naval Register; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

REMOVAL OF TOBACCO.

Mr. HARDENBERGH introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6482) authorizing the removal of tobacco in process of manufacture; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

JOSHUA N. DANFORTH.

Mr. ROSS introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6483) for the relief of Joshua N. Danforth, late second lieutenant Thirteenth Infantry, United States Army; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REFUNDING OF NATIONAL DEBT.

Mr. KELLEY (by request) introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6484) to authorize the issue of coupon certificates of deposit in aid of the refunding of the national debt; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

I. R. COGHAN.

Mr. WHITE, of Pennsylvania, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6485) granting a pension to I. R. Cogan; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

HEIRS OF JOHN A. DALE.

Mr. WHITE, of Pennsylvania, also introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6486) for the relief of the heirs of John A. Dale, deceased, late of Tionesta, Pennsylvania; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Claims, and ordered to be printed.

HEIRS OF HARRIS BOARDMAN.

Mr. SMITH, of Pennsylvania, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6487) to enable the heirs of Harris Boardman, deceased, to make application to the Commissioner of Patents for the extension of letters-patent Nos. 35867 and 49971, for improvements in cork-machines, granted July 15, 1862, and September 19, 1865, to the said Harris Boardman; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Patents, and ordered to be printed.

SUBMARINE CABLES.

Mr. HARMER introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6488) to grant to the American Ocean Cable and Telegraph Land Wire Association of Philadelphia the right of way and privilege to lay, land, and operate submarine cables on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States, and to establish telegraphic communication between the United States, Europe, and Asia; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

CONVERSION OF SMOOTH-BORE RIFLES.

Mr. BAYNE introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 242) instructing the Secretary of War to discontinue the conversion of smooth-bore into muzzle-loading rifles and the fabrication of new guns; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

FEDERAL JUDICIARY IN VIRGINIA.

Mr. CABELL presented joint resolutions of the Legislature of Virginia, in regard to the usurpation of power by the Federal judiciary in Virginia; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

CONFEDERATE STATES FUNDS.

Mr. JORGENSEN introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 243) authorizing and directing the President of the United States to cause an investigation to be made as to the disposition of funds belonging to the so-called Confederate States of America remaining at the close of the late war on deposit in the banks of England or in the hands of private citizens of Great Britain, to the end that such funds, if any, may be devoted to the relief of such citizens of so-called Confederate States as incurred permanent disabilities in said service and are now in indigent circumstances; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

JOHN W. ROSS.

Mr. MANNING introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 244) authorizing the President to appoint Passed Assistant Surgeon John W. Ross a surgeon in the United States Navy; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

JOHN C. THOMPSON.

Mr. MANNING also (by request) introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6489) for additional compensation to John C. Thompson, for carrying the mail between Washington, District of Columbia, and Leonardtown, Maryland; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

JOHN G. LESTER.

Mr. SHELLEY introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6490) granting a pension to John G. Lester, of Lowndes County, State of Alabama; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. EDEN. I call for the reading of the bill.

The bill was read, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS IN LOUISIANA.

Mr. ELAM presented concurrent resolutions of the Legislature of the State of Louisiana, protesting against the proceedings in the United States circuit court, at New Orleans against citizens of various parts of the State of Louisiana, and the subjecting of numerous citizens thereof to the hardships of arrest from distant homes and their removal to New Orleans; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

ADDITIONAL BOUNTY TO UNION SOLDIERS.

Mr. FINLEY, of Ohio, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6491) to provide for the payment of additional bounty to the soldiers of the Army of the United States during the war of the rebellion; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. FINLEY, of Ohio. I call for the reading of the bill.

The bill was read, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

LOIS A. FOSTER.

Mr. BLACKBURN introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6492) granting a pension to Lois A. Foster; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

W. B. DENNY.

Mr. HOUSE introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6493) for the relief of W. B. Denny, of Smith County, Tennessee; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

DUTY ON QUININE.

Mr. BRIGHT presented a joint resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Tennessee, asking for the removal of the duty on quinine; which was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

ERECTION OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee, introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 245) in regard to the erection of public buildings; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

COMMITTEE ON EPIDEMIC DISEASES.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee, also introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 246) providing for continuing the committees on epidemic diseases; which was read a first and second time, referred to the select committee on epidemic diseases, and ordered to be printed.

MRS. C. E. GORDON.

Mr. WHITTHORNE introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6494) to grant a pension to Mrs. Gordon, widow of Powhattan Gordon, of Tennessee; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

HOT SPRINGS RESERVATION, ARKANSAS.

Mr. FULLER introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6495) for the relief of the settlers on the Hot Springs reservation, in the State of Arkansas; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

GORDON MILLS.

Mr. CALKINS introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6496) for the relief of Gordon Mills; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

BANKRUPTCY.

Mr. SEXTON presented concurrent resolutions of the Legislature of the State of Indiana, in relation to cases in bankruptcy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ARNO VOSS.

Mr. ALDRICH introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6497) for the relief of Arno Voss; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

IMPROVEMENT OF QUINCY BAY, ILLINOIS.

Mr. SPRINGER presented a joint resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, instructing Senators and requesting Representatives from that State to secure appropriation for the permanent improvement of Quincy Bay, on the Mississippi River, near Quincy, Illinois; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

AMENDMENT OF THE PENSION BILL.

Mr. SPRINGER also presented joint resolutions of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, praying that the bill granting pensions to the soldiers of the Mexican war be so amended as to authorize the payment of pensions and bounties to the soldiers of the Black Hawk war; which was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

HARBOR, ETC., AT WAUKEGAN, ILLINOIS.

Mr. SPRINGER also presented joint resolutions of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, instructing Senators and requesting Representatives from that State to obtain an appropriation for the construction of a harbor and life-saving station at Waukegan, Illinois; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. TOWNSHEND, of Illinois, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6498) to empower the commissioners of the District of Columbia to revise, correct, or annul special assessments upon the written application of any person whose real property in said District has been assessed, providing for an appeal to the supreme court of the District of Columbia from the action of the commissioners in respect to such application by any person feeling aggrieved thereby, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee for the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM C. EBERT.

Mr. POLLARD introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6499) granting a pension to William C. Ebert; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE ARKANSAS RIVER.

Mr. SLEMONS presented a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Arkansas, asking for the improvement of the main channel of the Arkansas River in front of the city of Pine Bluff, in said State; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

INFECTIOUS AND CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

Mr. MCGOWAN introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6500) to prevent the introduction of infectious and contagious diseases into the United States and to establish a national board of health; which was read a first and second time, referred to the select committee on epidemic diseases, and ordered to be printed.

ADULTERATION OF SUGAR.

Mr. MCGOWAN also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Michigan, for the prevention of the adulteration of sugar; which was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

ADULTERATION OF HONEY.

Mr. MCGOWAN also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Michigan, for the prevention of the adulteration of honey; which was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

HOMESTEADS ON RAILROAD LANDS.

Mr. STONE, of Michigan, presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Michigan, asking that no legislation be had relative to certain railroad lands in that State which does not reserve homestead rights thereon to the persons who have been actual residents upon any of said lands for two years; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ADULTERATION OF SUGAR.

Mr. ELLSWORTH presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Michigan, for the prevention of the adulteration of sugar; which was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

IMPROVEMENT OF SAINT CLAIR FLATS.

Mr. ELLSWORTH also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Michigan, asking for an appropriation to improve the Saint Clair Flats at the mouth of Clinton River; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

HARBOR OF REFUGE IN STRAITS OF MACKINAW.

Mr. ELLSWORTH also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Michigan, asking for an appropriation to provide a harbor of refuge at Mackinaw Island, in the straits of Mackinaw; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

ADULTERATION OF HONEY.

Mr. ELLSWORTH also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Michigan, for the prevention of adulteration of honey; which was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

LIGHT-HOUSE ON WHALE'S BACK POINT, GREEN BAY.

Mr. ELLSWORTH also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Michigan, for an appropriation for the establishment of a light-house on the point known as the Whale's Back, on Green Bay, Michigan; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

COUNCIL BLUFFS STREET RAILWAY.

Mr. SAPP introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6501) to authorize the Council Bluffs Street Railway Company to construct a ponton bridge across the Missouri River at Council Bluffs, in Pottawattomie County, Iowa; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

CHARLES G. EDDY.

Mr. SAPP also introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6502) for the relief of Charles G. Eddy, of Chicago, Illinois; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SAPP. I would like to have the evidence in support of this bill printed for the use of the committee.

The SPEAKER. That request cannot be made during this call.

CHARLES W. BALDWIN.

Mr. BURDICK introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6503) granting a pension to Charles W. Baldwin; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

SCHOOL LANDS IN NEVADA.

Mr. WREN presented a memorial of the Legislature of Nevada, relative to the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of public lands in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

ARTESIAN WELLS ON DESERT LANDS IN NEVADA.

Mr. WREN also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Nevada, asking the donation of desert lands in that State to persons who shall perfect flowing artesian wells thereon; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

ANNA M. MARSHALL.

Mr. WREN also introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6504) for the relief of Anna M. Marshall, widow of Captain P. S. Marshall; which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

TRANSFER OF INDIAN BUREAU.

Mr. MAJORS presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Nebraska, relative to the transfer of the Indian Bureau; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims.

Some time subsequently,

Mr. BOONE said: I understand that an order was made to refer to the Committee on Military Affairs a memorial of the Legislature of Nebraska, relative to the transfer of the Indian Bureau to the War Department. I think that should go to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The SPEAKER. With the consent of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. WREN] it shall be so referred.

There was no objection; and the memorial was accordingly referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

MILITARY POST IN SOUTHEASTERN COLORADO.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado, presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Colorado, praying for the establishment of a military post in Southeastern Colorado; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

CHARLES AUTOBIAS.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado, also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Colorado, praying that the name of Charles Autobias be placed on the pension-roll for meritorious services; which was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

WAGON-ROAD IN COLORADO.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado, also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Colorado, asking an appropriation for the construction of a military wagon-road; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. Has the morning hour expired?

The SPEAKER. It has.

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. Then I call for the regular order.

Mr. MAGINNIS. There are a few more Territories to be called.
Mr. RICE, of Ohio. I will withdraw the demand for the regular order for the present.

FERRY IN DAKOTA.

Mr. KIDDER introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6506) granting a ferry to Alexander Griggs across the Red River of the North, in the Territory of Dakota; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

LAND GRANT TO IDAHO FOR UNIVERSITY PURPOSES.

Mr. FENN presented a memorial of the legislative council of the Territory of Idaho, for a grant to that Territory of two townships of land for university purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FENN also presented a memorial of the legislative council of the Territory of Idaho, for a military post at old Camp Lyon, on the line of Owyhee County, Idaho, and Baker County, Oregon; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FENN. I ask that this memorial be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot submit that request until after the morning hour.

TRANSFER OF THE INDIAN BUREAU.

Mr. MAGINNIS presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Montana, in favor of the transfer of Indian affairs to the War Department; which was read, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

JOHN POWER AND A. J. BAILEY.

Mr. BANKS introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6507) for the relief of John Power and Andrew J. Bailey; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Patents, and ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER. The morning hour has now expired.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. HOOKER. I move that the rules be suspended and that the bill which I send to the desk be passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill to provide for the erection of certain public buildings therein named.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase sites for and cause to be erected suitable buildings at the several places and for the purposes hereinafter mentioned.

For custom-house, post-office, and United States court-room at Augusta, Georgia, at a cost not exceeding when completed $100,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Oxford, in the State of Mississippi, at a cost when completed not to exceed $50,000.

For court-house, custom-house, and other public purposes, at Key West, in the State of Florida, at a cost when completed not exceeding $100,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Lynchburgh, Virginia, at a cost not to exceed when completed the sum of $75,000.

For court-house, land office, post-office, and other public purposes at Montgomery, Alabama, at a cost when completed not to exceed $150,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at La Crosse, Wisconsin, at a cost not to exceed, when completed, $95,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Erie, Pennsylvania, not to exceed when completed in cost altogether the sum of $150,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Greensborough, North Carolina, at a cost not exceeding $50,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Council Bluffs, Iowa, at a cost not exceeding $75,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Scranton, Pennsylvania, at a cost not exceeding $25,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at the city of Jefferson, Missouri, at a cost not to exceed $60,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Danville, Virginia, at a cost not to exceed when completed $60,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Jackson, Mississippi, at a cost not to exceed when completed $100,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Charleston, Kanawha County, in the State of West Virginia, at a cost when completed not to exceed $50,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Marquette, in the State of Michigan, at a cost not to exceed the sum of $50,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Paducah, Kentucky, at a cost not to exceed $50,000.

For court-house and other public purposes at Houston, Texas, at a cost not to exceed $100,000.

All of said buildings to be erected and completed with all necessary fire-proof safes upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall see that said buildings are severally adapted to the wants of the Government. That the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to purchase, by contract or condemnation, all that part of the block of land, not already owned by the United States, bounded by South Main street, Crawford street, South Water street, and Custom avenue, in the city of Providence, Rhode Island, if in his judgment the necessities of the public service require, and for this purpose a sum not to exceed $125,000 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That no money to be appropriated for either of the public buildings herein provided for shall be available until a valid title to the site of said building shall be vested in the United States, and until the State in which such building is to be located shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of any civil processes therein.

SEC. 2. That one-half of the several sums herein above affixed as the limitation of the cost of each building and site, the sum named being intended to cover both, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended toward the construction of said several buildings and buying said sites.

SEC. 3. And the Secretary is hereby authorized and directed to repair and extend for the use of the Government offices at Cleveland, Ohio, in accordance with the plans and specifications, submitted by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, of the Government building at Cleveland, Ohio, provided the cost of the same shall not exceed $100,000.

Mr. EDEN. Mr. Speaker, is this bill introduced for present action?
The SPEAKER. It is. The motion is to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

Mr. FORT. Has the bill been printed? There has been so much noise during the reading that I cannot tell whether it appropriates any money for a court-house in my State or not.

Mr. EDEN. Are we not entitled to a separate vote on each of these appropriations?

The SPEAKER. The motion is to suspend the rules and pass the bill; and that question is not divisible.

Mr. EDEN. This bill does not come from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, I understand.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not advised on that subject.

Mr. COOK. No such bill as that has ever been approved by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. I want the House to understand that.

Mr. EDEN and others called for the yeas and nays on the motion of Mr. HOOKER to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The Clerk began the roll-call.

Mr. HARTZELL. I would like to know how much money is appropriated in this bill.

Mr. EDEN. This bill has not been examined by or reported from any committee, and nobody can tell the extent of expenditures from the public Treasury that it will involve. It may ultimately involve us in the expenditure of $50,000,000.

Mr. HOOKER. It will not involve any such large expenditure as the gentleman imagines.

Mr. FORT. I submit it is proper for the House to know something in reference to this proposition before it is passed.

Mr. HOOKER. The roll-call has been begun, and it is not in order to debate the proposition.

Mr. FORT. It is proper the House should know what the bill does provide for. I have been watching to see whether my State has been included, and I have not yet heard that it is.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. The House should not be required to vote blindly on such a bill as this.

The SPEAKER. When the House comes to order proceedings will go on regularly.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. We want to know the number of court-houses provided for in this bill, how much is appropriated for in each, and what the whole thing is to cost.

Mr. FORT. Court-houses are provided in some places where there are no courts.

Mr. BRIDGES. It is impossible in the confusion to know what is going on.

Mr. HOOKER. The roll-call was begun and should be proceeded with.

Several MEMBERS. Let the bill be again read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi will give his attention. There are several requests to have the bill again read. Does the gentleman object?

Mr. HOOKER. I do not object to its being read again if gentlemen will only give their attention to it.

Mr. EDEN. I object to debate unless the other side can be heard.

The SPEAKER. The other side was heard to say something against it.

Mr. MANNING. We hope the gentleman will not make statements in reference to the amount in this bill if he objects to having my colleague state exactly the amount that is proposed to be appropriated.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection, and the bill will be again read.

Mr. MANNING. The gentleman from Illinois makes the statement that it will appropriate so much money and then refuses to allow us to reply.

The bill was again read.

Mr. ITTNER. I desire to ask a question, for information, of the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. HOOKER. What is it?

Mr. ITTNER. I desire to know if these various amounts have been recommended by the proper government officers?

Mr. HOOKER. I think so.

Mr. COOK. Some of them have not, and the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has reported against some of them. I wish this House to understand, Mr. Speaker, that this bill has never passed the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and I trust the House will defeat it.

Mr. HOOKER. I wish to say, Mr. Speaker, that this bill does not involve an appropriation of more than $655,000, as gentlemen will see by looking at the appropriations in the bill itself.

Mr. COOK. Some of these appropriations were reported against by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. ITTNER. I put my question to the gentleman from Mississippi and desire to have an answer to it.

Mr. HOOKER. There are sixteen public buildings embraced in the bill, and I state with one or two exceptions they have all been passed upon by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. The entire appropriation, as the gentleman will see by looking at the bill, is only $655,000.

Mr. FORT. Why does not the gentleman agree to put in two or three more?

Mr. ITTNER. My question has not been answered.

Several members objected to further debate.

The SPEAKER. The motion is to suspend the rules, which is not debatable, and on that motion the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. HOOKER. I insist upon the vote.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 63, nays 187, not voting 40; as follows:

YEAS—63.

Aiken,	Elam,	Kenna,	Sampson,
Ballou,	Ellis,	Ligon,	Sapp,
Bliss,	Ellsworth,	Manning,	Scales,
Boone,	Evins, John H.	Martin,	Shelley,
Brogden,	Finley, Jesse J.	Metcalfe,	Singleton,
Burdick,	Foster,	Mills,	Smalls,
Cabell,	Franklin,	Money,	Stephens,
Caldwell, J. W.	Gardner,	Monroe,	Stone, John W.
Chalmers,	Goode,	Muldrow,	Stone, Joseph C.
Clark, Rush	Harmer,	Oliver,	Throckmorton,
Collins,	Herbert,	Page,	Townsend, Amos
Crittenden,	Hooker,	Price,	Tucker,
Davidson,	Hubbell,	Reilly,	Watson,
Davis, Joseph J.	Humphrey,	Robbins,	Wright,
Deering,	Hunt,	Robertson,	Young, Casey.
Eames,	Jones, James T.	Ryan,

NAYS—187.

A. Ulrich,	Dibrell,	Jones, John S.	Rice, William W.
Atkins,	Dickey,	Joyce,	Roberts,
Bacon,	Dunnell,	Keifer,	Robinson, G. D.
Bagley,	Durham,	Keightley,	Robinson, M. S.
Baker, William H.	Dwight,	Kelley,	Ross,
Baker, John H.	Eden,	Ketchum,	Sexton,
Banks,	Eickhoff,	Knapp,	Shallenberger,
Bayne,	Evans, I. Newton	Landers,	Sinnickson,
Beale,	Evans, James L.	Lapham,	Slemons,
Benedict,	Ewing,	Lathrop,	Smith, A. Herr
Bicknell,	Felton,	Lindsey,	Smith, William E.
Blair,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Lockwood,	Southard,
Blount,	Fleming,	Luttrell,	Sparks,
Bouck,	Fort,	Lynde,	Springer,
Boyd,	Frve,	Mackey,	Starin,
Bragg,	Fuller,	Maish,	Steele,
Brewer,	Garfield,	Majors,	Stenger,
Bridges,	Garth,	Marsh,	Stewart,
Briggs,	Gause,	Mayham,	Strait,
Brown,	Giddings,	McCook,	Thompson,
Buckner,	Glover,	McGowan,	Tipton,
Bundy,	Gunter,	McKenzie,	Townsend, M. I.
Burchard,	Hale,	McKinley,	Townsend, R. W.
Caldwell, W. P.	Hamilton,	McMahon,	Turner,
Calkins,	Hanna,	Mitchell,	Vance,
Campbell,	Hardenbergh,	Morgan,	Veeder,
Candler,	Harris, Benj. W.	Morrison,	Waddell,
Cannon,	Harris, Henry R.	Morse,	Wait,
Caswell,	Harris, John T.	Muller,	Ward,
Chittenden,	Harrison,	Neal,	Warner,
Clark, Alvah A.	Hart,	Norcross,	White, Harry
Clarke of Kentucky,	Hartzell,	O'Neill,	White, Michael D.
Clark of Missouri,	Hatcher,	Overton,	Whitthorne,
Clymer,	Hayes,	Patterson, G. W.	Wigginton,
Cobb,	Hazelton,	Peddle,	Williams, Andrew
Cole,	Hendee,	Phillips,	Williams, C. G.
Conger,	Henderson,	Pollard,	Williams, James
Cook,	Hewitt, Abram S.	Potter,	Williams, Jere N.
Covert,	Hiscock, G. W.	Powers,	Williams, Richard
Cox, Samuel S.	House,	Pridemore,	Willis, Albert S.
Crapo,	Hungerford,	Pugh,	Willis, Benj. A.
Cravens,	Hunter,	Ramey,	Willits,
Cullberson,	Itner,	Randolph,	Wood,
Cutler,	James,	Rea,	Wren,
Danford,	Jones, Frank	Reagan,	Yeates,
Dean,		Rice, Americus V.
Denison,

NOT VOTING—40.

Acklen,	Cain,	Haskell,	Reed,
Bailey,	Camp,	Henkle,	Riddle,
Banning,	Carlisle,	Henry,	Saylor,
Beebe,	Claffin,	Jorgensen,	Swann,
Bell,	Cox, Jacob D.	Killinger,	Thornburgh,
Blackburn,	Cummings,	Kimmel,	Van Vorhes,
Bland,	Davis, Horace	Knott,	Walker,
Brentano,	Errett,	Loring,	Walsh,
Bright,	Freeman,	Patterson, T. M.	Wilson,
Butler,	Gibson,	Pound,	Young, John S.

So the House refused to suspend the rules.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. ACKLEN. I am paired with Mr. LORING.

Mr. BRENTANO. I am paired with Mr. BLACKBURN. If present, he would vote in the negative and I would vote in the affirmative.

Mr. DAVIS, of California. I am paired with Mr. WILSON.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. I am paired with Mr. ERRETT.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. BRENTANO, by unanimous consent, was granted leave to print in the RECORD as part of the debates certain remarks touching the joint resolution for the termination of the Bancroft treaty. [See Appendix.]

Mr. JACOBS, by unanimous consent, was granted leave to print in the RECORD remarks on the proposition to admit Washington Territory as a State into the Union. [See Appendix.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, announced the passage, without amendment, of the following bills and joint resolution:

A bill (H. R. No. 3156) for the relief of the Commercial Bank of Knoxville, Tennessee;

A bill (H. R. No. 6150) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept, for the purposes of a voyage of exploration by way of Behring Strait, the ship Jeannette, tendered by James Gordon Bennett for that purpose; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 232) making appropriations for the benefit of the penny-lunch house of Washington, District of Columbia.

It further announced concurrence in the amendment of the House to the bill (S. No. 1099) to provide for the settlement of tax-lien certificates erroneously issued by the late authorities of the District of Columbia.

It further announced the passage of a bill (S. No. 1830) amending the charter of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company, and for other purposes; in which concurrence was requested.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MONROE. I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill which I send to the desk.

Mr. ATKINS. I understand that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MONROE] yields to me.

Mr. MONROE. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ATKINS] asks me to yield to him that he may report the sundry-civil appropriation bill. As that is a very important bill, I desire to accommodate him and shall do so if he will yield to me after that bill is disposed of.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is acting in obedience to a public statement he made, that he would recognize first the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. HOOKER,] and then the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. MONROE.] If the gentleman from Ohio does not claim his right—

Mr. MONROE. I claim my right.

Mr. BANKS. Then go on with your bill.

Mr. MONROE. I wish to know whether if I yield now to the gentleman from Tennessee the Chair will recognize me immediately after the sundry-civil bill is disposed of.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has made it a rule to recognize a committee where a gentleman is instructed by a committee of which he is a member to move a suspension of the rules, in preference to individuals, because that is in the direction of promoting the public business. If there be a disposition on the part of the House that the Chair should recognize the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. ATKINS,] the Chair is quite willing to do it.

Mr. MONROE. I have offered to yield to the gentleman from Tennessee. I now do so.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ATKINS. I move to suspend the rules so as to enable me to report from the Committee on Appropriations and the House to pass the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, with amendments.

Mr. GARFIELD. I would suggest that the gentleman can make that motion at any time during the last six days of the session if the stress of business becomes too great. It seems to me we have not reached that point yet.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no opinion to express as to that. He recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee to make the motion. The bill will be read.

The Clerk commenced the reading of the bill, but before he had concluded it

Mr. CONGER said: Is this bill being read for amendments now?

The SPEAKER. It is not.

Mr. CONGER. I wish to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The motion is to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

Mr. CONGER. Is it really proposed to pass this bill under a suspension of the rules?

The SPEAKER. So it seems.

Mr. CONGER. Then I shall probably have an opportunity to offer my amendment.

The Clerk resumed and completed the reading of the bill as proposed to be amended by the committee, as follows:

A bill making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated for the objects hereinafter expressed for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, namely:

UNDER THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Public buildings:

Court-house and post-office, Atlanta, Georgia: For fencing, grading, and approaches, $10,000.

Custom-house and post-office, Albany, New York: For continuation of building, $90,000.

Post-office and subtreasury, Boston, Massachusetts: For continuation of building, $350,000.

Custom-house and subtreasury, Chicago, Illinois: For continuation of building, $350,000.

Custom-house and post-office, Cincinnati, Ohio: For continuation of building, $350,000.

Custom-house and post-office, Fall River, Massachusetts: For continuation of building and for purchase of adjoining land, on Second street, thirty-nine feet in width, $85,000; of which sum not more than $25,000 shall be used for the purchase of the land.

Custom-house and post-office, Hartford, Connecticut: For continuation of building, $75,000.

Court-house and post-office, Harrisburgh, Pennsylvania: For continuation of building, $50,000.

Court-house and post-office, Kansas City, Missouri: For continuation of building, $25,000.

Court-house and post-office, Little Rock, Arkansas: For completion of building, $40,000.

Custom-house, court-house, and post-office, Memphis, Tennessee: For continuation of building, $60,000.

Custom-house and post-office, New Orleans, Louisiana: For continuation of building, $40,000.

Custom-house, court-house, and post-office, Nashville, Tennessee: For continuation of building, $75,000.

Post-office and court-house, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania: For continuation of building, $350,000.

Custom-house and post-office, Saint Louis, Missouri: For continuation of building, $350,000.

Court-house and post-office, Topeka, Kansas: For continuation of building, $30,000.

Court-house and post-office, Utica, New York: For continuation of building, $25,000.

Treasury building, Washington, District of Columbia: For annual repairs, and for retaining-wall and fences, northeast boundary of the Treasury building, $25,000.

Repairs and preservation of public buildings: For repairs and preservation of public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, $100,000.

LIFE-SAVING STATIONS.

For salaries of superintendents for the life-saving stations, as follows: On the coasts of Maine and New Hampshire, one, of Massachusetts, one, at $1,000 each; on the coasts of Rhode Island and Long Island, one, at $1,500; of one assistant superintendent on the coasts of Rhode Island and Long Island, $500.

For salary of one superintendent for the coast of New Jersey, $1,500.

For salaries of superintendents on the coasts of Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia, one, at $1,000; on the coasts of Virginia and North Carolina, one, at $1,000.

For salary of one superintendent for the house of refuge on the coast of Florida, $1,000; and of one superintendent for the life-saving and life-boat stations on the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, $1,000, and of one on the coasts of Lakes Ontario and Erie, $1,000.

For salaries of superintendents for the life-saving and life-boat stations, as follows: One on the coasts of Lake Huron and Superior, and one on the coast of Lake Michigan, at $1,000 each.

For salary of one hundred and ninety-six keepers of life-saving and life-boat stations and of houses of refuge, at $400 each, $78,400.

For pay of crews of experienced surfmen, employed at the life-saving and life-boat stations, at a rate not to exceed $40 per month each during the period of actual employment, $376,960.

For compensation of volunteer crews of life-boat stations, for actual and deserving service rendered upon each occasion of disaster, at such rate, not to exceed $10 for each person, as the Secretary of the Treasury may determine; and for pay of volunteer crews for drill and exercise, $5,000.

Contingent expenses: For fuel for one hundred and ninety-six stations and houses of refuge; repairs and outfits for the same; supplies and provisions for houses of refuge and for shipwrecked persons succored at stations; traveling expenses of officers under orders from the Treasury Department; and contingent expenses, including freight, storage, repairs to apparatus, medals, labor, stationery, advertising, and miscellaneous expenses that cannot be included under any other head, of life-saving stations on the coasts of the United States, $45,000.

For establishing new life-saving stations and life-boat stations on the sea and lake coasts of the United States, $78,000.

Revenue-cutter service:

Expenses of revenue-cutter service: For pay of captains, lieutenants, engineers, cadets, and pilots, and for rations for the same; and for pay of petty officers, seamen, cooks, stewards, boys, coal-passers, and firemen, and for rations for the same; and for fuel for vessels, repairs and outfits for same; ship-chandlery and engineers' stores for same; traveling expenses of officers traveling on duty under orders from the Treasury Department; instruction of cadets; commutation of quarters; and contingent expenses, including wharfage, towage, dockage, freight, advertising, surveys, labor, and miscellaneous expenses, which cannot be included under special heads, $860,000.

Engraving and printing:

For labor and expenses of engraving and printing, namely: For labor, (by the day, piece, or contract,) including labor of workmen skilled in engraving, transferring, plate-printing, and other specialties necessary for carrying on the work of engraving and printing notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, the pay for such labor to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury at rates not exceeding the rates usually paid for such work; and for other expenses of engraving and printing notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States; for materials other than paper required in the work of engraving and printing; for purchase of engravers' tools, dies, rolls, and plates, and for machinery and repairs of same; and for expenses of operating macerating-machines for the destruction of the United States notes, bonds, national-bank notes, and other obligations of the United States authorized to be destroyed, $350,000.

Expenses of removal of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing: For expenses of removal of the machinery, furniture, and effects of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing from the Treasury Department building to the new building in course of erection for said bureau, when completed; and for the purchase and erection of such new machinery and fixtures as may be needed to complete the establishment of that bureau in the new building, including new boilers and a new engine, $50,000.

LIGHT-HOUSE ESTABLISHMENT.

Keepers of light-houses: For salaries, fuel, rations, rent of quarters where necessary, and similar incidental expenses of nine hundred and seventy-five light-keepers and fog-signal keepers, $585,000. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, in his discretion, upon the recommendation of the Light-House Board, to use any surplus portion of the said sum for the purchase of automatic fog-bells.

Expenses of light-vessels: Seamen's wages, rations, repairs, salaries, supplies, and incidental expenses of thirty-one light-ships, and the expenses of maintaining the vessels of the light-house establishment, may be paid from any surplus of the appropriation for the works, general or special, on which the respective vessels are, for the time being, employed; and the cost of repairs to such vessels may be paid from the appropriation under which they respectively were employed when they were injured or became deteriorated to such an extent as to render the repairs necessary; or, if such appropriation be exhausted, then from the appropriation under which they are respectively to be next employed, $230,000.

Buoys: For expenses of raising, cleaning, painting, repairing, removing, and supplying losses of buoys, spindles, and day-beacons, and for chains, sinkers, and similar necessities, $325,000.

Fog-signals: For repairs and incidental expenses in renewing, establishing, and improving fog-signals and buildings connected therewith, $50,000.

Inspecting lights: For expenses of visiting and inspecting lights and other aids to navigation, including rewards paid for information as to collisions, $4,000.

Supplies of light-houses: For supplying the light-houses, beacon-lights, and fog-signals on the Atlantic, Gulf, Lake, and Pacific coasts with illuminating and cleansing materials, and such other materials as may be required for annual consumption, including the expenses of inspection and delivery of the same; for books for light stations, and other incidental and necessary expenses, $375,000.

Repairs of light-houses: For repairs and incidental expenses of light-houses; for rebuilding and improving the same and buildings connected therewith; and for the purchase and repair of illuminating apparatus and machinery, $275,000.

Lighting and buoyage: For maintenance of lights and buoys on the Mississippi, Ohio, and Missouri Rivers, $130,000.

Commissions to superintendents of lights: For commissions to collectors of customs acting as superintendents of lights, being for disbursements to be made by them for the light-house establishment during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, $7,500.

Light-houses, beacons, and fog-signals:

For rebuilding tower, repairing dwelling, and purchasing site for beacon at Ipswich light-station, Massachusetts, $10,000.

For building a double set of quarters for the two keepers at Cape Poge, northeast point of Martha's Vineyard, Massachusetts, $5,000.

For light-house at Stage Harbor, Massachusetts, $10,000.

For day-beacons on the coasts of Maine, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts, and for repairing the same, $10,000.

For reimbursement of Charles J. Gibbs, master of the light-house tender Verben, for amount paid by him in accordance with the judgment of court, in the case of the suit for damages occasioned by the collision of the Verben with the schooner Adell, including attorneys' fees and costs, $800.

For reimbursing H. W. Arnold, keeper of Conimicut light-station, for losses sustained at the time of the destruction of the keeper's dwelling by ice, $319.

For steam fog signal at Falkner's Island light-station, New York, $5,000.

For establishing a first-class fog-signal at Execution Rocks, Long Island Sound, $15,000.

For protecting the site of the east beacon, Sandy Hook, New Jersey, from the encroachments of the sea, $5,000.

For purchasing site at Steam Mill Point, Whitehall Narrows, New York, $300.

For the purchase of additional land at Cumberland Head Light station, New York, $250.

For establishing a better light and building a keeper's dwelling at Isle La Motte, Lake Champlain, Vermont, $5,000.

That the amount expended for repairing and refitting the discontinued light-station at Reedy Island, Delaware Bay, to fit it for a fog-signal station, is hereby authorized to be charged to the appropriations for repairs and incidental expenses of light-houses relating to the fiscal years during which such repairs were actually made.

For general repairs and improvements at the general light-house and buoy depot at Staten Island, New York, $10,000.

For protecting the site of the Absecon light-house at Atlantic City, New Jersey, $20,000.

To re-establish Reedy Island light, Delaware River, $3,500.

To establish lights on the Delaware River, from Deepwater Point to League Island, $60,000.

For repairs and protection of light-station in the fourth light-house district, damaged by storm of October 3, 1878, $17,400.

That the balance of the appropriation made by the act of July 31, 1876, for the establishment of range-lights at Hilton Head and Bay Point, entrance to Port Royal Harbor, South Carolina, is hereby made available for the construction of a range-light on Paris Island in the same harbor.

For changing position of light on Fig Island, Savannah River, Georgia, and establishing a range-light on the tower of the Exchange building, Savannah, and the Light-house Board is authorized to establish said range-light without session of jurisdiction, provided the Government shall be at no expense for rent, $3,000.

For establishing a depot for buoys and supplies in the sixth light-house district, $10,000.

For continuing the construction of a light-house at or near American Shoal, Florida Reefs, Florida, $50,000.

For repairing the light-house at Northwest Passage, entrance to Key West Harbor, Florida, $6,000.

To reimburse keepers of Dog Island and Saint Mark's light-stations, Florida, for private property destroyed by a hurricane, $970.65.

For rebuilding tower at South Pass entrance to Mississippi River, Louisiana, $50,000.

For establishing a beacon-light to form a range with a large light to guide into the mouth of the Calcasieu River, Louisiana, $1,500.

For beacon-light on Fryin-Pan Island, at the mouth of Saint Mary's River, Lake Huron, $2,000.

For continuing the erection of a light-house on Stannard's Rock, Lake Superior, Michigan, $50,000.

For erection, removal, and repair of pier-head lights on the northern and north-western lakes, $25,000.

For establishing a first-class steam fog-signal at the light-station on South Farallon Island, California, $12,000.

For establishing a light-house and fog-bell to mark the entrance to Oakland Harbor, California, $5,000.

Point Pinos light-station, California: To pay amount of the decree of the United States circuit court, attorneys' fees and costs, in the case of The United States vs. Theron R. Hopkins and others, a suit instituted for the purpose of obtaining condemnation of lands for light-house site, $6,000.

For establishing a depot for buoys and supplies in the twelfth district, $10,000.

For completing the light-house and fog signal to be established at Point Wilson, Puget Sound, Washington Territory, $12,000.

For establishing duplicate steam fog-signals on the coasts of the United States, $20,000.

For building a steamer for service on the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, $30,000.

For additions to the laboratory used by the Light-House Board for experiments with illuminating apparatus and materials, $8,000.

Coast and Geodetic Survey:

Survey of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts: For every purpose and object necessary for and incident to the continuation of the survey of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts of the United States, the Mississippi and other rivers, to the head of either tidal influence or ship-navigation; soundings, deep-sea temperatures, dredgings, and current observations along the above-named coasts, and in the Gulf of Mexico and the Gulf Stream, including its entrance into the Gulf, its course through the Caribbean and into and around the Sargasso Sea; the triangulation toward the western coast, and furnishing points for State surveys; the triangulation of the Mississippi River from the northern boundary of the State of Mississippi to the Gulf; the usual coast-survey work of that part of Louisiana lying between the mouth of the Red River and the Gulf as a portion of the coast included in the operations of the Coast and Geodetic Survey; the preparation and publication of charts, the Coast Pilot, and other results of the work, with the purchase of materials therefor, including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, $390,000.

Survey of the western (Pacific) coasts: For every purpose and object necessary for and incident to the continuation of the survey of the Pacific coasts of the United States, including the Columbia and other rivers, to the head of either tidal influence or ship navigation, deep-sea soundings, temperatures, currents, and dredgings along and also in the branch of the Japan stream flowing off these coasts; the triangulation toward the eastern coast and furnishing points for State surveys; the preparation and publication of charts, the Coast Pilot, and other results of the work, with the purchase of materials therefor, including compensation of civilians employed in the work, $180,000.

Repairs of vessels: For the repairs and maintenance of the complement of vessels used in the Coast Survey, $30,000.

Publishing observations: For continuing the publication of observations, and their discussion, made in the progress of the Coast Survey, including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, the publication to be made at the Government Printing Office, $6,000.

General expenses: For rent of buildings for offices, workrooms, and workshops in Washington, $13,600.

For rent of fire-proof building, No. 205 New Jersey avenue south, (excepting rooms for standard weights and measures,) for the safe-keeping and preservation of the original astronomical, magnetic, hydrographic, and other records; the original topographical and hydrographic maps and charts; instruments, engraved plates, and other valuable articles of the Coast Survey, $5,000.

For rent of sub-office at San Francisco, $2,000.

For fuel for all the offices and buildings, $2,000.

For transportation of instruments, maps, and charts; the purchase of new instruments, books, maps, and charts; gas and other miscellaneous expenses, $9,400.

That Senators, Representatives, and Delegates to the House of Representatives shall each be entitled to not more than ten charts published by the Coast Survey, for each regular session of Congress.

Under the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries:

Propagation of food-fishes: For the introduction of shad into the waters of the Pacific, Atlantic, the Gulf and Great Lake States, and of salmon, whitefish, carp, gonorrund, and other useful food-fishes, into the waters of the United States generally to which they are best adapted; also for the propagation of cod, herring, mackerel, halibut, and other sea-fishes, and for continuing the inquiry into the causes of the decrease of food-fishes of the United States, $75,000, which shall be immediately available.

Illustrations for Report on Food Fishes: For preparation of illustrations for the Report of the United States Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries, $1,000.

For maintenance of the United States carp-ponds in the city of Washington and elsewhere, $5,000.

For collecting statistics of the sea-coast and lake fisheries of the United States, especially those covered by the Washington treaty of 1871, $3,500.

For construction of a steam-vessel for the hatching of shad, cod, mackerel, halibut, and other fishes along the coast of the United States, to be built under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, according to the plans of the United States Fish Commission, $40,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary; to be available from the passage of this act.

Miscellaneous objects under the Treasury Department:

Expenses of national currency: For paper, engraving, printing, express charges, and other expenses, $120,000.

Transportation of United States securities: For transportation of notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, $60,000; and so much of the act "making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1878, as authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue coin certificates in exchange for bullion deposited for coinage at mints and assay-offices, other than those mentioned in section 3545 of the Revised Statutes, be, and the same is hereby, repealed; said repeal to take effect at the end of the present fiscal year.

Standard weights and measures: For construction and verification of standard weights and measures, including metric standards, for the custom-houses and other offices of the United States, and for the several States, and of mural standards of length in Washington, District of Columbia, $5,000; for rent of workshops in building No. 215 South Capitol street, $400; for rent of fire-proof rooms in building No. 205 New Jersey avenue, south, for the safe-keeping and preservation of finished weights, measures, balances, and metric standards, $1,000; for fuel and lights, materials, transportation, traveling, and other miscellaneous expenses, $600; in all, $7,000.

For contribution to maintenance of International Bureau of Weights and Measures, in conformity with terms of convention signed May 20, 1875, $1,900, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Fuel, lights, and water for public buildings: For fuel, light, water, and miscellaneous items required by the janitors and firemen in the proper care of the buildings, furniture, and heating apparatus, such as brooms, mops, brushes, buckets, wheelbarrows, shovels, saws, hatchets, and hammers, for all public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, $380,000.

That authority be, and is hereby, given to the Secretary of the Treasury to lease, at his discretion, such unoccupied and unproductive property of the United States under his control, for the leasing of which there is no authority under existing law.

Furniture and repairs of furniture for public buildings: For furniture and repairs of furniture, and carpets, for all public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, including furniture for three new buildings, namely: Appraiser's stores at San Francisco, court-house and post-office at Atlanta, Georgia, and court-house and post-office at Little Rock, Arkansas, $120,000.

Pay of custodians and janitors: For pay of custodians and janitors for all public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, $90,000.

Heating apparatus for public buildings: For heating, ventilating, and hoisting apparatus, and repairs of same, for all public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, $15,000.

Vaults, safes, and locks for public buildings: For vaults, safes, and locks, and repairs of the same, for all public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, $50,000.

Plans for public buildings: For photographing materials, and labor for duplicating plans for all public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, $1,500.

Suppressing counterfeiting and similar felonies: For expenses of detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons engaged in counterfeiting Treasury notes, bonds, national-bank notes, and other securities of the United States, as well as the coins of the United States, and other felonies against the Government, and for no other purpose whatever, $75,000.

Compensation in lieu of moiety: For compensation in lieu of moiety in certain cases under the customs-revenue laws, $20,000.

Salaries and traveling expenses of agents at seal-fisheries in Alaska: For one agent, $3,650; one assistant agent, $2,920; two assistant agents, at $2,100 each; necessary traveling expenses of agents in going to and returning from Alaska, at $600 each per annum; in all, $13,350.

Examination of rebel archives and records of captured property: To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to have the records of captured and abandoned property examined, and information furnished therefrom, for the use and protection of the Government, $5,000.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, to refund excess of duties and to pay costs in suits and proceedings in "charges and commissions cases" in which judgments may hereafter be obtained, or which may be compromised by said Secretary, $15,000.

That section 170 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be so modified that the Secretary of the Treasury be, and hereby is, authorized, during the present fiscal year, to pay, out of the appropriation for refunding the national debt, a reasonable additional compensation to the clerks of his Department who are actually employed upon the refunding of the national debt, in addition to the usual business hours.

Lands and other property of the United States: For custody, care, and protection of lands and other property belonging to the United States, $5,000.

For purchase of law-books and suitable books of reference for the library of the Treasury Department, $1,000.

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay the State of Georgia $72,236.94, in full settlement of advances made to the United States for the suppression of the Creek, Seminole, and Cherokee Indians in 1835, 1836, 1837, and 1838; and that said sum be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay the State of Kentucky, on special settlement of the third and fourth installments of her war claims under act of July 27, 1861, the sum of $6,091.85, which has been confirmed by the Second Comptroller of the Treasury.

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to the State of Pennsylvania $8,236.56, being the amount due said State on special settlement of her war claims, under the act of July 27, 1861, entitled "An act to indemnify the States for expenses incurred by them in defense of the United States."

For three additional clerks in the office of the assistant treasurer of the United States at New York, two at the rate of $1,500 per annum, and one at the rate of $1,200 per annum, for the service of the unexpired portion of the current fiscal year a sufficient sum is hereby appropriated.

For salary to Charles Bryant, late special Treasury agent of the seal islands in Alaska, from May 15 to June 30, 1877, inclusive, at the rate of $3,650 per annum, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877, $471.23.

For professional services rendered and expenses incurred by F. W. Viche, attorney at law, Vincennes, Indiana, in the case of The United States vs. Hall-Neilson and others, involving the title claimed by the United States to a valuable tract of land situated in the city of Vincennes, Indiana, $1,185.06.

To pay John Sherman, jr., United States marshal for New Mexico, for services rendered and expenses incurred in paying per diem witnesses, bailiffs, and other similar and necessary expenses in the investigation of the Una do Gato land grant in the Territory of New Mexico, under authority given by the act of July 22, 1854, $361.93.

To pay B. R. Lewis and J. J. Coffee the balances due them as marshal and clerk respectively at the consulate-general at Shanghai, China, during their absence attending on subpoenas as witnesses before a committee of the House of Representatives, the sum of $2,203.69, to be available at once; and said Lewis and Coffee shall receive no allowance for witness fees and traveling expenses.

To reimburse expenses incurred and paid by C. H. Lord, United States depositary at Tucson, Arizona, under Treasury Department instructions, $334.87.

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to expend, out of the appropriation for defraying the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs, such amount as he may deem necessary, not exceeding $100,000 per annum, for the detection and prevention of frauds upon the customs revenue.

That the unexpended balance of the appropriation of $150,000 made by the act of June 14, 1878, to refund and pay back taxes erroneously or illegally assessed or collected under the internal-revenue laws, is hereby continued and made available for the payment of all claims to which the appropriation is applicable, which are not payable from the permanent annual appropriations provided for in section 3689 of the Revised Statutes.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to provide for the maintenance of revenue steamers on the coast of Alaska, $20,000.

UNDER THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

Signal Service:

Observation and report of storms: For the expenses of the observation and report of storms by telegraph and signal for the benefit of commerce and agriculture throughout the United States; for manufacture, purchase, and repair of meteorological and other necessary instruments; for telegraphing reports; for expenses of storm signals announcing the probable approach and force of storms; for continuing the establishment and connection of stations at life-saving stations and light-houses; for instrument shelters; for hire, furniture, and expenses of offices maintained for public use in cities or ports, receiving reports; for river reports; for maps and bulletins to be displayed in chambers of commerce and boards of trade rooms, and for distribution; for books, periodicals, newspapers, and stationery; and for incidental expenses not otherwise provided for, $375,000.

Construction, maintenance, and repair of military telegraph lines: For the construction and continuing the construction, maintenance, and use of military telegraph lines on the Indian and Mexican frontiers and in the Northwest, for the connection of military posts and stations; and for the better protection of immigration and the frontier settlements from depredations, especially in the State of Texas and the Territories of New Mexico, Arizona, Dakota, and Wyoming, and the Indian Territory, $45,000, under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1875.

Armories and arsenals:

For repairs and preservation of grounds, buildings, and machinery, not used for manufacturing purposes, of the arsenal at Springfield, Massachusetts, $15,000.

Rock Island arsenal: For Shop G, an iron working and finishing shop for the arsenal, $100,000.

For Shop II, an iron-finishing shop for the armory, $50,000.

For Shop I, a wood-working and leather-working shop for the arsenal, $50,000.

For re-covering Fort Armstrong avenue and the causeway to the Rock Island wagon-bridge with macadam, and for putting a new floor on the Rock Island wagon-bridge, $6,000.

For care and preservation of the Rock Island bridge, and expense of maintaining and operating the draw, $9,000.

For general care, preservation, and improvement; building new roads; care and preservation of the water-power; painting, and care, and preservation of permanent buildings, and bridges, and shores of the island; building fences, and grading grounds, and repairs of and extension of railroad, $12,000.

Benicia arsenal, Benicia, California: To rebuild the present wharf, $5,000.

Pikesville arsenal: That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to dispose of the grounds, buildings, and appurtenances known as the Pikesville arsenal in the State of Maryland, by public sale to the highest bidder, turning into the Treasury the net proceeds after paying cost of advertising, sale, &c.: Provided, That if the State of Maryland shall, prior to the 1st of January, 1880, accept the same, it is hereby granted and donated to said State, to be used for such militia or other purposes as the necessities of the State may require; and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to transfer said property to the State of Maryland, to be held by it in trust for the use, benefit, and execution of the purposes of this grant.

Buildings and grounds in and around Washington and the Executive Mansion: Improvement and care of public grounds: For filling in and improving grounds south of Executive Mansion, $5,000.

For ordinary care of greenhouses and the nursery, $1,500.

For ordinary care of Lafayette Square, $1,000.

For care and improvement of reservation No. 3, (Monument grounds,) $1,000.

For construction and repair of iron fences, $500.

For manure, and hauling the same, $4,000.

For painting iron fences, vases, lamps, and lamp-posts, $1,500.

For purchase and repair of seats, $500.

For purchase and repair of tools, $500.

For trees, tree-stakes, lime, whitewashing, and stock for nursery, $3,000.

For removing snow and ice, $1,000.

For flower-pots, twine, baskets, and lycopodium, $1,000.
For care and construction and repair of fountains in the public grounds, $1,500.
For abating nuisances, $500.
For improving various reservations, $10,000.

Executive Mansion: For care of and repairs, refurnishing, and fuel for the Executive Mansion, and care of and necessary repair to the greenhouses, and fuel for the same, and recovering the roof of the mansion with tin, $25,000.

Lighting the Executive Mansion and public grounds: For gas, pay of lamp-lighters, gas-fitters, plumbers, plumbing, lamps, lamp-posts, matches, and repairs of all kinds; lamps for Anacostia bridge; fuel for office, for the watchmen's lodges, and for the greenhouses in the nursery, $15,000: Provided, That no more than $25 shall be paid per lamp for gas under any expenditure provided for in this act; and in case a contract cannot be made at that rate, the engineer in charge is hereby authorized to substitute other illuminating material, and to use so much of the sum hereby appropriated as may be necessary for that purpose.

Repair of water-pipes and fire-plugs: For repairing and extending water-pipes, purchase of apparatus to clean them, and for cleaning the springs and repairing and renewing the pipes of the same that supply the Capitol, the Executive Mansion, and the War and Navy Departments, $2,500.

Telegraph to connect the Capitol with the Departments and the Government Printing Office: For repair and care of the same, $1,000.

Building for State, War, and Navy Departments, (east wing:) To complete the east wing and its approaches, and for continuation of construction of the north wing of the building, $465,000, of which sum $65,000 shall be immediately available.

Miscellaneous objects under War Department:

For the completion of the survey of the northern and northwestern lakes, and to finish the field-work and publication of maps, and all work pertaining to said survey except the preparation of the final report, $25,000.

For furniture for the portion of the new building about to be occupied by the War Department, $50,000; to be available immediately.

Expenses of military convicts: For payment of costs and charges of State penitentiaries for the care, clothing, maintenance, and medical attendance of United States military convicts confined in them, $16,000.

For continuing the preparation of the publication of the Official Records of the War of the Rebellion, both of the Union and confederate armies, and for the compensation of temporary clerks and other employees engaged thereon, the collection of such confederate records as may be placed at the disposal of the Government by gift or loan, the rent of building, and the preservation of the Brady War Views, $40,490: Provided, That not more than two clerks of class 4, one clerk of class 3, one clerk of class 2, one clerk of class 1, two clerks at $1,000 each, twelve copyists at $900 each, one foreman of printing, one pressman, six compositors, two assistant messengers, one watchman, and one agent for the collection of confederate records shall be employed; and the unexpended balance of the sum of $1,000,000 appropriated by act of March 3, 1873, to erect head-stones over the graves of soldiers who served in the regular or volunteer army during the war for the Union, is hereby continued and made available.

For the purpose of payment of balance due for records, already purchased, of the late Confederate States of America, of Colonel Thomas L. Sneed, $6,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

For official postage-stamps, as required under the postal union, to prepay postage on matter addressed to postal union countries, $1,000.

Support and improvement of the Leavenworth military prison, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas: For purchase of subsistence stores, oil, wicking, and fuel for heating and cooking purposes and running machinery, $44,000.

For hay for prisoners' beds; for blank-books and stationery; for stoves and stove-pipe, for use in buildings not heated by steam; for miscellaneous stores, drainage of grounds, disinfectants, and other general purposes, $1,040.

For material for clothing for each prisoner on discharge; for payment of $5 to each prisoner on discharge; for expenses of pursuing and payment of rewards for apprehension and delivery of escaped prisoners, $3,500.

For hose for use in case of fire and for filling cisterns, and for tools and materials in shops, $1,000.

For tobacco for issue to prisoners on special and excessive hard labor, $400.
For foreman and engineers, and mechanics and watchmen, and extra-duty pay, $7,500.

For extra-duty pay to non-commissioned officers of prison-guard; for extension to prison shops and repairs to prison buildings; for new buildings; for construction of ice-house, $10,000; in all, $67,440: Provided, That the Secretary of War shall cause to be fabricated at the said prison such supplies for the Army as can be economically and properly manufactured at the said prison.

United States Artillery School at Fortress Monroe, Virginia: To provide for text-books, drawing materials, models, and material necessary in the science of engineering and of artillery, stationery, and miscellaneous necessities for the use of the school, $4,750.

For completion of the United States barrack buildings at Fortress Monroe, Virginia, $34,000.

To enable the Secretary of War to establish a military post in the vicinity of Pagosa Springs, on the left bank of the San Juan River, in the State of Colorado, for the protection of the San Juan country, $40,000.

To enable the Secretary of War to pay for rent of building at San Antonio, Texas, used as headquarters of the Department of Texas, from November 1, 1878, until June 1, 1879, $2,391.67.

Artificial limbs: For furnishing artificial limbs and appliances, or commutation therefor, and transportation, $100,000.

Appliances for disabled soldiers: For providing surgical appliances for persons disabled in the military or naval service of the United States not otherwise provided for, $1,000 dollars.

For continuing the rebuilding of four sets of officers' quarters at Madison Barracks, Sacket's Harbor, New York, destroyed by fire on November 6, 1876, according to plans and specifications in the office of the Quartermaster-General of the United States, $12,500.

Support of transient paupers: For care, support, and medical treatment of seventy-five transient paupers, medical and surgical patients, in the city of Washington, under a contract to be made with such institution as the Surgeon-General of the Army may select, $15,000.

For printing and binding the catalogue of the library of the Surgeon-General's office, $20,000.

Support of National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers: Current expenses, including repairs, for the central branch, for the eastern branch, for the northwestern branch, for the southern branch, and for barracks and other necessary construction purposes, for clothing of extra sizes and underclothing, for out-door relief and incidental expenses, $280,000: Provided, That all purchases of supplies exceeding the sum of $1,000 at any one time shall be made upon public tender after due advertisement, and that the expenditure for new buildings shall be expressly authorized in writing: Provided, That no arrears of pension shall be allowed or paid to any pensioner being a disabled soldier or sailor for the time during which he has been supported in the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers; and that the estimates hereafter submitted for the support of the National Home shall be made in detail, specifying the several items of expenditure, and separating the cost of food and other supplies in the form usually adopted for the Army, and that this specification be made for each soldiers' home separately.

For the purpose of keeping in repair and protection of the road between Fortress Monroe and Mill Creek, Virginia, $6,500.

UNDER THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

Navy yards and stations:
Navy-yard, Mare Island, California: For continuation of work on stone dry-dock, $75,000.

Repairs and preservation at navy-yards: For repairs at the different navy yards and stations, and preservation of the same, $300,000.

Miscellaneous:

To enable the Secretary of the Navy to make certain expenditures in experiment with a view to obtain a correct knowledge of the velocity of light, $5,000.

For the United States Naval Observatory, the following items, to wit: For solar and stellar photography, $1,000; for illustrations for report on the eclipse of July, 1878, $1,500; for the same on the California eclipse, January, 1880, $600; and for thirty-five wood-cuts of nebula in Orion, $350; in all, $3,450, which shall be immediately available.

To pay certain claims for bounty for the destruction of enemy's vessels, allowed under the act of June 30, 1864, and duly certified by the proper accounting officers, $1,210.16.

For furniture and fitting up shelving, file cases, fire apparatus, and similar necessities for the Secretary's office and the bureaus of the Navy Department in the east wing of the new building for the State, War, and Navy Departments, to be available as required, under direction of the Secretary of the Navy, $50,000.

For repairs to the rope-walk building at the Boston navy-yard, Boston, Massachusetts, new roof and new floors, and other necessary repairs, to make the building in good condition, $20,000.

To enable the Secretary of the Navy to pay J. F. H. Claiborne amount due him on adjusted account, $748.10.

UNDER THE DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

Public buildings:

Capitol extension: For work on the Capitol, and for general repairs thereof, $50,000: Provided, That $1,500 of this amount may be used for the purchase of file-cases, or boxes for the file-room of the Clerk's office of the House of Representatives. And hereafter the disbursing clerk of the Department of the Interior is hereby required to act as disbursing clerk of the Architect of the Capitol, and to disburse all moneys appropriated for the United States Capitol extension and improvement of the grounds, and to receive an annual compensation of $1,000, to be paid out of said appropriation.

Improving Capitol grounds: For improving Capitol grounds, $60,000.
For payment of retained percentages on contracts made during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1876, for paving roadways in Capitol grounds, $2,217.94.

Lighting the Capitol and grounds: For lighting Capitol and grounds about the same, including Botanic Garden and Senate stable; for gas, pay of superintendent of meters, lamp-lighters, and gas-fitters; for material for electrical battery; and for general repairs to lamps, pipes, and meters, $30,000.

Patent Office building: For the fire-proof reconstruction of the Patent Office building within the present walls, under the plans submitted to Congress by the Secretary of the Interior, $150,000, in addition to the unexpended balance of the amount appropriated for this purpose by the act of June 20, 1878, which is hereby made available for the purpose originally intended; to be expended under the supervision of a board consisting of the Commissioner of Patents, the Architect of the Capitol, and the engineer in charge of public buildings and grounds. To pay the American Photolithographic Company the sum of $2,000 is hereby appropriated, or so much thereof as may be necessary to enable the Commissioner of Patents to reimburse said company for the actual expenses it incurred in reproducing copies of drawings in 1869 and 1870.

Repairs to court-house, Washington, District of Columbia: For annual repairs to court-house in the city of Washington, and for new furnaces, $1,000.

Improvement of grounds, Department of Agriculture: For labor, new implements, purchase of trees for arboretum, and repairs of tools, $6,500.

PUBLIC LANDS.

Expenses of the collection of revenue from sales of public lands:
For salaries and commissions of registers of land offices and receivers of public moneys, at ninety-four local land offices, $186,000.

For incidental expenses of the several land offices, $100,000.

For expenses of depositing money received from the sale of public lands, $10,000.

To meet expenses of protecting timber on the public lands, $25,000 for depredations on the public timber: Provided, That the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, may be authorized to draw, if necessary, from the Treasury of the United States, $25,000 of the fund paid into the Treasury during the fiscal year, accruing from sales, seizures, or penalties on account of public lands.

For surveying the public lands, $267,500.

For surveying confirmed private land claims in California at the rates per mile prescribed by law, and office expenses, $7,500.

For the preliminary survey of unconfirmed and survey of confirmed private land claims in New Mexico, at a rate not exceeding $16 per linear mile, and office expenses, $10,000.

For the preliminary survey of unconfirmed and survey of confirmed private land claims in Arizona, at a rate not exceeding $16 per linear mile, and office expenses, $15,000.

Occasional examinations of public surveys in the several surveying districts, in order to test the accuracy of the work in the field, inspect mineral deposits, coal-fields, timber districts, &c., $3,000.

Survey of the northern boundary of Wyoming Territory, being that part of the forty-fifth parallel of north latitude included between the twenty-seventh and thirty-fourth meridians of west longitude from Washington Observatory, $29,000.

For appraisement of lands and the buildings erected by the United States, and the sale of the same to the highest bidder, in accordance with the act of June 19, 1874, $5,000.

To enable the Commissioner of the General Land Office to continue to reproduce worn and defaced official plats of surveys now on file, and constituting a part of the records of said office, $10,000.

For obtaining iron monument from the Colorado River, $205.22.

For translating, copying, and indexing original Spanish archives, and preserving from destruction originals greatly defaced in the office of the surveyor-general of California, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, $9,000.

For purchase of an iron safe for the said original Spanish archives, $1,000.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to protect, preserve, and improve the Yellowstone National Park, in compliance with section 2475 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, $10,000.

Offices of surveyors-general of public lands:

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Louisiana: For fuel, books, stationery, messenger-hire, and other incidental expenses, $1,000.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Florida: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,000.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Minnesota: For fuel, books, stationery, pay of messenger, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Dakota: For rent of office of surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Colorado: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of New Mexico: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of California: For fuel, books, stationery, pay of messenger, and other incidental expenses, $3,000.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Idaho: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Nevada: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Oregon: For fuel, books, stationery, pay of messenger, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Washington: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Nebraska and Iowa: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Montana: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Utah: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Wyoming: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

Contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Arizona: For rent of office for surveyor-general, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, $1,500.

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

For the expenses of the geological survey and the classification of the public lands and examination of the geological structure, mineral resources, and products of the national domain provided for under the section of the act "making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1879, to be expended by the Director of the Geological Survey under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, $100,000.

For the expenses incurred by the committee of the National Academy of Sciences during their consideration of the scientific surveys of the Territories, $300.

TENTH CENSUS.

To meet the expenses attendant upon the taking of the tenth census, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, $250,000.

MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTS.

Government Hospital for the Insane:

Current expenses, Government Hospital for the Insane: For support, clothing, and treatment of the insane of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Revenue-Cutter Service, and of all persons who have become insane since their entry into the military or naval service of the United States, and who are indigent, and of the indigent insane of the District of Columbia, in the Government Hospital for the Insane, $160,000: Provided, That one-half of the expense of the indigent patients from the District of Columbia shall be reported to the Treasury Department, and charged against the appropriations to be paid toward the expenses of the District by the General Government, without regard to the date of their admission.

For airing courts for the recreation of the inmates, $500; for the completion of the rooms in the upper story of the bakery, $1,500; for changing a portion of the roof and providing additional accommodations for employes in the attic story of the hospital building, $5,000; in all, $7,000.

For fire-pump and additional pipe and hose to complete the provision against fire, $3,000.

For the erection of suitable structures for the present accommodation of patients of the chronic class, to be immediately available, $30,000.

For general repairs and improvements, $5,000.

Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb:

Current expenses, Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb: For support of the institution, including salaries and incidental expenses, and $500 for books and illustrative apparatus, $50,000.

Freedmen's Hospital and Asylum:

Support of Freedmen's Hospital and Asylum, Washington, District of Columbia: For subsistence, $18,000; for salaries and compensation, $9,336; fuel and light, $3,000; clothing and bedding, forage and transportation, miscellaneous expenses, and repairs, $5,900; rent of hospital buildings and grounds, $4,000; medicines and medical supplies, $1,500; in all, $41,736.

Indian affairs:

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay, or cause to be paid, in equal portions, to Susanna Marble, Millie Frances Lee, and John Abel Lee, heirs of Abel S. Lee, or their legal representatives, the sum of $2,915, with interest thereon at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum from the 9th day of June, 1872, out of any money due and owing, or that may hereafter become due, to the Kiowa tribe of Indians, on account of any treaty between the said tribe of Indians and the United States; the said payment to be in full of all claims of the said heirs of said Abel S. Lee, and of the amount allowed them by the Indian Bureau for property belonging to said Abel S. Lee, taken and destroyed by the said Kiowa Indians in the year 1872. That there be paid Mrs. Celia C. Short, of Lawrence, Kansas, the sum of $5,000, in five annual installments of $1,000 each, out of any money that may hereafter be appropriated for the use and benefit of the Cheyenne Indians; the first installment to be paid out of the money appropriated for said Indians by act of Congress approved February 17, 1879, entitled "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian department, &c."

That so much of "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1878, as is in the words following: "To pay to Charles P. Birkett the sum of $32,565.71, to reimburse the said Birkett, late United States Indian agent, for amount expended by him for the benefit of the Indians at Ponca agency, Dakota," be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

For the survey of lands for allotments to the Red Cloud and Spotted Tail bands of Sioux Indians in Dakota Territory, $10,000.

Smithsonian Institution:

Preservation of collections, Smithsonian Institution: For preservation and care of the collections of the National Museum, including those from the International Exhibition of 1876, $23,000.

Distribution of duplicates: For expenses of making up into sets for distribution to colleges and museums, the duplicate ores, minerals, and objects of natural history belonging to the United States, $5,000.

Preservation of collections, Smithsonian Institution, Armory building: For expenses of watching and storage of articles belonging to the United States, including those transferred from the International Exhibition of 1876, $2,500.

Additional security against fire: For providing additional security against fire in the Smithsonian building for the Government collections, in accordance with report of the commission appointed to examine the public buildings, December 10, 1877, $1,000.

For completing and preparing for publication the Contributions to North American Ethnology, under the Smithsonian Institution, $20,000: Provided, That all the archives, records, and materials relating to the Indians of North America, collected by the Geographical and Geological Survey of the Rocky Mountain Region, shall be turned over to the Smithsonian Institution, that the work may be completed and prepared for publication under its direction: Provided, That it shall meet the approval of the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

Entomological commission:

For the completion of the work of the United States entomological commission under the Department of the Interior in the special investigation of the Rocky Mountain locust or grasshopper and the cotton-worm, the sum of $10,000.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

To pay George H. Giddings, late contractor, for one month's extra pay on discontinuance of a portion of route numbered 8076, Texas, which went into effect July 1, 1861, in accordance with the opinion of the Attorney-General, $14,583 33.

COURT OF CLAIMS.

For payment of judgments of the Court of Claims that have been or may be rendered, but have not yet been appealed from, in the event of non-appeal, $100,000.

UNDER THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

Miscellaneous:

Defending suits and claims for seizure of captured or abandoned property: For payment of the necessary expenses incurred in defending suits against the Secretary of the Treasury or his agents for the seizure of captured or abandoned property, and for the examination of witnesses in claims against the United States pending in any Department, and for the defense of the United States in the Court of Claims, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General, $25,000.

Prosecution and collection of claims: For expenses to be incurred in the prosecution and collection of claims due to the United States, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General, $2,500.

Punishing violations of intercourse acts and frauds: For detecting and punishing violations of the intercourse acts of Congress and frauds committed in the Indian service, the same to be expended by the Attorney-General in allowing such fees and compensation of witnesses, jurors, and marshals, and in defraying such other expenses as may be necessary for this purpose, $3,000.

Prosecution of crimes: For detection and prosecution of crimes against the United States; investigation of official acts, records, and accounts, to be disbursed under the direction of the Attorney-General, $20,000.

To enable the Attorney-General to pay for the editing and preparing for publication and the superintending of the printing of the fifteenth volume of the Opinions of the Attorney-General, including the expense of copying the same, $1,000.

JUDICIAL.

United States Courts:

Support of convicts: For support and maintenance of convicts transferred from the District of Columbia, for support of convicts transferred from other districts, (and for collection of criminal statistics,) to be disbursed under the direction of the Attorney-General, $15,000.

Expenses of territorial courts in Utah: For defraying the contingent expenses of the courts, including compensation of the United States district attorney and the fees per diem, and traveling expenses of the United States marshal in the Territory of Utah, with expenses of summoning jurors; subpoenaing witnesses; of arresting, guarding, and transporting prisoners; of hiring and feeding guards; and of supplying and caring for the penitentiary, to be expended only under the direction and order of the Department of Justice, upon accounts duly verified and certified, $20,000. And this appropriation may be used, under the direction of the said Department, to defray the judicial expenses of the supreme and district courts of said Territory; and the amount so used shall be reimbursed to said appropriation out of the treasury of said Territory; and until such reimbursement shall be fully made, no member or officer of said Legislative Assembly shall be entitled to any compensation or allowance out of any moneys of the United States.

That so much of the act "making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1878, as requires the authorities of the county of Madison or town of Jackson, Tennessee, to provide suitable buildings, free of any expense to the United States, for holding the United States district and circuit courts be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

That the second section of an act entitled "An act to provide for the holding of terms of the district and circuit courts of the United States at Fort Wayne, Indiana," approved June 18, 1878, be, and the same is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. That the clerk of the district court and the clerk of the circuit court for the district of Indiana, and the marshal and the district attorney for said district, shall perform the duties appertaining to their offices respectively for said courts; and the clerks of said courts and the marshal shall appoint deputies, to reside and keep their offices at Fort Wayne, and who shall, in the absence of their principals, do and perform all the duties appertaining to their said offices respectively."

BOTANIC GARDEN.

For improvements and repairs to the buildings and grounds of the Botanic Garden, as follows: For two new boilers and additional pipe for conservatory and one propagating house, $750; slate tables for west wing of the conservatory to replace rotten wood, $500; plumbing, $200; painting and glazing, $800; carpenters' work, $300; concrete bottom and completing rim to fountain and curb for beds around the same, $355; hardware, $100; concrete walks, $1,200; brick-work, $100; soil to fill beds to conform to new grade, and for re-setting and raising main walk, $1,150; in all, $5,495.

PUBLIC PRINTING AND BINDING.

For the public printing, for the public binding, and for paper for the public printing, including the cost of printing the debates and proceedings of Congress in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and for lithographing, mapping, and engraving for both Houses of Congress, the Supreme Court of the United States, the supreme court of the District of Columbia, the Court of Claims, the Library of Congress, and the Departments, and for all the necessary materials which may be needed in the prosecution of the work, $1,500,000; and from the said sum hereby appropriated, printing and binding may be done by the Public Printer to the amounts following respectively, namely:

For printing and binding for Congress, including the proceedings and debates, $757,000; for the State Department, $15,000; for the Treasury Department, $180,000; for the War Department, $100,000; for the Navy Department, $39,000; for the Interior Department, $191,000; for the Department of Justice, $7,000; for the Post-Office Department, $140,000; for the Agricultural Department, $11,000; for the Supreme Court of the United States, $30,000; for the supreme court of the District of Columbia, $1,000; for the Court of Claims, $10,000; and for the Library of Congress, $19,000.

For fire-proof extension of the Government Printing Office building, upon plans approved by the Architect of the Capitol, and the work to be done under his direction, including heating apparatus and plumbing, said appropriation to be available during the present fiscal year, $43,800; and any expenditure on a plan that shall cost a greater sum to complete it shall be deemed unlawful.

For the purchase of portable fire-extinguishers, $1,000.

For the annual rental and necessary repairs of the telephones and lines connecting the Capitol with the Government Printing Office and the several Executive Departments, $300, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

That the parties named below be allowed the amounts set opposite their names on account of expenses incurred by them respectively in contested-election cases: Charles M. Shelley, $2,500; Jere Haralson, $2,500; P. D. Wigginton, $2,500; Romualdo Pacheco, $2,000; T. M. Patterson, $237.35; J. B. Belford, $666; J. J. Finley, $1,262.71; Horatio Bisbee, Jr., $4,000; J. H. Acklen, $2,000; C. B. Darrall, $1,000; J. B. Elam, $500; C. E. Nash, $1,000; E. W. Robertson, $750; Benjamin Dean, $1,500; ————, $1,500; ————, Lynch, $1,000; ————, Metcalfe, $1,700; Graham Frost, $2,000; James L. Nutting, $4,000; James B. Rellly, $4,000; John S. Richardson, $2,000; Joseph H. Rainey, $2,500; G. D. Tillman, $2,000; Robert Smalls, $2,500; Joseph Jorgensen, $1,000; in all, $46,616.06, to be immediately available.

That hereafter no contestee or contestant for a seat in the House of Representatives shall be paid exceeding $1,000 for expenses in election contests, and before any sum whatever shall be paid to a contestant or contestee for expenses of election contests, he shall file with the clerk of the Committee of Elections a full and detailed account of his expenses, accompanied by the vouchers and receipts for each item, which account and vouchers shall be sworn to by the party presenting the same; and no charges for witness fees shall be allowed in said accounts unless made in strict conformity to section 123, Revised Statutes of the United States.

The following sums are hereby appropriated to pay the widows and heirs of members of the present Congress, lately deceased, in conformity with the direction of the House of Representatives, namely:

To enable the Clerk of the House to pay the widow of Alpheus S. Williams, $1,007.88.

To pay the widow of Gustave Schleicher, $738.85.

To pay Bessie Dandridge Douglas, Evelyn Spotswood Douglas, and Mary Ellen Douglas, children of B. B. Douglas, $294.43; to be divided and paid in equal sums to them respectively.

To pay the widow of Julian Hartridge, $765.75.

To pay the widow of Terrence J. Quinn, $1,525.95.

To pay John W. Polk, late Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, two months' extra pay under resolution of the House of June 19, 1878, $416.66.

To pay John E. Kelly balance due for services under the Doorkeeper from December, 1876, to March 4, 1877, $147.60.

To pay services of L. Q. Washington as clerk to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad, from January 11, 1876, to February 25, 1876, $184.

To pay Edward L. Parris for services as clerk of the special committee on the Florida elections appointed under resolution of December 4, 1876, from December 7, 1876, to February 10, 1877, and for expenditures made by him for said committee, $715.60.

To pay the heirs or legal representatives of the late John E. Leonard amount of salary due him, $4,828.57.

To pay George B. Hilton for forty-two days' services as page during the second session of the Forty-fourth Congress, $105.

To pay F. M. Schulteis for forty-seven days' services as page in the House in the second session of the Forty-fourth Congress, $117.50.

To pay Charles Christian for services as laborer in the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House from July 1 to March 4, inclusive, $406.66.

For services rendered and to be rendered in cleaning Statuary Hall and watching statuary therein for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1879, and June 30, 1880, $1,440, to be disbursed as contingent expenses of the House of Representatives, subject to the approval of the Architect of the Capitol.

To enable the Clerk of the House to have prepared for the Public Printer copies of the "summary reports" of the Commissioners of Claims in cases reported to Congress as disallowed under the act of March 3, 1871, of which twenty-five copies shall be printed and bound for the use of the Senate, and twenty-five copies for the use of the House of Representatives, $1,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

To enable the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House to pay the widow of Frank Welch, $2,500.

MISCELLANEOUS.

To meet the expenses of collecting the data upon which to prepare bulletins of health, to be issued from the office of the Surgeon-General of the United States Marine Hospital, $5,000, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury; to be paid out of the permanent appropriation for the above service.

To enable the Secretary of State to pay John C. Myers, late consul-general at Shanghai, in full compensation for amount due him on settlement of his accounts, $2,283.81.

SEC. 2. That all sums due upon certificates issued, or which may be issued, by the accounting officers of the Treasury in settlement of claims for pay, bounty, prize-money, or other moneys due to colored soldiers, sailors, or marines, or their legal representatives, shall be paid by the officers of the Pay department of the Army, under the direction of the Paymaster-General, who is already charged with the payment of like dues to white soldiers: Provided, first, That no such certificate shall be issued until it shall have been ascertained that the application is made by the original claimant, or, if he be dead, by his true living legal representative, nor until the identity of such claimant or representative, as the case may be, shall have been duly established: Provided, That if an agent or attorney be employed, the allowance for his services shall not in any case exceed that contemplated in the scale of fees and allowances fixed by the second section of a joint resolution approved July 26, 1866, entitled "Joint resolution amendatory of a joint resolution respecting bounties to colored soldiers, and the pensions, bounties, and allowances to their heirs," approved June 15, 1866, and such allowance shall be stated in a separate certificate in favor of the agent or attorney simultaneously with the issue of a certificate for the amount due the claimant: Provided further, That the amount due the claimant, or his living representative, or the balance due after deducting the attorney's fee, if any, shall be paid only to the party named in the certificate, and in current funds or by post-office money-order, and not by checks or drafts; and no power of attorney, transfer, or assignment of the amount of such claims, or any part thereof, shall in any case be recognized; and the sum of $4,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and $10,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, to meet the expenses incurred on account of payment of these claims, for salaries of agents and clerks, rent of offices, fuel and lights, stationery and printing, office furniture, mileage and transportation of officers and agents, telegraphing, postage, and post-office money-orders; and the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated, under the title "Pay of two and three years' volunteers reapportioned," for the payment of such of the claims in question as may be covered by Treasury certificates issued after the passage of this act, and previous to July 1, 1880.

And provided further, That the sum or sums now held by the Treasurer of the United States, turned over to him, under the Attorney-General's decision of December 30, 1878, by the chief disbursing officer of the freedmen's branch of the Adjutant-General's Office, as the balance in said officer's hands of moneys due and unpaid on account of adjusted claims of the class contemplated in the first clause of this section, shall be turned over to the paymaster who may be charged by the Paymaster-General with the payment of such claims, to be by him paid to the proper claimants under the restrictions imposed in said section.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

SEC. 3. That the sum of $1,583,361.56 be, and is hereby, appropriated for the purpose of paying one-half of the estimated expenses of the Government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, namely:

For improvements and repairs, as follows: Work on Boundary street auxiliary sewer, $100,000; lateral sewers, $15,000; work upon sundry avenues and streets, $100,000; replacement of pavements, at not to exceed $2.25 per square yard, $250,000; repairs to concrete pavements, $100,000; material issued for permit work, $15,000; in all, $380,000.

For constructing, repairing, and maintaining bridges, as follows: Ordinary care of Benning's, Anacostia, and Chain bridges, including fuel, oil, lamps, matches, &c., $1,200; replanking and painting Chain bridge, $2,500; repairing Benning's bridge and its carriage-ways, $2,500; raising embankments of Anacostia bridge and repairing piers and abutments, $3,000; repairs of Rock Creek bridges, $1,000; in all, $10,200.

For maintaining institutions of charity, reformatories, and prisons, as follows: Washington Asylum: One commissioner, $200; one intendant, $800; one matron, $600; one visiting physician, $1,200; one resident physician, $480; one resident physician, $360; one clerk, $480; one baker, $120; six overseers, at $500 each, $3,000; one watchman, $300; three watchmen, at $180 each, $540; one driver, $120; one hostler, $60; one cook, $120; two cooks, at $60 each, $120; five nurses, at $60 each, $300; contingent expenses, including provisions, fuel, forage, lumber, hardware, shoes, dry goods, medicines, and miscellaneous items, $33,300; total Washington Asylum, $45,000.

Georgetown Almshouse: Support of inmates, $1,800.

Hospital for the Insane: Board and clothing of inmates, $17,000.

Transportation of paupers and conveying prisoners to workhouse, $2,500.

Reform School, District of Columbia: Support of inmates, $20,000: Provided, That all and singular the powers conferred and duties enjoined by existing laws upon the Department of Justice or the board of trustees relating to the Reform School in the District of Columbia be, and the same are hereby, transferred to the commissioners of the District of Columbia.

For the support and maintenance of the Columbia Hospital for Women and Ly-ing-in Asylum, $12,000.

For the support and maintenance of the Children's Hospital, $5,000.

For Saint Ann's Infant Asylum, $5,000.

For the Industrial Home School, $5,000.

For the National Association for Colored Women and Children, $5,000.

For the Women's Christian Association, $5,000: Provided, That the above specified amounts shall be paid to said institutions, by the commissioners of the District of Columbia, quarterly only, upon the presentation of a detailed report, accompanied by the proper vouchers, showing the receipts and disbursements for the preceding quarter: And provided, That hereafter no appropriation shall be made for any charities within the District of Columbia unless the same be included in the annual estimates of the commissioners, whose duty it is hereby made to include in said estimates such charities as they may think proper objects of public aid and support.

Relief of the poor, $15,000; in all, $138,300.

For the Washington Aqueduct as follows: Engineering, maintenance, and general repairs, $20,000.

General expenses:

For salaries and contingent expenses as follows:

Executive office proper: Two commissioners, at $5,000 each, $10,000; one secretary, $2,100; one clerk, $1,500; one clerk, $1,440; two temporary clerks, arranging, classifying, and preserving records of former governments, at $3 per day each, $1,878; one temporary clerk, arranging, classifying, and preserving records of former governments, at $1.50 per day, $469.50; one messenger, $840; contingent expenses, including books, stationery, printing, and miscellaneous items, $2,712.50; in all, $21,000.

Auditor and comptroller's office: Auditor and comptroller, $3,000; one book-keeper, $1,800; one clerk, $1,500; three clerks, at $1,400, $4,200; one clerk, $1,200; contingent expenses, including furniture, books, stationery, and miscellaneous items, $800; one clerk, in charge of special-assessment branch, $2,160; two clerks, at $1,200 each, $2,400; one clerk, at $3 per day, $940; two clerks, at $1.50 per day each, $940; in all, $19,000.

Sinking-fund office: Two clerks, at $1,200, $2,400; contingent expenses, $300; in all, $2,700.

Coroner's office: One coroner, $1,800; contingent expenses, including books, stationery, and jury and witness fees, $700; in all, $2,500.

Collector's office: Collector, $1,000; one clerk, $1,500; one clerk, $1,200; one clerk, $1,000; one clerk, $860; one clerk, at $3 per day, $940; one messenger, $840; contingent expenses, including books, stationery, printing, and miscellaneous items, $4,720; in all, $13,800.

Attorney's office: One attorney, $4,000; one assistant attorney, $1,900; one special assistant attorney, $960; one clerk, $960; contingent expenses, including books, stationery, and miscellaneous items, $988; in all, $9,000.

Treasurer's office: Treasurer and assessor, $2,400; one clerk, $1,200; contingent expenses, including books, stationery, car-fare, &c., $300; in all, $3,900.

Inspector of buildings office: One inspector, $2,400; one assistant inspector and draughtsman, $1,700; one assistant inspector, $1,000; one messenger, $840; contingent expenses, including books, stationery, and miscellaneous items, $300; in all, $5,880.

Superintendent of assessments and taxes office: One superintendent, $2,400; two clerks, at $1,200, $2,400; one messenger, $720; contingent expenses, books, stationery, and miscellaneous items, $2,280; in all, $7,800.

Inspector of gas and meters office: One inspector, $2,000; one assistant inspector, $1,000; in all, $3,000: Provided, That from and after the passage of this act the said officers shall be appointed by, and be under the control of, the commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Assessor's office: Two clerks, at $1,200 each, $2,400; one messenger, at $1.50 per day, $469.50; contingent expenses, including books, stationery, printing, temporary clerks, &c., $4,380.50; in all, $7,250.

Harbor-master of Georgetown, $80; scaler of weights and measures, $20; in all, $100.

Engineer's office: One chief clerk, $1,760; one clerk, $1,440; five clerks, at $1,200 each, $6,000; one clerk, $960; one clerk, $960; one clerk, $720; one clerk, at $3.20 per day, $1,001.60; one clerk, at $3 per day, $936; one computing engineer, $2,400; one draughtsman, $1,000; one leveler, $1,600; two levelers, at $4 per day each, $2,504; two rodmen, at $750 each, $1,500; one axman, at $2 per day, $620; one axman, $600; one inspector of asphalt pavements, $2,400; one inspector, $1,110; one inspector, at $2.50 per day, $82.50; eleven inspectors, at $4 per day each, (employed for six months,) $6,866; two overseers, at $1,200 each, $2,400; one overseer, $960; one overseer, at $4 per day, $1,252; one superintendent of property, $1,200; one watchman at property-yard, $720; two watchmen at property-yard, at $1.50 per day each, $1,080; one inspector of fuel, at $2 per day, $626; one janitor of public buildings, $720; two watchmen of public buildings, at $600 each, $1,200; one laborer, $600; one laborer, $480; one laborer, at $1.25 per day, $391.25; one laborer, at $1.50 per day, $469.50; one superintendent of permits, $1,400; one sewer-tapper, $1,000; two messengers, at $600 each, $1,200; one messenger, $540; one driver, $600; contingent expenses, books, stationery, &c., $4,227.15; in all, $55,000.

Fuel, ice, repairs, general miscellaneous expenses, and so forth, for District offices, $3,000: Provided, That all the officers and employees hereinbefore mentioned shall devote their entire time and attention to the duties of the office they may fill, and shall not be allowed to engage in any other business.

For the public schools of the District of Columbia, as follows: One superintendent, $2,700; one superintendent, $2,250; one secretary, $150; one clerk to committee of accounts, board of trustees, $150; one clerk, $900; one clerk, $800; five teachers, at $1,650 each, $8,250; one teacher, $1,600; two teachers, at $1,350 each, $2,700; one teacher, $1,300; one teacher, $1,200; one teacher, $1,100; fifteen teachers, at $1,000 each, $15,000; one teacher, $900; two teachers, at $850 each, $1,700; twelve teachers, at $900 each, $10,800; ten teachers, at $750 each, $7,500; twenty teachers, at $600 each, $12,000; thirty-one teachers, at $750 each, $23,250; fifty-one teachers, at $700 each, $35,700; fifty-seven teachers, at $650 each, $37,050; eighty-three teachers, at $600 each, $49,800; twenty-five teachers, at $550 each, $13,750; ten teachers, at $500 each, $5,000; five teachers, at $450 each, $2,250; twelve teachers, at $425 each, $5,100; fifty teachers, at $400 each, $20,000; one temporary teacher, $350; six teachers, at $250 each, $1,500; one janitor, $1,140; one janitor, $1,102; one janitor, $1,067; one janitor, $922; one janitor, $914; one janitor, $900; one janitor, $880; one janitor, $850; one janitor, $822; one janitor, $802; one janitor, $602; one janitor, $522; one janitor, $524; one janitor, $522; one janitor, $540; one janitor, $430; two janitors, at $384 each, $768; two janitors, at $222 each, $444; one janitor, $250; one janitor, $230; one janitor, $225; one janitor, $216; one janitor, $192; three janitors, at $172 each, $516; one janitor, $180; one janitor, $150; two janitors, at $160 each, $320; one janitor, $140; one janitor, $92.23; six janitors, at $86.40 each, $518.40; twelve janitors, at $80 each, $960; three janitors, at $120 each, $360; four janitors, at $60 each, $240; eleven janitors, at $54 each, $594; nine janitors, at $50 each, $450; additional teachers and increase of pay by continuous service, $22,000; rent of school buildings, $30,000; fuel, $12,000; repairs to school buildings, $25,000; contingent expenses, including books, stationery, printing, insurance, and miscellaneous items, $21,527.37; for the construction of two new school buildings, purchase of lots, and furniture, complete and ready for occupancy, at $37,500 each, $75,000; Provided, That two lots on square 12th, south side of Massachusetts avenue and west of Seventeenth street, belonging to the United States, may be used by the commissioners of the District for school purposes, and they may erect one of said school-houses thereon: And provided, That the inspector of buildings of the District shall have authority and control over and supervision of the construction and repairs of all school buildings if the commissioners deem best to delegate the same to him; in all, $475,000.

For the Metropolitan police, as follows: One major and superintendent, $2,500; one captain, $1,600; one clerk, $1,500; one clerk, $1,200; three sergeants, at $450 each, $1,350; four detectives, at $1,200 each, $4,800; ten lieutenants, at $1,200 each, $12,000; twenty sergeants, at $1,000 each, $20,000; twenty-five privates, class 5, at $900 each, $22,500; forty privates, class 4, at $940 each, $37,600; fifty privates, class 3, at $900 each, $45,000; fifty privates, class 2, at $860 each, $43,000; forty-two privates, class 1, at $825 each, $34,650; sixteen station-keepers, at $516 each, $8,256; eight laborers, at $420 each, $3,360; two telegraph operators, at $780 each, $1,560; one messenger, $700; one messenger, $360; one major and superintendent, mounted service, $360; one captain, mounted service, $240; forty lieutenants, sergeants, and privates, mounted, at $240 each, $9,600; rent of police station-houses and police headquarters, $6,200; fuel, $1,543; repairs to station houses, $1,200; miscellaneous expenses, including stationery, gas, telegraphing, ice, washing, printing, meals to prisoners, repairs to van, &c., $10,000; in all, $272,579. And the pay of the members of the Metropolitan police is fixed at the above rates, the commissioners of the District to make such regulations as to classification as they may deem proper: Provided, That all new appointments shall be made to class 1; And provided, That the number in any class shall not at any time exceed the number herein designated.

For the fire department and fire-alarm as follows: one chief engineer, $1,800; one assistant engineer, $1,400; one superintendent of fire-alarm telegraph, $1,500; two telegraph operators, at $1,000 each, $2,000; eight firemen, at $900 each, $7,200; six engineers, at $900 each, $5,400; six firemen, at $800 each, $4,800; two firemen, at $800 each, $1,600; eight hostlers, at $640 each, $5,120; forty-eight privates, at $720 each, $34,560; six privates, at $720 each, temporarily employed, $4,320; repairs to engine-houses, $1,000; fuel, $500; purchase of horses, $2,000; repairs to apparatus, $5,000; contingent expenses, including hose, forage, stationery, horseshoeing, washing, and miscellaneous items, $25,420; in all, $103,300.

For the courts, as follows: Police court, one judge, $3,000; one clerk, $2,000; one deputy clerk, $1,000; two bailiffs, at $3 per day each, $1,872; one messenger, $900; one door-keeper, $540; one justice of the peace, acting as judge in judge's absence, $620; United States marshal's fees, $2,316; rent of building for police court, $1,700; contingent expenses, including books, stationery, fuel, ice, gas, witness fees, and miscellaneous items, $2,046; judicial expenses, $2,500; in all, $18,500.

For the streets, as follows: Removal of garbage, $10,355; street-lamps, lighting, extinguishing, and gas, $122,630; Provided, That all and singular the powers conferred and duties enjoined by the act approved June 23, 1874, entitled "An act regulating gas works," be, and the same are hereby, transferred to the commissioners of the District of Columbia, and they shall also have the power to fix the size of the burner to be used upon the street-lamps; but the illuminating power shall not be reduced from that produced by the burners now in use; repairs to street-lamps, $1,000; erection of street-lamps, $1,500; matches for use of lamp-lighters, $30; one superintendent, $800; four lamp-lighters, at $450 each, $1,920; one lamp-lighter, $120; Parking commission, one superintendent, $900; one assistant superintendent, $700; contingent expenses, including laborers, cart-hire, trees, tree-boxes, tree-straps, tree-stakes, planting and care of trees, whitewashing, care of parks, and miscellaneous items, $13,400; Current work of repairs of streets, alleys, county roads, &c., one overseer of repairs, $2,000; one clerk, $1,900; four supervisors of roads, at $900 each, $3,600; labor, cart-hire, materials, and miscellaneous items, $75,500; sweeping, cleaning, and sprinkling streets and avenues, $35,100; cleaning alleys, $7,500; repairs to pumps, $2,500; cleaning Tiber sewer, $10,000; in all, $303,455.

For miscellaneous expenses, as follows: Markets: one market-master, $1,650; one market-master, $1,500; two market-masters, $1,800; contingent expenses, including gas, repairs, and miscellaneous items, $4,550; rent of market site and property yards, $1,175; hay scales, $200; rent of District offices, $6,000; general advertising, $7,000; miscellaneous items, books to register of wills, printing checks, damages, &c., $6,500; in all, $30,375.

For the health department, as follows: One health officer, $3,000; six sanitary inspectors, at $1,200, $7,200; two food inspectors, at $1,200 each, $2,400; clerks, $7,000; one poundmaster, $1,000; contingent expenses, including books, stationery, fuel, rent, disinfectants, and miscellaneous items, $3,800; in all, $24,400; Provided, That no officer of the District of Columbia shall receive any compensation other than the salary herein provided, and no officer or employe of the District shall draw more than one salary or fill more than one office.

For the interest on funded debt, $1,016,124.12.

For general contingent expenses of the government of the District of Columbia, $20,000.

All moneys appropriated under this act, together with all revenues of the District of Columbia from taxes or otherwise, shall be deposited, to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, in the Treasury, as required by the provisions of section 4 of an act approved June 11, 1878, and shall be drawn therefrom upon requisition of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, such requisitions specifying the appropriation upon which the same is drawn; and in no case shall such appropriations be exceeded, either in requisition or expenditure; and the accounts for all disbursements shall be made quarterly to the accounting officers of the Treasury by the auditor of the District of Columbia, upon vouchers certified by the commissioners of the District of Columbia, as now required by law. And section 2 of an act approved March 3, 1877, entitled "An act for the support of the government of the District of Columbia, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, and for other purposes," be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 4. That the fifth paragraph of that portion of the act of June 20, 1878, making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year 1879, and for other purposes, relating to the District of Columbia, be, and the same is hereby, amended so that the sum of money therein appropriated to pay the workmen of said District may be paid to those whose claims are due and unpaid from contractors whose accounts against the government of said District had been paid in part or in full prior or subsequently to the passage of the act of June 23, 1874; and that no such claims shall be received, filed, or audited subsequently to the 1st of May, 1879: Provided, That the amount to be paid on each claim shall be paid and received in full discharge of the claim of such workmen.

NOTE.—Total amount recommended by this bill is $16,909,349.49; of which the sum of $1,583,361.56 is for the District of Columbia.

New total, $16,909,349.49.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. RAINEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 232) making an appropriation for the benefit of the penny-lunch house of Washington, District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. No. 1008) relating to the Cumberland road in the State of Ohio, and to authorize the same to become a free road;

A bill (H. R. No. 1094) to remove the disabilities of Asa Wall imposed by the third section of the fourteenth article of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States;

A bill (S. No. 1039) to provide for the settlement of tax-lien certificates erroneously issued by the authorities of the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. No. 1679) for the relief of Catharine and Sophia Germain;

A bill (H. R. No. 2423) to restrict the immigration of Chinese to the United States;

A bill (H. R. No. 3055) to promote a knowledge of steam-engineering and iron-ship building among the students of scientific schools or colleges in the United States;

A bill (H. R. No. 3186) for the relief of the Commercial Bank of Knoxville, Tennessee;

A bill (H. R. No. 5477) to authorize the issue of certificates of deposit in aid of the refunding of the public debt;

A bill (H. R. No. 6150) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept for the purposes of a voyage of exploration by way of Behring Strait the ship Jeannette, tendered by James Gordon Bennett for that purpose; and

A bill (H. R. No. 6225) to amend an act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1878.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Unanimous consent was given for the withdrawal of papers, as follows:

To Mr. WADDELL, in the case of Appleton Oaksmith, no adverse report having been made; and

To Mr. JONES, of Ohio, in the case of E. G. Allen, no adverse report having been made.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. CALDWELL, of Tennessee, asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD, as a portion of the debates of the House, additional remarks on the bill (H. R. No. 3291) to refund to Hiram Johnson, and certain other citizens of Tennessee, taxes illegally collected from them by military orders, and the bill (H. R. No. 3293) for the relief of Mrs. Eliza E. Hebert, of the State of Louisiana. [See page 1735.]

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ATKINS] to suspend the rules and pass the bill which has just been read by the Clerk.

Mr. ATKINS. I ask unanimous consent that any gentleman who wishes to have printed in the RECORD remarks by him on the sundry civil appropriation bill have leave so to do.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered. [See Appendix.]

Mr. BLACKBURN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I wish to ask if the question now pending before this House is the motion made by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ATKINS] to suspend the rules and pass the bill that has just been reported by the Clerk, known as the sundry civil appropriation bill?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Then I desire to ask the gentleman from Tennessee, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, [Mr. ATKINS,] one question. It is this: does he, as the chairman of that important committee, in the face of the fact that this bill carrying appropriations in round numbers of $19,000,000 was never in print until this morning, and every provision of which is utterly unknown to members of this House, save the members of the Committee on Appropriations—

Mr. ATKINS. Ask your question.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Does he think that this bill, under the operation of the previous question, with the gag fastened in the mouth of every member of this House, without any right to enter a protest against it by discussion or to offer an amendment should be passed here by such a process? [Cries of "Regular order!" "Regular order!"] If so, I ask the gentleman to join with us in at least having the yeas and nays in order that a record may be made.

Mr. GARFIELD. I think we ought to have an answer to the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. BLACKBURN.]

Mr. BLACKBURN. I say so too.

Mr. ATKINS. Very well. I have made the motion and I do not think the question needs any other answer. The bill is not much more than half the estimates.

Mr. BLACKBURN, (amid cries of "Regular order!") I only desire to add that it is this dangerous class of legislation to which I object. It is hazardous. I believe, sir, that the committee, and I am sure that the honorable chairman, was moved by no purpose save an honest effort to expedite the legislation of this House. I simply protest that we may not dare to establish such a precedent.

The question was taken upon the motion of Mr. ATKINS; and upon a division there were—ayes 113, noes 62; not two-thirds in the affirmative.

Before the result of the vote was announced,

Mr. ATKINS and Mr. BLACKBURN called for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 182, nays 79, not voting 29; as follows:

YEAS—182.

Aiken,	Dickey,	Jones, John S.	Robinson, G. D.
Aldrich,	Durham,	Keifer,	Robinson, M. S.
Atkins,	Dwight,	Keightley,	Ross,
Bagley,	Eames,	Kelley,	Ryan,
Bailey,	Eden,	Kenna,	Sampson,
Baker, John H.	Errett,	Kimmel,	Sapp,
Baker, William H.	Evans, I. Newton	Knapp,	Saylor,
Ballou,	Evans, James L.	Landers,	Scales,
Banks,	Felton,	Lapham,	Shallenberger,
Bell,	Finley, Jesse J.	Lathrop,	Shelley,
Benedict,	Forney,	Ligon,	Singleton,
Bliss,	Foster,	Lindsey,	Smalls,
Blount,	Frye,	Lockwood,	Sparks,
Boone,	Fuller,	Loring,	Springer,
Bouck,	Garfield,	Luttrell,	Starin,
Boyd,	Garth,	Lynde,	Stenger,
Bragg,	Gause,	Mackey,	Stewart,
Bridges,	Giddings,	Maish,	Stone, John W.
Buckner,	Glover,	Majors,	Stone, Joseph C.
Bundy,	Goode,	Martin,	Swann,
Burchard,	Gunter,	McGowan,	Thompson,
Burdick,	Hale,	McKinley,	Throckmorton,
Caldwell, John W.	Hamilton,	McMahon,	Townsend, Amos
Caldwell, W. P.	Hanna,	Metcalfe,	Townsend, M. I.
Camp,	Hardenbergh,	Money,	Townsend, R. W.
Candler,	Harris, Benj. W.	Monroe,	Turney,
Cannon,	Harris, Henry R.	Morgan,	Vance,
Carlisle,	Harris, John T.	Morrison,	Van Vorhes,
Chittenden,	Harrison,	Morse,	Wait,
Clark, Alvah A.	Hart,	Neal,	Warner,
Clark, Rush	Hartzell,	Norcross,	White, Michael D.
Clymer,	Haskell,	Oliver,	Wigginton,
Cobb,	Hatcher,	Overton,	Williams, Andrew
Cole,	Hayes,	Patterson, G. W.	Williams, C. G.
Collins,	Hazelton,	Patterson, T. M.	Williams, James
Cook,	Hendee,	Peddie,	Williams, Jere N.
Covert,	Henderson,	Pollard,	Williams, Richard
Crapo,	Henry,	Potter,	Willis, Benj. A.
Crittenden,	Hewitt, Abram S.	Pound,	Willits,
Culbertson,	Hewitt, G. W.	Price,	Wood,
Cummings,	Hiscoek,	Rainey,	Wren,
Davidson,	Hubbell,	Reagan,	Wright,
Davis, Horace	Itner,	Reilly,	Yeates,
Davis, Joseph J.	James,	Rice, William W.	Young, Casey.
Deering,	Jones, Frank	Robbins,
Denison,	Jones, James T.	Roberts,

NAYS—79.

Acklen,	Conger,	House,	Rice, Americus V.
Bacon,	Cravens,	Humphrey,	Robertson,
Bayne,	Cutler,	Hungerford,	Sexton,
Beale,	Danford,	Hunter,	Sinnickson,
Bicknell,	Dibrell,	Hunton,	Slemmons,
Blackburn,	Dunnell,	Joyce,	Smith, A. Herr
Elair,	Eickhoff,	Knott,	Smith, William E.
Brentano,	Elam,	Manning,	Southard,
Brewer,	Ellis,	Marsh,	Steele,
Briggs,	Ellsworth,	McCook,	Tipton,
Bright,	Evins, John H.	McKenzie,	Tucker,
Brogden,	Ewing,	Mills,	Turner,
Browne,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Mitchell,	Waddell,
Cabell,	Fort,	Muldrow,	Ward,
Calkins,	Franklin,	O'Neill,	Watson,
Campbell,	Gardner,	Page,	White, Harry
Caswell,	Harmer,	Phillips,	Whithorne,
Chalmers,	Henkle,	Pridemore,	Willis, Albert S.
Clarke of Kentucky,	Herbert,	Pugh,	Young, John S.
Clark of Missouri,	Hooker,	Randolph,

NOT VOTING—29.

Fanning,	Dean,	Muller,	Thornburgh,
Beche,	Fleming,	Phelps,	Veeder,
Bland,	Freeman,	Powers,	Walker,
Butler,	Gibson,	Rea,	Walsh,
Cain,	Jorgensen,	Reed,	Wilson.
Cladin,	Ketcham,	Riddle,
Cox, Jacob D.	Killinger,	Stephens,
Cox, Samuel S.	Mayham,	Strait,

So, two-thirds voting in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. DAVIS, of California. I am paired generally with the gentleman from West Virginia, Mr. WILSON; but this not being a political question I vote "ay."

Mr. POTTER. Is this bill reported from any committee?

Mr. ATKINS. It is a unanimous report from the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. POTTER. Then I vote "ay."

Mr. STRAIT. On this question I am paired with the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. REA.

Mr. O'NEILL. My colleague, Mr. FREEMAN, and the gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. RIDDLE, are paired.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. KELLEY. I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. MONROE. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes as the gentleman next entitled to move a suspension of the rules the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. MONROE:] but the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] states that he rises to a question of privilege.

CONTUMACIOUS WITNESS—GEORGE F. SEWARD.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to call up the reports submitted on Saturday last with reference to George F. Seward, a contumacious witness. I ask that the order proposed by the committee be now adopted; and to-morrow, when the report is made in pursuance of that order, the matter will be open for discussion.

Mr. GARFIELD. What is the proposed order?

Mr. SPRINGER. That Mr. Seward be brought to the bar of the House to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt.

The SPEAKER. It is merely an order to show cause—a preliminary order.

Mr. SPRINGER. When Mr. Seward appears at the bar in pursuance of the order to show cause the questions involved will then come up for discussion.

Mr. BUNDY. The minority report proposes resolutions antagonizing the order proposed by the majority of the committee. I suppose the resolutions of the minority will come in properly as a substitute for the majority report.

The SPEAKER. The report proposes merely a preliminary order, which is usual in such cases.

Mr. SPRINGER. I have never known a preliminary order of this kind to be refused.

Mr. HALE. We do not want anything to go over as unfinished business until to-morrow, to interfere with the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois rises to a question of high privilege.

Mr. HALE. Still the question of consideration can be raised?

The SPEAKER. It can.

Mr. HALE. I hope the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will raise the question of consideration against anything that will interfere with the appropriation bill.

Mr. ATKINS. I cannot agree to any arrangement to take up any subject in preference to the legislative bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not desire to make any arrangement. I move the previous question upon the proposition reported by the majority of the committee.

Mr. HALE. I raise the question of consideration.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope that the resolutions submitted by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUNDY] at the close of the minority report will be considered pending as a substitute for the order proposed by the majority.

Mr. BOYD. I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. BUNDY. I desire to have read at the Clerk's desk the resolutions submitted by the minority of the committee as a substitute for the resolution of the majority.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois, as the Chair understands, has not submitted any resolution.

Mr. SPRINGER. The proposition of the majority of the committee is the proposed order appended to their report.

Mr. BURCHARD. The Chair understands that the question of consideration is raised?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine raises the question of consideration, as he has a right to do; but the Chair desires to understand the proposition of the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask that the order appended to the report of the majority be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the Speaker issue his warrant directing the Sergeant-at-Arms attending this House, or his deputy, commanding him to take into custody forthwith, wherever to be found, the body of George F. Seward, and him bring to the bar of the House, to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt; and, in the mean time, keep the said George F. Seward in his custody to abide the further order of the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair now asks that the proposition of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUNDY] may be read, after which the gentleman from Illinois will be recognized as demanding the previous question; but before that question is taken the Chair is bound to recognize the gentleman from Maine on the question of consideration.

Mr. BUNDY. I ask that the resolutions proposed by the minority of the committee be read.

Mr. HALE. Let the minority resolutions be read.

The SPEAKER. The Chair, thinking it fair that both propositions should be before the House, has directed the Clerk to read the resolutions proposed by the minority.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the reasons given by Hon. George F. Seward, through his counsel to the committee are legally sufficient to excuse his failure to produce the books described in the subpoena duces tecum, and his standing mute when tendered the oaths required by the resolutions of the committee adopted by a majority of this committee, and his conduct in the premises, are not contumacious but excusable by the Constitution and laws of the United States and the acts of Congress pertaining thereto.

Resolved, That the Speaker should not issue a warrant directing the Sergeant-at-Arms to take into custody the body of George F. Seward, to the end that he be brought to the bar of the House to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine raises the question of consideration.

Mr. GARFIELD. Allow me to make a parliamentary inquiry. Does the Speaker decide that if the question of consideration were not raised it would be competent for us as a preliminary proceeding to bring this person to our bar before we decide the question presented in this case? The very question now pending as between the majority and the minority of the committee is whether there is any cause for bringing this man here at all. We ought not to bring him here if there is a probability that on hearing the considerations pro and con to be presented by the two branches of the committee we may decide that there is nothing requiring him to be brought here.

I would therefore suggest that we ought not to be called upon to decide the question in this summary way. The reports have only come before us to-day. We did not receive our RECORDS yesterday, as we usually do on Sunday; and we have only seen these reports since the session opened this morning. I hope gentlemen on both sides of the House see the propriety of letting this question lie over until to-morrow, when members can read the majority and minority reports.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes that it is a question of privilege.

Mr. GARFIELD. Very well; let it lie over for the present.

The SPEAKER. So far as the Chair knows, it has been held uniformly that the refusal or failure of a witness to appear before a committee of the House and testify was a question of privilege. On that ground the Chair recognized the gentleman from Illinois, but he also recognized the right of the gentleman from Maine to raise the question of consideration.

Mr. MILLS. I desire to ask a question for information.

Mr. GARFIELD. We certainly ought to know all there is about the case before we are called upon to act.

Mr. MILLS. Is Mr. Seward charged with the commission of any crime?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is unable to answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. MILLS. I wish to put a question to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SPRINGER. I am about to make a brief explanation.

Mr. MILLS. What is the charge against Mr. Seward?

Mr. SPRINGER. That is what I wish to state. I had hoped, Mr. Speaker, that no effort would be made by any member of the House to resist the passage of an order on a contumacious witness that he might be brought to the bar of the House to show cause why he should not be committed for contempt.

Mr. HALE. The gentleman can wait until we get through with the legislative appropriation bill.

Mr. BURCHARD. Have we the right to arrest an executive officer?

Mr. SPRINGER. That question has never been raised.

Mr. HALE. We shall not suffer if this matter goes over until after the legislative appropriation bill. I ask to have the question of consideration tested.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order upon the question of consideration.

Mr. SPRINGER. Have I not the floor in right of making the motion?

The SPEAKER. Debating the question would be the consideration of it, and the gentleman from Maine would be debarred thereafter from raising the question of consideration. He has the right primarily to raise that question.

Mr. SPRINGER. I wish only to state to the House that there is no intention to prevent full discussion of the question upon its merits. I desire that should be done. There never has been, so far as I can find, any precedent in the House of opposition to such an order to show cause.

Mr. CONGER. I object to debate.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

Mr. SPRINGER. We can settle this in a moment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the question of consideration to the House, as the gentleman from Maine insists upon it.

Mr. HALE. Yes; I insist that this shall be postponed until after the legislative appropriation bill.

Mr. SPRINGER demanded a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 85, noes 105.

Mr. SPRINGER demanded the yeas and nays.

Mr. ATKINS. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon that.

Mr. SPRINGER. If there be no opposition to calling this question up in the morning, I will withdraw the demand for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is advised by the gentleman from Maine that he will not object to its being called up after the legislative appropriation bill has been disposed of.

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not know how long it will take to do that.

Mr. ATKINS. It will take but a little while. I appeal to the gentleman to withdraw his demand for the previous question.

Mr. SPRINGER. I do withdraw the demand for the previous question, and now give notice I will call this question up after the legislative appropriation bill has been disposed of.

So the House refused to proceed to the consideration of the report from the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ELLIS. I move that there be a session to-night for the discussion of the report from the Committee on Elections of the contested-election case from the first congressional district in the State of South Carolina.

Mr. COX, of New York. Let me say in connection with this business that I do not wish to lose my right to call up the census bill as soon as the appropriation bill is disposed of.

The SPEAKER. No right will be lost.

Mr. COX, of New York. I do not give way to China or Japan or any other condition of things in this country.

Mr. ELLIS. I desire to state to the House that my purpose is, if my motion prevails, to call up for discussion this evening the contested-election case from the first congressional district of South Carolina.

Mr. PRICE. I move the House adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana has the right at any time to call up that question as one of the highest privilege.

Mr. SPARKS. It is the intention to call it up this evening for discussion only.

Mr. ELLIS. That is all, and not for action.

Mr. CONGER. I hope that will not be called up until all the bills are enrolled, as we cannot spare the South Carolina gentleman until after that. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. It is proposed to have the session this evening for debate only on that case.

Mr. CONGER. I speak to the order of business and the necessities of the House.

Mr. PRICE. I move the House adjourn, and ask for a vote.

Mr. WHITE, of Pennsylvania. I hope there will be no adjournment, but that we will take a recess until to-morrow at ten o'clock, as the hour from ten to eleven has been set apart for the reports from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. ELLIS. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 110, noes 100.

INTERNAL-REVENUE BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to announce as the conferees on the part of the House on what is known as the internal-revenue bill, Mr. TUCKER of Virginia, Mr. ROBBINS of North Carolina, and Mr. BURCHARD of Illinois.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ELLIS. I give notice that to-morrow morning after the reading of the Journal I shall ask the House to proceed to the consideration of the election case.

Mr. CLARK, of Missouri. I call for tellers on the motion to adjourn.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. CLARK, of Missouri, and Mr. PRICE were appointed.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry: Is it proposed that this night session shall be for anything else than speaking?

The SPEAKER. There has been no night session ordered. This is a motion to adjourn, to cut off a night session.

Mr. LUTTRELL. And if that is voted down, then there will be a night session.

The SPEAKER. If the motion to adjourn is voted down, then the House may determine that there shall be a night session for debate only.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 117, noes 101.

The SPEAKER. Before announcing the vote, the Chair desires to have the attention of the House for a moment. On Friday of last week an order was made that the House at the close of business to-day should take a recess until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock, when reports should be in order from the Committee on Military Affairs; no report, however, to be made or acted upon except by unanimous consent. The effect of the House adjourning now would be to cut off that power from the Military Committee. The Chair therefore suggests to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. PRICE] to modify his motion so that, instead of adjourning, the House shall take a recess until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

Mr. PRICE. I ask unanimous consent to modify the motion in accordance with the suggestion made by the Chair.

There was no objection.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated; and accordingly (at five o'clock and twenty minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until Tuesday morning at ten o'clock a. m.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired the House reassembled at ten o'clock a. m., (Tuesday, 25th February.)

RELEASE OF LANDS.

Mr. MCCOOK, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back, with an amendment, the bill (H. R. No. 4639) to authorize the Secretary of War to release certain lands of the United States to the people of the State of New York.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of War be authorized and empowered, in his discretion, to release to the people of the State of New York, their successors and assigns, a right of way, not exceeding six rods in width, upon and across the land owned and possessed by the United States, in the town of Plattsburgh, Clinton County, New York, for railroad purposes, and also a lot or piece of land in the northeast corner of said land, owned by the United States, at said Plattsburgh, for depot and other railroad purposes, not to exceed, however, ten acres, subject to such restrictions as the Secretary of War may think necessary to protect the interests of the United States; the said right of way and premises to be used exclusively for the purpose of constructing and operating the railroad authorized to be built by an act of the Legislature of the State of New York, entitled "An act authorizing the construction and management of a railroad from Lake Champlain to Dannemora prison," passed April 19, 1878.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of War be authorized and empowered, in his discretion, to lay out and continue Hamilton street, in the said town of Plattsburgh, across the said lands of the United States, to the lot or piece of land which the Secretary of War may release to the people of the State of New York by the first section of this act, and to dedicate the same to the public use as a public highway.

The amendment of the committee was read, as follows:

In section 1, line 11, strike out "ten" and insert "two," so that it will read: "not to exceed, however, two acres."

The amendment was adopted.

The bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MCCOOK moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SPRINGFIELD AND NEW LONDON RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. MCCOOK also, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 4872) granting a right of way across Water Shops Pond, in Springfield, Massachusetts, to the Springfield and New London Railroad Company.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the right of way by means of a bridge over and across the Water Shops Pond, so called, belonging to the United States, in Springfield, Massachusetts, is hereby granted to the Springfield and New London Railroad Company, for railroad purposes, the same to be used and enjoyed by said company at the same point and in the same location and extent that a way is now used by said company by means of the bridge heretofore constructed with the approval of the Secretary of War: Provided, That whenever said right of way shall cease to be used for the purposes aforesaid, the same shall revert to the United States: And provided further, That the right to repeal, alter, or amend this act is reserved to Congress.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MCCOOK moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

RUSH VALLEY MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. MCCOOK also, from the same committee, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. No. 3811) to provide for the transfer of the Rush Valley military reservation, in the Territory of Utah, to the Department of the Interior.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to relinquish and turn over to the Department of the Interior, for restoration to the public domain, the Rush Valley military reservation, in Utah Territory; and that the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the said reservation to be surveyed and divided into lots, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, of such forms and of such quantities of acres as shall be calculated, as far as practicable, to promote the public interest, by a suitable distribution of the water privileges within said reservation; and he shall offer such lots, severally, at public sale, to the highest bidder, not below the minimum price provided by law; and any lots left unsold after such offering at public sale shall be held for disposal as other public lands: Provided, That notice of such public sale shall be advertised for ninety days in two newspapers, one published in the capital of the Territory of Utah, and the other at a point nearest to the place of sale.

Mr. EDEN. I object to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. MCCOOK. I ask that the report be printed in the RECORD. Certainly something ought to be done with those reservations that are abandoned. They ought to be transferred to the Department of the Interior.

There was no objection, and the report was ordered to be printed in the RECORD. It is as follows:

Mr. McCook, from the Committee on Military Affairs, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was submitted the bill (H. R. No. 3811) for the transfer of the Rush Lake military reservation, in the Territory of Utah, to the Department of the Interior, have had the same under consideration and beg to submit the following:

On the 29th of October, 1877, a bill (H. R. No. 779) was introduced and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, asking the right of way for the Utah Western Railroad through the reservation referred to. As a result of the investigation it was found that the reservation had been practically abandoned; that no use had been made of it for years for military purposes; and that, although the War Department had legal control of it, it was willing that the transfer should be made to the Department of the Interior.

The reservation was declared such by the President, February 4, 1855, and contains 5,131.47 acres. On the 6th of March, 1869, the Secretary of War stated that it was no longer required for military purposes, and recommended that it should be disposed of in such manner as might be most advantageous to the United States. This recommendation was renewed, January 23, 1874, in response to an inquiry from the Committee on Military Affairs, and it was accompanied by a letter from General Ord, then commanding the Department of the Platte, stating that no use was made of it, and calling attention to the value of a portion of it which appeared to be well watered in a region where water was scarce. This paper was indorsed and approved by General Sheridan. The indorsement of the Adjutant-General shows that it was no longer used or required for military purposes, and that the War Department, by letter, December 13, 1869, had relinquished it to the Interior Department.

On the 17th April, 1876, Secretary of War Taft, in answer to an inquiry in regard to House bill No. 2652, Forty-fourth Congress, stated that the Department, having recommended the transfer, had no objection to the bill. On the 26th July, 1873, the same Department called the attention of the Interior Department to the fact that the consent of Congress was necessary to perfect the relinquishment by that Department, and referred to the opinion of the Attorney-General, May 24, 1873, in a similar case in California, and that as such consent had not been given the custody of the reservation must be retained by the War Department until the transfer was authorized.

Such is the present condition of the reservation, and your committee are unanimously of the opinion that the formal transfer should be made without unnecessary delay.

On the 24th of May, 1874, during the first session of the Forty-third Congress, the House of Representatives passed House bill No. 3434. A copy of this bill was sent to the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the Land Office asking their opinion of it, and their letters approving it, marked "A" and "B," are attached and made a part of this report.

The present bill, with the exception of the words "not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres," in line 8, is a copy of the one submitted to the officers referred to; and the words were inserted by your committee, because they believe the Government will thereby secure more favorable terms for the land when sold.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

"A."

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

Washington, D. C., February 20, 1878.

SIR: Your letter of the 13th instant, asking for an expression of opinion on House bill 3434, Forty-third Congress, first session, for the disposal of the Rush Valley military reservation, Utah Territory, was received and referred to the Commissioner of the General Land Office. I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of his report on the subject, under date of the 18th instant, and to add that no reasons are known to the Department why the said reservation should not be transferred and disposed of in the manner provided in the bill.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. SCHURZ, Secretary.

Hon. A. G. MCCOOK,
House of Representatives.

"B."

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,

Washington, D. C., February 18, 1878.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, by reference from the Department for report, of letter dated the 13th instant, from Hon. A. G. McCook, House of Representatives, inclosing bill H. R. No. 3434, Forty-third Congress, first session, to provide for the disposal of the Rush Valley military reservation in Utah Territory; also, inclosing letter from Secretary of War, dated December 3, 1877, addressed to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and stating that he has no objection to House bill No. 779, providing for the granting of the right of way through said military reservation to the Utah Western Railroad Company. The War Department having already recommended the transfer of the reservation to the Interior Department, Hon. Mr. McCook asks the views of the Department upon the bill H. R. 3434 above referred to.

This reservation was declared by President's order of February 4, 1855, and is situated in townships 4 and 5 south, range 5 west, Utah. The lines of public surveys were closed upon its out-boundaries in 1856. It was relinquished by the Secretary of War to the Secretary of the Interior December 13, 1869. Subsequently, namely July 29, 1873, the relinquishment was revoked and jurisdiction over it was resumed by the Secretary of War until an act of Congress should authorize its disposal. This office sees no objection to the passage of said bill No. 3434 of Forty-third Congress. The letter of Hon. Mr. McCook, with inclosures and wrapper, is herewith returned.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. A. WILLIAMSON,
Commissioner.

Hon. CARL SCHURZ,
Secretary of the Interior.

A. B. ROWDON.

Mr. DIBRELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported a bill (H. R. No. 6508) for the relief of A. B. Rowdon, of Meigs County, Tennessee, late a second lieutenant in the Eleventh Regiment Tennessee Cavalry, United States Volunteers; which was read a first and second time.

The bill, which was read, directs the proper accounting officers in the Treasury Department to pay A. B. Rowdon, of Meigs County, Tennessee, the pay due him as a second lieutenant of cavalry from the 31st day of August, 1863, to the 2d day of February, 1864, deducting all payments heretofore made to said Rowdon as first sergeant in said regiment.

Mr. ATKINS. I do not think I can vote for that bill while I know nothing about it.

Mr. DIBRELL. It is a unanimous report from the Committee on Military Affairs. This man was promoted five months before he was mustered and was only paid from the day of his muster. This gives him his pay. I hope my friend will not make any point of order on the bill.

Mr. ATKINS. How much does the bill propose to pay him?

Mr. DIBRELL. It proposes to give him five months' difference of pay between second lieutenant and first sergeant.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DIBRELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CLAIMS FOR HORSES, ETC.

Mr. DIBRELL. I am also instructed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report, as a substitute for House bill No. 3331, a bill to revive the law and extend the time for filing claims for horses and equipments lost by officers and enlisted men in the service of the United States.

The bill was read.

Mr. EDEN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee if this bill applies to any claims except those which accrued out of the late war.

Mr. DIBRELL. It does not. It simply revives and extends the time for five years.

Mr. EDEN. They have had a good deal of time already.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I wish to inquire of the gentleman from Tennessee if the bill covers property other than horses and equipments?

Mr. DIBRELL. It does not.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Then, why not pay the men who lost bacon and corn?

Mr. EDEN. They have three or four tribunals to which they can appeal.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. BOUCK. I object.

DR. JOHN BLANKENSHIP.

Mr. DIBRELL also, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported a bill (H. R. No. 6509) for the relief of Dr. John Blankenship.

The bill was read. It directs the proper accounting officers of the War Department to change the muster-out and discharge of Dr. John Blankenship, late assistant surgeon of the Third Regiment Tennessee Volunteers so as to make it bear date the 24th of April, 1863, the date of his discharge, and that the said John Blankenship be paid the balance of his salary due him for said service up to the 24th of April, 1863, deducting former payments.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DIBRELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JOHN BECKER.

Mr. DIBRELL also, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 3635) for the relief of John Becker.

The bill was read. It authorizes and directs the Secretary of War to pay to John Becker, late captain of Company I of the One hundred and eighty-first Regiment of Ohio Volunteer Infantry, the pay and allowances of a captain of infantry from the 29th day of September, 1864, to the 20th day of October, 1864.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DIBRELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CHARLES H. MOSELY.

Mr. DIBRELL also, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (S. No. 401) for the relief of Charles H. Mosely.

The bill was read. It directs the accounting-officers of the Treasury Department to allow and cause to be paid to Charles H. Mosely, a second lieutenant of Company K, Forty-seventh Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, (mounted,) the pay of a second lieutenant for the time served as such second lieutenant by the said Mosely between the date of his commission and the 13th of November, 1864, or the date from which he received pay as such second lieutenant, without regard to the date of his muster into service as second lieutenant of the company and regiment.

Mr. TOWNSHEND, of Illinois. Is there a report accompanying the bill?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman object to the bill?

Mr. TOWNSHEND, of Illinois. No; I only ask for the reading of the report.

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred Senate bill No. 401, for the relief of Charles H. Mosely, late second lieutenant Forty-seventh Kentucky Mounted Infantry, having had the same under consideration, respectfully report the same back, and adopt Senate report No. 93, hereto attached, and recommend the passage of Senate bill.

Mr. PLUMB, from the Committee on Military Affairs, submitted the following report, (to accompany bill S. No. 401):

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 401) for the relief of Charles H. Mosely, have had the same under consideration, and submit the following report:

"A similar bill has once been considered by the committee, and passed the Senate, but was not acted upon in the House. The evidence shows that Mosely was commissioned second lieutenant of the Forty-seventh Kentucky Mounted Infantry, September 9, 1864. He was not mustered because of the failure of one McCracken, the person whose promotion caused the vacancy, to appear for muster. The evidence is conclusive that Lieutenant Mosely entered upon duty immediately upon receipt of his commission, and rendered faithful service. In reference to his claim the Secretary of War says: 'There seems but little doubt that he rendered service as second lieutenant from September 9, 1864, to November 30, 1864.'

"The committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill, with an amendment: Insert at the end of the printed bill the words 'deducting any sum that he may have received as the pay of a non-commissioned officer or private for the same period.'

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DIBRELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

COL. LYMAN M. KELLOGG.

Mr. MARSH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported a bill (H. R. No. 6510) for the relief of the widow of Colonel Lyman M. Kellogg, as a substitute for House bill No. 1011; which was read a first and second time.

The bill was read. It authorizes and directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Caroline E. Kellogg, widow of Major Lyman M. Kellogg, late of the United States Army, deceased, an amount equal to the monthly pay, rations, compensation, and emoluments fixed by law to a captain of United States Infantry from the 11th day of August, 1862, to the 1st day of June, 1864, that being the time during which the said Lyman M. Kellogg was out of the service under an illegal dismissal, for which he received no pay; provided that said sum shall be in full satisfaction and discharge of all claims for services, pay, rations, compensations, and emoluments of the said Lyman M. Kellogg, for the time aforesaid.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MARSH moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

NEW MEXICO MOUNTED VOLUNTEERS.

Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (S. No. 837) for the relief of the officers and privates of the New Mexico Mounted Volunteers.

The bill was read. It provides that the Court of Claims shall take jurisdiction of and adjudge the claims of officers and privates of the New Mexico Mounted Volunteers in the service of the United States during the war of the rebellion, on account of losses of horses and equipments, although the same shall not be presented within six years from the time they accrued; provided that no such claim shall be considered unless the petition setting forth the same shall be filed within one year from the passage of this act.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

FORT FETTERMAN.

Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (S. No. 901) to authorize the Secretary of War to relinquish certain portions of the United States military reservation of Fort Fetterman, Wyoming Territory.

The bill was read.

Mr. HALE. Is not that a public bill? The agreement was that none but private bills should be reported this morning.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman object to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. HALE. I only insist upon carrying out the agreement.

THIRD ARKANSAS CAVALRY VOLUNTEERS.

Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (S. No. 333) for the relief of Thomas J. Choate, Erastus Foster, Milton Ladd, Clarence E. Haney, William A. Hill, Kneeland F. Huckaby, and William Blackburn, late privates in Company F, Third Regiment Arkansas Cavalry Volunteers.

The bill directs the Secretary of War to amend the records of Thomas J. Choate, Erastus Foster, Milton Ladd, Clarence E. Haney, William A. Hill, Kneeland F. Huckaby, and William Blackburn, late privates in Company F, Third Regiment Arkansas Volunteer Cavalry, by causing the charge of desertion to be removed.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

STATE WAR CLAIMS OF 1812.

Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report back, with a favorable recommendation, House bill No. 940, to provide for the recomputation of the accounts between the United States and the several States growing out of moneys expended by said States in the war of 1812.

Mr. HALE. I object to that bill; that is a public bill.
Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina. Then I withdraw it.

GALVESTON ARTILLERY, TEXAS.

Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the joint resolution (H. R. No. 15) authorizing the Secretary of War to issue to the governor of the State of Texas certain arms for the use of the Galveston Artillery.

The joint resolution directs the Secretary of War to issue to the governor of the State of Texas, for the use of the Galveston Artillery, four iron rifled field-pieces of artillery, with proper carriages, equipments, and caissons, suitable for drill and practice, out of any class of guns now held by the Ordnance department and not needed for actual service.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina, moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MARION ARTILLERY, CHARLESTON, SOUTH CAROLINA.

Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina, from the same committee, reported back, with an amendment, the bill (H. R. No. 3155) to authorize the Secretary of War to deliver to A. B. Rhett, T. Pinckney Lowndes, and others, four Napoleon guns, with caissons and harness, now at Greensborough, North Carolina, for the use of the Marion Artillery, Charleston, South Carolina.

The bill directs the Secretary of War to turn over and deliver to the following-named persons, to wit: A. Burnet Rhett, T. Pinckney Lowndes, James L. Robinson, and W. James Whaley, all of the State of South Carolina, a battery of four guns, (Napoleons,) together with the carriages, caissons, harness, and accoutrements to the same belonging, now held in store by the United States Government at the arsenal at Greensborough, in the State of North Carolina; which said battery formerly belonged to a corporation known as the Marion Artillery, of Charleston, in the State of South Carolina.

The amendment was to add to the bill the following:

Provided, That the persons before named shall enter in a sufficient bond, to be approved by the Secretary of War, to return said Napoleon guns, with the carriages, harness, and accoutrements, to the said Secretary of War whenever they shall be needed for the use of the National Government, or whenever Congress shall direct them so to return.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed, and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

IDaho WAR CLAIM.

Mr. CLARK, of New Jersey, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported with a substitute the bill (H. R. No. 5037) to provide for ascertaining and reporting the expenses incurred by the Territory of Idaho and the people thereof in defending themselves from the attacks and hostilities of the Nez Percés Indians in the year 1877, and for other purposes.

Mr. HALE. Is not that a public bill? I object to it.

KANSAS WAR CLAIMS.

Mr. CLARK, of New Jersey, also, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 6264) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to ascertain and report to Congress the amount of money expended and indebtedness assumed by the State of Kansas in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities.

Mr. BRAGG. I object.

MILITARY POST, TEXAS.

Mr. CLARK, of New Jersey, also, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (S. No. 909) to authorize the Secretary of War to accept an absolute gift of land necessary for military purposes.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of War on the part of the United States to accept an absolute gift or grant of land donated to the United States by the San Felipe Agricultural, Manufacturing and Irrigation Company, of the County of Kinney, State of Texas, comprising two hundred acres of land in said Kinney County, State of Texas, to be used as a site for a military post; provided, however, the same is, in his judgment, needed for military purposes, and the said gift to be unincumbered with provisions, whereupon the Secretary of War is authorized to accept the deed therefor.

Mr. HALE. Is that a public bill? This shows how dangerous it is to make agreements. There was an agreement made that nothing should be presented here this morning from the Committee on Military Affairs except private bills. Yet I have sat here for fifteen minutes watching the character of bills reported, and more than half of them have been public bills.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has recognized a single objection to anything.

Mr. HALE. That is not the point. The single objection applies even to private bills. The agreement was that nothing but private bills should be reported this morning.

Mr. BANNING. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] is correct.
Mr. WHITE, of Pennsylvania. I have nothing but private bills to report.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest to the gentlemen on the Military Committee that it would be well not to exhaust their time by trying to take up public bills.

SOLOMON ROBINALT.

Mr. CLARK, of New Jersey, also, from the same committee, reported back, with an amendment, the bill (H. R. No. 3171) to relieve Solomon Robinalt, late private Company G Forty-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, from the charge of desertion.

The bill relieves Solomon Robinalt, late private in Company G, Forty-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, from the charge of desertion now placed against his name in the records of the War Department of the United States.

The amendment was to add to the bill the following:

But no additional compensation shall be allowed the said Robinalt.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CLARK, of New Jersey, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SAMUEL M. REYNOLDS.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 1800) for the relief of the sureties, &c., of Samuel M. Reynolds, late additional paymaster of United States volunteers.

The question was upon ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware. There is upon the Speaker's table a Senate bill for the same purpose and in the same language as the bill now before the House. I am instructed by the Committee on Military Affairs to ask consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill for consideration and passage at this time, and that the House bill be laid upon the table.

The SPEAKER. The Senate bill will be read.

The Senate bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the claim of James L. Reynolds and A. Wilhelm, surviving administrator de bonis non of Robert W. Coleman, deceased, sureties upon the official bond of Major Samuel M. Reynolds, late additional paymaster of United States volunteers, for the refunding by the Government of the amount of the judgment recovered against them in the United States district court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, on or about June 1, 1876, and paid by them, and the claim of said Major Samuel M. Reynolds for release from liability on his official bond as paymaster of United States volunteers, to the amount of said judgment, an account of the loss by an alleged larceny from him of Government funds on or about December 22, 1865, be, and the same are hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, with jurisdiction to hear and determine said claims if presented within six months from the passage of this act; and the same shall be adjudged upon their merits; and said claimants and the United States shall have the right to use as competent evidence before the said court any records and official reports on file in the War or Treasury Department in relation to said loss, and claims for allowance arising therefrom, and any additional testimony relevant to the same; and if said court shall be satisfied from the evidence that it is just and equitable, it shall render judgment in favor of said claimants upon the said respective claims: Provided, That no such judgment in favor of said sureties and their representatives shall include costs or exceed the amount of the money lost by said Samuel M. Reynolds, with the interest paid thereon by said sureties.

There being no objection, the Senate bill was taken from the Speaker's table, read three several times, and passed.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

House bill No. 1800 (with the same provisions) was laid on the table.

MARTIN CLARK.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware, also, from the same committee, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. No. 213) for the relief of Martin Clark.

The bill was read. It provides that Martin Clark, late first lieutenant in the Twelfth New York Volunteer Cavalry, be relieved from all the penalties and effects of the general orders which dismissed him from the service of the United States; the first dismissing him from service while second lieutenant in the Twenty-first New York Volunteers; the second revoking his musters-in as second and first lieutenant of the Twelfth New York Volunteer Cavalry; and he is restored to all the rights and privileges he would be entitled to had not such orders been issued and enforced. The Secretary of the Treasury is directed to pay to Clark, out of any moneys not otherwise appropriated, the full amount of pay and emoluments due him and still remaining unpaid for the time he actually served as second or first lieutenant in the Army. Nothing herein is to be construed to allow pay for any period when Clark was not in actual service.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed, and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LEWIS LEFFMAN.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware, also, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (S. No. 1365) to place Lewis Leffman, ordnance-sergeant United States Army, on the retired list.

The bill was read. It provides that Lewis Leffman, ordnance-sergeant United States Army, be placed on the retired list of the Army, with the full pay and allowances of an ordnance-sergeant for and during his natural life, he having served faithfully and honorably in the Army of the United States for more than fifty-three years, and since July 20, 1840, continuously therein as ordnance-sergeant.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

PAULINA JONES.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware, also, from the same committee, reported back, with an amendment, the bill (H. R. No. 4126) for the relief of Paulina Jones, widow of Alexander Jones, deceased, Company E, Second North Carolina Infantry.

The bill was read. It directs the Secretary of War to place the name of Alexander Jones upon the roll of Company E, Second North Carolina Mounted Infantry, to date September 1, 1833.

The amendment reported by the committee was to strike out "1833" and insert "1863."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Delaware, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

EDWIN R. CLARKE.

Mr. STRAIT. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. No. 793) for the relief of Edwin R. Clarke, the subject-matter having been considered by our committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to take up for consideration a Senate bill, exactly similar in language and purpose to a House bill which is recommended by the committee.

There being no objection, the bill was taken from the Speaker's table, and read a first and second time.

The bill provides that the provisions of law regulating appointments in the Army by promotion in the line are hereby suspended for the purposes of this act, and only so far as they affect Edwin R. Clarke; and the President can, if he so desires, in the exercise of his own discretion and judgment, nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint said Edwin R. Clarke, late second lieutenant of the Tenth Regiment of United States Infantry, to the same grade and rank of second lieutenant held by him on the 12th day of July, 1876, in any vacancy occurring in the grade of second lieutenant in said regiment. But no pay, compensation, or allowance whatever shall ever be given to Clarke for the time between July 12, 1876, and the date of the appointment hereunder; and the acceptance of any benefit under this act by Clarke shall be taken and construed to be, by his election, a bar to any claim for pay or allowances from the date of his discharge to his acceptance of a commission, if one be granted him under the provisions of this act.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. STRAIT moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CAPTAIN JAMES M. BEEBER.

Mr. STRAIT, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (S. No. 19) for the relief of Captain James M. Beeber.

The bill was read. It provides that James M. Beeber, of Rochester, in the State of Indiana, be declared entitled to the full pay of captain of infantry volunteers, and such allowances as attach and belong to said rank, from the 7th day of November, 1864, to the 16th day of May, 1865; and the proper accounting officer is directed to pay the same out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, after deducting from the amount whatever pay he may have received as first sergeant of Company D, Seventy-third Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry, for services between said dates.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. STRAIT moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JACOB A. T. WENDELL AND OTHERS.

Mr. STRAIT. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. No. 1268) to authorize the Secretary of War to convey to Jacob A. T. Wendell, Henry Van Allen, and John R. Bailey a part of the military reservation of Fort Mackinac.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks consent to take from the Speaker's table, for consideration, a Senate bill which is exactly similar in language and purpose to a House bill recommended by the committee.

There being no objection, the bill was taken from the Speaker's table, and read a first and second time.

The bill directs the Secretary of War to convey by proper deed to Jacob A. T. Wendell, Henry Van Allen, and John R. Bailey all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the following-described part of the military reservation of Fort Mackinac, Michigan, of which the said Jacob A. T. Wendell shall be entitled to one-fourth, Henry Van Allen two-fourths, and John R. Bailey one-fourth: Beginning at a stone monument marking a corner of the military reservation, and standing between the said military reservation and property of Jacob A. T. Wendell, and running in continuation of a line now between said properties north 1° east 58 feet 6 inches; thence eastward 241.5 feet; thence south 1° west, parallel with the first line, 58 feet 6 inches, to a stone monument marking a corner of the military reservation and standing between the said military reservation and property of John R. Bailey; thence west, parallel with the second line, along a line of the official survey made by Major G. Weitzel, United States Army, in 1875, 241.5 feet, to the stone monument at the place of beginning.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. STRAIT moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MAJOR-GENERAL WILLIAM W. AVERILL.

Mr. STRAIT. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report for favorable action by the House a bill authorizing the retirement of Brevet Major-General William W. Averill, United States Army, with rank and pay of brigadier-general.

The bill was read. It provides that in view of the long and faithful services of Brevet Major-General William W. Averill, United States Army, before and during the late war, and of severe wounds received by him in battle, the President be authorized to place General Averill on the retired list of the Army with the pay of a retired officer of the grade of brigadier-general.

Mr. BOUCK. I object to that bill.

THOMAS H. CARPENTER.

Mr. WHITE, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back, with an amendment, the bill (H. R. No. 4408) authorizing the Secretary of War to restore the name of Thomas H. Carpenter, late captain Seventeenth United States Infantry, to the rolls of the Army.

The bill was read. It recites in the preamble that in February, 1866, Captain and Brevet Major Thomas H. Carpenter, Seventeenth United States Infantry, was examined by a retiring board at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and found by the surgeons of the board to be permanently lame, on account of a gunshot wound received while in command of his company at the battle of Gettysburg, and other severe physical disability contracted in the line of his duty; that notwithstanding the disabilities found by those surgeons, they gave as their opinion that Carpenter was not incapacitated for active duty in the field; that Carpenter was and is wholly disabled for field duty, as shown by certificate of the Surgeon-General United States Army and others, and by Major-General Samuel P. Heintzelman's letter, (all on file in the room of the Military Committee of the House of Representatives;) and that on account of the contradictory action of the board, Carpenter was compelled to resign, which he did in the following words: "Having been pronounced permanently lame and otherwise disabled by the surgeons of a retiring board, I am forced to resign my commission as captain in the Seventeenth United States Infantry." The bill therefore authorizes the Secretary of War to restore the name of Thomas H. Carpenter, late captain Seventeenth United States Infantry, to the rolls of the Army, as of date of his resignation, and to place his name on the retired list of officers retired from disability contracted in the line of duty, with retired pay as captain of infantry from same date.

The amendment reported by the committee was, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate appoint, T. H. Carpenter, late captain Seventeenth Infantry, a captain of infantry in the Army of the United States, and when so appointed he shall be placed upon the list of retired officers of the Army, on account of wounds received in battle from which he is now under disability.

The amendment reported by the committee was agreed to.

The bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WHITE, of Pennsylvania, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. BANNING. The hour of eleven o'clock has arrived, and in order that the session of Tuesday may begin, I move that the House adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and the House accordingly adjourned.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as stated:

By Mr. ALDRICH: The petition of Arno Voss, of Chicago, Illinois, late colonel of the Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, for compensation for losses incurred during the war of the rebellion—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BRIDGES: The petition of citizens of Maryland, who are owners of real estate in Washington City, for the right to contest the validity of assessments upon their said real estate in the courts of the District of Columbia—to the Committee for the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BURDICK: The petition of Mrs. J. E. Baird and 80 other ladies, of Strawberry Point, Iowa, for legislation to make effective the anti-polygamy law—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, the petition of Mrs. S. D. Helms and 140 other ladies, of Fayette County, Iowa, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. CLAFLIN: The petition of Thomas E. Proctor and 42 others, leather manufacturers, against extending the McKay sewing-machine patent—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. COX, of New York: Resolutions of a mass-meeting of cigar-makers, of New York City, favoring the amendment of the revenue laws so as to prevent the manufacture of cigars in tenement-houses—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. CRAPO: The petition of T. B. Baker and others, of Harwich, Massachusetts, owners and masters of fishing-vessels, for the abrogation of the fishery articles of the Washington treaty—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, the petition of Levi Eldridge and others, of Chatham, Massachusetts, owners and masters of fishing-vessels, of similar import—to the same committee.

Also, the petition of J. K. Baker and others, of Dennis, Massachusetts, owners and masters of fishing-vessels, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. CUMMINGS: The petition of Nettie Moffet and others, of Iowa, for legislation to make effective the anti-polygamy laws of 1862—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DEERING: The petition of 88 citizens, of Wright County, Iowa, for legislation to prevent the adulteration of food—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. DICKEY: The petition of John P. Walker, first lieutenant United States cavalry, for restoration of pay—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ELLSWORTH: The petition of Jennie Miller, Mrs. J. P. Shoemaker, and 150 other women, of Fairplains, Michigan, for legislation to make effective the anti-polygamy law of 1862—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FORNEY: Memorial of the Legislature of Alabama, favoring an appropriation of either lands or money to aid the Colored Agricultural and Mechanical College at Talladega, Alabama—to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. HASKELL: Resolutions of the Legislature of Kansas, against granting any corporation a subsidy that will assist in defeating the completion of the connection of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific Railroads—to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad.

By Mr. HAZELTON: The petition of L. G. Thomas and 15 others, of Richland County, Wisconsin, that the trade-dollar be made a legal tender—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. HENDEE: The petition of W. W. Corcoran, John Van Riewick, A. H. Herr, B. W. Reed's Sons, Nathaniel Wilson, Worthington & Heald, J. M. McGrew, Clarke & Given, Dickson & King, A. Y. P. Garnett, and 1,500 other business men, for the location of the new city post-office in Washington, District of Columbia, on square No. 406, between E and F and Eighth and Ninth streets, northwest, and against its location on the corner of Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. HERBERT: Memorial of the Legislature of Alabama, asking the removal of the duty on quinine—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Alabama, asking that the proceeds of the sales of public lands be devoted to education—to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Also, resolutions of the Legislature of Alabama, asking that United States courts be restrained from exercising jurisdiction of cases against municipal corporations—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ITTNER: The petition of Professor Francis E. Nipher, of Saint Louis, Missouri, that electric printed matter be classed as third-class mail matter—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, the petition of C. R. Stinde and others, against the extension of the McKay sewing-machine patent—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. JONES, of New Hampshire: The petition of Grange No. 37, New Hampshire, for the passage of the Reagan interstate-commerce bill—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. KELLEY: The petition of 120 citizens of Erie, Pennsylvania, for liberal appropriations for public improvements—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Also, the petition of 40 citizens, of Erie, Pennsylvania, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. KIDDER: Memorial of the Legislative Assembly of Dakota Territory, asking for a mail-route from Canton, in said Territory, to Beloit, Iowa—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. LAPHAM: The petition of M. L. Davis and others, for legislation that will cause national-bank notes and all other bank notes to be superseded by real national legal-tender notes of the United States—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. MAGINNIS: Memorial of the Legislature of Montana Territory, against the proposed change in the mode of surveying the public lands—to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. MCKINLEY: The petition of Matilda Ackey and 19 women of Malvern, Ohio, for such legislation as will make effective the anti-polygamy law—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, the petition of Georg M. Dunn and 52 citizens of Cicero, Indiana, that Birdsell's clover-huller patent be not extended—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. McMAHON: The petition of Philip Dhein, for the removal of the charge of desertion—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MORSE: The petition of E. H. Baker, Whitmore, Cabot & Co. and 229 others, citizens of Boston, Massachusetts, against the proposed extension of the McKay patent—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. PATTERSON, of New York: The petition of 88 ladies of Silver Creek, New York, for the suppression of polygamy in the Territories—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PEDDIE: The petition of the shoe manufacturers of New Jersey, against the renewal of the McKay sewing-machine patent—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, the petition of manufacturers of Newark, New Jersey, against the passage of the bill (S. No. 300) amending the patent laws—to the same committee.

By Mr. SAMPSON: The petition of Mrs. R. W. Boyd, Mrs. C. A. Rockwell, and others, for such legislation as will make effective the anti-polygamy law of 1862—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SHALENBERGER: The petition of 79 women, of Lawrence County, Pennsylvania, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. STRAIT: Memorial of the Legislature of Minnesota, asking for the construction of dams and reservoirs on the headwaters of the Mississippi River, for the improvement of navigation of said river—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, resolutions of the Legislature of Minnesota, favoring legislation to prevent the adulteration of food—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the Legislature of Minnesota, favoring appropriations for the improvement of Minnesota River—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. TOWNSHEND, of Illinois: The petition of citizens of Maryland, who are owners of real estate in Washington City, for the right to contest the validity of assessments upon their said real estate in the courts of the District of Columbia—to the Committee for the District of Columbia.

By Mr. TUCKER: The petition of Cedar Hill Grange, Bedford County, Virginia, for the reduction of the tax on tobacco—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILLIS, of Kentucky: Proceedings of a public meeting of citizens of Louisville, Kentucky, protesting against the passage of the bill (S. No. 300) amending the patent laws—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. WOOD: Memorial of the shoe manufacturers of New York, against the renewal of the McKay sewing-machine patent—to the same committee.

Also, resolutions of cigar-makers in New York, for the amendment of the revenue laws relating to the manufacture of cigars in tenement-houses—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. WRIGHT: The petition of Frederick S. Grover and 38 others, representing the First Maine Emigration Society, of the State of Maine, for aid to enable them to settle upon the public lands—to the Committee on Public Lands.

Also, the petition of 356 citizens of the States of Illinois, New York, and Indiana, for legislation prohibiting the adulteration of articles of food—to the Committee on Manufactures.

IN SENATE.

TUESDAY, February 25, 1879.

The Senate met at one o'clock p. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. BYRON SUNDERLAND, D. D.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the Journal of the proceedings of yesterday.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not think there is a quorum present.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WITHERS. My colleague [Mr. JOHNSTON] is absent from indisposition, and not able to be present.

Mr. SARGENT. In justice to the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WINDOM] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. DAVIS] and the Senator from Arkansas, [Mr. DORSEY,] I will state that they are absent, by leave of the Senate, upon the Committee on Appropriations.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is a quorum present; forty-nine Senators have responded. The Secretary will read the Journal of the proceedings of the session of yesterday.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal.

Mr. SARGENT. The Journal is very long. I move to dispense with the reading of it. It is largely made up of votes.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think we had better hear it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont objects. The reading can only be dispensed with by unanimous consent.

Mr. SARGENT. It is a very long Journal, and there is a very full quorum here.

Mr. EDMUNDS. But there were so many Senators absent yesterday that I think it would be well that they should know what was going on during their absence.

Mr. SARGENT. I was sick, and that accounts for my absence.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That was mentioned yesterday, as the Senator ought to know.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. It was stated last night that the Senator from California was sick, and he was excused.

Mr. HOAR. Is not all this out of order?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The reading will proceed.

The Secretary continued the reading of the Journal.

Mr. SPENCER. I move that the further reading of the Journal be dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Alabama asks unanimous consent that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to hear it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the Journal.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to have the Secretary read what the amendment of Mr. EATON was, if the Journal shows, to which reference is made.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that it is not in there.

Mr. HOAR. I understand it is not the practice in either branch to read the text of measures or amendments in the Journal.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the Senator from Massachusetts is correct.

Mr. EDMUNDS. My point is that the Journal does not show, although it was in the Senate, what amendment it was that Mr. EATON moved.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The reading will proceed.

The Secretary read the amendment of Mr. EATON to the Army appropriation bill referred to by Mr. EDMUNDS, and continued and concluded the reading of the Journal.

Mr. HOAR. I am stated in the early part of the Journal to have reported a bill from the Committee on the District of Columbia. There is some error in the name of the Senator there meant. I desire that the Journal may be corrected in that particular.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be corrected.

ADMISSIONS TO THE FLOOR.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Before proceeding to business the Chair desires to state that complaint is made to him by Senators, and justly, that daily people find admission to the floor of the Senate who are not entitled to come in under the rule, and that they disturb the deliberations of the Senate. The Chair now instructs the Sergeant-at-Arms, the doorkeepers, and all officers of the Senate, to strictly enforce the rule, and to admit no man to the Senate Chamber who is not entitled to admission under the rule, and if any man finds his way into the Chamber who is not entitled to be here, to cause him to leave the Chamber. The Chair will enforce that rule to the best of his ability. The rules are all the making of the Senate, and if the Senate choose to enlarge the sphere of admission they must do it and not throw the responsibility on the Chair.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 3422) to remove the political disabilities of John T. Rustic, of Virginia;

A bill (H. R. No. 4153) for the removal of the political disabilities of John A. Lovett, of Virginia;

A bill (H. R. No. 4154) to remove the political disabilities of Samuel Barron, of Virginia;

A bill (H. R. No. 4575) to remove the political disabilities of George B. Cosby, of Butte County, California;

A bill (H. R. No. 4742) to remove the political disabilities of James L. White, of Marion County, State of Florida; and

A bill (H. R. No. 5860) to remove the political disabilities of G. H. Hill, of Virginia.

The message also announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution for the printing of 20,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon Julian Hartridge, late a Representative from the State of Georgia; in which the concurrence of the Senate was requested.

INTERNAL-REVENUE LAWS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT appointed Mr. BAYARD, Mr. MORRILL, and Mr. FERRY the conferees on the part of the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments to the bill (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to internal revenue.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire for reasons that I deem sufficient to ask to be excused from service upon the committee of conference on the internal-revenue bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont asks to be excused from serving upon the committee of conference on the bill (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to internal revenue. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The Chair appoints the Senator from New York [Mr. KERNAN] to supply the place.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

Mr. WINDOM. I ask that the appropriation bill just received from the House be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

IMMIGRATION OF CHINESE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate, by request, a telegram which will be read if there be no objection.

The Secretary read as follows:

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, February 24, 1879.

To the United States Senate and House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

Resolved, That the thanks of this convention be, and the same are hereby, tendered to the Congress of the United States for the triumphant passage of the bill restricting the immigration of Chinese to this country, and that the members of the Senate and House of Representatives who supported that vital measure merit and will receive the lasting gratitude of the people of California.

Resolved, That the Secretary is hereby directed to transmit copies hereof to the Senate and House of Representatives.

E. F. SMITH,

Secretary Constitutional Convention.

Mr. SARGENT. I ask that these resolutions lie on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. To which the Chair hears no objection.

Mr. SARGENT. I also ask leave of the Senate to say that that is the highest expression of the will of the people of California.

Mr. HOAR. I object to the reception of that paper. According to the rule it is out of order to lay it before the Senate.

Mr. SARGENT. I think the people of California will appreciate the objection.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, if I may be allowed a word, I think the honorable Senator from California has no right to criticise the exertion of the right of a Senator to object to the sending of telegraphic dispatches here and making them in order in distinct violation of our rules. The objection has no reference at all to the character of the person who sends the petition or to the nature of the subject.

Mr. SARGENT. So far from objecting to the exception, I am not surprised at it at all.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken.

Mr. SARGENT. I should like to inquire what became of the telegram from the constitutional convention of California? What is its condition?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has not been received by the Senate. It lies in point of fact on the table.

Mr. SARGENT. I should like to have the rule read under which it is rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there consent that this subject be again considered?

Mr. HOAR and Mr. EDMUNDS. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. SARGENT. May I know who objects.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont and the Senator from Massachusetts object.

Mr. HOAR. I object.

Mr. SARGENT. I ask unanimous consent to say about twenty or thirty words.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SARGENT. Mr. President, the rejection of this memorial from the constitutional convention of California simply punctuates its contents; the rejection of it in this manner, on this kind of objection, simply calls the attention of the people of the country to it; and therefore I am glad that the objection has come in this form.

Now, as a part of my remarks, I wish to refer to another telegram coming from the editor of one of the very leading papers of the Pacific coast, and showing the interest which is felt in this subject there. In one of the letters I received this morning it is stated that men, strangers to each other, embraced upon the streets and wept for joy on the passage of that bill. It may be supposed there is no feel ing on this subject. I want to assure Senators who think it is a subject of mirth that it is a subject of grief on the Pacific coast; of grief, on account of the calamity upon them, which it is hoped this legislation will remove.

The dispatch which I hold in my hand is from George K. Fitch, well known throughout the Pacific coast as a man of public spirit, as a man of large views, a republican, and thoroughly identified with the interests of that coast. He speaks of the great anxiety that exists there over the ultimate fate of this measure. I will not read his telegram at length. I only ask the attention of the country, and the Senate turns a deaf ear to it, to the fact that the constitutional convention of California, which represents the ultimate sovereignty of that people, ask the attention of the governing powers of this country to this great question.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to say twenty or thirty or forty words.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. To which the Chair hears no objection.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, I objected to this matter being again referred to because as the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] stated, and as the Chair ruled, this paper which the Chair had read is neither a petition nor a memorial; but chiefly because it is a breach of the privilege of this body for any person, supposing it was in the highest possible form and signed by the parties, to address a memorial to this body which proposes to express thanks to any particular part of it or to the Senators who voted one way or the other. That persons may thank Congress or thank the Senate for a public act, I do not deny; but I say it is a breach of the privilege of this body to pick out either a majority or a minority of the Senators to say that they are worthy either of praise or blame. It must be assumed for the purposes of this body that on whichever side of this question Senators voted, they voted equally inspired by motives tending to the public good and by a sense of duty. That, I think, Mr. President, is too clear to admit of much debate.

Now I wish to say besides, as the Senator from California has alluded to it, that I think the people of California, if this bill should become a law, will live to see the day and not live long, when they themselves will be among the foremost, intelligent and patriotic as the better part of that people are, excepting—well, I will not make any exception, because I do not wish to reproach anybody—

Mr. SARGENT. You except their representatives.

Mr. EDMUNDS. No, I do not except their representatives; I yield to their representatives the same thing that I hope they will yield to me, and that is, my recognition of their doing what they think the public good requires, and I hope they will give me leave to have the impression that I do, that they will live to see the day, and will not have to live long to do it, when they will regret as much as the others who voted in the minority will regret, that this step has been taken by the Congress of the United States, whether this bill becomes a law or not, for it reverses the whole traditions of this people; it reverses the whole principle upon which this Government has been conducted, and is—I cannot use the expression that I naturally would, because I wish to keep within the bounds of the strictest propriety—but it is a great mistake, I will say, in respect of the conduct of a powerful and civilized nation toward that people and that nation whom it has almost coerced into the very treaty that we now repudiate.

Mr. BLAINE. Mr. President, on the point of order I do not intend to make a speech nor on the Chinese bill, as the Senator from Vermont has done; but on the point of order that was made, before it passes away from the Senate, I desire to submit a remark or two.

On the second point that is made that the memorial draws a distinction between Senators voting on one side or the other I will not comment; but from the ground on which the Senator from Massachusetts presses the rejection of the people I dissent. The fourteenth rule reads:

Before any petition or memorial shall be received or read at the table, it shall be signed by the petitioner or memorialist, and a brief statement of its contents shall be made by the Senator or presiding officer presenting it; but no petition or memorial or other paper signed by citizens or subjects of a foreign power, unless the same be transmitted to the Senate by the President, shall be received.

Nine-tenths of the memorials that come from State Legislatures are presented here in a printed form, a mere copy of what is done, and if you reject the idea that a distant part of the United States shall communicate with its Congress by telegraph when no other communication is at all possible, you are giving that rule a construction which excludes the power of petition and the power of memorial from those who lie beyond the point of the mail reaching within the time Congress may be in session, and in this very case it is so. What is needed is that it shall be an authentic memorial, that it shall have the Senator who presents it standing sponsor that it is genuine, that it is not a forged and fraudulent document. The Senator from California is willing to assume that. He presents the paper as embodying the views of the constitutional convention of California, and I take the point—

Mr. HOAR. He did not present it.

Mr. DAWES. The Chair presented it.

Mr. BLAINE. That is a higher authority than if a Senator presented it.

Mr. DAWES. The Chair does not undertake to vouch for it.

Mr. SARGENT. I do.

Mr. BLAINE. The Senator from California assumes it now, and the Senator from Massachusetts makes the point that any memorial presented here must have witnesses signed to it, and the signatures verified. He gives that rule a construction which it never has had and which it cannot have in justice to the people of the United States. That is the point I make.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. This debate proceeds by unanimous consent.

Mr. ALLISON. Then I—

Mr. HOAR. I trust the Senator from Iowa will not allow unanimous consent to the Senator from Maine making a comment on my action and refuse me an opportunity to reply. It would be most extraordinary.

Mr. ALLISON. I will yield for a moment to the Senator from Massachusetts, and then I will object to all further debate on this question.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, if there be any warmth, still more any asperity which has been excited in any bosom by what has happened in the Senate, their manifestation fails to excite any corresponding emotion of the kind in me. When the Chair stated in these words, "the Chair lays before the Senate a telegraphic dispatch," it occurred to me to object. Then it occurred to me that probably it was a matter of no very great importance and I did not object, and the telegram was read, and I did not object to that; but when a Senator rose and by a motion undertook to treat that transaction as a regular method of bringing business before the Senate and to make a motion which required a vote, which would have permitted the yeas and nays, which would if voted down have left it open to the Senate to go into a debate on the subject so introduced or to make other and repeated motions in regard to it, I thought it was time to interpose and I interposed without the slightest reflection to my own mind that the paper which was read related to a subject about which I had differed with anybody else or about which I had differed with the persons presenting it. Now I trust my friend from California will take my statement of that as the history of what occurred to me. The idea of suggesting an indignity to anybody! I did not even observe that it purported to be a dispatch from a constitutional convention or what the nature of the body was that it represented.

Now, Mr. President, can the Senator from Maine, with his parliamentary experience, be serious in claiming that this paper is one which authorizes the bringing business before the Senate and putting the subject-matter of it in order under our rules? It does not purport to be a petition or a memorial; it does not purport to be an exercise of the right guaranteed by the Constitution to every American citizen to present his grievances for redress. It is a certificate by telegraph which would not be received in any court of justice in the world, which would not be received anywhere as authenticating a fact, which could have been put at the end of a telegraphic line by any person, however irresponsible and however fraudulent, without in the slightest degree affecting the persons that it undertakes to affect, that a constitutional convention of California voted something—

Mr. BLAINE. That is just what the Legislatures do, if the Senator will permit me. That is all.

Mr. HOAR. It is in this way:

Resolved, That the thanks of this convention be, and the same are hereby, tendered—

The convention did not authorize the conveyance of that act by anybody to Congress, least of all by anybody in this way. Then, after reciting this resolve, it says:

The Secretary is hereby directed to transmit copies hereof to the Senate and House of Representatives.

E. F. SMITH,
Secretary Constitutional Convention.

Well, Mr. President, you cannot add to the absurdity of the proposition of the Senator from Maine, in my humble judgment, and with respect to him, anything more than the statement of it. It is a grave matter to be entitled to demand the action of the Senate of the United States. Seventy-six gentlemen, two from each State, the choice of each State, are assembled for the gravest public purposes, and here are matters which, day after day, of the gravest consequence, fail to get dealt with, simply because we have not time to take them up. Here are matters involving millions and millions of dollars, matters involving the dearest rights of citizens where a majority of both Houses of Congress are agreed that legislation is imperatively demanded, and yet in this closing week of the session we all know that they fail even to receive attention because of the superior pressure which grows out of other matters. Now, can it be said that a man a thousand miles off, or ten thousand miles off, by a dispatch which he does not sign, which merely some telegraphic operator signs, and not he, comes within the rule which declares, the Constitution having protected the right of petition, that "before any petition or memorial shall be received or read at the table, it shall be signed by the petitioner or memorialist, and a brief statement of its contents shall be made by the Senator or presiding officer presenting it?"

The Chair did not treat it as a petition or a memorial; he did not make any statement of its contents. Nobody knew what it was.

Mr. BLAINE. Then, what was the need of making the point of order about it? Why, if that were not so, did the Senator make his point?

Mr. HOAR. What was the need of making the point of order? I do not see the point of the question. I do not mean by this hasty answer to treat with disrespect the question of the Senator from Maine; but nobody proceeded on the ground that this came within the rule, and the Chair promptly held that it did not when his attention was called to it.

Mr. BLAINE. Mr. President—

Mr. WITHERS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BLAINE. I only want one word, and then I am done.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. BLAINE. Only one minute. Telegraphic dispatches to-day regulate the intercourse of all the nations of the world. All the great negotiations between the United States and the European powers are carried on by telegraph. All the treasure of the world to-day nearly is moved by telegraph. It is an authentic, well-known, recognized mode of communication; and the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from Vermont take the ground that the voice of a constitutional convention, representing the interests of a great State, cannot even be intimated to this Senate if it came over the wires, however authentic it may be and however strongly pledged a Senator on this floor may be that it is genuine and that it has not the least suspicion about it that it is anything else than what it purports to be.

Mr. HEREFORD. I rise for the purpose of replying to the point of order made by the Senator from Massachusetts in regard to the telegram.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] gave notice that he would object to further discussion.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order of business is the presentation of petitions and memorials.

Mr. HEREFORD. Very well.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter of the Secretary of War, submitting a statement of the amount expended in the prosecution of military and geographical surveys west of the one hundredth meridian; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting further information in relation to payments to land-grant railroads for the transportation of property or troops of the United States; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. PLUMB presented a resolution of the Legislature of Kansas, in favor of legislation providing against Indian outrages on the frontier; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a resolution of the Legislature of Kansas, in favor of such legislation as will vest the copyright of the United States Supreme Court reports in the Secretary of State in trust for the benefit of the people of the United States, that the publication of said reports be let to the lowest responsible bidder, and that they be sold to citizens of the United States at their actual cost per volume; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WITHERS presented a petition of Andrew F. Ball and 42 others, praying for the passage of a bill that will relieve their real property in the District of Columbia from unjust assessments, and for the right to contest the validity of such assessments in the courts; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. WINDOM presented the memorial of D. G. Harrington, Thomas Clark, and 60 others, of Rich Valley Grange, No. 130, Dakota County, Minnesota, asking the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 3547) to regulate interstate commerce and to prohibit unjust discriminations by common carriers; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. OGLESBY presented a resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, in the nature of a memorial to Congress, requesting the Senators and Representatives from that State to secure the permanent improvement of the Quincy Bay for the purposes of navigation; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. JONES, of Florida, presented a memorial of the Legislature of Florida, praying an appropriation to pay the unpaid balance awarded to citizens of that State under the provisions of the acts of Congress passed in furtherance of article 9 of the treaty between Spain and the United States of February 22, 1819; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. McMILLAN presented a memorial of the Legislature of Minnesota, praying legislation granting to soldiers of the Mexican and the late war each a certain amount of the public lands; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a resolution of the Legislature of Minnesota, in favor of an appropriation for the improvement of the western channel of the Mississippi River in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. HARRIS, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4558) for the relief of John N. Reed, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. VOORHEES, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the petition of Hannah McLaughlin, praying to be allowed a pension, reported a bill (S. No. 1854) granting a pension to Hannah McLaughlin; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 3676) for the relief of Benjamin Sanders, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 1842) granting a pension to Henry Grossmann, late a private in Company G, of the One hundred and fifty-fourth Regiment of Illinois Infantry Volunteers, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1759) granting a pension to Sarah E. Webb and minor children, reported it without amendment and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. KIRKWOOD, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4694) granting a pension to James Riley, late private in Company D, Fourth Regiment United States Infantry, reported it without amendment and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4368) granting a pension to Johanna Kuhlman, reported it without amendment and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. WITHERS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the petition of Mary W. Jones, widow of Thomas ap Catesby Jones, praying to be allowed a pension, reported a bill (S. No. 1855) granting a pension to Mary W. Jones; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4386) granting arrears of pension to Emilie R. Hooe, widow of the late Brevet Major Alexander S. Hooe, Fifth Infantry United States Army, reported it without amendment and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. EDMUNDS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2019) to exempt employes in the postal service from militia and jury service, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. TELLER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1245) for the relief of William H. Davis, reported it with an amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2848) for the relief of M. F. Clark, reported it without amendment and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. TELLER. The same committee having had under consideration the bill (S. No. 482) for the relief of William H. Nettle, have directed me to report it adversely, and to recommend its indefinite postponement. I will say that some friends desire it to be placed on the Calendar, and I ask that it go there.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar. Mr. HOAR, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. R. No. 106) referring to the Court of Claims the claim of James E. Kelsey, John Loughlin, Theron Kelsey, and others, against the United States, for damages done to the schooner C. and C. Brooks, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1589) for the relief of the legal representatives of William S. Robinson, late of Malden, Massachusetts, reported it without amendment and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of the Houston, Trinity and Tyler Railroad Company, of Texas, praying compensation for railroad-iron taken by the military authorities for the use of the United States, at Galveston, in 1865, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 795) for the relief of George W. Maher, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the papers relating to the application of Bernard Wagner, of Evansville, Indiana, for compensation for property lost by the war of the rebellion, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the claim.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the memorial of J. S. Anawalt, of DeWitt County, Illinois, formerly of Kansas City, Missouri, praying compensation for horses taken in Missouri during the war of the rebellion by the Union forces, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the memorial.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Henry B. Helen, of Hardin County, Kentucky, praying compensation for property taken and used by the United States Army during the late war, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 548) for the relief of John C. Comfort, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 920) for the relief of Robert Langston, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Lydia T. Hadlock, widow and administratrix of E. C. Hadlock, deceased, praying compensation for property taken by United States military forces during the late war, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of James H. Glenn, of Woodville, Georgia, praying payment for property alleged to have been taken for the use of the Army after the close of the rebellion, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Sarah R. Robinson, praying the passage of a law granting her an allowance as compensation for services rendered the Government by her father, Henry Robinson, during the war of 1812 and for property lost in the service during that war, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of J. C. Sayers, sr., of Kenton County, Kentucky, praying compensation for property alleged to have been taken and appropriated by United States military forces during the late war, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred additional papers in relation to the application of James Dix for compensation for removing the family of Washington Summers from Buckannon, Upshur County, West Virginia, to near Staunton, Virginia, in 1862, by order of the United States military authorities, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the papers.

Mr. KELLOGG, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 3196) granting a pension to William H. Garrett, late private in Company B, in the Fifty-sixth Regiment Illinois Infantry Volunteers, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4695) granting a pension to James Buchanan, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 491) granting a pension to Henry Brown, late a private in Company C, One hundred and twenty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteers, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 460) granting a pension to Mary Leggett, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate of February 11, 1879, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to transmit such information as he may possess relative to the quantities and natures of fermented and alcoholic liquors imported into the United States, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate of February 11, 1879, directing the Secretary of State to transmit any information in his possession relating to the methods of preparation and production and the nature of the various kinds of fermented and alcoholic liquors imported into the United States from foreign ports at which are stationed officers of the consular service of the United States, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

CONDITION OF EUROPEAN WORKING CLASSES.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a resolution to print 15,000 copies of the consular report now being prepared by the State Department in relation to the condition of the working classes of the several countries of Europe, have instructed me to report back the same without amendment and recommend its passage. I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring.) That there be printed 15,000 copies of the consular reports, now being prepared by the Secretary of State, showing the rates of wages, hours of labor, food prices, and general condition of the working classes in the several countries of Europe; 8,000 copies for the use of the House, 4,000 for the use of the Senate, and 3,000 for the use of the Department of State.

POWELL'S REPORT ON ARID REGION.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the concurrent resolution of the House to print 5,000 copies of the report on the lands of the arid region of the United States, by J. W. Powell, have instructed me to report it back without amendment and recommend its passage. I ask for its present consideration.

Mr. PADDOCK. I ask that that resolution may lie over. I desire to make an observation or two in regard to it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will first be reported.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring.) That there be printed 5,000 copies of the report on the lands of the arid region of the United States, by J. W. Powell; 1,000 for the use of the Senate, 2,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 for the use of the Department of the Interior.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie over under the rules.

BILL INTRODUCED.

Mr. CONKLING (by request) asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1856) for the relief of Reuben Hopkins Plass; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. BURNSIDE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. McPHERSON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. No. 6463) making appropriations for the construction, repair, preservation, and completion of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I wish to call the attention of Senators who are offering amendments to appropriation bills to the fact that I think the rule does not provide for the reference of amendments offered by Senators in their capacity as Senator as distinguished from their being reported from a committee, to the Committee on Appropriations at all. Of course I have no objection to the reference; but I merely wish attention called to the fact that under the rule as I read it, it does not help the amendment any if it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations unless it be an amendment reported from some other committee and not introduced merely by a Senator.

Mr. MORRILL. I have two amendments to present to the sundry civil bill which are reported by me from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. WITHERS, Mr. BUTLER, Mr. SPENCER, Mr. McDONALD, Mr. COCKRELL, Mr. MORRILL, Mr. MORGAN, (by request,) Mr. BAILEY, Mr. WALLACE, Mr. DENNIS, Mr. PLUMB, Mr. TELLER, Mr. OGLESBY, Mr. SARGENT, Mr. DAVIS of Illinois, Mr. MERRIMON, Mr. CAMERON of Pennsylvania, Mr. VOORHEES, Mr. BECK, Mr. THURMAN, Mr. ALLISON, Mr. JONES of Florida, Mr. MORGAN, Mr. CAMERON of Wisconsin, Mr. BRUCE, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. CONOVER, Mr. CONKLING, and Mr. ANTHONY submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TELLER, from the Committee on Railroads; Mr. INGALLS, from the Committee on Indian Affairs; Mr. SAULSBURY, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; Mr. PADDOCK, from the Committee on Agriculture; and Mr. WADLEIGH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported amendments intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MERRIMON, Mr. INGALLS, Mr. GORDON, and Mr. WITHERS submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 5218) to establish post-routes in the several States herein named; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported four amendments intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, with the accompanying papers, and ordered to be printed.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills from the House of Representatives were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

A bill (H. R. No. 3422) to remove the political disabilities of John T. Rustic, of Virginia;

A bill (H. R. No. 4153) for the removal of the political disabilities of John A. Lovett, of Virginia;

A bill (H. R. No. 4154) to remove the political disabilities of Samuel Barron, of Virginia;

A bill (H. R. No. 4575) to remove the political disabilities of George B. Cosby, of Butte County, California;
 A bill (H. R. No. 4742) to remove the political disabilities of James L. White, of Marion County, State of Florida; and
 A bill (H. R. No. 5860) to remove the political disabilities of G. H. Hill, of Virginia.

HARTTRIDGE MEMORIAL ADDRESSES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring.) That 20,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the late Julian Hartridge, late a Representative from the State of Georgia, be printed; of which 5,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, and 15,000 for the use of the House of Representatives.

SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I move that the Senate now take up for consideration the resolution reported to the Senate from the Committee on Privileges and Elections on the 4th of February, this present month, declaring that Mr. Corbin, of South Carolina, is entitled to a seat as a Senator from that State.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wisconsin, on behalf of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, moves that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the resolution which will be read.

Mr. McDONALD. Let it be reported for information.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be. It will be for the majority of the Senate, then, it being a privileged question, to decide whether they will take it up or not.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That David T. Corbin was, on the 12th day of December, A. D. 1876, duly elected by the Legislature of the State of South Carolina a Senator from that State in the Congress of the United States for the term of six years, commencing on the 4th day of March, A. D. 1877, and that, as such, he is entitled to have the oath of office administered to him.

Mr. BAYARD. Is this resolution before the Senate?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is not. The Senator from Wisconsin on behalf of the Committee on Privileges and Elections moves to bring it before the Senate.

Mr. BAYARD. I would merely say one word. This is not legislative business; it is business pertaining solely to the affairs of one body of Congress which can be settled by the Senate and must be settled by the Senate itself; and the question is whether with the necessary legislation for the support of the Government now pressing before it, the Senate will enter into a long debate for the purpose of settling that which is not legislative in its character but is confined solely to the action of this body in regard to its membership.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. My recollection is that the deficiency appropriation bill was to come up after the morning hour. It was taken up last night with the understanding that at the expiration of the morning hour to-day we should go on with it. If that is not so, is not the Anthony rule in order, and no other business unless by unanimous consent?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. This is a privileged motion, and the question is, will the Senate agree to it?

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Do I understand the Chair to rule that the Calendar is not in order?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that this is a privileged question, and first to be put to the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Then I move to proceed to the consideration of the appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will first put the question on the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin, which is a privileged motion. Will the Senate agree to the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, and Mr. SAULSBURY called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

Mr. SPENCER, (when his name was called.) On this question I am paired with the Senator from New Jersey, [Mr. RANDOLPH.] If he were here, I should vote "yea" and he would vote "nay."

Mr. TELLER, (when his name was called.) On this subject I am paired with my colleague, [Mr. CHAFFEE.] If he were present, I should vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 25, nays 36; as follows:

YEAS—25.

Allison,	Dawes,	Ingalls,	Plumb,
Anthony,	Dorsey,	Kirkwood,	Rollins,
Blaine,	Edmunds,	McMillan,	Wadleigh,
Booth,	Ferry,	Mitchell,	Windom.
Cameron of Wis.,	Hamlin,	Morrill,
Chandler,	Hoar,	Oglesby,
Conkling,	Howe,	Paddock,

NAYS—36.

Balley,	Davis of W. Va.,	Jones of Florida,	Morgan,
Barnum,	Dennis,	Kernan,	Patterson,
Bayard,	Eaton,	Lamar,	Ransom,
Beck,	Garland,	McCreery,	Saulsbury,
Cameron of Pa.,	Gordon,	McDonald,	Shields,
Cockrell,	Grover,	McPherson,	Voorhees,
Coke,	Harria,	Matthews,	Wallace,
Conover,	Hereford,	Maxey,	Whyte,
Davis of Illinois,	Hill,	Merrimon,	Withers.

ABSENT—15.

Bruce,	Eustis,	Randolph,	Spencer,
Burnside,	Johnston,	Sargent,	Toller,
Butler,	Jones of Nevada,	Saunders,	Thurman.
Chaffee,	Kellogg,	Sharon,

So the motion was not agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. I move to take up—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator will name the bill.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. The deficiency bill.

Mr. McMILLAN. If it be in order, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 6362.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion is not in order.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask for the regular order, which is the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask the Senator from Iowa to yield to me to dispose of the House bill making appropriations for the payment of claims reported allowed by the commissioners of claims.

Mr. ALLISON. I should like to accommodate my friend, but it is impossible. That bill will be in order after this is disposed of.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate proceeds to the consideration of the unfinished business, being the deficiency appropriation bill.

DEBATE ON APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. ALLISON. Before the bill is read, I ask to have adopted the rule offered by the Senator from Minnesota, [Mr. WINDOM,] I think, on the 20th, relating to the five-minute debate on appropriation bills. I think there will be no objection to it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Iowa asks that the five-minute limit of debate be applied to this appropriation bill.

Mr. BECK. I object to that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. ALLISON. I did not propose to apply the rule particularly; I only asked for the adoption of a resolution which will enable us to apply it when we are disposed to do so.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to this proposition?

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the resolution of the Senator from Minnesota be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read in order that the Senate may understand it.

The Secretary read the following resolution submitted by Mr. WINDOM on the 20th instant:

Resolved, That during the present session it shall be in order at any time pending an appropriation bill to move to confine debate on amendments thereto to five minutes by any Senator on the pending motion; and such motion shall be decided without debate.

Mr. ALLISON. That is the usual rule adopted at the end of every session.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. It is not to go into effect at present?

Mr. ALLISON. No, only to have it so that it can be applied hereafter.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Then there is no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 6436) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and for prior years, and for those heretofore treated as permanent, and for other purposes.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after the word "cents," in line 11, under the head of "southern claims commission," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That so much of the appropriation for contingent expenses of the southern claims commission made by the legislative act approved June 19, 1878, as may be necessary, not exceeding $7,000, is hereby transferred for the payment of salaries of investigating agents and their expenses, and for additional clerks, for the fiscal year 1879.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 56, under the heading "Under the Court of Claims," after the word "forty," to strike out "thousand five hundred and fifty-four dollars and ninety-five," and insert "three thousand one hundred and ninety-nine dollars and forty-nine;" in line 59, under the same heading, after the word "cents," to insert "Joseph S. Farden, $163.05; Jane Quinn, administratrix of David Quinn, deceased, $1,740; Platt M. Thorn, $558.33;" and in line 64, under the same heading, after the words "in all," to strike out "eighty-four thousand seven hundred and eighty-six dollars and ninety-two," and insert "eighty-nine thousand eight hundred and ninety-two dollars and eighty-four;" so as to read:

Joseph S. Emery, $43,199.49; John C. Grund & Co., $47.50; Joseph S. Farden, $163.05; Jane Quinn, administratrix of David Quinn, deceased, $1,740; Platt M. Thorn, $558.33; in all, $89,892.84.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I see in these provisions for the Court of Claims what seems to me to be rather unusual—an enumeration of the judgments to be paid. We usually, I believe, make a general appropriation; and so I presume this is to make up a deficiency. I should like to inquire, taking one of the larger ones that I see, whether the attention of the committee has been called to it. Take page 3, lines 56 and 57; what is this claim of Joseph S. Emery for $43,199.49?

Mr. ALLISON. It is a judgment of the Court of Claims against the United States in favor of Mr. Emery.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Yes, but on what account, and how does it happen that it was not paid out of the general appropriation?

Mr. ALLISON. I understand the general appropriation was deficient for the payment of all these claims. These claims come to us with an estimate and a statement made by the Secretary of the Treasury. I have the document here.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not doubt the fact that the Secretary of the Treasury has reported an estimate; but if these were ordinarily judgments of the Court of Claims about which there was no question of duty or otherwise, it is a little surprising I must say with all respect to the executive department, that the estimate should not have been for so much to pay unpaid judgments of the Court of Claims. It would look a little, therefore,—the Senator will pardon me a moment,—as if these judgments did not fall within the usual law but are some special and particular judgments to which the general appropriation for the payment of judgments did not apply, perhaps claims upon some special fund or something of that sort. If that be so I should like to know, selecting out one of these large ones as merely an illustration of the whole thing, what is the nature of these claims, if they are claims for captured and abandoned property and upon what ground of right do they stand? Is it that the claimant had received a presidential amnesty or pardon, who would not have otherwise have been entitled. If so, then I do not wish to appropriate the money.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator from Vermont will send for Executive Document No. 31, House of Representatives, present Congress, third session, he will find on page 2 an estimate for the "payment of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims of the United States due and unpaid, January 8, 1879, $84,786.92." I hope Senators will send for this document, as it contains much of the information on which these appropriations are made. That is a general statement.

Now, I refer to page 19, a sort of appendix, for a list of these claims. The House of Representatives, instead of appropriating in bulk as is usual with reference to these judgments, saw proper to turn to the appendix and put them in in detail. The Committee on Appropriations did not go behind this document to ascertain in each particular case upon what these judgments are based. They had not time to do it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not wish to delay the bill. Let it go on, and we can look into this.

Mr. ALLISON. Before the last amendment is agreed to, I offer the following amendment by direction of the committee, and I call the attention of the Senator from Vermont to it. It is to come in at the end of line 64, before the words "in all:"

To the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company, $58,260, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Mr. EDMUNDS. What does that mean?

Mr. ALLISON. That is a judgment of the Court of Claims affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States for payment to the Denver Pacific Railroad.

Mr. EDMUNDS. For what?

Mr. ALLISON. For carrying the mails of the United States.

Mr. EDMUNDS. When was that judgment affirmed?

Mr. ALLISON. Affirmed at the present term of the court. I have a letter from the Attorney-General on the subject.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It had better be read to show on what ground it is.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the letter be read which I send to the desk.

The Secretary read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, D. C., February 24, 1879.

Mr. SENATOR: I have seen a proposed amendment to the Senate bill in regard to the Denver Pacific Railroad, appropriating so much as may be necessary of the sum of $58,260 to discharge the final judgment of the Court of Claims in favor of this road, and see no objection to its passage.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES DEVENS,
Attorney-General.

HON. HENRY M. TELLER,
United States Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. Howe in the chair.) The question is on the amendment moved by the Senator from Iowa.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. Now the footing which is merely the aggregate should be modified accordingly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That modification will be made, and the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations as thus amended agreed to.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to insert after line 71 of section 1:

For salary of chargé d'affaires to Greece, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1879, $5,080.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to have some explanation of that.

Mr. ALLISON. In the last consular and diplomatic bill no appropriation was made for a chargé d'affaires at Greece. The President of the United States, however, continued this officer at his post, and he has been discharging his duties during the present year. The Secretary of State regards it as important that he should remain during the present year, and of course if he remains there he ought to be paid the ordinary compensation for that service.

Mr. COCKRELL. I understand, then, the legislative authority of the Government thinking the office was not necessary did not appropriate any salary for it, but the executive authority thinking it was necessary continued the service.

Mr. ALLISON. That is it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment. The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 74 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of State to make such allowance as he shall deem just and equitable to the widow of the late Bayard Taylor, late minister to Germany, for the extraordinary expenses and losses incurred by the estate of said minister in consequence of his dying within a short period after his arrival at his post of duty, the sum of $7,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 82 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of State to make such allowance as he shall deem just and equitable to Mary E. Colburn, widow of the late Justin E. Colburn, late consul-general to Mexico, for the extraordinary expenses and losses incurred by the estate of the said consul-general in consequence of his dying within a short period after his arrival at his post of duty, the sum of $2,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 91 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of State to pay John C. Myers salary as consul general at Shanghai from March 27 to July 12, 1877, $2,933.16, upon receipt in full of all his claims as such officer.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to know if that is an officer whose salary was reduced by act of Congress, and if this is a deficiency owing to that reduction.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator from Missouri desires an explanation of this amendment, I will send to the desk a letter from the Secretary of State and ask that it be read.

Mr. COCKRELL. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letter will be reported.

The Secretary read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 19, 1878.

SIR: I have the honor to submit to you, with a view to its consideration by your committee and the requisite appropriation by Congress, a statement of the claim of John C. Myers, esq., late consul-general of the United States at Shanghai, on account of compensation due him, and still remaining unpaid, during his incumbency of that office. Mr. Myers was suspended from his office of consul-general at Shanghai by the President on the 5th of June, 1877, the suspension taking effect on the 12th of July following, that being the date of Mr. Myers's reception of the notice of his suspension. The laws of the United States provide that no diplomatic or consular officer who shall be absent from his post, by leave or otherwise, shall receive compensation for the time which he may be absent beyond sixty days in any one year and the time allowed by the Secretary of State for transit to and from such post to his residence in the United States.

Mr. Myers's accounts have been adjusted at the Fifth Auditor's Office, and he has received compensation up to the 27th of March, 1877, the date upon which he was relieved from the duties of the consulate-general by the minister of the United States.

Under these circumstances this Department has considered him entitled to compensation at the rate of the salary attached to the office from the 27th of March, 1877, the date when he was relieved by the minister, to the 12th July of that year, the date of the reception of the President's letter of suspension, and an additional sixty days for absence with leave and fifty days' transit, that being the time fixed for making the journey between this capital and Shanghai.

These several allowances present the following sums, net and gross:

Salary from March 27 to July 12, 107 days.....	$1,468 59
Sixty days' leave of absence.....	$15 22
Fifty days' transit home.....	679 35

Making a total of.....	2,963 16
------------------------	----------

The last item, of $679.35, was paid by the Treasury; payment of the other two items, amounting to $2,283.81, was refused by the First Comptroller on the ground that all of the appropriation for that year which could properly be devoted to that purpose had been already exhausted in payment of the officer charged with the performance of the duties of the consulate-general during the suspension of Mr. Myers.

While not prepared to accept the conclusion of the Comptroller in regard to these items as correct, I do not feel disposed to raise any question with that officer, he being the authorized accounting officer in regard to such matters, and there being no fund at the disposal of this Department from which the account could properly be paid. I informed the attorneys of Mr. Myers that it would be necessary to await the action of Congress, to which body I would not fail at the proper time to make a recommendation for the necessary appropriation. Mr. Myers, not being satisfied with this proposed disposition of his claim, commenced an action against the United States in the Court of Claims, seeking to recover a much larger amount. The cause is now pending in that tribunal, and the interests of the United States are being represented there by my colleague, the Attorney-General.

I am now informed by Messrs. Carpenter and Coleman, the attorneys of the claimant, that if a sum sufficient to discharge the two disallowed items, namely, $2,283.81, shall be appropriated by Congress and made immediately available, that such sum will be accepted by Mr. Myers as a final settlement of his claims on the Government on account of his services as consul-general at Shanghai, and that the action now pending in the Court of Claims, based upon that claim, will be at once dismissed. I do not think he could recover any more in that action, and I am also of opinion that he ought not to receive any less. I have therefore the honor to suggest that a sum sufficient to discharge that liability, namely, $2,283.81, be recommended to Congress as an appropriation for that purpose, and that such sum may be made immediately available.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

WM. M. EVARTS,

HON. WILLIAM WINDOM,
Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, United States Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 97 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of State to reimburse the United States consul at Cadiz, Spain, for expenses incurred on account of certain Spanish refugees who sought the protection of the United States consulate during the insurrection in the southern provinces of Spain in 1873, $563.69.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 104 of section 1, to insert:

For compensation and expenses of C. W. Brink, as bearer of dispatches from the United States minister in Mexico in the year 1869, $542.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 137 of section 1:

For the Territory of New Mexico, $800, being for the fiscal year 1878.

For legislative expenses, namely: For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, and clerks, and contingent expenses thereof, and for rent, light, fuel, printing, stationery, and incidentals, being deficiencies for the fiscal year 1879, for the following Territories, namely:

For Arizona, $4,220; for Dakota, $5,680; for Idaho, $5,680; and for Montana $5,680.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senator from Iowa if the aggregate amounts named for these territorial expenses are the same reported in House Executive Document No. 31?

Mr. ALLISON. These are not reported in Executive Document No. 31. They arise from the fact that in these Territories Legislatures are in session this winter. The appropriation act last year provided for a reduction in the number of members and employés of the territorial Legislatures, but it provided that the reduction should only apply to these Territories after the close of the next session of their several Legislatures. Only a sufficient sum was appropriated to pay the expenses of the Legislatures as thus cut down. A deficiency, of course, occurs in all the Territories where Legislatures are being held this winter. These sums are very carefully computed to cover those deficiencies.

Mr. BECK. In other words, the last appropriation was made according to the new law and not according to the old law.

Mr. ALLISON. Yes; not according to the old law.

Mr. BECK. And the old law required this expenditure.

Mr. ALLISON. That states it all in a nutshell.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert after line 159 of section 1:

Office of depositary at Tucson: For depositary, in addition to his pay as postmaster, $1,500; for night-watchman, from August 8 to October 7, 1878, at $90 per month, $180; in all, $1,680, being deficiencies for the fiscal year 1879.

For contingent expenses of said office, $147.34, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1877.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 183 of section 1, after the word "revenue," to strike out "for additional amount to be used in suppressing illicit distilling," and in line 185 to increase the appropriation from $25,000 to $50,000; so as to read:

Salaries and expenses of collectors of internal revenue, being for the year 1879, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 185 of section 1, to insert:

For detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons guilty of violating the internal revenue laws, or conniving at the same, including payments for information and detection of such violations, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $25,000.

Mr. BECK. I see we have passed one item in regard to the internal revenue. There are some provisions in the bill upon which the committee differed somewhat, and it was suggested that we should pass over several amendments upon which there was a difference of opinion and let those upon which we all agreed be considered first.

Mr. ALLISON. I think the Senator from Kentucky does not object to this amendment and the preceding. The items to which he refers and would probably object to are further on.

Mr. BECK. Very well. I will not ask to have this amendment passed over.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 215 of section 1, to insert:

For gas, drop-lights, and tubing, gas-burners, brackets, and globes, candles, lanterns, and wicks, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1879, $4,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 219 of section 1, to insert:

To allow salary to Charles Bryant, late special Treasury agent of the seal islands in Alaska, from May 15 to June 30, 1877, $471.29.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 224 of section 1, to insert:

That in the settlement of the accounts of Henry C. De Ahna, late collector of customs at Sitka, Alaska, in addition to the salary and fees to which the said De Ahna is entitled under existing law, the proper accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby authorized and directed to allow and pay to the said De Ahna the further sum of $3,500, in full compensation for all expenses incurred and losses sustained by the said De Ahna in traveling to and from Alaska and in obtaining and furnishing the Treasury Department with reports concerning the condition of public affairs in said Territory; and said sum of $3,500 is for that purpose hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 270 of section 1, to insert:

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

Survey of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts: For the continuation, during the present fiscal year, of the survey of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts of the United States, the triangulation toward the western coast, and furnishing points for State surveys, $40,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 276 of section 1, to insert:

Survey of the western (Pacific) coasts: For the continuation, during the present fiscal year, of the survey of the Pacific coasts of the United States, the triangulation toward the eastern coast, and furnishing points for State surveys, $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill to line 286 of section 1. Mr. SARGENT. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to offer the following amendment, to come in after line 286 in the items under the head of the Interior Department:

To pay John L. Swift, late pension agent at San Francisco, the amount found due him on the settlement of his account, $123.04.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 291 of section 1, under the head of "Indian affairs," to increase the appropriation for subsistence for the year 1879 of the Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Apaches, Kiowas, Comanches, and Wichitas, of the Indian Territory, from $25,000 to $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 295 of section 1, to increase the appropriation for subsistence of the Assinaboines, at Fort Belknap, Montana Territory, from $10,000 to $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 301 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay William Kiskadden for beef furnished the Crows, 1876, $9,416.11.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 305 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay to the Creek Nation of Indians amount due for expenses incurred in negotiating treaty of June 14, 1866, $1,482.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 309 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to reimburse Messrs. Buck and Kellogg, attorneys-at-law, Emporia, Kansas, for certain moneys paid and fees due as bondsmen and attorneys in a suit brought in the district court of Lyon County, Kansas, entitled L. M. Appleby vs. Louis Primeaux, $208.60.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 337 of section 1, to insert:

Patent Office:

For compensation of twenty-two third assistant examiners, twenty clerks at the rate of $1,000, and ten laborers at the rate of $660, to be employed for the remainder of the current fiscal year, in place of sixty-six clerks and laborers discharged November 15, 1878, $15,000: Provided, That hereafter no temporary laborers except per diem laborers expressly authorized by law, and no temporary clerks whatever, shall be employed or paid in the Patent Office.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 348 of section 1, to insert:

For photolithographing or otherwise reproducing copies of drawings destroyed or damaged by the fire of September 24, 1877, being a deficiency for 1879, $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 353 of section 1, to insert:

For service of the Hot Springs Commission, acting under the request of the President, from June 25 to December 16, 1878, at the rate provided by the act creating the commission, and for salaries of clerks, and the necessary incidental expenses incurred during said term, and for fees and per diem due the United States marshal for the eastern district of Arkansas, acting under the authority of said commission, $12,000; the same to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 363 of section 1, to insert:

Public lands:

For certain amounts fully set forth in detail on pages 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17 of House Executive Document No. 31, Forty-fifth Congress, third session, being letter of the Secretary of the Treasury transmitting estimates of appropriations required by the various Departments to complete the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and prior years:

For surveying public lands in Arizona for 1872, $75.11; for 1874, $45.94; for 1875, $81.84; for 1876, $280.80; in all, $483.69.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 380 of section 1, to insert:

For surveying public lands in California for 1871, $9.39; for 1876, $6,439.01; in all, $6,448.40.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 385 of section 1, to insert:

For surveying public lands in Florida, for 1876, $701.73.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 388 of section 1, to insert:

For surveying public lands in Louisiana, for 1876, $57.50.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 390 of section 1, to insert:

For surveying public lands in Oregon, for 1872, $70.55; for 1873, $263.52; for 1874, $395.47; for 1875, $15.12; in all, $744.66.

Mr. MITCHELL. I should like to ask the chairman of the committee whether that means a deficiency ending the last day of June of this year; for instance, take the item for surveying public lands in Oregon, for the year ending June 30, 1872? I know that the contract in this case was made in 1871.

Mr. ALLISON. These are to pay adjusted balances ascertained by the accounting officers of the Treasury, and we have put the appropriation in the exact language of the estimates, as the Senator will see if he will turn to the estimates.

Mr. MITCHELL. I have the estimates before me. In the first case it states this sum to be the balance due the deputy surveyor under contract of May 4, 1871. The contract was in 1871.

Mr. ALLISON. What page is that?

Mr. MITCHELL. Page 14; but the amendment says it is a deficiency for the year 1872. I presume the amendment is correct, and I only want to be certain about it.

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, it is intended to cover the exact case.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 398 of section 1, to insert:

For surveying public lands in New Mexico, Arizona, and Nevada, for 1877, $474.30.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 401 of section 1, to insert:

For surveying public and private lands in Arizona, for 1878, $134.81.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 404 of section 1, to insert:

For surveying private land claims in New Mexico, for 1876, $472.83.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 407 of section 1, to insert:

For surveying boundaries of the Round Valley Indian reservation, in California, for 1876, $913.46.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 411 of section 1, to insert:

For contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Idaho, for 1871 and prior years, $299.94.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 415 of section 1, to insert:

For salaries, office of surveyor-general of Arizona, for 1878, $478.17.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 418 of section 1, to insert:

For salaries, office of surveyor-general of California, for 1878, $4,006.69.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 421 of section 1, to insert:

For contingent expenses, office of the surveyor-general of California, for 1878, $479.04.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 424 of section 1, to insert:

For contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Colorado, for 1878, $42.71.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 427 of section 1, to insert:

For contingent expenses, office of surveyor-general of Nevada, for 1877, $548.75.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 430 of section 1, to insert:

Office of surveyor-general of California:

For the following amounts, as per special estimate of the Secretary of the Interior, being for the fiscal year 1879:

For translating, copying, and indexing original Spanish archives, and preserving from destruction originals greatly defaced by time and usage, $10,000.

Mr. SARGENT. The House have inserted that item, which is a very necessary one, in the sundry civil appropriation bill; and it is not necessary, therefore, that it should be incorporated in the deficiency appropriation bill. I ask that the amendment be not concurred in.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, after line 437 of section 1, under the head of "Office of surveyor-general of California," to insert:

For furnishing township plats, maps, and descriptive notes of lands surveyed in former years but not furnished to local land offices, $8,000.

For the purchase of an iron safe for original Spanish archives, $1,200.

For representing one thousand and mineral surveys on official township plats, $5,000.

For bringing up arrears in draughting and other work in relation to private land claims, $3,000; in all, $27,200.

Mr. SARGENT. The footing now must be corrected in the last line of the amendment. Ten thousand dollars taken off would leave $17,200.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That correction will be made.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 45 of section 1, to insert:

For defraying the expenses of the Supreme Court and circuit and district courts of the United States, including the District of Columbia, and also for jurors and witnesses, and expenses of suits in which the United States are concerned, of prosecutions for offenses committed against the United States, and for the safe-keeping of prisoners, and for defraying the expenses which have been and may be incurred in the enforcement of the act approved February 28, 1871, entitled "An act to amend an act approved May 31, 1870, entitled 'An act to enforce the rights of citizens of the United States to vote in the several States of this Union, and for other purposes,' or any acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $250,000.

Mr. WITHERS. Mr. President, that amendment does not meet with the unanimous concurrence of the committee. It provides $250,000 for the payment of United States marshals in addition to large appropriations which have already been made. While I do not desire to go into the general subject now and discuss this whole matter, I ask that the yeas and nays may be taken upon the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ALLISON. May I suggest to the Senator from Virginia and the Senator from Kentucky, as the yeas and nays have been ordered and as this amendment will likely lead to debate, that we have common consent to pass it over until we have gone through with the other amendments?

Mr. WITHERS. I have no objection, if I can have unanimous consent to withdraw the call for the yeas and nays, to pass over the amendment informally and consider it afterward.

Mr. BECK. We can come back to it.

Mr. ALLISON. Let it be passed over informally, and finish the other amendments, so that we can make more rapid progress with the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection to the arrangement proposed.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations, after line 473 of section 1, was to strike out the following clause:

That hereafter it shall not be lawful for the same person to hold at the same time the offices of clerk of the district and circuit court of the United States; and no such clerk or his deputy shall be appointed a receiver or master in chancery by any such courts.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Navy Department," to insert, after line 522 of section 1:

To pay John W. Bigelow for provisions for the fiscal year 1877, $15,375.40.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 525 of section 1, to insert:

To pay James D. Thornton, attorney at law, San Francisco, for professional services rendered at Mare Island to the Navy Department, the sum of $400.

To pay J. H. W. Riley, of San Francisco, stenographer, for services at Mare Island navy-yard, $382.40.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 532 of section 1, to insert:

To pay William H. C. Ellis, attorney at law, Norfolk, Virginia, for professional services, the sum of $500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 535 of section 1, to insert:

To pay W. Cramp & Sons for iron furnished the Bureau of Construction and Repair, under contracts of October 2, 1874, and April 5, 1875, $12,353.41.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 541 of section 1, to insert:

To pay A. H. Lindsay for timber furnished the Bureau of Construction and Repair, $7,830.51.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 548 of section 1, to increase the item "for pay and traveling and general expenses of the Army for the fiscal year 1879" from $700,000 to $900,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after the word "seventy-nine" in line 573 of section 1, to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That so much of the act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and for other purposes, approved June 20, 1878, which makes an appropriation for the expenses of the Reform School of the District of Columbia, shall not be considered as modifying or repealing the thirteenth section of the act entitled "An act revising and amending the various acts establishing and relating to the Reform School of the District of Columbia," approved May 3, 1876.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Miscellaneous," after line 609 of section 1, to insert:

Smithsonian Institution: For the preservation of the specimens of the United States surveying and exploring expeditions, 1879, $4,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 613 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Joint Committee on the Library to pay the compensation due John A. Graham, as disbursing agent of the Library of Congress, for the two fiscal years 1875 and 1876, for which he received no pay, $800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 618 of section 1, to insert:

To pay R. M. Hanson, as superintendent of the building occupied by the Commissary-General of Subsistence for 1875, $250.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 622 of section 1, to insert:

To pay John A. Torrence the sum of $458.95, the amount due him as receiver of public moneys at Harrison, Arkansas: Provided, That of this sum $164.55 shall be credited to his account as disbursing agent by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury, and the remainder paid to him.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill to page 27.

Mr. ALLISON. I call the attention of Senators to a little misprint or misarrangement at this point of the bill. Senators will see that there is a transposition of the pages after page 26.

Mr. BECK. There is one page omitted there.

Mr. ALLISON. No; it is not omitted; it will be found transposed, so that 28 appears before 27; that is all.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "House of Representatives," to insert after line 655 of section 1:

To pay E. B. Blake, jr., for services under the Doorkeeper, from February 1, 1878, up to and including June 30, 1878, at $2.50 per day, $375.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 660 in the items for the House of Representatives, to insert:

To pay Charles J. Wiener for services as clerk to the Committee on Printing during the recess of Congress, in the year 1878, said committee being authorized by resolution of the House to sit during the recess, thirty days, at $6 per day, $180.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 666 of section 1, to insert:

Senate:
For horses and mail-wagons, $400.
For furniture and repairs, $2,000.
For pay of folders, $1,300.
For packing boxes, $170.
For miscellaneous items, that is to say: For expenses of Committee on Transportation Routes to the Seaboard, in taking testimony concerning claim of James B. Eads; Committee on Agriculture, taking testimony concerning cattle diseases; select committee on claims of citizens against Nicaragua; select committee concerning removal of Cheyenne Indians; compensation of Joseph Segar; Committee on the District of Columbia, inquiring as to plan of sewerage in the District; and sundry other expenses of the Senate, $27,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 682 of section 1, to insert:

That the sum of $10,000 be, and the same hereby is, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, which sum shall be placed to the credit of the contingent fund of the Senate, to be applied toward defraying the expenses of such investigations and inquiries as have already been, or may hereafter be, directed by the Senate during the Forty-fifth Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 689 of section 1, to insert:

For payment to H. C. Creary, for services as a page in the Senate from December 17, 1878, to March 31, 1879, at $2.50 per day, $262.50.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 694 of section 1, to insert:

For payment to C. H. West, for services as a page in the Senate from December 14, 1878, to March 31, 1879, at $2.50 per day, $270.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 699 of section 1, to insert:

For payment to Lord Harleston, as a special messenger on the floor of the Senate from December 2, 1878, to March 31, 1879, at the rate of $1,440 per annum, $477.39.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 705 of section 1, to insert:

To pay Howard French as clerk in the Sergeant-at-Arms' office during the fiscal year 1879, at the same rate as committee clerks, such sum as may be necessary for that purpose is hereby appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 710 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay to Fillmore Beall, J. C. Robertson, and Daniel Shepperd, each for twenty-six days' services as clerks to Senate committees in the second session of the Forty-fourth Congress, at the rate of $6 per day, $468; this being the difference between four months' pay, as authorized by the act of August 15, 1876, and the amounts actually received by these parties.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 719 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay George W. Wales for clerical services rendered to the Select Committee on the Tenth Census for the month of November, 1878, $180.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. At that point I wish to offer an amendment. I move to insert, after line 723:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay George P. Bradstreet for clerical service rendered the committee of the Senate to inquire into the matters touching the late presidential election in Louisiana, the sum of $60.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 723 of section 1, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay to H. T. Burrows for his services as a special messenger of the Senate during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, the sum of $991.30; the same being the salary of a messenger, less the amount already received by him on account of said services.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 730 of section 1, to insert:

That the employees of the Senate who have served during the present fiscal year shall be paid their respective salaries out of the fund already appropriated for such service from the time they entered upon their duties until the time of their taking the oath required by law.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 735 of section 1, to insert:

That the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House of Representatives, respectively, pay to the 4th of April, 1879, the usual per diem allowance to all clerks of committees, messengers, pages, and other employees of the Senate and House of Representatives not having a yearly salary, in the employ of the respective Houses on the 4th day of March, 1879, and the same shall be payable on the last-named date; and a sufficient sum to carry the foregoing into effect is hereby appropriated.

Mr. GARLAND. In line 737, I move to strike out the word "fourth" and insert "thirtieth;" so as to read: "pay to the 30th of April."

Mr. EDMUNDS. What does that mean?

Mr. GARLAND. I understand that it has been the custom to pay the messengers and clerks specified in the clause under a general rule. It makes but a very small difference to extend the pay to the latter part of the month, and therefore I move to insert the 30th of April.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 745 of section 1, to insert:

That when any duty is imposed upon a committee of the Senate involving expenses which are ordered to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of the committee charged with such duty, the receipt of the chairman of such committee for any sum paid to him or his order out of said contingent fund by the Secretary of the Senate shall be taken and passed by the accounting officers of the Treasury as a full and sufficient voucher; but it shall be the duty of such chairman, as soon as practicable, to furnish vouchers in detail for the disbursement of such moneys to the Secretary of the Senate, who shall file them with the accounting officers aforesaid; and this provision shall apply to all cases in which orders of the Senate have already been made.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I make the point of order that that is general legislation upon an appropriation bill, and I object to it accordingly.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not think that can be regarded as legislation. It is a mere method of directing the keeping of the accounts of the committees of this body. It is a mere change of the method. I do not think it can be regarded as legislation.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It is a very dangerous provision on its merits, but that has nothing to do with the question I raise.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. MERRIMON in the chair.) The Chair thinks that the exception is well taken.

Mr. EDMUNDS. There is no doubt about it.

Mr. ALLISON. That this amendment is legislation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks so. If the Senator desires, the Chair will submit the question to the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the Chair will do so. This is a mere direction to the officers of the Senate as to the method of expending money already appropriated.

Mr. CONKLING. Will the Senator state the change it makes?

Mr. ALLISON. When a committee is charged with a duty now, under existing law, it is necessary for the Secretary of the Senate to send with that committee, wherever it may go, an officer with funds, in order to disburse the necessary expenses of the committee. Even in the case of the funeral of a Senator it is impossible to conduct the necessary expenses without sending along from the Secretary's office a disbursing officer.

The object of this amendment is simply to put upon the chairmen of the respective committees, who are really charged with these expenditures, and who must certify to every expenditure or every voucher for an expenditure, the responsibility of accounting for this money. It seems to me that it is a wise provision, a necessary one, and that it in no sense changes existing law, so far as the appropriations are concerned provided for in this bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not concur with the Senator from Iowa as to the propriety of this amendment in itself, but that has nothing to do with the question of order. We have got along for more than ninety years under the law as it stands, as to the way the public money shall be disbursed; and I, with my present information, am quite unwilling to make a change of this kind, if it were in order; but that is apart from what I have to say.

The rule says that no amendment which proposes general legislation to a general appropriation bill, or whatever the phrase is, shall be in order. This amendment proposes to regulate for all time to come, until it is repealed, a method of disbursing the public moneys, not merely this appropriation. There is not any appropriation of this sort at all in connection with it, but it is a general regulation to stand as long as any law of the Republic stands, that is, until it is repealed. If this is not legislating on an appropriation bill I confess—probably it is my own fault—that I am quite incapable of understanding what is. If the Senate thinks that this does not fall within the rule, very well. I only ask the yeas and nays upon the question of order, so that we may have a solemn determination of the Senate as to what is and what is not legislation upon an appropriation bill.

Mr. ALLISON. I will modify the amendment in order to avoid the point of order—

Mr. EDMUNDS. The Senator cannot modify the amendment when a question of order is pending.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Committee on Appropriations report the amendment contained between lines 746 and 759, inclusive. The Senator from Vermont makes the point of order that this proposed amendment embodies a proposition of general legislation and therefore is not in order. The Chair will submit the question of order to the Senate.

Mr. CONKLING. Mr. President, when I heard this provision read I mistook it. When I heard the Senator from Iowa state it I inferred from his statement that it was much broader than it is. I venture to call the attention of the Senate to the fact, if I understand it aright now, that it simply provides that the receipts of the chairman of a committee for any sum of money paid to his order shall be taken as a voucher. If I am right in that, it is a provision touching the contingent fund of the Senate, provision for which, and for the disposition of which, is made by law, which this amendment does not change.

at all. It provides that touching that fund a certain voucher here described, to wit, the receipt of the chairman of a committee, shall be accepted as a voucher in keeping the account of that fund.

Mr. President, I cannot say by my vote that that is general legislation. If it is, and yet the provision be as restricted as I think, I know not what could be done on an appropriation bill beyond saying that so much money is devoted to a given purpose. If you add to it that it shall be devoted only upon compliance with a certain condition, that would make it general legislation on an appropriation bill, according to the view now taken. It seems to me that when you are appropriating $10,000 to be expended by the marshal of the northern district of New York in paying the fees of witnesses, it does not become general legislation if you add that he shall take a receipt, with a subscribing witness, from each one of the persons to whom the money is paid. That I submit would not make it general legislation. If not, then I do not see how it can be general legislation to say of a fund provided by law, the contingent fund of the Senate, the way in which the fund is to be devoted being prescribed by law, that the receipt of a chairman of a committee of a portion of that fund paid to him shall be treated as a voucher. It seems to me that that is so much matter of detail, so much matter of incident, I cannot say it is general legislation within the meaning of the rule.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, if this clause related only to a particular sum of money that we were appropriating by this bill, and merely regulated the expenditure of that sum of money, there would be very great force in the observations of the Senator from New York; but I submit to him that the clause does not stand in that way. It is a provision of an enduring character which has no relation so far as anybody can see to any appropriation in this bill; or, if it has, it goes further and regulates for all the future the method in which the public moneys shall be disbursed that are credited to the contingent fund of the Senate. That is all I wish to say; and I do not care which way it is decided so that it makes a law for us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question before the Senate is: Shall the point of order raised by the Senator from Vermont be sustained?

Mr. HAMLIN. I submit that the Chair should put the question in just the opposite way to that stated by him. The question should be, Is the amendment in order?

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is right.

Mr. HAMLIN. Those who think it is in order will vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state the question in that shape. The question is: Is the proposed amendment in order? On this question the yeas and nays have been demanded.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 35, nays 7; as follows:

YEAS—35.

Allison,	Conover,	Howe,	Rollins,
Bailey,	Davis of W. Va.,	Ingalls,	Saunders,
Beck,	Dorsey,	Kernan,	Sharon,
Blaine,	Eaton,	Kirkwood,	Spencer,
Cameron of Pa.,	Garland,	Lamar,	Teller,
Cameron of Wis.,	Grover,	Matthews,	Wallace,
Cockrell,	Hamlin,	Maxey,	Whyte,
Coke,	Harris,	Mitchell,	Withers,
Conkling,	Hereford,	Morgan,

NAYS—7.

Davis of Illinois,	Edmunds,	McDonald,	Morrill,
Dennis,	McCreery,	Merrimon,

ABSENT—34.

Anthony,	Dawes,	Kellogg,	Sargent,
Barnum,	Eustis,	McMillan,	Saunders,
Bayard,	Ferry,	McPherson,	Shields,
Booth,	Gordon,	Oglesby,	Thurman,
Brace,	Hill,	Paddock,	Voorhees,
Burnside,	Hoar,	Patterson,	Wadleigh,
Butler,	Johnston,	Plumb,	Windom,
Chaffee,	Jones of Florida,	Randolph,
Chandler,	Jones of Nevada,	Ransom,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate decides that the proposed amendment is in order. The question before the Senate is upon agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to; there being on a division—ayes 37, noes 4.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 759 of section 1, to insert:

That Senators elected, whose term of office begins March 4, 1879, and whose credentials in due form of law have been presented in the Senate, or may be deposited with the Secretary of the Senate, may receive their compensation monthly from the beginning of their term until the beginning of the first session of the next Congress.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I make the same point of order that I made before, that this is general legislation upon an appropriation bill.

Mr. ALLISON. I have no doubt that the point of order on this particular amendment is well taken.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not think it is, if the other was not; but I should like to see the Senate consistent.

Mr. ALLISON. It undoubtedly is legislation, but it relates to the convenience of Senators, and the committee after consideration inserted the provision. Of course if it is knocked out on a point of order, that ends it.

Mr. BLAINE. It is giving Senators just the same conveniences that are extended to members of the House and which have been extended to them for years.

Mr. ALLISON. No Senator whose term begins on the 4th of March, 1879, can draw any pay after the 4th of March until the beginning of the next session of Congress unless this provision is agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. If the former point of order was not well taken, this is not, in my opinion. I may be wrong about that, and I must be, because the gentleman in charge of the bill says I am. I have recently seen in the newspapers a proposition as coming from some law officer of the Government to the effect that the members of the House stood in the same category, and until they were sworn in they could not draw their pay. I do not know whether that is the law or not. I do not know what the law is about this question, whether this provision be in or out. I only make the point of order, supposing it to fall within exactly the same category as the preceding proposition to enable the Senate to decide upon it, and I do not wish to debate it at all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order but will submit the point of order to the Senate, if any one desires.

Mr. ALLISON. I think it is clearly out of order.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not think it is. I think it had better be submitted to the Senate, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Committee on Appropriations propose the amendment embraced in line 760 to line 766, inclusive. The Senator from Vermont raises the point of order that this proposed amendment embodies general legislation and is not therefore in order. The Chair will submit the question to the Senate.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I merely wish to say that I think it is in order in obedience to the decision of the Senate on the last vote taken.

Mr. BLAINE. Then the Senator from Vermont derives his views of parliamentary law from what some other person votes, and not from his own convictions.

Mr. EDMUNDS. No, Mr. President, I do not by any means; but I derive my views of the construction of the rules of the Senate from the votes of the Senate itself, upon the yeas and nays.

Mr. BLAINE. I have always said that the rule in the Senate was, that Senators voted that things were in order which they were in favor of and that they voted against the things being in order which they were not in favor of; but I never saw so ingenious a reason given before as the Senator from Vermont gives in this instance.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The Senator is entirely mistaken again, not in what he has said, because he has said so and has acted so. I have not said so and have endeavored not to act so; but when the Senate has settled the construction of the law of the Senate I am willing to follow it.

Mr. BLAINE. No, the Senator from Vermont never acted so; only he put on an appropriation bill the very election laws which another body assembled in this city is trying to get off on an appropriation bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The Senator is entirely mistaken about that.

Mr. BLAINE. He voted for it.

Mr. COCKRELL. I voted that the preceding amendment reported by the committee was in order, and I voted to reject that amendment when it came up upon its merits. Therefore, the Senator from Maine does not find that every Senator votes in the way he indicated. I voted that it was in order, and yet I voted against its passage. I believe that this amendment is in order, and I shall vote for its passage.

Mr. BLAINE. The Senator from Maine never said that a Senator was bound to vote for everything that he thought was in order. The Senator from Missouri has twisted that proposition around into a little more generalized form than I intended to put it.

Mr. CONKLING. By way of calming the storm, may I inquire what part of the bill it is that is objected to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposed amendment of the Committee on Appropriations embraced between lines 760 and 766.

Mr. CONKLING. And what is the point of order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is that the proposed amendment embodies general legislation and contravenes the rule, and is therefore not in order. The question before the Senate is, Is the proposed amendment in order? [Putting the question.] The yeas have it, and the Senate decides that the proposed amendment is in order. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to call the attention of the Senator in charge to the fact that this amendment only provides for Senators. Is the Senator absolutely sure that the settled law is that members-elect of the House of Representatives can now draw their pay between the 4th of March and the meeting of Congress?

Mr. ALLISON. They can, by general law.

Mr. BLAINE. Unless their seats are contested and the notice of contest filed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Very well; I take that as proof of the fact, which I very much doubt.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 775 of section 1, to increase the item "for transportation of the mails by railroads, for 1878 and previous years," from $166,392.27 to $284,799.05.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think that is a very large change and if it is not out of order I should be glad to have the Senator in charge of the bill explain how this sum has grown from $166,000 to $284,000?

Mr. ALLISON. The Postmaster-General reports to the committee, as will be seen by Executive Document No. 46, that all these accounts, aggregating $284,799.05, have passed the accounting officers of the Treasury. The committee, therefore, inserted the exact amount provided for in the estimate.

Mr. CONKLING. How came these accounts?

Mr. ALLISON. They were accounts that were regularly passed by the accounting officers for the transportation of the mails, year by year.

Mr. CONKLING. The honorable Senator fails to gratify my curiosity for this reason: I inferred that by abolishing the franking privilege and keeping it abolished, and that abolition has been recommended in the Senate here from time to time, the mails were to be carried very cheaply. I wonder that with the franking privilege dispensed with there should be such a deficiency for carrying the mails. Indeed from some of the accounts I heard I rather inferred that the mails would go very much themselves, and perhaps we should get something back for the privilege of carrying them. It seems now that the deficiency grows and grows the more we do not have the franking privilege.

Mr. BLAINE. The trouble is we have just that part of the franking privilege that loads down the mails, and we do not have that which would be of any value.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after the word "Government," in line 796 of section 1, to insert:

Nor prevent the payment of moneys found due said companies respectively, under the decisions of the courts now or hereafter made, or which may be otherwise payable according to law: And provided further, That this paragraph shall not be so construed as to be a disposition of any moneys due or to become due to said companies respectively, or to in any way affect their rights under existing laws, it being only intended to enable the proper accounting officers to state on the books of the Treasury the accounts between the Government and said companies respectively.

So as to read:

That for the proper adjustment of the accounts of the Union Pacific, Central Pacific, Kansas Pacific, Western Pacific, and Sioux City and Pacific Railroad Companies, respectively, for services which have been or may be hereafter performed for the Government for transportation of the Army and transportation of the mails, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to make such entries upon the books of the Department as will carry to the credit of said companies the amounts so earned or to be earned by them during each fiscal year and withhold under the provisions of section 5260 of the Revised Statutes and of the act of Congress approved May 7, 1878: Provided, That this shall not authorize the expenditure of any money from the Treasury, nor change the method now provided by law for the auditing of such claims against the Government, nor prevent the payment of moneys found due said companies respectively, &c.

Mr. EDMUNDS. In view of recent legislation, this amendment recommended by the committee deserves the very careful attention of the Senate, if it wishes to preserve the existing legislation. The honorable Senator from Ohio [Mr. THURMAN] who sits on the other side of the Chamber, who had charge of the laws that were passed about sinking funds, &c., not being in his seat, and who has sundry papers that were submitted to the Judiciary Committee on the subject, I am not able to state precisely the suggestions that ought to be made about this business; but I venture to move to amend the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations by striking out in lines 798 and 799 the words "now or hereafter made," and to insert in lieu of those words "heretofore rendered;" so as to read:

Nor prevent the payment of moneys found due said companies respectively under the decisions of the courts heretofore rendered, or which may be otherwise payable according to law.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not know exactly the effect of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont; I was a little surprised that he did not make the point of order on this amendment that it was legislation.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Because the Senate has decided that nothing is legislation that can be put on an appropriation bill.

Mr. ALLISON. The object of the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to leave the law just as it is now, it being stated by the accounting officers of the Treasury that they only desire this legislation for the purpose of squaring up the books and making credits and debits, &c. Therefore the committee undertook to provide an amendment which should accomplish that purpose and no other. The Committee on Appropriations of course cannot be as familiar with the existing laws, and are not supposed to be as familiar with the decisions of the courts, as the Judiciary Committee is supposed to be. Therefore our purpose was to leave all these questions just as they stand according to existing law, and not legislate in this appropriation bill either for or against these companies.

That was the object of the committee, and therefore this provision was inserted having that object in view. It rather seems to me that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont does turn this paragraph into legislation, which it was the object of the committee to avoid.

Mr. EDMUNDS. In obedience to the suggestion of the Senator from Iowa and the decision of the Senator from Maine, I will withdraw the amendment that I proposed, and will make the point of order that this is legislation, and let the Senate decide that first.

Mr. BLAINE. Then, does the Senator from Vermont mean that if a piece of general legislation, which the whole of this is if any is, comes from the House, no amendment to that, however germane, is in order? Is that the point the Senator makes now? Because, if this paragraph, beginning at line 780, has legislation in it, it begins at the beginning and terminates with the end; there is no one part of it any more legislation than another. Then the point of the honorable Senator is that if the House send us never so general a piece of legislation we cannot amend it in the slightest particular. I only want to have the point clearly understood before we vote on it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I only want to get the decision of the Senate, and will not waste time in replying.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Committee on Appropriations propose to amend the bill, beginning in line 796 and including all the matter down to line 807. The Senator from Vermont raises the point of order that this proposed amendment is not in order because it contains a provision of general legislation, and therefore contravenes the rule of the Senate.

Mr. BLAINE. I think it is well worth while to emphasize the fact that this is the first time, certainly in my observation, that the point has ever been made that a germane amendment to a piece of general legislation coming from the House is not in order. This is not general legislation originated by the Senate; it is merely a proposed modification of general legislation that comes to us from the House. So that this is quite a new and quite a distinct point the Senator here raises down, although I suppose if we vote him down on that, he will never make a point on it again as long as he is in the Senate. That is what he announced on the other question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Is the proposed amendment in order?

Mr. ALLISON. I understand the Senator from Vermont to make the point of order that the whole paragraph is legislation, from line 780 to the end.

Mr. EDMUNDS. No, sir, I make the point of order that the amendment proposed by the committee, in the language of the rule, is general legislation on a general appropriation bill.

Mr. BLAINE. One single word more. The point the Senator from Vermont makes is that when a whole paragraph of general legislation comes to us from the House, it may appropriate $100,000, an amendment is not in order to change that sum; that no amendment to that which is general legislation is in order because it is vitiated from the beginning; and we are not at liberty to make any change even in a proposition of general legislation that comes from the House. This is a little steeper proposition than I have ever yet seen made in the Senate.

Mr. CONKLING. Mr. President, the word in Rule 29 which puzzles me in its application to this case is the word "proposes."

No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill.

If the word "proposes" is to be supposed to import "originates," "inaugurates," "brings forward," general legislation, I do not see why the point of the Senator from Vermont is not well taken. On the contrary, if it means that no matter whether we find general legislation in a bill or not we shall do nothing with it whatever, then the application of the principle must be different. In other words, if I can state it more clearly, if the rule means that we must not originate general legislation in the Senate, then the answer in this case is perfect because the legislation comes from the House. If, on the contrary, the rule means that no matter how much it comes from the House we cannot do anything with it if it is general legislation, then I do not see that there is any answer at all to be made. I suppose to give practical effect to this rule it must mean that if a bill comes to us containing general legislation we may strike it out, if we choose, but if we do not, and retain it, we are not bound to agree to it in a form which we must consider pernicious when by changing it we could improve it.

Therefore I must be compelled to vote that this clause being in the bill as it came from the House the rule does not prohibit an amendment to it.

Mr. DAWES. In confirmation of what has been stated by the Senator from New York, on a motion some times in the other branch it used to be the custom to suspend the rules and permit the introduction of independent legislation upon an appropriation bill. It was the universal practice after the independent legislation was introduced to amend it in any way that the House saw fit, provided that that amendment was germane to the proposition that was introduced by the suspension of the rules. The suspension of the rules permitted the introduction of the independent legislation, and that independent legislation when the House once had jurisdiction of it carried with it every modification of it that was germane. I think there cannot be any question about that.

Mr. ALLISON. One word on this proposition. So far from this amendment proposing legislation it proposes the very reverse. The Committee on Appropriations when it came to this provision in the bill was in doubt whether it was intended as a legislative provision or whether it was intended merely as a matter of book-keeping in the Treasury. If the latter, then of course it was easily understood; but if it was intended to take up in an appropriation bill anew the complicated questions with the Pacific Railways, the Committee on Appropriations wanted to turn that matter over to the Committee on the Judiciary and did not seek to take hold of it; and therefore the committee called before it the officer having this matter in charge, and he said the object was to enable the proper officers of the Treasury to settle up and adjust these accounts by making debits and credits; that there was no purpose of legislation here. The committee accordingly provided or intended to provide by the amendment that there should be no legislation. Now the Senator from Vermont says that the amendment is legislation because it undertakes to construe the previous provision so as not to be legislation. I do not understand how it can be possible that this amendment proposes legislation on an appropriation bill when in fact it proposes the very reverse.

Mr. DAWES. I suppose, Mr. President, that if after the word "Treasury," in the eight hundred and fifth line, the words "according to existing law" were inserted, there could not be any question at all.

Mr. CONKLING. Does it not mean that now?

Mr. DAWES. I was going to say that I suppose it means precisely that now, and that these words would not make it any more clear; but if those words were there, there would be an express statement that it is according to existing law.

Mr. EDMUNDS. May I ask the Senator from Massachusetts when he talks about existing laws, what he thinks of lines 798 and 799, in these words:

Under the decisions of the courts now or hereafter made.

Is not that making provision for the future?

Mr. DAWES. I suppose the decisions hereafter made will be in conformity with existing law.

Mr. BLAINE. They will be binding.

Mr. EDMUNDS. We agree that we will spend money from the Treasury accordingly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question before the Senate is, Is the proposed amendment in order?

The question was put, and decided in the affirmative.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Now, Mr. President, I move to amend in lines 798 and 799 by striking out the words "now or hereafter made," and inserting the words "already made," so as only to bind the Treasury of the United States to conform to existing decisions in the courts, leaving it to some future Congress to determine what shall be done under the acts which give us authority to alter, amend, and repeal in the future.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Vermont to the amendment to strike out in line 798 the words "now or hereafter made," and insert "already made."

Mr. BLAINE. Does the Senator from Vermont mean by that that the officers are only to be bound by decisions already rendered, and that they are to disregard those that may hereafter be rendered? Is that the idea? It seems to me that language means that the Treasury Department is to go along upon the law as now construed; but if it should happen to be construed differently a year or two years hence, then it is not to obey it; is that what it means?

Mr. DAWES. They cannot keep the accounts, and they come here and get a rule prescribed.

Mr. BLAINE. And that rule is that they shall obey the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It does not say the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. ALLISON. Would not the Senator from Vermont accomplish all he desires by simply striking out the words, without inserting anything, unless he means to legislate?

Mr. EDMUNDS. No, Mr. President. With some knowledge that experience and study have forced upon the committee of which I am a member, I make this motion and submit it to the judgment of the Senate. Its judgment will undoubtedly be right; but I do not want hereafter anybody to say that these companies have undermined the present provisions of law by contrivances of this character.

Mr. ALLISON. Do I understand the Senator from Vermont to intimate in any sense that this amendment does undermine any existing law?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think it does, and that is why I make the motion, to guard against any contingency.

Mr. ALLISON. I should be glad to have the Senator point it out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Vermont, in line 798 to strike out the words "now or hereafter made," and insert in lieu thereof the words "already made."

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 4, noes 20; no quorum voting.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 17, nays 25; as follows:

YEAS—17.

Anthony,	Edmunds,	Merrimon,	Whyte,
Burnside,	Hamlin,	Ogleby,	Withers,
Cockrell,	McCreery,	Ransom,
Davis of Illinois,	McDonald,	Thurman,
Davis of W. Va.,	McPherson,	Wadleigh,

NAYS—25.

Allison,	Cameron of Wis.,	Dawes,	Gordon,
Beck,	Coke,	Eaton,	Grover,
Blaine,	Conkling,	Garland,	Harris,

Hoar,
Kernan,
Matthews,
Maxey,

Mitchell,
Plumb,
Rollins,
Sargent,

Saulsbury,
Samners,
Teller,
Voorhees,

Windom.

ABSENT—34.

Bailey,
Barnum,
Bayard,
Booth,
Bruce,
Butler,
Cameron of Pa.,
Chaffee,
Chandler,

Conover,
Dennis,
Dorsey,
Eustis,
Ferry,
Hersford,
Hill,
Howe,
Ingalls,

Johnston,
Jones of Florida,
Jones of Nevada,
Kellogg,
Kirkwood,
Lamar,
McMillan,
Morgan,
Morrill,

Paddock,
Patterson,
Randolph,
Sharon,
Shields,
Spencer,
Wallace.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move to amend this amendment on page 34, line 803, by adding after the word "rights," these words "or duties or the rights of the United States," so that it will read:

And provided further, That this paragraph shall not be so construed as to be a disposition of any moneys due or to become due to said companies respectively, or to, in any way, affect their rights or duties or the rights of the United States.

Mr. ALLISON. No objection to that; that is all right.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move to amend on page 34, line 802, by inserting after the word "to" where it follows the word "due" the words "or from;" so as to read:

Shall not be so construed as to be a disposition of any moneys due or to become due to or from said companies respectively.

So as to leave the existing law reciprocal on both sides.

Mr. ALLISON. That is right.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the committee as amended.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Before that is put, I wish to ask that after the word "duties" in the amendment that has been inserted, there should be a comma, so that the words "affect their rights or duties," will apply to the companies, and "the rights of the United States" will stand as a distributive clause. I suppose there is no objection to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the proposed amendment will be considered as adopted.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill.

The next amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 819 of section 1, after "postal clerks," to strike out "seventeen" and insert "twenty-five;" in line 820, after "route agents," to strike out "six thousand five hundred" and insert "ten thousand;" in line 821, after "local mail agents," to strike out "one thousand five hundred" and insert "two thousand;" and in line 823, after the word "all," to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "thirty-seven;" so as to make the clause read:

For railway postal clerks, $25,000; for route agents, $10,000; for local mail agents, $2,000, being for the year 1879; in all, $37,000, under House Executive Document No. 77, third session of the Forty-fifth Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. The next paragraph I am instructed by the committee to ask non-concurrence in. It is unnecessary to read it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposed amendment, from line 827 to line 841, will be considered as rejected if there be no objection. The Chair hears none, and it is rejected.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, to insert, after line 841 of section 1:

For preparation and publication of post-route maps, being for the year 1879, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 844 of section 1, to insert:

That the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department be, and he is hereby, authorized and instructed to credit the account of D. C. Casey, late postmaster at Hot Springs, Arkansas, with the sum of $102.64.

Mr. DAWES. I suggest that there ought to be something there to show what that credit is for.

Mr. ALLISON. It is to credit his account for that sum.

Mr. DAWES. Why is it necessary?

Mr. GARLAND. I can explain that.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Arkansas is familiar with it.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I can explain it. It was before the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. DAWES. I do not desire any explanation myself. The fact that it came from the committee is a sufficient guarantee; but I suggested that there should be something in the phraseology, something in the language of the statute to show what it is for. They might credit him for that sum and he show hereafter that that sum applied to something which the Government did not intend it should be applied for.

Mr. GARLAND. Mr. Casey was appointed postmaster by the President during the recess of the Senate and when the Senate convened it failed to confirm him. He went on and performed the duties of the office as if he had been confirmed. His pay would have amounted for the term he held the office to the sum of $102.65.

Mr. DAWES. Suppose we add then "for salary before confirmation."

Mr. GARLAND. I am perfectly willing to do that.

Mr. DAWES. There should be something like that to show what it is, to identify it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be so modified unless there be objection.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I wish to make a point of order in order to take the judgment of the Senate, that this is, as is stated, to provide for a private claim which the rule forbids. I will add that this provision as now stated is to pay for a salary which was earned in direct contravention of law, I believe, but I may be mistaken about that. I think, however, the tenure-of-office act provides that in cases of this kind the person shall not be entitled to the salary of the office. If it was a case of suspension and the appointment of another person, I am quite clear that is the law. If it was a case of a vacancy and an appointment that failed to be confirmed, then under the Constitution, I think it perfectly right to pay this gentleman. Perhaps the Senator from Arkansas can state what the history of the case was.

Mr. GARLAND. As I stated before, Mr. Casey, the party named here, was appointed in the recess of Congress postmaster at Hot Springs.

Mr. EDMUNDS. To fill a vacancy that occurred, or in the place of somebody who was suspended?

Mr. GARLAND. To fill a vacancy that had occurred by the expiration of the office of Mr. Walsh, who preceded him.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Now may I ask the Senator at what time the term of office of Walsh expired?

Mr. GARLAND. I do not recollect the precise date, but during the recess of Congress.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Then I withdraw the point of order, although I think the point was well taken, but as stated it appears to be a just thing to do, and I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. GARLAND. The matter was referred to the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, and he considered it a just claim on the part of Casey's representatives. The man has died since then. He required some legislation by Congress, and the bill was introduced by myself and referred to the Post-Office Committee, who reported it unanimously; but on account of the lateness of the session it was agreed to refer it to the Committee on Appropriations, and it comes in this form to the Senate in this bill. I am willing to adopt the suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts to show on the face of the bill what the claim is for.

Mr. ALLISON. Insert the words "before rejection as postmaster."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That modification will be made if there be no objection. The Chair hears no objection.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill. The next amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations was, in section 2, line 40, after the word "revenue," to strike out "$3,125.36" and insert "$3,403.14;" so as to read:

For salaries and expenses of supervisors and subordinate officers of internal revenue, $3,403.14.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, after line 45, to insert:

For detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons guilty of violating the internal-revenue laws, or conniving at the same, including payments for information and detection of such violations, $24,130.20, being a deficiency for 1878 and prior years.

Mr. BECK. I ask that that be passed over until the other amendments are acted on.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Why pass it over? The Senate is as full now as it will be.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Kentucky desires to submit some suggestions in reference to the amendment. I suggest to the Senator that we agree to it now pro forma. The bill cannot probably pass to-night, and to-morrow in the Senate he can make his objection and call for a yea-and-nay vote, if he desires it, on the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. BECK. That will be satisfactory to me.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Kentucky consents that this amendment may be agreed to now.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert as line 51 to line 58 of section 2:

The unexpended balance, amounting to $40,000, of the appropriation of $150,000, made by the act of June 14, 1878, to refund and pay back taxes erroneously or illegally assessed or collected under the internal-revenue laws, is hereby continued and made available for the payment of all claims to which the appropriation is applicable.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa whether this provision is intended as it appears on its face, to be a permanent and indefinite appropriation of this $40,000, or whether only the appropriation is continued to be available for the fiscal year?

Mr. ALLISON. It is intended to be available until it is disposed of, although if the Senator desires to confine it to this fiscal year I have no objection. There were $150,000 appropriated for this purpose, I think, in the appropriation bill of 1877, for the fiscal year ending last June. There are about $40,000 remaining, and the Secretary of the Treasury writes a very urgent letter to us asking us to make this available for claims that may be suggested hereafter.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I have no objection to its being made available for the coming fiscal year, that is the fiscal year to which this bill applies.

Mr. ALLISON. The present fiscal year?

Mr. EDMUNDS. The present fiscal year will end on the 30th of June, 1879. The danger of these permanent appropriations, as this would be as it is written, is that claims which have sometimes been rejected are by stress and pressure and all sorts of ways revived until they succeed by one stress and another in exhausting every cent of the money. I think there had better be a limitation. I suggest that to the honorable Senator.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not think there is any danger in that regard. We are appropriating every year more or less for the refunding of taxes illegally collected, and of course if this $40,000 should not be expended during the remainder of this fiscal year it would save an additional appropriation for next year; and I do not think there is any great danger of money being misappropriated under it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think there is some; and in order to take the sense of the Senate I will put it beyond the 30th of June, which is so near at hand, and I will move to amend by inserting after the word "for" at the end of line 56, page 38, the words "and during the present and next fiscal year," so as to carry it to the 30th of June, 1880.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well; I have no objection to that.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill, and read to line 71 of section 2.

Mr. BLAINE. I move to amend by adding at the end of that line:

And the further sum of $2,387.76 is hereby appropriated to pay the amount found due the late surveyor of customs at Portland, Maine, as certified by the Commissioner of Customs to the Secretary of the Treasury as due, subsequent to the Secretary's letter of January 16, 1879.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Is that an amendment of the committee?

Mr. BLAINE. It is an amendment that I have the authority of the committee for offering. I think the Senator will not object to it.

The Secretary of the Treasury says:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,

February 24, 1879.

SIR: I have the honor to state that the claim of Charles J. Talbot, late surveyor of customs at Portland, Maine, for additional compensation from April 19, 1861, to October 31, 1866, has been examined by the accounting officers, and the sum of $2,387.76 found due him, which cannot be paid until the necessary appropriation is made by Congress.

The settlement having been made subsequently to January 16, 1879, the amount required to pay this claim was not included in Executive Document No. 30, Forty-fifth Congress, third session.

Very respectfully,

JOHN SHERMAN, Secretary.

The paragraph which has been read did include the items in the Secretary's letter of January 16 of precisely similar character to this. They are consolidated in the sum of $9,542.58 of exactly the same kind as this.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I believe no point of order that has been made on an appropriation bill at this session, either in respect of legislation or relevancy on private claims, has been sustained. I think this is open to the point of order that it is to provide for the payment of a private claim; but on the other hand it cannot be denied that there are a great many things in this bill both by the way of original text as it came from the House and by way of amendment as it came from the committee, equally liable to this objection. But as the Senate, and rightly as I must suppose, seems to regard these matters as within the rule, it is useless to make the point of order, and I have no disposition to make it under these decisions of the Senate inasmuch as it appears from the statement of the Senator that the claim is a just one; but the whole thing becomes very largely a provision for the payment of private claims.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Maine.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill. The next amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations was, in section 2, after line 181, to insert:

For incidental expenses of the Quartermaster's Department, $7,012.65, as fully set forth in the above executive document.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to insert, as lines 185 to 189 of section 2, the following:

To pay William Allen, late sergeant Company E, First Oregon Mounted Volunteers in Indian war of 1855 and 1856, for one horse lost in the military service of the United States, $115.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Is not that a private claim?

Mr. ALLISON. No, that is a claim passed through the accounting officers regularly, and certified to us by the Comptroller of the Treasury.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Twenty-four years old.

Mr. ALLISON. Just passed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I hope the horse was not so old. [Laughter.]

The amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is one amendment not disposed of, to be found on page 19, embraced between lines 455 and 470 of section 1.

Mr. WHYTE. As that will probably give rise to a long debate, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Nebraska wishes the floor. The committee have some other amendments that have not yet been offered.

Mr. WHYTE. I should like to hear what proposition the Senator from Nebraska has to make before I yield the floor.

Mr. PADDOCK. I desire to call up the resolutions of the House in respect to the memory of the late Frank Welch.

Mr. WHYTE. For that purpose I withdraw my motion to adjourn. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands then that the pending bill is informally laid aside and will be the unfinished business for to-morrow's session.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE FRANK WELCH.

Mr. PADDOCK. Mr. President, I call up the resolutions of the House of Representatives of respect to the memory of the late Hon. FRANK WELCH, member of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolutions will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
February 21, 1879.

Resolved, That this House has heard with profound regret of the death of Hon. FRANK WELCH, late a Representative from the State of Nebraska.

Resolved, That the House do now suspend the consideration of public business, in order to pay proper respect to the memory of the lamented deceased.

Resolved, That in token of regard for the memory of the lamented deceased the members of this House do wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the House do communicate these resolutions to the Senate of the United States.

Resolved, That out of further respect to the memory of the deceased this House do now adjourn.

Mr. PADDOCK. I send resolutions to the desk to be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolutions will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate receives with sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. FRANK WELCH, late a member of the House of Representatives from the State of Nebraska, and tenders to the family and kindred of the deceased the assurance of sympathy under their sad bereavement.

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be directed to transmit to the family of Mr. WELCH a certified copy of these resolutions.

Mr. PADDOCK. Mr. President, I little thought when my late colleague of the House sat near me here listening to the eulogies pronounced in the memorial service for the lamented Morton that only a few months would pass until I should be summoned to speak in his funeral. Verily, it hath been truly written, "In the midst of life we are in death." How often during the past year has this solemn admonition come to us. True, our own immediate brotherhood has been spared during these later months, but the shafts of death have fallen thick and fast among our brethren in the other House. One bereavement has followed another there in quick succession, until in very truth it hath become a House of mourning.

Mr. President, I shall not delay the Senate by an extended memorabilia of our lamented colleague, Representative WELCH. He was born on Bunker Hill, Charlestown, Massachusetts, February 10, 1835; was graduated at the Boston High School, and afterward specially educated and trained as a civil engineer. Soon after embarking in his profession the duties thereof called him into the West, and finally, while yet a very young man, in the year 1857, he established his home at Decatur, Nebraska. Mr. WELCH was a gentleman in the highest and broadest sense of the term—kind, gentle, generous, manly. As might naturally have been expected for a young man possessing such qualities of mind and heart, he rapidly advanced to the front in society, and in affairs in his county and section. He was very soon chosen to represent his district in the council or senate of the territorial Legislature, and a little later was elected to the senate of the first Legislature chosen under the State organization, of which body he was made the presiding officer. He held other positions of honor and of trust under both the Federal and State governments, and in 1876 was elected a member of the Forty-fifth Congress. He represented the largest congressional district in the Union, both as respects territorial extent and population. He was alone in the other House from Nebraska—a State embracing an area of seventy-five thousand square miles, with a population of nearly four hundred thousand—a comparatively new State, having innumerable and varied interests in process of development, dependent largely upon Federal legislation and Federal executive administration for encouragement and protection.

There was put upon him the labor of three men, and by day and by night unceasingly he struggled through the protracted and exciting session of last year to do it all. Mr. WELCH was a man of great energy, industry, and pertinacity of purpose. He would do all required of him although he should know the effort would cost him his life; he did all, and as many another before him in like circumstances had done, he went prematurely to his grave. When the session closed Mr. WELCH returned to his constituency very much worn and broken in health. He needed rest, but he took it not. At once he entered upon an active and an exceedingly laborious political canvass. His physical machinery could not endure the additional strain thus put upon it, and then the end came, soon and swift, but pangless. In the evening of the 4th day of September, 1878, in a public meeting, in the midst of a numerous audience, composed largely of his political friends and admirers whom he was about to address, he was suddenly stricken and fell in instant death. His family—a fond mother, a devoted wife, and three loving children—were absent in a distant Eastern State, and no other of his kindred was present to close the eyes of him who thus in the prime of his manhood went down under a weight of life's burdens too heavy to be longer borne.

Mr. WELCH's re-election was assured, and but for the failure of health, resulting in his premature death, a career of continually increasing honor and usefulness would surely have been his. As a Representative he was honest, sagacious, and faithful to his convictions. In his relations with his constituency he was just, fair, and impartial toward all parties, factions, interests, and sections. As a colleague he was kind, generous, and considerate. I had known Mr. WELCH intimately during all his Nebraska life—nearly a quarter of a century—and I have the warrant that genuine friendship gives to speak of him. Standing before the bier upon which reposed his mortal remains, surrounded by his grief-stricken neighbors and friends, I declared in the sad ceremonial whence his body was borne to its final resting-place that during all these years of our intimacy FRANK WELCH had never, to my knowledge, been guilty of an unkind, an ungenerous, an unmanly act. That declaration, sir, I here repeat. He scorned the low pursuits of malice. The ignoble sentiments of hatred and revenge found no lodgment in his breast, and moved him not even to retaliation for injuries, real or imaginary; while on the other hand every service, however difficult; every sacrifice, however painful, was cheerfully endured by him for the advancement, the protection of the interests of his friends.

Such a man was FRANK WELCH, and such, sir, is the measure of our loss.

Mr. President, it was with no "hollow circumstance of woes," but as one sorrows for a brother lost, as a family in sackcloth mourns when the insatiate archer entering its charmed circle selects for his victim the favorite of the flock, that we, each and all, in the State he had loved so well and served so faithfully, did say peace and farewell to his ashes. At length they bore him from us, and now his ashes mingle with the soil of Massachusetts. To us, sir, who loved FRANK WELCH, and we all did love him; to us who labored with him from the smallest beginnings in the territorial time to the days of stalwart statehood for Nebraska, there is indeed left the bright record of his honorable citizenship, the proud monuments of his public service, the sweet memory of his personal graces, and of his frank and generous nature, the valued example of his earnest life; and these, sir, shall be ours evermore. Remembering this, sir, with such cheerfulness and resignation as we could command, we responded to the appeal of maternal affection and returned to Massachusetts the mortal casket—broken and useless to be sure—which once had held this priceless jewel. On behalf of the young State whose institutions FRANK WELCH helped to mold, I send greetings and grateful acknowledgments to Massachusetts for the valued services of this her son in our upbuilding. But remember, Senators of that grand old Commonwealth, his ashes are ours as well as yours. You received them from us with our love and our tears; you gave them honored sepulture. Now guard them well, we pray you; for when the last trump shall sound, and they who died for liberty on Bunker Hill and the other patriots buried there shall then, in glad obedience, come forth, no nobler spirit will appear than his whose life, commencing in that historic place, was mainly given to the work of development and civilization which resulted in the establishment of a free and prosperous Commonwealth in the distant West, where only a little time before the Indian, undisturbed, "pursued the panting deer," and "the wild fox dug his hole unscared," in a land where no white man had ever dwelt and the arts of peace were unknown.

Mr. SAUNDERS. Mr. President, my colleague has left but little, if anything, for me to say in reference to the life and death of our late associate, Hon. FRANK WELCH. His personal acquaintance with the deceased was longer and perhaps more intimate than mine, and especially prior to his entering upon his official duties as a Representative in Congress; I therefore left it to my colleague to give, as he has so fully and well done—more ably than I could do—more of the particulars of the early business life and of the early trials and triumphs of our late friend. I had known Mr. WELCH about seventeen years; and from the time of his election to the House to the time of his death I was on intimate terms with him, and was strongly impressed with his uniformly amiable disposition, kindness of heart, courteous demeanor, and his unflinching fidelity to his public trusts.

He was possessed of a warm, genial nature and an unrestricted flow of friendship for his fellow-man, which secured for him in life a popularity truly enviable. And now that an early grave has closed over him, the people of our entire Commonwealth mourn over his departure as though it were that of some near and dear relative.

The good and generous qualities of our human nature were blended in his character. He was resolute, courageous, and ardent in all of his pursuits. Unaided and alone he obtained place, and indeed was the architect of his own fortune. He came to Nebraska long before it was admitted into the Union as a State, and at once took part in giving shape to her public institutions and in preparing the Territory for the responsible position she was soon to occupy as one of the independent States of the Union. He represented his district for several sessions in the territorial and State Legislatures, and afterward held the arduous and responsible position of register of one of the United States land offices in Nebraska. Elected to Congress in the fall of 1876 and dying before his term of service had expired, he was thus prematurely prevented from filling the measure of his own aspirations and the hopes of the people who had confided in him their trusts.

There was much in the active life of Mr. WELCH that might well be emulated by the youth of our country, and which illustrates the adaptability of our republican institutions to the development of genius and the noble ambitions and high aspirations of men when directed in the interests and for the benefit of his fellow-men. At the early age of twenty-two he left his New England home and, following "the star of empire" with the compass and chain of the engineer, settled in Nebraska. And with an indomitable physical and intellectual energy, directed by great good sense and tempered with justice to all men, we have seen him rise from place to position until he stood an honored and useful member of Congress at large from the State of his adoption. To what higher eminence he might have attained in his brilliant career had he not been cut down in the bloom of manhood we can well imagine by the strong personal force with which he conquered success and the high esteem in which he was held by the people of his State.

He was strong in his convictions of right, and a decided party man, but there was a kindness and benignity about him that like polished armor turned aside all feelings of ill-will or animosity and tended to disarm his opponents and turn them into friends.

It is a phase in our political character—a phase to be lamented and deprecated—for party antagonism to assail the private character and misrepresent the public acts of an official, and especially is this defamation unguarded and severe in the excitement and heat of a political campaign. There are but few men in public position, however chaste their lives, however pure their intentions, however disinterested their acts, who have not had hurled at them the poisoned arrows of partisan rancor. But the manly and generous qualities of our deceased friend were a shield to his character, and whatever may have been said against him in the heat of partisan anger was never cherished in the hearts of those who may have thus hastily spoken.

His political course was short and successful; labor and not words was what he relied upon for success; and no person, of whatever party, or however much they may have differed with him in opinion, ever doubted his intentions or failed to admire his fidelity to his party and his friends. His zeal in the performance of his duty kept him steadily at his post; and no movement, either of order or business, failed to attract his attention.

He was the first and only one of those who have been honored with seats in the National Council from the State of Nebraska who has departed hence for a world of peace; and yet he was the youngest of them all. He was cut down in the bloom and prime of his manhood, in the full possession of his intellectual powers, and has passed to that shadowy land from whence there is no return.

Mr. President, the record of the tomb is fast filling up with illustrious names. In the providence of an all-wise God a number of victims greater than is usual have been snatched by the hand of the dread destroyer from the councils of the nation during the present Congress. In the course of a very short service in this Chamber it has been my sad experience to witness with sympathizing sorrow an unusual number of occasions of this character, in memory of the departure of respected members of one or the other of the two Houses of Congress.

How impressively sad this warning, reminding us of the mutability of human life, of how powerless the earthly hands of love to save, and verifying in this case the saying that "in the midst of life we are in death!" Let these frequent admonitions, so solemn and awful, find a deep place in our hearts who yet remain behind.

Our late associate has gone hence, sir, but his memory will survive, embalmed in the hearts of those who knew him and appreciated his manly qualities. He died, as he lived, deserving and possessing the warm-hearted esteem of many and the ill-will, I trust, of none. In private life in the State in which he lived he was respected, confided in, and beloved to a very remarkable degree; and I have never witnessed a community apparently more deeply impressed by the death of one of its number than in the exhibition of sorrow over the death of our deceased associate.

The integrity of his character, the soundness of his judgment, and the kindness of his heart were well attested by the confidence and affection bestowed upon him in his life and the intense sorrow with which his untimely death was deplored.

Let us commend the heart-stricken widow, the fatherless children, and the bereaved relatives and friends to the tender mercies and teachings of Him who doeth all things well, and who alone can heal the bruised heart and calm the whirlwind of grief in the afflicted soul.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolutions proposed by the Senator from Nebraska, [Mr. PADDOCK.] The resolutions were agreed to unanimously.

Mr. SAUNDERS. As a further mark of respect to the deceased I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at five o'clock and thirty-eight minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, February 25, 1879.

The House met at eleven o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday was read and approved.

ARREARS OF PENSIONS.

Mr. MONROE. I move that the rules be suspended and that the following bill be passed:

A bill to provide for the payment of arrears of pensions.

Be it enacted, &c., That the act entitled "An act to authorize the issue of certificates of deposit in aid of the refunding of the public debt" is hereby so amended that the Secretary of the Treasury shall be authorized to apply such portion of the proceeds of the sale of the certificates of deposit provided for in said act as may be necessary, not exceeding $20,000,000, to the payment of claims for arrears of pensions arising under the act approved January 25, 1879.

Mr. MCKENZIE. I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. Is it in order to suspend the rules to-day?

The SPEAKER. It is. Besides that, the Chair has recognized the gentleman from Ohio in accordance with an almost unanimous agreement yesterday.

Mr. MONROE. I wish the yeas and nays.

Mr. EWING. So do we.

Mr. ATKINS. I should like to have the bill again read.

The SPEAKER. It is perfectly idle to have bills reported unless gentlemen will listen.

Mr. BUCKNER. I ask that the gentleman from Ohio have five minutes in which to explain this bill.

Mr. EWING. I object unless five minutes are allowed to the opponents of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The proposition then will be that five minutes be allowed on each side.

Mr. BUCKNER. I hope there will be no objection to that.

Mr. MONROE. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection, and the bill will be again read.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. What is the proposition about debate?

The SPEAKER. Five minutes on each side.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is too late.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I did not hear the announcement.

Mr. HALE. The announcement was not heard in this part of the Hall. We could not hear anything.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be again read, and then the Chair will again put the proposition to the House in reference to debate of five minutes on each side.

Mr. GARFIELD. Let the bill be again read.

The bill was again read.

The SPEAKER. On motion of the gentleman from Missouri it has been proposed that five minutes of debate be allowed to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MONROE] to explain the bill, and five minutes to the gentleman from Ohio in opposition to it.

Mr. MILLS. Will the gentleman from Ohio permit me to offer an amendment?

The SPEAKER. It cannot be offered as this is a suspension of the rules.

Mr. MILLS. He could permit it to be offered.

The SPEAKER. He may modify his motion.

Mr. MILLS. Will the gentleman from Ohio permit an amendment to be offered?

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I object to the proposition stated by the Chair in reference to debate.

Mr. HALE. Everybody is for the bill of the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. EWING. Let there be read a bill which I have here to offer, providing for the payment of these arrears of pensions by the reissue of United States Treasury notes. [Cries of "Order!" "Object!"]

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ATKINS. Have we not already appropriated for these arrears of pensions? I think we passed a bill for that purpose.

Mr. MONROE. This bill is to provide the ways and means to meet that appropriation.

Mr. EWING. It is to provide an increase of the bonded debt for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. The question of the gentleman from Tennessee must be answered by some one else than the Chair.

Mr. ATKINS. The appropriation has been made.

Mr. SPARKS. The appropriation for the payment of arrears of pensions has been passed by this House some days ago. As a member of the Appropriations Committee I reported the bill, and it was passed under a suspension of the rules.

Mr. BANNING. Giving how much?

Mr. SPARKS. Twenty-six million eight hundred and fifty-two thousand two hundred dollars. These arrears of pensions have been already appropriated for.

Mr. MONROE. But no means have been provided to raise the money.

Mr. SPARKS. We are well convinced that there is abundant means in the Treasury, if properly applied, to pay them without resorting to additional interest-bearing bonds for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. The clerks complain that they cannot hear the responses of members. There will be a pause until gentlemen get through with their private conversation.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Would it be in order to move that the House take a recess for that purpose?

Mr. PRICE. It would last until after the 4th of March next. [Laughter.]

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 124, nays 125, not voting 41; as follows:

YEAS—124.

Aldrich,	Davis, Horace	Hungerford,	Price,
Bagley,	Deering,	Hunter,	Pugh,
Bailey,	Denison,	Itner,	Rainey,
Baker, John H.	Dunnell,	James,	Randolph,
Ballou,	Dwight,	Jones, John S.	Rice, William W.
Bayne,	Eames,	Joyce,	Robinson, G. D.
Bicknell,	Ellsworth,	Keifer,	Robinson, M. S.
Blair,	Errett,	Keightley,	Sampson,
Bliss,	Evans, I. Newton	Ketcham,	Sexton,
Boyd,	Evans, James L.	Killinger,	Shallenberger,
Brentano,	Fort,	Lapham,	Sinnickson,
Brewer,	Foster,	Lathrop,	Small,
Briggs,	Frye,	Lindsey,	Smith, A. Herr
Brown,	Fuller,	Loring,	Starin,
Bundy,	Gardner,	Luttrell,	Stewart,
Burchard,	Garfield,	Majors,	Stone, John W.
Burdick,	Hale,	Marsh,	Stone, Joseph C.
Calkins,	Hamilton,	McCook,	Strait,
Camp,	Hanna,	McGowan,	Thompson,
Cannon,	Hardenbergh,	McKinley,	Townsend, Amos
Caswell,	Harmer,	Metcalfe,	Townsend, M. I.
Chittenden,	Harris, Benj. W.	Mitchell,	Van Vorhes,
Clafin,	Haskell,	Monroe,	Wait,
Clark, Alvah A.	Hayes,	Neal,	Ward,
Clark, Rush	Hazelton,	Norcross,	Watson,
Cole,	Hendee,	O'Neill,	White, Harry
Conger,	Henderson,	Overton,	White, Michael D.
Cox, Jacob D.	Hewitt, Abram S.	Patterson, G. W.	Williams, Andrew
Crapo,	Hiscock,	Peddle,	Williams, C. G.
Cummings,	Hubbell,	Pollard,	Williams, Richard
Danford,	Humphrey,	Pound,	Willits,

NAYS—125.

Acklen,	Davis, Joseph J.	Jones, Frank	Rice, Americus V.
Aiken,	Dibrell,	Jones, James T.	Robbins,
Atkins,	Dickey,	Kelley,	Roberts,
Banning,	Durham,	Kenna,	Ross,
Beale,	Eden,	Kimmel,	Scales,
Bell,	Eickhoff,	Knapp,	Shelley,
Benedict,	Elam,	Knot,	Singleton,
Blackburn,	Ellis,	Landers,	Slemmons,
Blount,	Evins, John H.	Ligon,	White, William E.
Boone,	Ewing,	Lockwood,	Southard,
Bouck,	Felton,	Lynde,	Sparks,
Bragg,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Mackey,	Springer,
Bridges,	Finley, Jesse J.	Malsh,	Steele,
Bright,	Fleming,	Manning,	Stenger,
Buckner,	Forney,	Martin,	Throckmorton,
Butler,	Garth,	McKenzie,	Townsend, R. W.
Cabel,	Giddings,	McMahon,	Tucker,
Caldwell, John W.	Glover,	Mills,	Vance,
Caldwell, W. P.	Goode,	Money,	Waddell,
Candler,	Gunter,	Morgan,	Warner,
Carlisle,	Harris, Henry R.	Morrison,	Whithorne,
Chalmers,	Harris, John T.	Morse,	Wigginton,
Clark of Missouri,	Harrison,	Muldrow,	Williams, James
Clymer,	Hartzell,	Muller,	Williams, Jere N.
Cobb,	Hatcher,	Oliver,	Willis, Benj. A.
Cook,	Henkle,	Patterson, T. M.	Wilson,
Covert,	Henry,	Phelps,	Wright,
Cox, Samuel S.	Herbert,	Phillips,	Yeates,
Cravens,	Hewitt, G. W.	Pridemore,	Young, John S.
Crittenden,	Hooker,	Rea,
Culbertson,	House,	Reagan,
Davidson,	Hunton,	Reilly,

NOT VOTING—41.

Bacon,	Dean,	Reed,	Turney,
Baker, William H.	Franklin,	Riddle,	Veeder,
Banks,	Freeman,	Robertson,	Walker,
Beebe,	Gause,	Ryan,	Walsh,
Bland,	Gibson,	Sapp,	Willis, Albert S.
Brogden,	Hart,	Sayler,	Wood,
Cain,	Jorgensen,	Stephens,	Wren,
Campbell,	Mayham,	Swann,	Young, Casey.
Clarke of Kentucky,	Page,	Thornburgh,
Collins,	Potter,	Tipton,
Cutler,	Powers,	Turner,

So (two-thirds not voting in favor thereof) the rules were not suspended.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. SAPP. I am paired with Mr. GAUSE. If he were here, I should vote "ay."

Mr. RYAN. I am paired with the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. FRANKLIN. If he were here, he would vote "no" and I should vote "ay."

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I am paired upon all political questions with my colleague, Mr. BEEBE. This seems to be made one. If he were present, I would vote "ay."

Mr. RICE, of Massachusetts. My colleague, Mr. BANKS, is paired with my other colleague, Mr. DEAN. I do not know how either of them would vote, if present.

Mr. HALE. My colleague, Mr. REED, is detained from the House by illness.

Mr. ATKINS. My colleague, Mr. YOUNG, left the House a short time since in consequence of illness, and is paired with some gentleman upon the other side of the House.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

L. J. CECIL AND WILLIAM BILLIPS.

Mr. LUTTRELL, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 6511) for the relief of L. J. Cecil and William Billips; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

UNIVERSITY LANDS.

Mr. LUTTRELL also, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial in relation to university lands; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a personal explanation. Upon yesterday I voted for the sundry civil service bill upon a motion to suspend the rules. I supposed that it contained nothing but the usual appropriations for public buildings, &c. It contained the usual appropriation for Soldiers' Home, as follows:

Support of National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers: Current expenses, including repairs, for the central branch, for the eastern branch, for the northwestern branch, for the southern branch, and for barracks and other necessary construction purposes, for clothing of extra sizes and underclothing, for out-door relief and incidental expenses, $80,000; Provided, That all purchases of supplies exceeding the sum of $1,000 at any one time shall be made upon public tender after due advertisement, and that the expenditures for new buildings shall be expressly authorized in writing; Provided, That no arrears of pension shall be allowed or paid to any pensioner being a disabled soldier or sailor for the time during which he has been supported in the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers; and that the estimates hereafter submitted for the support of the National Home shall be made in detail, specifying the several items of expenditure, and separating the cost of food and other supplies in the form usually adopted for the Army, and that this specification be made for each soldiers' home separately.

In the confusion attending the reading and passage of the bill nobody observed the proviso altering the arrearages of pension law. I would not have voted for the bill if I had known that it contained this provision, nor would quite a number of gentlemen, whose votes helped to carry the bill. This proviso is now wrong.

I voted to suspend the rules for two reasons: first, I believe all these money bills only grow larger under discussion and amendment; but, secondly, we are so near the close of the session that an extra session would be unavoidable if we do not give the Senate a fair opportunity to consider and pass these appropriation bills.

Mr. Speaker, I desire to express my sincere protest against this discrimination against a large and worthy class. It costs but twenty cents per day to support the inmates; and you would deprive some of them of ten or twenty times that amount. This inadvertence will, no doubt, be corrected in the Senate. The House, I am sure, did not intend this wrong.

Mr. ATKINS was recognized by the Chair.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I desire to have a morning hour.

Mr. ATKINS. I will help my colleague to secure a morning hour when the appropriation bill is disposed of.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Upon that promise I will not antagonize my colleague now.

ELECTION CONTEST—FROST VS. METCALFE.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I rise to make a report from the Committee of Elections touching the right of a member to his seat. I simply ask that the resolutions be read and the report printed, and I will not call up the case unless it is desired by some member of the House.

The Clerk read the resolutions reported by the Committee of Elections, as follows:

Resolved, That R. Graham Frost was not elected a member of the Forty-fifth Congress and is not entitled to a seat in the House of Representatives from the third congressional district of Missouri.

Resolved, That Lyne S. Metcalfe was elected a member of the Forty-fifth Congress and is entitled to a seat in the House of Representatives from the third congressional district of Missouri.

The SPEAKER. The report and the resolutions will be printed and laid on the table.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill making appropriations for the support of the Post-Office Department, which has been returned from the Senate with amendments, and that the bill be printed with the amendments of the Senate, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

There was no objection, and the order was made.

Mr. BLOUNT moved to reconsider the vote by which the order was made; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. COX, of New York. I desire to state that I will not call up the bill in relation to the census until after the appropriation bill is disposed of, and then I desire to have the co-operation of my friend, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, in bringing it up.

Mr. ATKINS. I am much obliged to my friend from New York, and I now press my motion that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The motion was agreed to; and the House accordingly resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, (Mr. BLACKBURN in the chair,) and resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 6240) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. By an order of the House all debate on the pending amendment, and the amendments thereto, is limited to one hour, and the question is upon the amendments offered by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SOUTHARD,] which the Clerk will now read.

The Clerk read Mr. SOUTHARD'S amendments, as follows:

That the several sections of the Revised Statutes of the United States, from and including section 2011 to and including 2331, and all other provisions of law authorizing the appointment of, or the performance of any duty by, any chief or other supervisor of elections, or any special deputy marshal, or other deputy marshal of elections, or the payment of any money to any such supervisor or deputy marshal of elections for any services performed as such, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Mr. BANNING. Mr. Chairman, I learn from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that during my temporary absence from the House on Wednesday last the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. GARFIELD,] in discussing the amendment offered by my colleague [Mr. SOUTHARD] to the legislative appropriation bill, made the following assertion:

Already enough men from the city of Cincinnati have been sent to the penitentiary for fraud to take away the majority by which one of the members on this floor was declared elected to his seat.

Mr. Chairman, so far as I am aware this is the first time that this infamous falsehood has found any one so reckless of truth as to become its indorser upon this floor.

Mr. Chairman, in 1872 I was elected from the second congressional district of Ohio over R. B. Hayes by a majority of 1,505. In 1874 I was re-elected by a majority of 1,535 over Job E. Stevenson. In 1876, after the most exciting contest that had ever occurred in the district, in which every appliance known in corrupt politics was used against me, Governor Hayes certified my majority to be 75 over Senator STANLEY MATTHEWS.

I believed then, as I now know, that a fair count would have given me a much larger majority. Judge MATTHEWS gave me notice of contest, which I answered. Suffice it to say that he abandoned the contest, and never took a word of testimony. After the election charges of fraud were made by both parties and examined into by the United States district court, with a republican judge, a republican district attorney, and a republican marshal. What, sir, was the result? In the whole of Hamilton County, comprising two congressional districts, fifteen persons in all were convicted of illegal practices, of whom five were sent to the penitentiary. Ten of these fifteen were from the second district, and three of these ten were republicans, one being a colored republican.

This, sir, is the record regarding the election of 1876 in the second congressional district of Ohio as it has been furnished to me—a district composed of honorable men, who hate fraud and detest falsehood. In their behalf, in the interest of truth, and as a matter of justice to myself, I pronounce the assertion made by the gentleman to be untrue, and I denounce its author, whoever he may be, as a falsifier.

Mr. Chairman, before uttering this assertion the gentleman should have been certain that it was true, and should not have made himself responsible on this floor and before the country for that which the record shows to be false.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. I ask to be recognized by the Chair, and will yield my time to my colleague, [Mr. BANNING.] [Cries from the republican side, "Let him go on!"]

Mr. ATKINS. I object. I must object to the prolongation of this debate over an hour.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection has been made, and the time of the gentleman from Ohio cannot be extended.

Mr. EWING. This will not lengthen the hour.

Mr. ATKINS. All right; if it does not lengthen the hour.

Mr. HALE. Let it be understood that the extension of time does not come out of the hour.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. It does come out of the hour.

Mr. ATKINS. I will agree that the same time shall be allowed to the other side as is occupied by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. BANNING.]

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman from Ohio proceeding, with the understanding that the time he occupies is not to be deducted from the hour to which debate has been limited?

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. With the understanding that the same time shall be allowed to the other side.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. What time does the gentleman require?

Mr. BANNING. Only three minutes more.

There was no objection, and Mr. BANNING'S time was extended.

Mr. BANNING. Sir, I am informed that the gentleman is wont to clothe himself in the white robes of an evangelist, and ascending the pulpit to preach the gospel of Him who commands, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." Surely, Mr. Chairman, he of all men in this House should satisfy himself of the truth or falsity of an accusation, before placing it upon the records of the nation.

One word more, Mr. Chairman. I desire to be distinctly understood about this matter, once for all. If any person, sir, means to assert that a single fraudulent vote was cast at the election of 1876 with my knowledge, by my advice, or through my procurement, I here and now pronounce the assertion a malicious falsehood.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I might follow the illustrious example offered me and retaliate by gathering up all the slanders connected with the gentleman's official record, so well known to the press and the people of the country, and pour them out on this floor; but as I know nothing of my own knowledge as to the truth or falsehood of these charges I scorn to do so. And here I leave the gentleman to a full enjoyment of the position he has made for himself.

Mr. CONGER. I now ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GARFIELD] shall have the same time as was allowed to his colleague, [Mr. BANNING.]

Mr. BANNING. Certainly.

There was no objection.

Mr. GARFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I have no particular desire to say anything in reply to what has dropped from my colleague. He will observe I did not name his name; I did not name his district; and what I did say in no way implied that any member on this floor had done any corrupt thing. That was not the matter of discussion. If my colleague is ambitious to get into a controversy, to elevate himself into the position of a controversialist, he certainly has failed; for I have not in any way challenged either his personal character or his name. If he has anything to say against me, let him say it; but he found no ground of personal controversy in my recent remarks.

I was talking about the necessity of a law remaining on our statute-book to protect the purity of national elections. As exhibiting that necessity, after calling the attention of the House to frauds that had been practiced at the elections in New York, I mentioned the frauds that had been practiced in my own State, signaling the city of Cincinnati. All I know about that case is what I suppose every person also knows who is an intelligent reader of the current history of the country. I remember to have read (and this is my only special knowledge of it if the gentleman desires to know) the testimony of one Eph. Holland, before a court of competent jurisdiction, in the nature of a confession, in which, if I remember aright, he said that, being himself not a lawful citizen but a professional repeater, he was engaged for hire by a party or parties to superintend the work of increasing the majority of the democratic party at the last congressional election in Cincinnati.

He testified that he himself voted nineteen times and secured about three hundred other fraudulent votes in favor of my colleague, [Mr. BANNING.] Holland was convicted, and many of his associates; and I know it was stated in the public prints that one car took to the Ohio penitentiary seventeen of his associates in that work. That may have been an exaggeration, but these facts or alleged facts, testified to before a court of competent jurisdiction, warranted me in citing the Cincinnati case as proof that there was need of Federal scrutiny in national elections, even in the State of Ohio, where ordinarily our elections have proceeded with so much fairness and justice to all parties. If these statements about a general state of facts have rendered my colleague restless and unhappy, I am not responsible for it. The RECORD will bear me witness that I made no personal application of the facts to him.

Mr. EWING. Will my colleague allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. There are no greenbacks in this. [Laughter.]

Mr. EWING. I desire to ask my colleague one question.

Mr. GARFIELD. Certainly.

Mr. EWING. Does not your memory of the facts lead you to recollect that Eph. Holland was pardoned out of the penitentiary by Governor Hayes, and is now a very satisfactory republican worker?

Mr. FOSTER. I believe he was elected a delegate to the last democratic State convention. [Laughter.]

Mr. GARFIELD. That I understand was his last political performance since he was pardoned. I am glad to say that republicans have never been successful in that line. Even if our people were inclined to employ Holland and his crew, I do not believe that they would prove so great a success under our auspices as under those of the party for whom he cast so many votes in one day.

Mr. BANNING. Allow me one word.

Mr. GARFIELD. Certainly.

Mr. BANNING. You are as much mistaken in your facts now as before. Eph. Holland was never sent to the penitentiary.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. How could he be pardoned out, then?

Mr. BANNING. The republican party did not dare to send him there. They sent him to the Dayton jail, where he was indulged with all the luxuries that could be given him. And now, if you will go to the attorney-general's office, you will find that he was pardoned at the instance and request of republicans only.

Mr. FOSTER. And the luxuries furnished him were furnished by the democrats of Cincinnati. [Great laughter.]

Mr. GARFIELD. If my colleague [Mr. BANNING] thinks he has bettered the case by having this democratic repeater in jail in a strong democratic county, under the control of democrats, and fed with luxuries by democrats—if that mitigates the case, he is welcome to the mitigation. But the real fact was he was convicted for the crime of fraudulent voting, and that these three hundred fraudulent votes were cast for my colleague, whose majority was only seventy-five. I have said all I care to say on the subject.

Mr. McMAHON. I do not want anything said against Dayton jail; it is the best west of the Alleghanies. [Laughter.]

Mr. BANNING. One word, and that is that the gentleman does not answer what he said the other day, [cries of "Regular order!"] that there were already enough men sent to the penitentiary from the city of Cincinnati alone to overcome the majority which one of the members from that city had obtained. [Renewed cries of "Regular order!"] That was his charge, and he must not get away from the issue.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I have thus far abstained from participating in the discussion of the bill now under consideration for the reason that I have been anxious to see the bill disposed of with as little delay as possible, and hence have been unwilling to take up the time of the House with remarks which might perhaps just as well remain unsaid. I realize the fact that what we do in the way of legislation must be done quickly, for we have but a few days left us in which to complete the work of the Forty-fifth Congress. Yet, sir, as the majority in this body seem determined to impede legislation by attempting to attach to this appropriation bill amendments which are entirely foreign to the bill and have no relation to it whatever, I feel called upon to say a few words at this time. It is scarcely necessary to remark that I am most decidedly opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SOUTHWARD,] and hope to see it voted down by an overwhelming majority. The reasons upon which I base my opposition are two: first, because I believe it to be bad policy to legislate in regard to general matters in an appropriation bill; and, second, because I heartily approve those portions of our law which this amendment proposes to repeal and am in favor of letting them remain as they now are upon our statute-book.

It is, perhaps, unnecessary for me to say anything in regard to the first of these two reasons, as the point covered by it has been most fully and ably discussed by other gentlemen who have already participated in this debate. Yet, sir, I will add a few words to what these gentlemen have said. I hold to the idea that an appropriation bill should be an appropriation bill and nothing else, unencumbered by anything of a foreign or irrelevant nature. This, evidently, was the idea of those who drafted the rules by which this House professes to be governed, and I am fully persuaded that if these rules had been interpreted according to either their letter or spirit this amendment would have been declared out of order. A careful reading of these rules will be sufficient to convince any fair-minded man that this amendment is in direct violation both of Rule 48 and Rule 120. This being the case, why should such an amendment be declared in order? My idea is, that if we have rules to govern us in our deliberations we ought to live up to them, and not be so ready to violate them whenever some little partisan advantage can be gained by so doing. If our rules are not what we want, let us proceed to amend them and get them to suit us. But so long as we have them and profess to be governed by them, let them be enforced.

But, sir, in the second place, I am opposed to this amendment because I desire to preserve the law which it proposes to destroy. What is this law, let me ask, or rather what are its provisions? The law simply provides that in certain cases the United States court shall appoint persons to act as supervisors of elections, and makes it the duty of United States marshals under certain circumstances to assist these supervisors in the discharge of their duties. The sole object of the law is to prevent fraud at the ballot-box and secure free, fair, and honest elections. This being so, why is it that the gentlemen on the other side are so hostile to it? Are they not in favor of fair and honest elections—of preserving the purity of the ballot-box? It would certainly seem not, if we are to judge from the bitter war they are making against this law. I am free to confess, sir, that I cannot see what objection any honest man can urge against the law as it now stands. I cannot see why any one who is anxious to have fair and honest elections in this country should ask for its repeal.

The fact is, the war against this law is waged not so much by men who want fair and honest elections, as by mere politicians who hope, by wiping out this law, to advance the interests of the democratic party, and thus help forward their own ambitious schemes. There is method in what these men are doing, and it will be well for us before we give our votes in favor of this amendment to pause and consider the meaning of the demand for its passage, to pause and consider what peculiar significance attaches to this cry that comes up from a democratic caucus, asking that this law be repealed. Why, sir, this cry is nothing but a note of alarm, a signal of distress. The democratic party is in trouble, and this House is called upon to help it out. The future looks dark for that party unless some relief is furnished at once.

The enforcement of this law by President Hayes has sent terror to democratic leaders everywhere. As the law goes forth and does its work, they see the immense democratic majorities in such cities as New York almost entirely wiped out. They see their friends and supporters in South Carolina, Louisiana, Florida, Maryland, and New York arrested, tried, convicted, and sent to the penitentiary. These facts lead them to fear for the future of their party. They know that if this law is suffered to remain upon the statute-book and is enforced, our penitentiaries will soon be filled with democratic voters. They know, too, that this law, honestly and fearlessly executed, would wipe out the heavy democratic majorities in many localities, both North and South. They understand fully that while this law is in the interest of honest elections and good government, it is not in the interest of the democratic party, and hence they have resolved to blot it out.

Now, sir, I do not blame the democratic leaders much for being alarmed at the situation. The signs of the times are ominous. This law is cutting down democratic majorities fearfully. Already hosts of democratic voters have fallen beneath its unsparing hand. No less than two stalwart democrats who claim to be elected to the Forty-sixth Congress are already indicted for election frauds, and may be landed in the penitentiary any day. Why, sir, if this thing is allowed to go on much longer, the democrats may find themselves in a hopeless minority in the next House. But this is only a part of the danger that threatens our democratic friends. If this law continues in force until 1880, and under its operation we can get a fair and honest election, not only will the democrats not be able to elect their candidate for President, but many of our democratic friends on this floor will be retired to the ranks of private life.

Here is where the shoe pinches, Mr. Chairman. It is the fear of what the future has in store for them under the present order of things that troubles the democratic mind to-day. Hence they demand a repeal of this law in order that ballot-box stuffing and fraud may have full sway. There is certainly nothing either in this law itself or in its administration to alarm any one who is in favor of honest elections. Like all just laws it is a terror only to evil-doers. The democracy themselves would not find any fault with it if they were really anxious for fair elections. But the trouble is they do not want fair elections. They know that fair elections would bring defeat and ruin to their party. Hence, at the dictation of their caucus, the democratic majority come in here and demand the repeal of this law which stands directly across the path of democratic frauds and holds in check the hordes of democratic bullies and repeaters in their attempted raids upon the ballot-box.

This is the secret of the democratic hatred of this law. The fact is the democratic leaders have determined upon success at the next presidential election, and as this law stands in their way they have resolved to get rid of it. They propose to repeat in 1880 the frauds and dishonest trickery of their party in 1876, only upon a more extensive scale. They say that in order to carry the State of New York for the democracy the bummers, dead-beats, and plug-uglies of New York City must be allowed to vote half a dozen times apiece instead of only once, as they can do under this law. They say that the white-liners and rifle-club men must be permitted to intimidate republican voters, drive them from the polls, and vote tissue ballots to their heart's content, or the Southern States will all go republican. The repeal of this law will be an act solely in the interest of the democratic party, and not in the interest of the country. It will simply mean the opening of the flood-gates of iniquity, ballot-box stuffing, intimidation, and fraud in order to make democratic success certain in 1880. It will only give the democracy more complete control in those localities where they are in the majority, and thus enable them with impunity to perpetrate such frauds upon the ballot-box as will give them a victory.

To one unacquainted with democratic tactics and history such a proceeding as this would seem exceedingly strange, but to those who understand the democracy nothing could be more characteristic. In demanding the repeal of this law we see just the same spirit manifested that has characterized democratic action and democratic legislation for the past quarter of a century. It is a notorious fact that the great democratic party has had but one leading principle of action for the past twenty-five years, and that is, to gain power and hold it after they had gained it. For this they have been willing to sacrifice everything that ennobles and dignifies a party. For this they have violated the Constitution, torn down solemn compromises, attempted to force slavery upon a free Territory at the point of the bayonet, and plunged the nation into a cruel and bloody war. They have shown themselves ready and willing to tear down any and everything that stood between them and power, no matter how sacred it was or how necessary to the safety and welfare of the people. And to-day we find them actuated by the same motives and controlled by the same spirit. We see them to-day at their old tricks again, and we cannot but feel that they are as hostile to the common good as ever. In demanding the repeal of this law, they show that they are as ready as ever to resort to any means, however questionable, to achieve success. They want a President in 1880, and they are determined to so "fix things" that there will be no possibility of defeat. That is the meaning of all this planning and scheming—this special legislation in appropriation bills. And I say again that I am not surprised at this action on the part of our democratic friends. It is only a continuation of the course entered upon four years ago and kept up from that time to the present; knowing what I do of their actions in the past, I am not surprised now at anything they may do. A party that will go to work deliberately to buy the Presidency and to bulldoze Congress into counting in to the presidential office a man who was not elected thereto, that will resort to the most infamous frauds to carry elections, that will turn out of seats in this House republicans who were honestly and fairly elected to their seats and put democrats into them who had no shadow of right to them—a party, I say, that will commit such high-handed outrages as these I am not surprised to see come forward now and demand the repeal of this law.

The fact is, these gentlemen are determined to have the next President, if possible, no matter at what cost. They hope by repealing this law to make fraud at the ballot-box free all over the country, and to give the democratic repeaters in our large cities a chance to vote as many times as they please. The whole thing is a grand scheme to advance the interest of the democratic party, and by means of it they expect to carry not only a "solid South," but New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, and perhaps Illinois, in the North.

With such a grand scheme for opening the flood-gates of fraud and ballot-box stuffing as this, the majority on this floor must not wonder if the republicans here stand solid against them. They must expect the gentlemen on this side to be firm and united to resist the consummation of such an infamous piece of legislation. Mr. Chairman, it would be well for the majority to pause and consider for a moment what they are going to gain by the attempt to force through such legislation as this. The democratic majority in the Forty-fourth Congress forced an extra session of the present Congress by their determination to attach partisan legislation to an appropriation bill, and the course the majority have entered upon may force an extra session of the Forty-sixth Congress.

Will an extra session of the Forty-sixth Congress pay the democratic party? I do not imagine that the extra session of the present Congress helped them any, and I do not believe an extra session of the Forty-sixth Congress would assist them to any great extent in the campaign of 1880. However, they are to be the judges; but I tell them here that, if an extra session comes, upon their shoulders must rest the entire responsibility. The present session is one extending over three full months. During all that time we have had nothing to do but to pass the appropriation bills. If these bills fail, there is and can be no excuse given for the failure. If they are not passed, it will be simply because the majority in this House will it otherwise. The responsibility for the failure will be theirs, and the people of the country will so regard it.

Mr. DAVIS, of North Carolina. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. POWERS] said the other day:

I for one believe that every citizen should have the right to vote, and have that vote honestly counted.

Now, sir, it seems curious to me that gentlemen in the section from which the gentleman from Maine comes, cannot discover the fact that in the little State of Rhode Island there are more white men over the age of twenty-one years who are not only not allowed to have their votes honestly counted, but are not allowed to vote at all, than there are negroes disfranchised by intimidation in the States of Louisiana, Florida, and South Carolina combined, even counting all that are alleged to have been intimidated. In the State of Rhode Island free white citizens are excluded unless possessed "of real estate of the value of $134 over and above all incumbrances, * * * or which shall rent for $7 per annum, over and above all rent reserved, or interest of any incumbrance thereon." Yet beam-eyed political saints up there can look over the State of Rhode Island down into the South and find a vast deal to complain of. Motes compared—

Mr. EAMES. Will the gentleman yield to me a moment?

Mr. DAVIS, of North Carolina. Not just now. No man is allowed to vote in the State of Massachusetts unless he can read and write. Apply these tests to the impoverished South and nine-tenths of your republican brethren would be excluded from the right to vote.

Mr. FOSTER. How many Democrats? [Laughter.]

Mr. DAVIS, of North Carolina. Not so many; but three-fourths of them would be disfranchised by provisions so undemocratic. We have no such provisions in our democratic constitutions.

There was another thing said the other day by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. KEIFER], to which I wish to call attention. He said—

Mr. EAMES. I ask the gentleman to yield to me for a moment. I want to state to him—

Mr. DAVIS, of North Carolina. I have no time, and decline to yield. I want to reply to the gentleman from Ohio—

Mr. HANNA. I rise to a question of order. I hope the Chair will protect us on this side from being intimidated. [Laughter.]

Mr. YEATES. My colleague has but a few minutes, and is entitled under the rules to speak without interruption, unless by his consent. He has refused to be interrupted, and I demand that he shall be allowed to proceed and not be overrun by the violence of the other side.

Mr. EAMES. I would like to correct the gentleman from North Carolina in his inaccurate statement in regard to my State.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina declines to yield, and will proceed without interruption.

Mr. DAVIS, of North Carolina. Now, sir, in regard to Rhode Island, I have only to say that there are free white men who are not allowed to vote. With two Representatives on this floor, she only cast 26,627 votes at the last presidential election out of a voting population of more than twice that number, and in 1876 there were nearly 6,000 more votes cast in my single district than were cast in the whole State of Rhode Island—that is, less than one-half her citizens are allowed to vote, and they may possibly have to resort to another Dorr rebellion to secure their rights as freemen.

Now, in reply to the gentleman from Ohio. He said the other day:

Not one man on that side of the House has sought in any way to do anything to purify the ballot-box, but all have favored free fraud in our elections.

Is it possible the gentleman from Ohio meant that? I trust he did not. It is language that cannot be reasonably applied to a single gentleman on this side of the House. It is not true, and if applied to any one on this side would be pronounced false and slanderous. Why, sir, this is the old cry of "Wolf!" "Stop thief!" this cry of fraud in elections. Why, sir, in 1876 the democratic majority of all the votes cast was fully a quarter of a million over that cast for the republican candidate, and counting only the white vote it was nearly or quite one million, and yet the voice of the people was stifled by fraud, by perjuries, by forgeries, by the improper use of the power of Federal officials all over the land, and by the improper use of the Army. Having the control of an army of office-holders, with the aid of supervisors and marshals appointed for partisan purposes and paid out of the public funds by assessments on office-holders, and the improper use of official power, the will of the people was defeated.

Sir, this amendment is a protest against fraud and outrages in elections; a protest against the improper use of Federal patronage and Federal power; and it is strange that a charge such as that made by the gentleman from Ohio should come from that side of the House.

Sir, I may be pardoned for a little feeling when I hear not only my whole party abused, but when I hear statements made in regard to my section and my State which I know to be untrue, and which go all over the land to prejudice and poison the public mind against us. I repeat, the gentleman cannot find a man on this side of the House who in any way "approves of fraud in elections" or in anything else. That, perhaps, belongs rather to the gentleman's own party-friends in Louisiana and Florida, all of whom, so far as I know, have been rewarded by his party; known and recognized perjurers have been rewarded by the bestowal of office, I will not say (because I hope it is not true) with the approval of the gentleman from Ohio.

All this complaint against the democratic party of the South has its origin in the fact that by the enfranchisement of the colored man, designed to be in the interest of the republican party, the democrats have gained power, and our republican friends have been grievously disappointed. Instead of securing increased power for that party it has proved, as the late Senator Morton had the good sense to foresee, an element of weakness.

Our republican friends commit a radical mistake when they assume that the colored vote belongs to their party as a matter of right. Their argument, syllogistically put, is this:

First. The party that gave the colored man the right to vote is entitled to his vote.

Second. The republican party gave him the right.

Therefore, the republican party is entitled to his vote.

Colored men are beginning to comprehend this and to understand that if it is good logic, it may be bad policy; and when they remember how often the men for whom they have voted have cheated and swindled them, it is not strange that they should conclude to change their votes, and regard good policy as better than doubtful logic. They have found by experience—that best of teachers—that the average white radical who came down from the North and professed so much love for them was often a hypocrite, still oftener a swindler, and sometimes a thief.

In my district, for instance, some of them can understand the disgrace and feel the shame of having sent to this Hall one of my predecessors, whose highest merit was that he did not pretend to be honest and who, after having been detected in "ways that are dark," and charged with taking a bribe, which he confessed, resigned his seat, coolly assigning as a reason therefor, to use his own language, that he deemed it his duty "to make vacant the place he had disgraced." (See Congressional Globe, volume 76, page 1617.) He never returned to North Carolina, but returned to his own State, Ohio, without even taking leave of his confiding "man and brother."

They remember, too, that some of their pious friends organized a bank for them in this city. I hold in my hand now one of the "deposit books" of this institution in which thousands of our colored people deposited their money under such assurances as the following—I read from the book: "Instead of hiding your savings in a napkin, put it in the bank where it will be making money for you;" and then follows a statement to show how it will pay. "Let us see," says the little book, "how much a man who saves ten cents every working day for ten years will have if he puts it out at interest at 6 per cent.;" and then follows the calculation, showing that he would have $411.13. Many of my deluded colored constituents put their money there, and have only gotten back thirty cents on the dollar. A large portion of the money of which they were thus swindled, as was proved before a committee of the Forty-fourth Congress, was used to carry the election for Grant in 1872.

They are beginning to comprehend the situation and to think for themselves and to ask, "How is it that our good friends who love us so, and who are always whining about our rights and wrongs, especially as election time approaches, how is it that these good friends have never invited us to Maine or Michigan, to Massachusetts or to Minnesota, to Iowa or to Indiana, or to some other northern State where sweet liberty was born and grew for us?"

Sir, our republican friends underrate the colored man if they suppose that he can always be deceived by the cunning arts of the men who first bewildered and then swindled him. It is a mistake to suppose that he will not follow the great law of self-interest which governs other men—especially our republican friends—and vote in accordance with their interests. In my section, at least, he is beginning to find that his interest is not with the republican party, which unduly taxes the products of his labor—the party which put a tax of twenty-four cents per pound on his tobacco to pay the interest on the untaxed millions of the bondholder and the capitalist.

Mr. PHILLIPS. Mr. Chairman, pure, well-guarded elections are the foundation-stone of this Republic. When, therefore, we see a well-concerted movement, a party movement, to strike down the few safeguards the law has thrown around the elective franchise we may well pause to ask whether we are drifting? During this debate we have heard much about the Constitution from men who have spent the best part of their lives trying to destroy all that the Constitution was made to preserve. Carried to its logical end their argument is that the Federal Government shall have no power to preserve and maintain its own organization, and no power to execute the law it makes. I cannot conceive of anything so derogatory to the framers of the Constitution that they should have made such a government as these gentlemen imagine. The Constitution is clear and explicit in the sections so often referred to in this debate; for while it provides that State machinery may be used, that is a mere convenience that may be used when it can accomplish the purpose; to Congress is reserved the power to alter even that machinery or make a complete system of its own. Congress is made the sole judge of the qualifications and election of its own members. It surrenders that origin of its power to no city or State. If we had no written Constitution on the subject, common sense and the necessities of all governments would teach us that no government can safely surrender to another the origin of its power or the execution and administration of its laws. The local government has its own sphere and functions, but where there is conflict the Federal Government is supreme. If there ever was a doubt on that subject it was forever settled in the stern tribunal of war which gave the final decision on the State-rights heresy at Appomattox.

When the war closed in 1865 the republican party was in possession of every element of civil and military power. There was nothing to hinder them from maintaining a large military force. They might have reduced the conquered States to the condition of Territories, and so held them until the fruits of the war had been secured. They might have confiscated the estates of the southern leaders to pay the debt the war contracted. Instead of this they exhibited a magnanimity unparalleled in all history, and which history may yet have to record as unwise and unwarranted. The Army was disbanded. Political power was given to those lately at war with the Government. They declared that they in good faith accepted the situation. What was the situation? It was that the changed social condition in the Southern States should be maintained, and that the poor, illiterate, manumitted slaves should be the political equals of the whites. How have these pledges been kept? Ever since these men touched the scepter of power, what they have labeled democracy has been a reactionary party. Organization and intelligence have held numbers and property in an iron grasp. Violence took the place of persuasion, and wholesale fraud made a mockery of what men called elections.

We gave to those gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber the power which to-day enables them to strike down these safeguards of elections; and I wish to say to those gentlemen that in thus receiving power they gave a pledge that the colored people of the Southern States should enjoy the elective franchise; that those colored people should have every right and be the political equals of those gentlemen. A few years ago seven colored men represented their race upon this floor. Now under this process there are but three. In the next Congress there will be none. Whither are we drifting? The gentleman from Mississippi was eloquent about the unconstitutionality of these safeguards to elections. He represents, I believe, the celebrated shoe-string district, in which it was supposed our colored friend Lynch thought he might have had twenty thousand majority. Under the peculiar constructions of the Constitution which prevail in Mississippi what is called an election becomes more mysterious than a chancery suit, and the gentleman comes to tell us that we have no power to regulate an election, and offers the monstrous heresy that the Federal Government may not inquire into the elections on which the foundations of its power and security rest. In the few spots from which the dark veil has been lifted we see a wretched travesty on the sacred American franchise, and here, to-day, at the dictation of a so-called democratic caucus, there is to be stricken down the last safeguard law has thrown around the machinery by which the President and the Congress of the United States shall be chosen.

But a few weeks ago I saw in a railroad depot at Saint Louis some five or six colored refugees—men, women, and children, with their little burdens. I asked them where they were going. They said they were going from Mississippi to Kansas. I asked them why. They replied, "We can no longer live in Mississippi and maintain the rights of freemen. We have heard that in Kansas we can have farms and homes and maintain our rights." Ah, my friends, whither are we drifting?

Have civil rights been stricken down? Is the amendment to the Constitution that guaranteed civil rights to all a mockery? Is social disorganization rocking the Republic to its center in the throes of a new struggle? Have politics once more been organized into war and elections become the puppets of secret societies? Are members to be chosen for this body to make laws for the Republic after every violent fashion, and are we to be told here that we cannot regulate it and must not even inquire into it? Shall the heresy of State rights rise from the blood and ashes under which it was buried once more to utter the pernicious doctrines that plunged us into war? Shall it deny to Congress the power to see that its members and the President of these United States have been fairly elected?

Let me warn you, gentlemen of the democratic party, to pause and ask yourselves whether you are drifting. I wish to say to those who worship the democratic name that since the war closed that party has been a reactionary party.

Mr. HOOKER. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. PHILLIPS. I have not time.

Mr. HOOKER. Very well; then I will take my own time.

Mr. PHILLIPS. I desire to say that the democratic party, once a grand national party, the party of Jefferson, has since the war been a reactionary party, endeavoring to drag this country back to another era of public calamity and to those State rights heresies which were buried in blood and ashes—a party coming back here to-day and telling us on this floor that this Federal Government has no power to regulate elections, no power to maintain the sacredness of the elective franchise, no power to execute its laws in every State of this Union. I say to the democratic party, the effort is now to strike down under the very Dome of the Capitol the only laws which are safeguards to the elective franchise. Has that party learned nothing and forgotten nothing, and must the folly of so-called democratic leaders be a constant menace to the peace of this country and the perpetuity of our institutions?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PHILLIPS. One word more to close.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman proceeding farther?

Objection was made.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. Mr. Chairman, the nature of the opposition which is expressed against this amendment by the gentlemen on the other side shows how absolutely impossible it is for them to comprehend the motives which govern the democracy in their desire and their fixed determination to erase from the statute-books every provision which infringes upon the personal liberty of the citizen. These provisions have all been placed upon the statute-book during and since the close of the late war. For nearly three-quarters of a century the old principles upon which free government had been based were found sufficient for the preservation of the right of suffrage, the most sacred right of the citizen. Once only in our history was an attempt made to violate the principles upon which George Mason, and Thomas Jefferson, and James Madison, and Alexander Hamilton had firmly planted the structure of free government, and that was when the alien and sedition laws were forced on this country. They were swept from the statute-books in a burst of popular indignation, which consigned John Adams to private life, and placed Thomas Jefferson, the great expounder of the democracy, in the presidential chair.

So now the democracy to-day plant themselves on the old stronghold that there is no safety for civil liberty when power is centralized; that the only security for free institutions lies in the distribution of power among the people, so as to strengthen local self-government. We believe if abuses occur they will be remedied more quickly, more readily, and more effectually than by any central power.

And when the gentleman from Maine [Mr. FRYE] alluded to those corrupt judges who had granted false naturalization papers in 1868, he overlooked the fact that Judges Barnard and McCunn were driven from the bench, not by the Government at Washington, but by the indignant voice of the people of the State of New York. And we say, now that these statutes, thus centralizing power in Washington, although they may alleviate temporary difficulty, are sure to produce evils on a scale of infinitely greater magnitude, and to become the parent of abuses which, if tolerated, will imperil, if permanently tolerated will destroy, the right of suffrage and the inestimable blessings to which it gives birth.

The gentleman from Maine said it was necessary to repeal these laws in order to carry the State of New York for the democracy. Does the gentleman not know, did he not himself bear witness to the fact, that the election of 1876 was an honest election in the State of New York; and did not Governor Tilden receive a majority in that State of over thirty thousand? What motive, then, have we to repeal those laws in order that the democratic party may carry the State of New York? We have carried that State by constantly increasing majorities at every election since their enactment. And we shall do it to the end of time, unless by the abuse of those election laws which we seek to repeal free citizens shall be deterred from exercising the right of suffrage.

Mr. FOSTER. Did you carry the last election?

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. We carried the last general election in the State of New York; but I must decline to be interrupted, because I have no time to finish what I have to say.

Now, Mr. Davenport has administered this law from the time of its enactment up to the present hour and found no way honestly to keep democratic voters from the polls. But in 1876 they taught him a lesson in New Orleans. They issued ten thousand warrants in one day, and upon the strength of that precedent Mr. Davenport on the night before the election, upon the affidavit of his own clerk, issued warrants which resulted in the arrest of four thousand citizens of the city of New York, and their imprisonment on the day of election in the iron den of the court-house.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I am sorry that I am not permitted to go on, as I should like to have these facts before the House and the country. If I can do nothing else, I ask permission to print them.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks leave to print the remainder of his remarks.

Mr. BUTLER. I object if he is going to abuse Mr. Davenport. He is a friend of mine.

Mr. ATKINS. Does the gentleman object to the gentleman from New York having the remainder of his remarks printed? For if that is to be the rule, there will be no more remarks printed.

Mr. BUTLER. I do not object if you leave out any allusion to Mr. Davenport personally. [Laughter.]

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I am at a loss to understand the gentleman's objection. But I want to oblige the gentleman from Massachusetts, and I will leave the name of Mr. Davenport out and call him the supervising-general of elections.

Mr. BUTLER. You would not do by indirection what you would not do directly. I persist in my objection.

Mr. ATKINS. Then there will be no more printing of remarks hereafter.

Mr. BUTLER subsequently withdrew his objection, and general permission was granted to print.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. Mr. Chairman, when my time expired I had reached the recital of the arrest of four thousand citizens of New York on election day and their summary confinement in the temple of justice erected by the Federal Government in that city. What occurred on that memorable day has been described with such graphic power by General Wingate in his argument before Judge Blatchford against the validity of these arrests, an argument so able and so eloquent that it will survive as a monumental protest against the exercise of despotic power, that I prefer to quote his description as the statement of an eye-witness, which will be confirmed by my colleague from New York, [Mr. EICKHOFF,] who was present and saw what occurred:

Such a scene as the room of this court presented on that election day has never before been witnessed in this city or in this country, and it is to be hoped never will again. From early morning until after the polls were closed these rooms were packed and jammed with a mass of prisoners and marshals. Not only were they crowded beyond their capacity, but the halls and corridors were thronged with those who were unable to obtain admission; so that the counsel representing the prisoners and the bondsmen who were to be offered to secure their release had the greatest difficulty and were frequently unsuccessful in obtaining entrance. In addition to all this was this delectable iron "pen" on the upper floor, in which men were crowded until it resembled the "black hole of Calcutta," and where they were kept for hours, hungry, thirsty, suffering in every way, until their cases could be reached. With scarcely an exception these men had gone to the polls expecting to be absent but a short time. Many of them were thinly clad. Numbers had sick wives or relatives; some were sick themselves. There were carmen who had left their horses standing in the public streets; men whose situations depended upon their speedy return; men who wished to leave the city on certain trains. Every imaginable vexation, inconvenience, injury, and wrong which the mind can conceive existed in their cases, so that it was painful for the counsel who were endeavoring to secure their release to approach sufficiently near the railing to hear their piteous appeals and witness the distress which they had no power to alleviate. And over all this pushing, struggling, complaining crowd Mr. Commissioner John I. Davenport sat supreme, with a sort of oriental magnificence, calmly indifferent to everything but the single fact that no man who was arrested was allowed to vote. And after all this tremendous exhibition of the power of this great Government, after this exhibition of what a United States commissioner and chief supervisor of elections can do if he has a mind to, what was the result?

Surely if the offenses which these persons had committed were of so grave a nature as to require these wholesale proceedings; if the morals, the peace, and outraged laws of the community required to be vindicated by the summary arrest of four thousand persons on a single day, it was certainly necessary that the law should be enforced to the end, and that the offenses which were so dangerous as to require this arbitrary action should be punished.

But nothing of the kind was done. As these men were brought up before the three commissioners who sat in judgment they were asked if they had voted. If they had not they were required to promise that they would not do so. If to escape the terrors of Ludlow-street jail they surrendered their rights as American citizens and made the promise thus exacted, as the great majority of necessity did, they were released upon their own recognizance. If they did not, they were held to bail. If they had voted, although if not properly naturalized such vote was an additional offense instead of a palliation for the crime charged against them, they were immediately released. After sundown, when the polls were closed and it was too late for any one to vote, the doors appear to have been thrown open and all set at liberty.

This scene occurred, not in the imperial city of Berlin, where despotism is striving to roll back the tide of time, but in the metropolis of this land of freedom, in the free city of the sovereign State of New York. Fortunately for the cause of liberty, out of these four thousand citizens thus summarily deprived of their freedom and of the sacred right of suffrage, one man alone, so poor that he had no friends to become his bail, and so friendless that he seems not to have known that he might have walked away, was committed to jail, and allowed to lie there until by accident his case was made known in the proper quarter, and proceedings of habeas corpus were taken to test the question of the legality of these arrests. The name of that unfortunate citizen was Peter Coleman—a name destined to live in history with that of John Peter Zenger, who, in the colonial days of New York, was so fortunate as to have suffered a similar arrest and to have achieved immortality by vindicating the freedom of the press.

Coleman's case was brought before Judge Blatchford, an able and upright judge of the Federal court, who never has and never will allow his republican sympathies to interfere with the stern performance of his duty. The case was elaborately argued, and in a careful opinion he decided that not only was the affidavit whereon the arrest was made insufficient, but that the warrant itself was unlawfully issued. He further decided that the naturalization papers which had been called in question upon the other side had been duly made and issued; and, to quote his own language—

It therefore appears that Coleman was duly and legally admitted to citizenship, and that the legality of his admission was not invalidated by any act or omission which occurred either prior or subsequently to his admission. As he was legally admitted it was proper for the court to give to him the certificate of citizenship which was given to him, and that certificate was not unlawfully issued or made. On this ground he is entitled to his discharge from arrest.

But there is another ground on which Coleman is entitled to be discharged. Even if there were such a defect in the record of the superior court as to make the certificate given to him one that was unlawfully issued or made, he was not guilty of an offense, under section 5426, unless when he used the certificate he knew that it was unlawfully issued or made. As it appears that he complied fully with all the conditions imposed on him as prerequisites to his admission, and that the unlawfulness, if any, was in the want of form in the records of the court, and as he received at the time from the court a certificate stating that all the statutory requisites had been complied with, and that the court had ordered that he be admitted to be a citizen, and that he was accordingly admitted by the court to be a citizen, no court would permit a jury to convict him of using such certificate knowing that it was unlawfully issued. So manifest was this that the moment the facts were brought to the attention of this court on the hearing on the habeas corpus it announced that Coleman would be discharged immediately on this ground alone. Thereupon the attorney for the United States stated that he did not think the evidence disclosed sufficiently guilty knowledge on the part of Coleman of the defects in the certificate of citizenship, and that he consented that he should go at large. He was immediately released from custody, but no formal decision was made, in order that other questions presented might be argued, considered, and decided.

An order will be entered discharging Coleman from custody.

STEWART L. WOODFORD, District Attorney,
SAMUEL B. CLARKE, Assistant District Attorney,
For the United States.

E. ELLERY ANDERSON,
GEORGE W. WINGATE,

For Coleman.

A copy.

JOHN I. DAVENPORT, Clerk.

Now let me inquire what redress these four thousand citizens thus unlawfully arrested have under the law against Mr. Davenport. Can they bring suit for damages for false arrest? No; they are met by the conclusive answer that it was an official act done in the performance of a duty required by the statute. Is there any reason why this outrage may not be repeated at the next or any future election? If four thousand men can be arrested in one day upon the affidavit of one man, the entire legal majority of either party might be wiped out in any city of this Union by supervisors bold enough to take the responsibility of such monstrous action.

My grievance is not that this was done by a republican official. My objection is that it can be done by any official whatever. I should protest just as earnestly against it if it had been the action of a democratic supervisor, under a democratic administration. It simply goes to prove what I have already said, that there is no safety and can be no safety for personal liberty when the fountain of power is not in the people, but resides in a centralized government. The fact that despotism is the inevitable result of centralized power is as old as the story of the human race. The complaints of citizens at a distance from the central power are rarely heard, but where the power to redress grievances resides at home, where men live and move among their fellow-citizens, grievances cannot long survive. There is no more striking proof of this fact than the manner in which the Tweed ring, who were the creators of whatever frauds occurred in the years 1868, 1869, and 1870, was utterly broken up and its members consigned to prison and to exile. The very judges who connived at their atrocities were the first to feel the popular indignation and were driven in disgrace from the bench into obscurity, from which they can never emerge.

The gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. GARFIELD,] in his remarks upon this subject, made the extraordinary statement that Samuel J. Tilden was the "author and finisher of these election frauds of 1868," and he made this statement holding in his hand the report of the Lawrence committee, which he said "had never been answered, and never could be answered." I was astonished to hear this stale slander revived by a gentleman of his standing in this House and before the country. It had often been made before, and as often had it been shown to be untrue. This duty I myself performed in this House on one memorable morning in August, 1876; but so far as I remember the charge was never made by one who professed to hold the evidence in his hand. I immediately proceeded to examine the evidence contained in the Lawrence report which was thus said to be unanswerable.

The charge was originally based upon a circular purporting to have been issued by Samuel J. Tilden as "chairman of the democratic State committee, calling for election returns by telegraph at the earliest possible moment," and it was charged that the object of this circular was to give opportunity to the canvassers in New York to manipulate the returns so as to give the majority to the democratic candidates. It is well known that Mr. Tilden denied this charge in the Evening Post immediately after the election, but it does not appear to be known that when the Lawrence committee met in New York, Mr. Tilden having been summoned before that committee, testified under oath that he had never seen or heard of this circular prior to its issue, and was not consulted in regard to it either directly or indirectly. His evidence is to be found on page 257 of the report of the evidence. In addition to his denial under oath, Mr. A. Oakey Hall, then mayor of New York, testified as follows, page 275:

This circular was prepared by me and ordered to be printed by me, and Mr. Tilden's name was signed to it because it was the usage to sign the name of the chairman of the main committee. * * * To the best of my knowledge and my entire belief, Mr. Tilden knew nothing about it.

Upon this testimony Mr. Lawrence in his report, which the gentleman from Ohio held in his hand and shook in the face of this House, makes the following statement, after quoting the circular in full:

And for some reason this circular was kept so secret that it was prepared and issued without the knowledge of Mr. Tilden.

I suppose this slander will never die; but I should think that the gentleman from Ohio, having the evidence before him, would have been as anxious to acquit Mr. Tilden of the unfounded charge as he was earnest in making it.

He did, however, plant himself upon the letter of Mr. Greeley, addressed to Mr. Tilden in 1869, in which Mr. Greeley speaks of Mr. Tilden's "confederates," but no one can read that letter without seeing that there is no allegation against Mr. Tilden personally; and Mr. Greeley at no time ever made any imputation upon his integrity. The word "confederates" was used as it often is, in the sense of associates, and Mr. Greeley did not then know what afterward came to his full knowledge, for he acted upon it, that Mr. Tilden at that very time was laying the foundation for his final struggle with the Tweed ring, and that his relations with the members of that nefarious body were, even at that date, of a very hostile character. If Mr. Greeley really believed Mr. Tilden to be an unprincipled man—"the author and finisher of these frauds," as the gentleman from Ohio has seen fit to characterize him—he could scarcely have held the intimate personal relations with him which induced him to join him in a trip to Albany a few months after this letter was written in order to defeat the city charter, under which was organized the board of audit, by whose operations $6,000,000 were stolen in one sum in one single day from the city treasury.

From that day to the day of Mr. Greeley's death, and especially during the presidential election of 1872, Mr. Tilden and Mr. Greeley were on terms of the greatest personal intimacy; and if at any time previous to that their friendly relations had ever been interrupted, I, who knew them both, never heard of it. I think that this statement warrants me in demanding that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GARFIELD] shall make good his charge that Mr. Tilden was "the author and finisher of these frauds." I challenge him to produce one particle of testimony from any quarter whatever, which connects Mr. Tilden directly or indirectly with the frauds which were then committed. It is in evidence in the Lawrence report that Mr. Tilden had no charge of the naturalization of aliens; that he did not even know where the naturalization office was, and that he had never heard of the man who appears to have been the agent through whom the papers were distributed. I have often heard unfounded assertions on this floor, but never one so utterly reckless as this made by the gentleman from Ohio. Heretofore he has had no warmer admirer and, when necessary, more earnest defender than I have been, both here and elsewhere, but I must confess more in sorrow than in anger that now my idol is shattered.

I think, however, that I can account for this extraordinary proceeding. During the progress of this debate, a gallant soldier, an able lawyer who has been attorney-general of my State, and who is a staunch republican, General Francis C. Barlow, of New York, had given evidence on the lower floor of this Capitol that the vote of the State of Florida had been unjustly counted for Mr. Hayes; the conclusion being that if it had been counted for Mr. Tilden, he to-day would have been occupying the White House instead of its present de facto and not de jure tenant. This evidence must have touched the gentleman from Ohio to the quick; it must have revived the memories of eight to seven; it must have reminded him how, when the electoral bill was pending in this House, for one whole evening he devoted himself to proving that the law creating the commission was unconstitutional, but that if it should be passed, it would be the duty of the commission to take evidence of fraud and to go behind the returns. And yet when he was made a judge, acting under a law which he had declared to be unconstitutional, and which, as he had affirmed, required evidence to be taken, he consented to violate the Constitution and to deny the admission of the evidence which was necessary to arrive at the truth. When the great wrong thus done by the vote of the gentleman from Ohio, for it was his casting vote in every case that excluded evidence, was thus made manifest by the testimony of General Barlow, did that feeling of remorse which is the attribute of great minds force him to attempt to drown the reproaches of conscience by alleging that the man who to-day is of right President of the United States was the "author and finisher" of frauds, and therefore should be excluded from the high office to which he had been elected by the people?

High minds of native pride and force
Must deeply feel thy pangs, remorse!
Fear for their scourge mean villains have;
Thou art the torturer of the brave.

Gentlemen on the other side realize fully that a great wrong cannot be committed in this country without being finally redressed by the voice of the people, for they remember what took place in General Jackson's case in 1828, and they know that the voice of the people is the voice of God, who has declared, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." They see no refuge from the coming judgment but in destroying the character of the man whom they have robbed. For months an uninterrupted stream of abuse, misrepresentation, and calumny has been poured out upon his devoted head, but the testimony of the last few days has justified the assertion which I have never failed to make when Mr. Tilden's character and integrity have been attacked, that not one particle of dishonest action can be traced to him, but, on the contrary, it is now manifest to all men that he scorned to purchase the Presidency which found a ready market elsewhere.

But to patriots the vindication of Mr. Tilden thus made complete is of far less moment than the preservation of the right of suffrage and the removal of all impediments to its honest exercise. To this end no troops can be allowed to approach the polls on the day of election, no Federal officials be clothed with the power to make arbitrary arrests, by which the most sacred right of the citizen, the very palladium of our liberties, may be destroyed.

We are prepared to make this issue now and forever. Upon this rock the democratic party was founded, and upon this rock it will stand "till the crack of doom." We are the friends of order and the conservators of peace, but we know from many a costly lesson that despotism is fed by the fears of men, while liberty and progress are preserved only by courage and sacrifice. Hence we shall never rest until every refuge of arbitrary power is purged from the statutes.

Mr. HAZELTON. Mr. Chairman, there are three propositions, involved in these amendments. The first in order, which provides for the elimination of the restrictions placed upon the jury-box by sections 820 and 821 of the Revised Statutes, I support with all my heart. I support it because it opens the jury-box to the intelligence of the South, brings it within that constitutional principle which permits the citizen to be tried by his peers and places it where it ought to stand in our country, open to every citizen ordinarily eligible to pass upon a question of fact in the courts of the land.

The next proposition, Mr. Chairman, is one which the American people will repudiate at sight. It is to make the jury-box of our country a political jury-box. It is to select one juror from one political party and the next from another political party, who are to constitute thus made up a jury to try the great questions which shall arise in the administration of justice in the future of our country. It is revolutionary and impracticable. Such a system, sir, will poison the very fountains of justice and undermine and destroy the settled law of ages. To state the proposition is to condemn it, and I discuss it no further.

The third proposition strikes down at a blow twenty sections of the statutes, comprising those election laws which constitute to-day the safeguards of the ballot-box and the muniments of liberty. They are all that can protect and keep pure the ballot-box in many States of the Union, and especially in the great city of New York.

And I tell the gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] in all fairness that there never has been an instance where any honest voter has been deprived of the exercise of the elective franchise by the enforcement of any one of those laws, and I challenge any man on this floor to show an instance where any man has been deprived of his rights by those great safeguards of our Government.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I instance Peter Coleman, by the decision of Judge Blatchford, which I hold in my hand.

Mr. HAZELTON. Now, sir, who asks for this great change; whence comes the demand for these amendments? Do the one million voters of the black race in the South ask for this legislation? Not one of them, sir. Does the demand come from that sentiment that carried the Government through the storm and shock of war and laid its foundations anew in the principles of liberty? No, sir. Where, then, does the voice come from?

Louisiana wants it; and her regular political diet has been for the last ten years fraud, intimidation, and blood. Alabama wants it, and upon that declaration of her leading citizens that the exercise of the elective franchise by the black man is a crime against American liberty. Mississippi wants it; and just now her escutcheon is blackened by the political murder of Judge Chisholm and his boy, and of that fair, young, heroic girl whose memory shall outlast the memory of the Roman mother whose name she bore.

South Carolina wants it also. And the gentleman from that State [Mr. AIKEN] only the other day boasted on this floor that as a matter of recrimination they were in South Carolina now visiting back upon the republicans, upon the black men, this whole scheme of the tissue ballot.

Mr. AIKEN. You are sorry the chickens are coming home to roost, are you?

Mr. HAZELTON. If you tell them a man's right is struck down in South Carolina, they will answer you that the North sent down awhile ago a lot of carpet-baggers. If you say that crimes are committed there against civilization, against humanity, the answer is, "Why, you sent carpet-baggers down to rule over us." Now the gentleman from South Carolina—and no man has a higher respect for that gentleman than I have—says that because, away back, some republican was elected by tissue ballots, now the thing had come home to roost.

Mr. AIKEN. And it is roosting.

Mr. HAZELTON. The gentleman says that as an apology for this grand declaration of American statesmanship.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HAZELTON. I do not know that I have any more remarks which I should desire to print, but if I should have I ask that permission.

Mr. JONES, of New Hampshire. I object.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I hope the gentleman will be permitted to print provided he will cite Judge Blatchford's opinion in the case of Peter Coleman against John I. Davenport.

Mr. FRYE. Let the gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] quote the title of the pamphlet which he holds in his hand.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] is not entitled to the floor.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Mr. Chairman, far above party and far above the love I bear the section in which I was born is my attachment to a republican form of government; and whatever else may happen in the future of this country, I trust the inheritance of a free ballot shall be the heritage for all time of the American citizen.

For one at least I desire to look in the solution of the question propounded in the pending amendment beyond mere party interests, and I have to say to gentlemen on this floor that the subject of this amendment did not originate in a democratic caucus. It is the product of one of the committees of this House, presided over by my friend from Kentucky, Judge DURHAM, and upon which has been prepared an able and exhaustive report by my friend from Wisconsin, General BRAGG.

But no matter from whence the proposition comes, it should be impartially and away from party and party interests considered, and so I propose to look at the question. Under the Constitution, article I, section 4, it is provided that—

The times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing Senators.

Now, it is claimed that under this provision of the Constitution the existing laws in regard to supervisors of election and their aids, deputy marshals, and which are sought to be repealed by the pending amendment, were enacted.

It is admitted that Congress may rightfully adopt regulations as to the time, place, and manner of the elections of Representatives in Congress, but it is denied that Congress in the exercise of this right to make regulations, either as to time, place, or manner, can determine the question of the sovereignty of the elector or his qualification in this regard. This belongs alone to the States or the people thereof. The people of the States may fix the qualification of the elector as to age, residence, and character, and when so fixed and determined, these electors become and are the supreme sovereignty in and of the Government of the United States.

Now, then, any attempt made to impair this sovereignty is an attack upon the fundamental theory upon which our whole popular institutions are based. It is war upon the people and their right of defense and protection.

Let me say, Mr. Chairman, that if it be necessary to the preservation of the national life that the existing laws should be enforced I am in favor of their enforcement. But what is the source of the national life? It is the sovereignty of the people; it is the freedom of the elector.

The democratic party of the country believe that the laws sought to be repealed go beyond the rightful authority of Congress to regulate the time, place, and manner of holding the elections for members of Congress; and in the authority given to the supervisors and marshals to arrest and imprison the elector before registering and before voting, as well as in the act of voting, assert a dangerous and unconstitutional exercise of authority upon the part of the Government, and seek to destroy the source of the life of the Government.

No more arbitrary, tyrannical, or oppressive power was ever given to any body of men than is lodged in the hands of deputy marshals by section 2022 of the Revised Statutes, which I read:

SEC. 2022. The marshal and his general deputies, and such special deputies, shall keep the peace, and support and protect the supervisors of election in the discharge of their duties, preserve order at such places of registration and at such polls, prevent fraudulent registration and fraudulent voting thereat, or fraudulent conduct on the part of any officer of election, and immediately, either at the place of registration or polling place, or elsewhere, and either before or after registering or voting, to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits, or attempts or offers to commit, any of the acts or offenses prohibited herein, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States; but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the presence of the marshal or his general or special deputies, or either of them, or of the supervisors of election, or either of them, and, for the purposes of arrest or the preservation of the peace, the supervisors of election shall, in the absence of the marshal's deputies, or if required to assist such deputies, have the same duties and powers as deputy marshals; nor shall any person, on the day of such election, be arrested without process for any offense committed on the day of registration.

It will be seen from this section that an indefinite number of marshals may be appointed. It is a fact that pending the elections of 1876 over eleven thousand were appointed; a body of men in numbers equal to one-half of your regular Army, and, as I have said, may be multiplied beyond the strength of that Army.

Remembering that these marshals are paid by the National Government out of the taxes derived from the people we come to look into the power with which these marshals are vested.

They are clothed with the power to decide of their own will, whether "order" is observed, either at places of registration or voting; whether there is "fraudulent registration;" whether there is "fraudulent voting;" whether there is "fraudulent conduct" on the part of any officer of the election; whether the State authorities have rightfully administered their own election laws and upon their own will to decide and determine whether any attempt to violate the law has been made, and thereupon to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, such parties as they may decide or determine to be guilty of these offenses or any one of them. Thus clothed with new, strange, and extraordinary powers, they are at once judges and executive officers, powers the exercise of which arbitrarily takes from the citizen his liberty and the elector his sovereignty. Sir, it is simply an invasion of authority upon the freedom of the ballot.

The genius of tyranny never conceived a more insidious assault upon the rights of a free people than is concealed under this pretense of guarding the purity of the ballot-box. The citizen invested with sovereignty by his State or the people thereof is subordinated to the control and will of a foreign, and it may be an antagonistic, tribunal, which, in the assertion of its supremacy by its supple minions, disrobes him of his sovereignty and leaves him the slave of a superior power. The tendency of the law is to prostitute the judiciary to the domination of the Executive and to take away this asylum of the oppressed and make it the castle, if not the bastille, of the oppressor.

I beg gentlemen of the republican party to pause a moment and reflect that if the powers now sought to be taken away from the executive department were in the hands of a democratic President, governed alone by party considerations and controlled by partisan counsels, what would prevent him from perpetuating the power of his party under the machinery given by these laws. What, then, under their view of the state of things existing South, would the chances of the republican party be? No, Mr. Chairman, we must away with these attempts to destroy the sovereignty of the people. As an American I have been taught that the ballot was the sure if not the only weapon of freeman, and any attempt to take it from him or to overawe him in its exercise was an assault upon his rights.

The theory of American institutions was happily expressed by that venerable, distinguished, and pure statesman of Ohio, Governor Allen, who said that upon election day it was that the American citizen resumed his sovereignty and became superior to the law-maker; and, standing that day so clothed, none but God could rightfully come between him and his conscience in the exercise of his rights as a sovereign elector. But from the majesty of the American citizen you take at once the crown of his honor and the force of his will, and subject him to the caprice and whims of arbitrary power, and in doing so, place in the hands of its irresponsible agents the liberties and property of the millions that now make our Government great.

It is full and free sovereignty to the people for which we struggle. It is for popular right and liberty that we battle, and in such a contest are not awed by the threats of our opponents. Nor should we be deterred from our duty by what may be the consequences in the fate of individuals or parties.

Sir, when the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] speaks of the red revolutionists of France—from whose mad theories and practices may Heaven preserve this beloved land of ours—let him remember the agencies of the later Napoleon (Napoleon III) by which a people were robbed of their liberties, and he will be struck with the similarity, if not kinship, that exists between these agencies and the election laws now complained of, and which we seek to strike from the statute-books of this free country, with the hope that popular sovereignty unawed by any power shall be the heritage of American freeman for countless ages.

Mr. ITTNER. If it can be arranged so that I can have the floor at some other time, it would suit me much better than to have to address the committee now.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has no control of that matter. The gentleman is entitled to the floor.

Mr. ITTNER. Then I will yield my time to the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. CANNON.]

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, in five minutes I cannot do more than make a protest against the proposed amendment. Section 4, article I, of the Constitution authorizes Congress to legislate touching the election of members of the House of Representatives. Any citizen is just as much interested in the election of a member of Congress in every other district in the United States as in his own. The Congress legislate for the whole people; and if a member of Congress is elected by fraud or intimidation in New York, Cincinnati, South Carolina, or Louisiana, every citizen in the United States is injured equally by such fraud. Now this law which is sought to be repealed is a law of the United States to secure a fair election of the Congress of the United States, and when applied for places a democratic supervisor and a republican supervisor appointed by the United States court at the poll to witness the election and the count; if there is no fraud, then such witnessing can do no harm; if there is fraud, then such witnessing is all-important. Our democratic friends, however, do not want the Federal Government to guarantee or enforce a fair election touching members of Congress by legislation under section 4, article 1, of the Constitution, but want to leave the whole matter to the respective States; therefore you propose to repeal the present law. It is the old fight again of State sovereignty, as promulgated by the democracy, and which brought on the war. If the Government of the United States has not the power and does not enforce by such regulations fair elections for members of Congress, but upon the contrary must rely upon each State to make and enforce such regulations, then the United States exists as a republic by a full and fair expression of a majority only by the consent of each State and not by virtue of her own force, and if any one State permits fraud or intimidation to run riot and destroy the will of the majority in that State or any congressional district in the same, then practically the Republic, founded upon the will of a majority, ceases to exist. If any one thing was intended to be settled by the late war it was that the United States had the full power to perpetuate itself under the Constitution in spite of any State or States, and at the very foundation of the Republic are full and fair elections.

But the gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] says that the power conferred by this law has been abused and that it will be abused again. That may be, yet its abuse has not been proved. No general law I apprehend, however, ever stood upon the statute-book but what it was abused in some instances. If that constituted a sufficient reason for the repeal of a law, then we would have to repeal every law upon the statute-book. But there is a remedy for the abuse of power. The courts are open to every individual, and the power of the House of Representatives can be invoked at any time by way of impeachment as to any Federal officer who abuses his power. I apprehend, however, it is not so much the abuse as the use of this law that distresses many of our democratic friends.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. All those alleged to have been guilty of one party have been sent to the penitentiary, and all on the other side have been sent on foreign missions, or given high offices under Government. Is not that a good reason why the law should be repealed?

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. The gentleman from Virginia is not as ingenious as he usually is when he interjects remarks into the speeches of others. Is he prepared to say that none but democrats have been convicted under this law? Can he rise in his place here and now and say that none but democrats have been convicted under the law, or that they have been unjustly convicted? I pause for an answer.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. So far as my knowledge extends every man who has been indicted and convicted under this law has been a democrat, and not a single republican has ever been indicted or convicted.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. Can you say that any man has been unjustly convicted under the law?

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I am not apprised of the facts, but my complaint is that all of one party who are charged with crime are convicted and punished, and the other party charged with crime are rewarded, which makes a very wide difference—to punish one and reward the other.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I think that under the law the courts are open for everybody, and will enforce the law.

The Constitution gave us the right to pass it, and I believe it should be enforced, and when enforced, the question should not be asked whether the alleged criminal is a democrat or republican, but has he violated the law of the country?

I believe further, that under the Constitution, and by the results of the war, this is a national Government that has power, like the grace of God, to reach down to the humblest citizen anywhere and throw around him its protecting arm in the enjoyment of all rights and the performance of all duties under the Constitution and the laws.

Mr. THOMPSON. I desire to move that the committee now rise. I will state that my purpose is that when we shall again be in the House I will move that the time for debate upon the pending proposition be extended for one hour or more.

Mr. ATKINS. Oh, no.

Mr. THOMPSON. With that view, I move that the committee now rise.

Mr. ATKINS. Was not the motion to reconsider laid upon the table in regard to the order limiting debate?

The CHAIRMAN. The present occupant of the chair was not in the chair at the time the order was made.

Mr. ATKINS. The record will show.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will have the record examined.

Mr. THOMPSON. The time ought to be extended, whether the motion to reconsider was laid on the table or not.

Mr. LAPHAM. I ask consent that all members who are cut off from an opportunity to speak at this time be allowed to print their remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. ATKINS. I am willing.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is now prepared to answer the question of the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. ATKINS.] The Chair is informed by the Clerk that the motion to reconsider the order limiting debate to one hour was laid upon the table. Consequently the order could not be changed, even if the committee should rise.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I withdraw my objection to printing in the RECORD the remarks of gentlemen who have not had an opportunity to speak.

There was no further objection, and it was so ordered. [See Appendix.]

Mr. ATKINS. I would inquire if that embraces the gentleman from New York. [Mr. HEWITT.]

The CHAIRMAN. It embraces all.

Mr. CAMP. On behalf of my colleague, who was called out on the Potter committee, I must object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not desire to be discourteous at all, but the objection comes too late.

Mr. DAVIDSON. Mr. Chairman, in the debate which has taken place on the amendment now under consideration, remarks have been made by gentlemen on the other side of this House which surprised me very much, and yet I ought not to have been surprised had I recalled other utterances which have fallen from the lips of those gentlemen during the present session of Congress.

The amendment proposes to repeal the several sections of the Revised Statutes of the United States from and including section 2011 to and including section 2031. It was introduced by a gentleman whose home is north of the Ohio River, and it is earnestly supported and advocated by members from the North and West as well as from the South. Yet there are those here who would make it appear that the proposition is a southern measure only, and they pretend to see in it treason and rebellion. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] has told us that "the proposition to repeal all these sections takes hold and violent hold of the whole body of criminal law applicable to the purity of elections in the South and ruthlessly repeals it." He seems to have forgotten that the sections sought to be repealed apply not only to elections in the South, but throughout the whole country, and at the same time to have misapprehended the purport and scope of the amendment. For it does not propose to repeal the whole body of the criminal law applicable to elections, but only those sections which provide for the appointment of supervisors and deputy marshals. Again, sir, it was very strongly intimated, if not expressly stated, a few days since by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CHITTENDEN] that the object of this amendment was to give to the South absolute control of this Government, and that the proposition to repeal the unwise and iniquitous sections, as I regard them, was an exhibition of audacity which the North would not for a moment tolerate.

Sir, the South does not desire absolute control of this Government. It does desire though that the vicious and tyrannical legislation, the enactment of which was the result of bitter feelings engendered during the late great struggle, should no longer remain in force. It does desire that laws which are used as political machines by the political party now in power, and which are manipulated and run altogether in the interest of that party, regardless of the rights of those who are opposed to it, should be repealed.

And I fail, Mr. Chairman, to discover in the amendment that audacity which seems to be so apparent to the gentleman from New York. And I could not see it even had the amendment been offered by a democrat from the South, for in this House the privileges and rights of members are the same whether they come from the North or South, from the East or West.

And again, sir, it has been argued by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HANNA] that the adoption of the pending amendment will sweep away all that legislation which sharply defines, as he expressed it, the difference between loyalty and treason. And it has been said by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BAKER] that it will undo all the results of the war. Mr. Chairman, I cannot appreciate such arguments; neither can I believe that they emanate from sober reflection and sound judgment, but rather do I think that they are the offspring of bitter partisan feeling and uncontrolled prejudice.

The members of this House from the South claim no rights here which are not granted to them by the Constitution and laws of their country. And when they assert those rights on this floor and in a fair and manly manner endeavor to maintain them, that it should be said they are audacious and intimated that they are treasonable is not only unkind, but also most wonderfully presumptuous and arrogant.

Sir, the proposition on the part of the democrats to repeal the odious sections mentioned in the amendment is not prompted by a desire to obtain any undue advantage of republicans. They seek only to take from them that advantage which, owing to partisan legislation, they possess and which they so harshly, unfairly, and corruptly use at elections in some of the States—use not merely against the interest of the democratic party, but also in violation of the rights and privileges of the citizens of those States. Mr. Chairman, wrongs, great wrongs, have been and will continue to be perpetrated under the operation of this law so long as it remains in force, and therefore it ought to be repealed.

This committee has already, I am rejoiced to know, decided to repeal the test oath and to amend the law providing for the drawing of jurors, and earnestly do I hope that it will determine to adopt the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Ohio, and then may we hope, sir, to have fair and free elections.

Mr. DUNNELL. During the eight years which I have been a member of this House I may say that I have not consumed twenty minutes of time in the discussion of political questions. I have contented myself, in the little I have said here, in the discussion of questions of a different nature.

Yet, sir, I confess that no question has come before this House more thoroughly arousing my convictions than this proposition to repeal the laws which go to the protection of the ballot-box. If there is anything fundamentally important in the management of our governmental affairs it is an honest and pure election. I agree with the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WHITTHORNE] that we ought to discuss this question not from the narrow boundaries which party may give us, but look at it in a broader and more liberal light, and ask ourselves seriously, honestly, candidly, and patriotically whether this law is needed to secure an honest expression of the will of the people.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] has said that no such law existed in the time of Thomas Jefferson. Sir, Thomas Jefferson himself foresaw in the growth of the great cities the very evil that this law seeks to protect us against. Jefferson regarded the great cities as the sores of the Republic. Were he now alive, his counsel would be to protect in these great cities the purity of the ballot-box. One gentleman from Louisiana, on the other side, has said that it was the province of the supervisors to overawe the voters. That is a mistake. It is no part of their business to interfere with the elections. They are not to overawe; they are not to prevent any ballot from being thrown; they are simply, solely, and purely supervisors, overlooking the election; to be used as witnesses, if need be, in order to demonstrate what the voice of the people at a given ballot-box was.

I am unable to see, Mr. Chairman, why this supervisor law is so objectionable to anybody. Why should anybody be opposed to it? Is there a party represented here or elsewhere that is unwilling to have honest elections? As the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. HAZELTON] has well said, it has not yet been told us when and where these supervisors have prevented an honest expression of the people's voice. It has not yet been demonstrated that they have exercised the duties of their office to prevent an honest vote.

It has been alleged here that the States should take care of all elections. I insist that a general Federal law overlooking the elections of Federal Representatives in this House is not only constitutional but eminently just and right. In this power of the Constitution lie reposing the liberties of the American people. Have we no right to have it demonstrated that we as Representatives here are honestly elected? When corruption can take possession of the ballot-box, when fraud can triumph, adieu to American liberty, adieu to republican institutions.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SHELLEY and Mr. HALE rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] is recognized. The Chair must state to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. SHELLEY] that debate having been limited under the order of the House to one hour, there are now but ten minutes of that hour remaining; and, in the opinion of the Chair, the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. HALE,] who opposed the amendment upon the point of order which was raised, is entitled to the last five minutes on his side, and the gentleman moving the amendment [Mr. SOUTHARD] is entitled to close the discussion on the other side.

Mr. SHELLEY. Then, I ask leave to print remarks on this subject.

The CHAIRMAN. Leave has already been granted.

Mr. HALE. Mr. Chairman, I rise only for the purpose of stating the position of this question. We may as well understand exactly how this matter now stands before us. The gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SOUTHARD,] in pressing this amendment, has thrown down the gage of battle. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] has asserted this morning that the democratic party stands here to-day, and will stand, in favor of sweeping from the statute-book all that body of law which he says interferes with the operations of the State governments and State laws with respect to the ballot. Now, there is a plain, distinct challenge; and, Mr. Chairman, I know that strong as is the feeling on the other side, it is equally strong on this. These laws for the protection of the ballot must not and shall not be repealed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maine will suspend a moment in order that a message from the Senate may be received.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, a message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested, bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. No. 2161) for the relief of M. G. Harmon; and

A bill (H. R. No. 6145) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. No. 1784) to prevent the introduction of contagious or infectious diseases into the United States, and to establish a bureau of public health.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

Mr. HALE. I repeat that this side of the House will never consent to this project of repeal being pushed forward and carried through. Gentlemen on the other side may as well understand that now as hereafter. Thus we are confronted with what the other side must take the responsibility of, an extra session of Congress. Last Tuesday, one week ago to-day, an almost solid vote of this side of the House was given in favor of going into Committee of the Whole upon this appropriation bill. We were voted down by the other side. On Wednesday the bill came up, was discussed, and went over. On Thursday the republican side again voted solidly to take it up and pass it pure and simple; but we were antagonized with an election case upon which the other side, refusing to consider this bill, unseated a member who had been here within twenty days of his entire term of office. On Friday this bill was antagonized with private bills, and that day was wasted. On Saturday the republican side again rallied for the purpose of pushing this appropriation bill through; but antagonized as it was by the morning hour and by the bill for the repeal of the tobacco tax, the motion to proceed to the consideration of this bill was, on a vote by tellers, defeated by 1 vote.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maine has expired.

Mr. HALE. This is the shortest five minutes that I ever knew. The Chair must have counted as part of my time the time occupied in receiving the message of the Senate.

The CHAIRMAN. The instruction of the Chair was that the time occupied in receiving that message should not be deducted from the time of the gentleman from Maine, and he is informed that it was not.

Mr. HALE. The Chair of course ought to know about this matter, but it seems to me that I have had a very brief five minutes. I only wish to say that we on this side have done everything to push this bill, and at some stage of this proceeding between now and the final adjournment gentlemen on the other side must yield their position, for these laws cannot be and shall not be repealed. [Derisive laughter on the democratic side.]

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Chairman, in response to the gentleman from Maine I desire to say for myself, and I think I speak the spontaneous and unanimous sentiment of this side of the House, that these laws, which were enacted for the purpose of controlling the ballot-box and securing the success of the republican party by bribery, intimidation, and force, must and shall be swept from the statute-books. [Applause.]

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. That is right.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Let it be distinctly understood that with this side of the House and with the democratic party rests the responsibility, and they are ready to do, dare, and die, if need be, in defense of the freedom of the ballot and the freedom of the citizen. It is a question of a fair and pure ballot and a question of personal liberty, and the man who yields now in this supreme crisis deserves the condemnation and scorn of a free and independent people. [Applause.]

These marshals, Mr. Chairman, are appointed by a party, for a party purpose, but they are paid out of the public Treasury. It is idle to say that any Administration will be fair and impartial in the execution of the law against the opposing political party. In addition, these deputy marshals have the power of arresting individuals without affidavit and without warrant upon their own ipse dixit, upon their own malice, hatred, interest, or caprice, so that so long as these statutes stand it is utterly impossible that the American citizen can be duly protected in his personal liberty and in his right to vote.

In Saint Louis the special deputy marshals were appointed upon the pledge, and as an indispensable condition, that they would support in the canvass and by their votes the republican candidates for Congress. One thousand and twenty-eight special deputy marshals were appointed in that city alone, at an expense of over $20,000, and the result was the election of three republicans in three democratic districts.

Mr. COLE. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I have no time to yield. These supervisors and marshals have in different parts of the country arrested citizens without right and imprisoned them until the hour of voting had passed. In New York last fall if those who were arrested pledged themselves not to vote they were immediately discharged, but if they insisted on the right to vote they were held in custody; but when the ballot-boxes were closed at six o'clock on election day they were all discharged, and no attempt was made afterward to prosecute them for any crime. The plain inference is that these supervisors and marshals used their authority not to bring to punishment those voting illegally, but simply and solely to secure a victory for the republican party. This machine is simply one of party for the purpose of perpetuating a party dynasty that has been condemned by the popular judgment of the country. It is a northern outrage as well as a southern outrage. In the North, in 1876, $220,515.64 was paid to these marshals, while in the South but $54,770.96. Four-fifths of the money was paid in the North. In 1878 $24,636.74 was paid in the South, while $177,654.35 was paid in the North, or seven-eighths of the entire amount, and Mr. Davenport, of New York, has still to come in with his bills of thousands more.

I say again, in response to the taunt from the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. HALE,] that this side of the House has determined on this measure, not as a question of mere dollars and cents, but as a question of absolute, incontestible right, as a question of the freedom and purity of the ballot-box, as a question of freedom from arrest without due process of law. We will no longer permit the control of the ballot-box to remain in the hands of paid and hired agents of one political party for the purpose of carrying elections. It is, as I have already said, a question of personal liberty to the citizen, and we do not mean in this free country that any man shall be arrested and imprisoned until there has been due complaint and warrant of arrest, until there has been due process of law. We mean to protect the citizen in his personal rights and to protect the ballot-box in its freedom and in its purity.

If the republican party can beat the democratic party at the polls, after they have had a free and fair election, we will cheerfully submit, but until that ballot-box is freed we intend to stand as free men to make it free. [Applause.] Let the issue come, and come now. [Applause.] Not a dollar of appropriations should be voted until this most reasonable redress of grievances is conceded—

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired. The question recurs on the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SOUTHWARD.]

Mr. HALE demanded tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. HALE and Mr. SOUTHWARD were appointed.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 135, noes 110. The CHAIRMAN. The amendment is agreed to. [Applause.]

Mr. HALE. We will take a vote on this question in the House by yeas and nays.

The Clerk proceeded with the reading of the bill.

Mr. HERBERT. No action was taken on the paragraph commencing with line 1933.

Mr. ATKINS. That has already been passed upon by the House.

Mr. HERBERT. The amendment which I wished to offer I understand has been already adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of the Attorney-General:

For compensation of the Attorney-General, $8,000; Solicitor-General, $6,000; three Assistant Attorneys-General, at $5,000 each; one Assistant Attorney-General of the Post-Office Department, $4,000; solicitor of the internal revenue, $4,500; examiner of claims, $3,500; law clerk and examiner of titles, $2,700; chief clerk, $2,200; stenographic clerk, $1,500; one law clerk, $2,000; five clerks of class 4; additional for disbursing clerk, $200; one clerk of class 2; two clerks of class 1; five copyists, at $900 each; one telegraph operator, $1,000; two assistant messengers; for two laborers; and two watchmen; in all, $72,100.

Mr. STONE, of Iowa. I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of line 1925—

That from and after the taking effect of this act, in order to bring the court near the people, save expense, and promote the general welfare, the regular terms of the district court of the United States within and for the southern division of Iowa, as now established by law, shall be held at Burlington, to commence on the third Tuesday in the months of January and June of each year, to which place the office of the clerk of said court, and all the records thereof, shall be removed at the expense of the city of Burlington and kept; that all cases brought within said division, and pending at the taking effect of this act, shall be tried at Burlington, unless otherwise ordered by the court; and no process issued or proceedings pending in the said district court shall be avoided or impaired by the change of the place of holding such courts; but all process, bail-bonds, and recognizances returnable at the next term of the said court at Keokuk, shall be returned to the next term of said court to be held at Burlington, according to this act, in the same manner as if so made returnable on the face thereof, and shall have full effect accordingly; and all continuances may be made to conform to the provisions of this act.

That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Mr. HANNA. I make the point of order that the pending amendment cannot be entertained; in the first place, because it is new legislation; and secondly, because there is a bill pending now on the Calendar to accomplish the same purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Iowa admit to be a fact what is stated by the gentleman from Indiana, that there is a bill pending before the House similar to this?

Mr. STONE, of Iowa. No, sir.

Mr. WILSON. I would inquire of the gentleman from Iowa whether the object of this amendment is to remove the court from Keokuk to Burlington?

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I wish to say that the Committee on the Judiciary have directed an adverse report to be made on a bill similar to this.

Mr. STONE, of Iowa. The amendment now offered is not the bill which was pending before the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. In substance it is.

Mr. CONGER. Is not the amendment liable to the point of order that it is new legislation?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that to be embraced in the point of order made by the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HANNA,] that the amendment is new legislation and not in the line of retrenchment.

Mr. WILSON. I make the further point of order that the Judiciary Committee have passed on this subject, and reported adversely.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not recognize that as a point of order.

Mr. HALE. The amendment is subject to the point of order that it is new legislation, and does not retrench expenditures.

The CHAIRMAN. That is part of the point of order made by the gentleman from Indiana. The point of order is also made that the amendment comes within Rule 48, that no bill shall be amended by affixing thereto any other bill pending before the House. The Chair will be glad to hear the gentleman from Iowa upon that point.

Mr. STONE, of Iowa. I would like to hear the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HANNA,] if he has any remarks to submit on that question, after which I would like to be heard myself for a moment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Indiana desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. HANNA. I do not wish to take up the time of the committee.

Mr. STONE, of Iowa. The amendment offered is clearly in the interest of economy and tends toward retrenchment. If adopted, it will save on every juror, on every witness that is summoned to appear before that court, traveling expenses to the amount of $4, which in the aggregate would amount to $1,500 each session. So much for retrenchment.

In regard to the statement that a similar bill or a bill that would effect the same purpose is now pending before the Judiciary Committee, I have this to say, that I have labored faithfully to get the report of that committee before this House, and have been unable to accomplish that result. I have taken the only means left to me to represent fairly the four hundred thousand people that are interested in the adoption of this amendment.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I rise to a point of order. I submit that the gentleman must discuss at this time the point of order and not the facts involved.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman must confine himself to the point of order.

Mr. STONE, of Iowa. I shall keep as close to it as I can.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is disposed to give the gentleman all the latitude he can.

Mr. STONE, of Iowa. I am merely answering the point made by the gentleman from Indiana that there is a bill pending; and I want to explain the reason why I bring in this amendment. It is because I have not been able to get a report from the Judiciary Committee, and there is no report by that committee before this House. I do not care to detain the House on this question. I do wish, however, that the amendment may be entertained that I may have a vote on this proposition. That is what I desire, and nothing more.

Mr. FRYE. I do not understand that it is within the province of the Chair to take testimony in relation to the saving of expenses of jurors or of witnesses or anything of that kind. It must appear from the bill itself to the Chair that it does retrench expenditures. It appeared before the Judiciary Committee that it was a question and a serious question whether or not it would reduce expenditures. It is a subject open to investigation, and the Chair clearly must determine that from the bill itself and from no testimony, even though it come from so respectable a source as the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I desire simply to state that this bill was before the Committee on the Judiciary. The Committee on the Judiciary directed it to be reported adversely. It has not been reported because the committee has not been called. The bill is for the identical purpose embraced in this resolution.

Mr. COX, of New York. I think the amendment is obnoxious to the point of order, not merely because a like bill is pending, but because on its face it must show retrenchment. It is new legislation, and does not on its face show retrenchment.

Mr. HALE. The Chair must see that if this amendment be admitted we might on an appropriation bill go into all the vast range of subject-matters that other committees of the House have in charge, and make changes in regard to the places of courts and judicial appointments that could never be made except through an appropriation bill. It seems to me that this is not a case the rules can be extended to embrace. It may be a meritorious provision, but we cannot consider it on an appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has no opinion to express on the merits of the proposition. The Chair is bound to accept the statement made that a similar bill to what has just been offered as an amendment by the gentleman from Iowa is now pending; and if such be the fact, under Rule 48 this amendment would not be in order. If, however, that were not the case, the Chair holds that this amendment is evidently new legislation; nor does it, in the judgment of the Chair, affirmatively show upon its face a retrenchment of expenditures. For both reasons the Chair feels bound to sustain the point of order made by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. CALDWELL, of Tennessee. I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all between the word "dollars" in line 1946 and the word "solicitor" in line 1949, namely, these words:

"Three Assistant Attorneys-General, at $5,000 each; one Assistant Attorney-General of the Post-Office Department, $4,000."

And insert the following:

"Four Assistant Attorneys-General, one of whom shall be for the Post-Office Department, at a salary of $4,500 each."

Mr. DURHAM. I make the point of order that that amendment is new legislation and creates a new office.

Mr. CALDWELL, of Tennessee. The amendment does not create a new office. This bill provides for four Assistant Attorneys-General, and it provides that three of them shall be paid $5,000 a year and one $4,000 a year. The amendment I offer proposes to equalize the pay, putting them at $4,500, and in fact reducing the aggregate compensation of these four Attorneys-General from $19,000 down to $18,000. But it does more than make a reduction of $1,000. It equalizes the compensation, so that the Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department will receive the same pay as the other Assistant Attorneys-General, neither of whom do as much work, according to my information and opinion, as the Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department, and each of whom now receives $1,000 more than he.

Now, I insist that this discrimination ought not to exist, and I think the Committee on Appropriations should be willing to save this $1,000 to the public Treasury when by so doing they give this gentleman as much as his services are worth, as they themselves admit, by putting the pay of the other Assistant Attorneys-General at $4,500.

I insist that the amendment is not subject to a point of order. It does not change existing law, and it does reduce expenditures, and is therefore in order; and, in my judgment, it should be adopted by the House.

Mr. DURHAM. I withdraw the point of order.

The question was taken on the amendment offered by Mr. CALDWELL, of Tennessee; and it was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read as follows:

Office of the Solicitor of the Treasury:

For compensation of the Solicitor of the Treasury, $4,500; assistant solicitor, $3,000; chief clerk, $2,000; three clerks of class 4, two clerks of class 3, two clerks of class 2, two clerks of class 1, one assistant messenger, and one laborer, in all, $24,680.

Mr. DEERING. I offer the following amendment:

In line 1975 strike out "three" and insert in lieu thereof "four." In line 1977 strike out "two" where it first occurs and insert in lieu thereof "three." In line 1979 strike out "$24,680" and insert in lieu thereof "$28,000."

Mr. ATKINS. I make the point of order on that amendment.

Mr. DEERING. I would like to hear the point of order stated.

Mr. ATKINS. The amendment increases expenses and changes existing law.

Mr. DEERING. I understand that the amendment if adopted would simply leave the force in this office the same as it was. At the present time the business of this office is constantly increasing, while the force is constantly being diminished. During the war there were eight more clerks employed than there are now.

Mr. ATKINS. The gentleman repeats an amendment already submitted by the committee as to the increase of clerks, but he goes a little beyond that, and proposes to increase the salary of the assistant solicitor to $4,000 a year. To that I object, and it is upon that portion of the amendment that I urge the question of order.

Mr. DEERING. Then the gentleman does not interpose any objection to the increase of the number of clerks?

Mr. ATKINS. No; for I understand that the bill has already been amended as the gentleman wishes so far as that is concerned. It is upon the increase of the salary of the assistant solicitor of the Treasury that I make the point of order—that it increases expenditures and changes existing law.

Mr. DEERING. I would like to ask if that amendment of the committee has been adopted?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would state to the gentleman that the Chair understands that a portion of his amendment has already been adopted, and upon the latter portion, that portion of it increasing the salary of the assistant solicitor of the Treasury, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations makes the point of order.

Mr. DEERING. That is the part in regard to the number of clerks.

Mr. ATKINS. No; it relates to the salary of the assistant solicitor of the Treasury.

Mr. HALE. I understand that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has agreed to the increase in the number of clerks in this office so as to put it back to last year's basis, and that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations only objects to the proposition which increases the salary of the assistant solicitor.

Mr. DEERING. If the committee have already provided for this increase of force I withdraw the amendment.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. ATKINS. I move that the committee rise and report the bill and amendments to the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose, and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BLACKBURN reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had, according to order, had under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 6240) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, and had instructed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments.

Mr. ATKINS. I call for the previous question upon the bill and the amendments.

Mr. HALE. I desire to have a separate vote upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SOUTHWARD.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman for that purpose at the proper time.

The previous question was seconded and the main question ordered.

Mr. ATKINS moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair suggests that separate votes be taken on the amendments in the order in which they appear in the bill.

Mr. HALE. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] gave notice that he would call for a separate vote on an amendment which comes in earlier than that of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SOUTHWARD.]

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen desiring separate votes can now indicate them, and after that the Chair will submit to a vote the remaining amendments in gross.

Mr. ATKINS. I suggest that the amendments be taken up and voted on in their order.

The SPEAKER. Certainly; they will be voted upon in the order in which they occur in the bill.

Mr. HALE. There will not be more than two or three separate votes asked, and all the rest of the amendments can be disposed of by one vote.

Mr. CONGER. I desire a separate vote on the amendment proposing to repeal section 820 of the Revised Statutes; also another vote on the repeal of section 821.

Mr. ATKINS. I shall ask for a separate vote on each amendment concerning which I gave notice in Committee of the Whole, except the one relative to the clerical force in the Navy Department.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk advises the Chair that there were eight amendments in Committee of the Whole upon which notice was given that separate votes would be asked.

Mr. HALE. Are there as many separate votes as that insisted upon now?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ATKINS] states that he shall insist upon all of which he gave notice, except one.

Mr. ATKINS. I do not say that I will ask for a ye-a-and-nay vote.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire a separate vote on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas, [Mr. HASKELL,] inserting the word "geographical" after the word "geological" in the provision relating to surveys.

Mr. ATKINS. The gentleman will withdraw that.

Mr. BUTLER. I desire to withdraw the objection which I made in Committee of the Whole to the gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] printing additional remarks in the RECORD. After his explanation, I think I ought to withdraw that objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will have to submit the question to the House.

Mr. BUTLER. There will be no objection; everybody got leave but him.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] asks consent to print in the RECORD some remarks touching the legislative appropriation bill, to which the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BUTLER] objected. Is there now any objection?

There was no objection, and leave was granted accordingly. [See page 1897.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, informed the House that the Senate insisted upon its amendments disagreed to by the House to the bill (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to internal revenue, and had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed as the conferees on the part of the Senate, Mr. BAYARD, Mr. MORRILL, and Mr. FERRY.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House resumed the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill, reported from the Committee of the Whole with amendments.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now read the first amendment upon which a separate vote has been asked.

The amendment was in relation to the salary of the messenger to the Speaker, to strike out "$1,000" and insert "$1,400."

The question was taken upon a viva voce vote, and the Speaker announced that the amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in relation to the salaries of the pages of the House, to strike out "$60" and insert "$75" as the salary per month.

Mr. ATKINS. What was the vote upon the amendment in relation to the Speaker's messenger?

The SPEAKER. That amendment was agreed to without a division.

Mr. ATKINS. A gentleman was speaking to me at the time the vote was taken. I intended to call the yeas and nays upon it.

Mr. ROBERTS. It is too late now.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is too late. The question now is upon the amendment in regard to the pay of the pages of the House, striking out "$60" and inserting "$75" as the salary per month of the pages.

The question was taken; and upon a division there were yeas 102, noes not counted.

Mr. ATKINS. I call for the yeas and nays on that amendment. [Cries of "Oh, no!" "Oh, no!"]

The yeas and nays were not ordered, there being but 14 in the affirmative; not one-fifth of the last vote.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ATKINS. I ask now that we go back to the portion of the bill relating to the Senate pages, and put their pay where we have put the pay of the House pages.

Mr. TUCKER. Let the Senate take care of their own pages.

Mr. ATKINS. I hope the House will not force the Committee on Appropriations to go over to the Senate with a bill fixing the pay of the pages of the House at a larger sum than is allowed by it to the pages of the Senate.

Mr. TUCKER. I think the Senate will attend to that.

Mr. SPARKS. We should perfect this bill ourselves.

Mr. HALE. The Senate will not be at all sensitive about it.

The next amendment upon which a separate vote was asked was in the provision relating to the Patent Office, to make the pay of the principal examiners of the Patent Office $2,500, instead of $2,000 a year as proposed by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ATKINS. That amendment puts the pay of the principal examiners above what it is now.

The question was taken upon concurring in the amendment; and upon a division there were—yeas 57, noes 71.

Before the result of this vote was announced.

Mr. VANCE called for tellers.

Tellers were not ordered, there being but 22 in the affirmative; not one-fifth of a quorum.

Mr. VANCE. I call for the yeas and nays on this amendment. Members ought not to be afraid to go upon the record.

The question was taken upon ordering the yeas and nays; and there were 26 in the affirmative.

The SPEAKER. That is exactly one-fifth of the last vote.

Mr. ATKINS. Count the other side.

The negative vote was counted; and there were 123 in the negative. So (one-fifth not voting in the affirmative) the yeas and nays were not ordered.

The amendment was accordingly not agreed to.

Mr. ATKINS. I move to reconsider the various votes upon concurring in amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole, and move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The next amendment on which a separate vote was asked was, to strike out in the second paragraph relating to the Bureau of Education all after the word "information," in line 1660, and insert "$15,000; fuel and lights, $400; office furniture, $250; contingencies, $1,065; in all, $19,100;" so that the clause, as amended, will read as follows:

Collecting statistics and writing and compiling matter for annual and special reports, and editing and publishing circulars of information, $15,000; fuel and lights, $400; office furniture, $250; contingencies, $1,075; in all, $19,100.

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment, there were—yeas 43, noes 72; no quorum voting.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. ATKINS and Mr. GARFIELD were appointed.

Mr. WAIT. This is a very important amendment, and I believe that if the House understood it, it would sustain it.

Mr. ATKINS. I object to debate.

Mr. WAIT. The gentleman does not want light shed upon this subject, and therefore enforces the rule against debate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut is not in order.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—yeas 83, noes 76.

Mr. ATKINS called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 140, nays 111, not voting 39; as follows:

YEAS—140.

Aldrich,	Cox, Jacob D.	Hart,	Luttrell,
Bacon,	Crapo,	Haakell,	Majors,
Bailey,	Cravens,	Hayea,	Manning,
Baker, John H.	Cummings,	Hazelton,	Marsh,
Baker, William H.	Cutler,	Hendee,	McCook,
Ballou,	Danford,	Henderson,	McGowan,
Bayne,	Davis, Horace	Henkle,	McKinley,
Bell,	Dean,	Henry,	Menroe,
Blair,	Deering,	Hooker,	Morse,
Bliss,	Denison,	Hubbell,	Neal,
Brewer,	Dunnell,	Humphrey,	Norcross,
Briggs,	Dwight,	Hungerford,	Oliver,
Brown,	Eames,	Hunter,	O'Neill,
Burchard,	Evans, I. Newton	Huntton,	Overton,
Burdick,	Evans, James L.	Ittner,	Page,
Butler,	Felton,	Jamea,	Patterson, G. W.
Calkins,	Fort,	Jorgensen,	Peddle,
Camp,	Foster,	Joyce,	Phelps,
Campbell,	Frye,	Keifer,	Phillips,
Cannon,	Gardner,	Keightley,	Pollard,
Caswell,	Garfield,	Kelley,	Potter,
Chittenden,	Goode,	Kenna,	Pound,
Claffin,	Hanna,	Ketcham,	Powers,
Clark, Rush	Hardenbergh,	Landers,	Pugh,
Cole,	Harner,	Lapham,	Raney,
Conger,	Harris, Benj. W.	Lathrop,	Randolph,
Covert,	Harrison	Lindsey,	Reilly,

Rice, William W.
Robbins,
Roberts,
Robinson, G. D.
Robinson, M. S.
Ryan,
Sampson,
Sapp,

Sexton,
Shallenberger,
Simickson,
Small,
Springer,
Starin,
Stewart,
Stone, John W.

Stone, Joseph C.
Strait,
Thompson,
Townsend, M. I.
Townshend, E. W.
Turner,
Van Vorhes,
Wait,

Ward,
Watson,
White, Harry
Williams, Andrew
Williams, C. G.
Williams, Richard
Willits,
Wren.

NAYS—111.

Acklen,
Aiken,
Atkins,
Banning,
Beale,
Benedict,
Bicknell,
Blackburn,
Blount,
Boone,
Boeck,
Bragg,
Bridges,
Bright,
Brogren,
Buckner,
Cabell,
Caldwell, John W.
Candler,
Carlele,
Chalmers,
Clark, Alvah A.
Clarke of Kentucky,
Clark of Missouri,
Clymer,
Cobb,
Collins,
Cook,

Cox, Samuel S.
Crittenden,
Culberson,
Davidson,
Davis, Joseph J.
Dibrell,
Dickey,
Durham,
Eickhoff,
Elam,
Ellis,
Evins, John H.
Finley, Ebenezer B.
Finley, Jesse J.
Fleming,
Forney,
Franklin,
Fuller,
Garth,
Gause,
Giddings,
Glover,
Gunter,
Hamilton,
Harris, Henry R.
Harris, John T.
Hartzell,
Hatcher,

Herbert,
Hewitt, Abram S.
Hewitt, G. W.
Jones, Frank
Jones, James T.
Killing,
Kimmel,
Knott,
Ligon,
Lockwood,
Mackey,
Maish,
Martin,
Mayham,
McKenzie,
McMahon,
Mills,
Money,
Morgan,
Muldrow,
Muller,
Patterson, T. M.
Price,
Pridemore,
Rea,
Reagan,
Rice, Americus V.
Robertson,

Ross,
Saylor,
Scales,
Shelley,
Singleton,
Slemmons,
Smith, A. Herr
Smith, William E.
Southard,
Sparks,
Steele,
Swann,
Throckmorton,
Turney,
Vance,
Vaddell,
Warner,
Whithorne,
Wigginton,
Williams, James
Williams, Jere N.
Willis, Benj. A.
Wilson,
Wood,
Wright,
Yeates,
Young, John S.

NOT VOTING—39.

Bagley,
Banks,
Beebe,
Bland,
Boyd,
Brentano,
Bundy,
Cain,
Caldwell, W. P.
Eden,

Ellsworth,
Errett,
Ewing,
Freeman,
Gibson,
Hale,
Hiscock,
House,
Jones, John S.
Knapp,

Loring,
Lynde,
Metcalfe,
Mitchell,
Morrison,
Reed,
Riddle,
Stenger,
Stephens,
Thornburgh,

Tipton,
Townsend, Amos
Tucker,
Veeder,
Walker,
Walsh,
White, Michael D.
Willis, Albert S.
Young, Casey.

So the amendment was concurred in.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made: Mr. KNAPP. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. TIPTON. Mr. EDEN is absent on account of sickness in his family.

Mr. JONES, of Ohio. I am paired with Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee, for to-day.

Mr. POLLARD. Mr. BLAND is paired with Mr. METCALFE.

Mr. BOYD. For to-day, I am paired with my colleague, Mr. EDEN. On motion of Mr. BROWNE, the reading of the names was dispensed with.

The vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. GOODE moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The next amendment of the committee was read, as follows:

Under the heading of Second Assistant Postmaster-General, in line 1718, strike out the word "six" and insert "seven," and in the same line, strike out "thirteen" and insert "twelve;" so it will read, "twenty-seven clerks class 3; twelve clerks class 2."

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Mr. ATKINS moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was non-concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee of the Whole was read, as follows:

On page 82, section 2, after the word "except," in line 9, insert "the public land surveys;" and also strike out all of said section after line 20.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. That was an amendment to section 2; and after it was adopted the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations moved a substitute for section 2, which struck that amendment out, together with the portion of the paragraph to which it was moved.

The SPEAKER. Anything put in by the committee has a right to be voted on in the House. The gentleman is thinking of where amendments are offered and rejected.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. Where an amendment is adopted to any section and then a substitute for that entire section is adopted the section itself and amendments to it are not before the House, but the new matter adopted by the committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is mistaken. It is a substitute.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. If this amendment to section 2 should be rejected by the House, it is simply section 2 standing intact.

The SPEAKER. This bill was submitted to the committee with section 2 in it, and an amendment to section 2 is an affirmative amendment. It comes into the House of course, and the House can reject it or not. That is for the House to determine.

Mr. WHITE, of Pennsylvania. I ask for the reading of the amendment again with the words included which are proposed to be stricken out.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "except," in line 9, insert "the public land surveys;" and also strike out all of said section after line 20.

Mr. SPRINGER. This is the provision in reference to surveyors-general.

Mr. PAGE. Yes; leaving the law as it now is in reference to surveyors-general.

Mr. SPRINGER. Let the words that are proposed to be stricken out be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

And provided further, That the offices of surveyors-general are hereby abolished, to take effect on the 30th day of June, 1879; and the compensation of said surveyors-general, and all employes under them, shall cease on that day; and the duties pertaining to the offices of surveyors-general shall thereafter be performed by the Superintendent of the Coast and Interior Survey; and the parceling surveys of the public lands shall hereafter be made by employes of the Coast and Interior Survey. And provided further, That the rectangular method with township and sectional units shall be retained wherever it can be appropriately and economically applied, but all surveying by contract shall be prohibited; and the Superintendent of the Coast and Interior Survey is hereby authorized to adopt such additional surveying methods as he may deem most economic and accurate; but the surveys of mineral claims shall be made by deputy surveyors, as now provided by law. And such of the archives and records now in the offices of the surveyors-general as may not be required for the office of the Superintendent of the Coast and Interior Survey shall be turned over to the governors of the several States and Territories, upon the same terms and conditions and in the same manner that the archives have heretofore been delivered to the State authorities in States where the public surveys have been completed and the offices of the surveyors-general closed: And provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior shall direct the archives and records of the surveyor-general's office of any State or Territory to be kept in the place where they are now located, if thereby the interests of the people of said State or Territory will be best subserved, such archives and records to be placed under the charge of an employe of the Coast and Interior Survey: And provided further, That hereafter surveys of public lands shall, at the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, be made under the deposit system, on petition of not less than five persons for the survey of a township; the sum of money to be deposited for the survey of the township shall equal the cost of the survey at the present rates allowed for the several classifications of the land to be surveyed, including such sum as shall be estimated for office work: Provided, That the excess of any deposit over and above the aforesaid cost shall be returned to the depositor; and all moneys so deposited and actually required for said survey and office work, for the amount of land for the survey of which the petition is filed, shall be applicable, either in the hands of the depositor or his assignee, to pay for lands to which the said depositor or others may be entitled under the law. It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of the Land Office to make all needful rules and regulations necessary for carrying into effect the detail of this law, so far as relates to the new conditions established by it in reference to the public lands.

Mr. PAGE. The vote must come on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Tennessee.

The SPEAKER. The vote comes on the amendment which is a change of the language in the bill as originally committed to the committee.

Mr. PAGE. That is where it excepts the surveys of the public land. The vote will then come on that amendment. After that the vote must come on the substitute for the balance of the section offered by the gentleman from Tennessee.

The SPEAKER. This comes from the committee as one amendment, and is to be voted on as a whole.

Mr. ATKINS demanded tellers.

Mr. PAGE. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ATKINS. I suggest that by unanimous consent the vote on this proposition be taken by tellers.

Mr. PAGE. Very well. I now ask the Chair to explain to the House exactly upon what it is voting.

The SPEAKER. As far as the Chair is able to comprehend the amendment an affirmative vote strikes from the bill the original proposition vacating the office of surveyor-general.

Mr. ATKINS. That is it, and those in favor of retaining the law in reference to surveyors-general as it now is will vote "ay," and those opposed to it will vote "no."

Mr. CONGER. Those in favor of the present mode of surveying public lands will vote "ay," as I understand it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as tellers Mr. PAGE and Mr. ATKINS.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 121, noes 62. So the amendment was concurred in.

The next amendment of the Committee of the Whole was read, as follows:

At the end of line 1, section 3, page 84, insert the words "and geographical;" and strike out the word "created," in line 2, and insert "established."

Mr. SPRINGER. There is no objection to the word "established" being adopted instead of "created," and the gentleman from Kansas, [Mr. HASKELL,] on whose motion this amendment was adopted, does not insist upon it. I suggest by unanimous consent that the amendment "and geographical" be non-concurred in, and that the word "established" remain instead of "created."

Mr. ATKINS. Let that be done.

There was no objection; and it was ordered accordingly.

The next amendment from the Committee of the Whole was read, as follows:

After line 16, page 85, add the following:

For defraying the expenses of the Supreme Court, and circuit and district courts of the United States, including the District of Columbia, and also for jurors and witnesses, and expenses of suits in which the United States are concerned of prosecutions for offenses committed in violation of the laws of the United States, and for the safe-keeping of prisoners, $2,800,000: Provided, That the per diem pay of each juror, grand or petit, in any court of the United States shall be $2, and that the last clause of section 800 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which refers to the State of Pennsylvania, and sections 820 and 821 of the Revised Statutes of the United States are hereby repealed, and that all such jurors, grand and petit, shall be publicly drawn from a box containing the names of not less than three hundred persons possessing the qualifications prescribed in section 800 of the Revised Statutes, which names shall have been placed therein by the clerk of such court and a commissioner to be appointed by the judge thereof, which commissioner shall be a citizen residing in the district in which such court is held, of good standing and a well-known member of the principal political party opposing that to which the clerk may belong, the clerk and said commissioner each to place one name in said box, alternately, until the whole number required shall be placed therein. But nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent any judge in a district in which such is now the practice from ordering the names of jurors to be drawn from the boxes used by the State authorities in selecting jurors in the highest courts in the State. All general and special laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HERBERT moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, informed the House that the Senate had passed a resolution, in which the concurrence of the House was requested, for the printing of 15,000 copies of the consular reports now being prepared by the Secretary of State, showing the rates of wages, hours of labor, food prices, and general condition of the working classes in the several countries of Europe.

The message further announced that the Vice-President had appointed Mr. KERNAN a manager on the part of the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to internal revenue, in place of Mr. MORRILL, excused.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment reported by the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

Insert after the amendment just adopted the following:

That the several sections of the Revised Statutes of the United States from and including section 2011 to and including section 2031, and all other provisions of law authorizing the appointment of or the performance of any duty by any chief or other supervisor of elections, or any special deputy marshal, or other deputy marshal of elections, or the payment of any money to any such supervisor or deputy marshal of elections for any services performed as such, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Mr. HALE. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 107, noes 0.

Mr. HALE. A quorum has not voted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is aware of that.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move that there be a call of the House.

Mr. YEATES. I call for the yeas and nays on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. SPRINGER. I withdraw the motion for a call of the House. The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 143, nays 3, not voting 144; as follows:

YEAS—143.

Acklen,	Davis, Joseph J.	Hewitt, Abram S.	Rice, Americus V.
Aiken,	Dean,	Hewitt, G. W.	Robbins,
Atkins,	Dibrell,	Hooker,	Roberts,
Banning,	Dickey,	House,	Robertson,
Beale,	Durham,	Hunton,	Ross,
Bell,	Eden,	Jones, Frank	Saylor,
Benedict,	Eickhoff,	Jones, James T.	Scates,
Bicknell,	Elam,	Kenna,	Shelley,
Blackburn,	Ellis,	Kimmel,	Singleton,
Bliss,	Evins, John H.	Knott,	Slemmons,
Blount,	Ewing,	Landers,	Smith, William E.
Boone,	Felton,	Ligon,	Southard,
Bouck,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Lockwood,	Sparks,
Bragg,	Finley, Jesse J.	Luttrell,	Springer,
Bridges,	Fleming,	Lynde,	Steele,
Bright,	Forney,	Mackey,	Stenger,
Buckner,	Franklin,	Maish,	Swann,
Cabell,	Fuller,	Manning,	Tackmorton,
Caldwell, John W.	Garth,	Martin,	Townsend, R. W.
Caldwell, W. P.	Gause,	Mayham,	Turner,
Candler,	Gibson,	McKenzie,	Turney,
Carlisle,	Giddings,	McMahon,	Vance,
Chalmers,	Glover,	Mills,	Veeder,
Clark, Alvah A.	Goode,	Money,	Waddell,
Clarke of Kentucky,	Gunter,	Morgan,	Warner,
Clark of Missouri,	Hamilton,	Morrison,	Whitthorne,
Clymer,	Hardenbergh,	Morse,	Williams, James
Cobb,	Harris, Henry R.	Muldrow,	Williams, Jere N.
Collins,	Harris, John T.	Muller,	Willis, Albert S.
Cook,	Harrison,	Patterson, T. M.	Willis, Benj. A.
Covert,	Hart,	Phelps,	Wilson,
Cox, Samuel S.	Hartzell,	Potter,	Wood,
Cravens,	Hatcher,	Pridemore,	Wright,
Crittenden,	Henkle,	Rea,	Yeates,
Culberson,	Henry,	Reagan,	Young, John S.
Davidson,	Herbert,	Reilly,

NAYS—3.

Chittenden,	Fort,	Killinger.
NOT VOTING—144.
Aldrich,	Danford,	Keightley,	Robinson, M. S.
Bacon,	Davis, Horace	Kelley,	Ryan,
Bagley,	Deering,	Ketcham,	Sampson,
Bagley,	Denison,	Knapp,	Sapp,
Baker, John H.	Dunnell,	Lapham,	Sexton,
Baker, William H.	Dwight,	Lathrop,	Shallenberger,
Ballou,	Eames,	Lindsey,	Sinickson,
Banks,	Ellsworth,	Loring,	Smalls,
Bayne,	Errett,	Majors,	Smith, A. Herr
Beebe,	Evans, I. Newton	Marsh,	Starin,
Blair,	Evans, James L.	McCook,	Stephens,
Bland,	Foster,	McGowan,	Stewart,
Boyd,	Freeman,	McKinley,	Stone, John W.
Brentano,	Frye,	Metcalfe,	Stone, Joseph C.
Brewer,	Gardner,	Mitchell,	Strait,
Briggs,	Garfield,	Monroe,	Thompson,
Brogden,	Hale,	Neal,	Thornburgh,
Browne,	Hanna,	Norcross,	Tipton,
Bundy,	Harner,	Oliver,	Townsend, Amos
Burchard,	Harris, Benj. W.	O'Neill,	Townsend, M. I.
Burdick,	Haskell,	Overton,	Tucker,
Butler,	Hayes,	Page,	Van Vorhes,
Cain,	Hazelton,	Patterson, G. W.	Wait,
Calkins,	Hendee,	Peddle,	Walker,
Camp,	Henderson,	Phillips,	Walsh,
Campbell,	Hiscock,	Pollard,	Ward,
Cannon,	Hubbell,	Pound,	Watson,
Caswell,	Humphrey,	Powers,	White, Harry
Chaffin,	Hungerford,	Price,	White, Michael D.
Clark, Rush	Hunter,	Pugh,	Wigginton,
Cole,	Ittner,	Raney,	Williams, Andrew
Conger,	James,	Randolph,	Williams, C. G.
Cox, Jacob D.	Jones, John S.	Reed,	Williams, Richard
Crapo,	Jorgensen,	Rice, William W.	Willits,
Cummings,	Joyce,	Riddle,	Wren,
Cutler,	Keifer,	Robinson, G. D.	Young, Casey.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. DEAN. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. BANKS, on all political questions, on the condition, however, that if it were necessary to help to make a quorum I should be at liberty to vote. I vote "ay."

Mr. TUCKER. I am paired upon this question with Mr. GARFIELD, who had to leave the House a few minutes ago, and I am therefore precluded from voting. If he were present I should vote "ay."

The SPEAKER, (before announcing the vote.) The Clerk will call my name.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. RANDALL.

The SPEAKER. I vote "ay." [Great applause.]

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded, and the amendment was accordingly agreed to.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to and also move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I move that the House do now adjourn, and pending that motion I move that when the House adjourns it adjourn to meet the day after to-morrow at eleven o'clock, and on that motion I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. ATKINS. I hope the gentleman from Maine will not obstruct the public business.

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. We want the appropriation bills passed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] first moves that the House do now adjourn, and then supplements it with a motion that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Thursday next.

Mr. HALE. And pending that motion I move that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Friday next.

Mr. McMAHON. I thought the gentleman was anxious that the appropriation bill should be passed.

Mr. HALE. If you let it be an appropriation bill, pure and simple, we will not object to its passage.

Mr. McMAHON. We are ready to vote on the appropriation bill.

Mr. FORT. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is too late. A motion to reconsider has already been laid upon the table, and besides the gentleman from Illinois voted with the minority.

Mr. HALE. I will withdraw my motion that when the House adjourns to-day it be to meet on Friday next, and leave the question to be taken upon my motion to adjourn till Thursday next.

Mr. McMAHON. I thought gentlemen on the other side wanted to pass the appropriation bill.

Mr. COX, of New York. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the motion of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Thursday next.

Mr. HALE. And upon that motion I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, 46 members voting therefor.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 1, nays 239, not voting 50; as follows:

YEAS—1.

Keifer.

NAYS—239.

Acklen,	Cutler,	Ittner,	Robbins,
Aiken,	Davidson,	Jones, Frank	Roberts,
Aldrich,	Davis, Horace	Jones, James T.	Robertson,
Atkins,	Davis, Joseph J.	Jorgensen,	Robinson, G. D.
Bacon,	Dean,	Joyce,	Robinson, M. S.
Bagley,	Deering,	Keightley,	Ross,
Baker, John H.	Denison,	Kelley,	Ryan,
Ballou,	Dibrell,	Kenna,	Sampson,
Banning,	Dickey,	Ketcham,	Sapp,
Bayne,	Dunnell,	Killinger,	Scales,
Beale,	Durham,	Knapp,	Shallenberger,
Bell,	Dwight,	Knott,	Shelley,
Benedict,	Eames,	Landers,	Singleton,
Bicknell,	Eden,	Lapham,	Sinickson,
Blackburn,	Eickhoff,	Lathrop,	Slemmons,
Blair,	Elam,	Ligon,	Smalls,
Bliss,	Evans, I. Newton	Lindsey,	Smith, A. Herr
Blount,	Evins, John H.	Lockwood,	Smith, William E.
Boone,	Ewing,	Luttrell,	Southard,
Bouck,	Felton,	Lynde,	Sparks,
Boyd,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Mackey,	Springer,
Bragg,	Finley, Jesse J.	Malish,	Starin,
Brentano,	Fleming,	Majors,	Steele,
Brewer,	Forney,	Manning,	Stenger,
Bridges,	Foster,	Marsh,	Stewart,
Briggs,	Franklin,	Martin,	Stone, John W.
Brogden,	Frye,	Mayham,	Stone, Joseph C.
Buckner,	Fuller,	McCook,	Strait,
Bundy,	Garth,	McKenzie,	Thompson,
Burchard,	Gause,	McKinley,	Throckmorton,
Burdick,	Gibson,	McMahon,	Tipton,
Cabell,	Giddings,	Mills,	Townsend, Amos
Caldwell, John W.	Glover,	Money,	Townsend, M. I.
Caldwell, W. P.	Goode,	Monroe,	Townsend, R. W.
Calkins,	Gunter,	Morgan,	Turner,
Camp,	Hale,	Morrison,	Turney,
Campbell,	Hamilton,	Morse,	Vance,
Candler,	Hanna,	Muldrow,	Van Vorhes,
Carlisle,	Hardenbergh,	Muller,	Waddell,
Caswell,	Harmer,	Neal,	Wait,
Chalmers,	Harris, Henry R.	Norcross,	Ward,
Chaffin,	Harris, John T.	Oliver,	Warner,
Clark, Alvah A.	Harrison,	O'Neill,	Watson,
Clark of Kentucky,	Hart,	Overton,	White, Michael D.
Clark of Missouri,	Hartzell,	Page,	Whitthorne,
Clark, Rush	Haskell,	Patterson, G. W.	Williams, Andrew
Clymer,	Hatcher,	Patterson, T. M.	Williams, C. G.
Cobb,	Hayes,	Phelps,	Williams, James
Cole,	Hazelton,	Phillips,	Williams, Jere N.
Collins,	Hendee,	Pollard,	Williams, Richard
Conger,	Henderson,	Potter,	Willis, Albert S.
Cook,	Henry,	Price,	Willis, Benj. A.
Covert,	Hewitt, G. W.	Pridemore,	Wilson,
Cox, Jacob D.	Herbert,	Pugh,	Willits,
Cox, Samuel S.	Hooker,	Raney,	Wood,
Crapo,	House,	Rea,	Wren,
Cravens,	Humphrey,	Reagan,	Wright,
Crittenden,	Hungerford,	Reilly,	Yeates,
Culberson,	Hunter,	Rice, Americus V.	Young, John S.
Cummings,	Hunton,	Rice, William W.

NOT VOTING—50.

Bailey,	Ellsworth,	Jones, John S.	Sexton,
Baker, William H.	Errett,	Kimmel,	Stephens,
Banks,	Evans, James L.	Loring,	Swann,
Beebe,	Fort,	McGowan,	Thornburgh,
Bland,	Freeman,	Metcalfe,	Tucker,
Bright,	Gardner,	Mitchell,	Vesder,
Browne,	Garfield,	Peddle,	Walker,
Butler,	Harris, Benj. W.	Pound,	Walsh,
Cain,	Henkle,	Powers,	White, Harry
Cannon,	Hewitt, Abram S.	Randolph,	Wigginton,
Chittenden,	Hiscock,	Reed,	Young, Casey.
Danford,	Hubbell,	Riddle,
Ellis,	James,	Saylor,

So the motion that when the House adjourns to-day it be to meet on Thursday next was not agreed to.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. JONES, of Ohio. On all questions relating to this legislative appropriation bill, I am paired with Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee.

Mr. RICE, of Massachusetts. I desire to state that my colleague, Mr. BANKS, is paired on all political questions with Mr. DEAN, of Massachusetts.

Mr. O'NEILL. My colleague, Mr. FREEMAN, is paired with Mr. RIDGLEY, of Tennessee.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

The SPEAKER. The question recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] that the House now adjourn.

Mr. HALE. I will withdraw that motion, and in order to ascertain if there is a quorum present on the other side of the House, I will move to lay this bill and amendments on the table. That will require a yeas-and-nay vote, and we can then see if gentlemen on the other side, of their own motion, can pass this bill. I hope gentlemen on this side of the House will not vote on the motion.

Mr. TUCKER. Did the gentleman from Maine have a caucus on that subject?

Mr. HALE. I caucused with myself.

The question was taken by a rica voce vote, and the Speaker announced that the "noes" had it.

Mr. HALE. Let us have tellers on that.

Mr. McMAHON. Let us have the yeas and nays.

Mr. HALE. Very well.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 3, nays 143, not voting 144; as follows:

		YEAS—3.
Brentano,	Dunnell,	Patterson, G. W.
		NAYS—143.
Acklen,	Davidson,	Herbert,	Reilly,
Aiken,	Davis, Joseph J.	Hewitt, Abram S.	Rice, Americus V.
Atkins,	Dean,	Hewitt, G. W.	Robbins,
Banning,	Dibrell,	Hooker,	Roberts,
Beale,	Dickey,	House,	Robertson,
Bell,	Durham,	Hunton,	Rosa,
Benedict,	Eden,	Jones, Frank	Saylor,
Bicknell,	Eickhoff,	Jones, James T.	Scales,
Blackburn,	Elam,	Kenna,	Shelley,
Bills,	Ellis,	Kimmel,	Singleton,
Blount,	Evins, John H.	Knott,	Slemmons,
Boone,	Ewing,	Landers,	Smith, William E.
Bouck,	Felton,	Ligon,	Southard,
Bragg,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Lockwood,	Sparks,
Bridges,	Finley, Jesse J.	Luttrell,	Springer,
Brogden,	Fleming,	Lynde,	Steele,
Buckner,	Forney,	Mackey,	Stenger,
Cabell,	Franklin,	Maish,	Throckmorton,
Caldwell, John W.	Fuller,	Manning,	Townsend, R. W.
Caldwell, W. P.	Garth,	Martin,	Turner,
Candler,	Gause,	Mayham,	Turney,
Carlisle,	Gibson,	McKenzie,	Vance,
Chalmers,	Giddings,	McMahon,	Veeder,
Clark, Alvah A.	Glover,	Mills,	Waddell,
Clarke of Kentucky,	Goode,	Money,	Warner,
Clark of Missouri,	Gunter,	Morgan,	Whitthorne,
Clymer,	Hamilton,	Morrison,	Williams, James
Cobb,	Hardenbergh,	Morse,	Williams, Jere N.
Collins,	Harris, Henry R.	Muldrow,	Willis, Albert S.
Cook,	Harris, John T.	Muller,	Willis, Benjamin A.
Covert,	Harrison,	Patterson, T. M.	Wilson,
Cox, Samuel S.	Hart,	Phelps,	Wood,
Cravens,	Hartzell,	Potter,	Wright,
Crittenden,	Hatcher,	Pridemore,	Yeates,
Culberson,	Henkle,	Rea,	Young, John S.
Cutler,	Henry,	Reagan,
		NOT VOTING—144.
Aldrich,	Davis, Horace	Kelley,	Ryan,
Racon,	Deering,	Ketcham,	Sampson,
Bagley,	Denison,	Killingier,	Sapp,
Bailey,	Dwight,	Knapp,	Sexton,
Baker, John H.	Eames,	Lapham,	Shallenberger,
Baker, W. H.	Ellsworth,	Lathrop,	Sinnickson,
Ballou,	Errett,	Lindsey,	Smalls,
Banks,	Evans, I. Newton	Loring,	Smith, A. Herr
Bayne,	Evans, James L.	Majors,	Starin,
Beebe,	Fort,	Marsh,	Stephens,
Blair,	Foster,	McCook,	Stewart,
Bland,	Freeman,	McGowan,	Stone, John W.
Boyd,	Frye,	McKinley,	Stone, Joseph C.
Brewer,	Gardner,	Metcalfe,	Strait,
Briggs,	Garfield,	Mitchell,	Swann,
Bright,	Hale,	Monroe,	Thompson,
Browne,	Hanna,	Neal,	Thornburgh,
Bundy,	Harmer,	Norcross,	Tipton,
Burchard,	Harris, Benj. W.	Oliver,	Townsend, Amos
Burdick,	Haskell,	O'Neill,	Townsend, M. I.
Butler,	Hayes,	Overton,	Tucker,
Cain,	Hazelton,	Page,	Van Vorhes,
Calkins,	Hendee,	Peddle,	Wait,
Camp,	Henderson,	Phillips,	Walker,
Campbell,	Hiscock,	Pollard,	Walsh,
Cannon,	Hubbell,	Pound,	Ward,
Caswell,	Humphrey,	Powers,	Watson,
Chittenden,	Hungerford,	Price,	White, Harry
Claffin,	Hunter,	Pugh,	White, Michael D.
Clark, Rush	Ittner,	Rainey,	Wigginton,
Cole,	Jones, John S.	Randolph,	Williams, Andrew
Conger,	Jorgensen,	Reed,	Williams, C. G.
Cox, Jacob D.	Joyce,	Rice, William W.	Williams, Richard
Crapo,	Keifer,	Riddle,	Willits,
Cummings,	Keightley,	Robinson, G. D.	Wren,
Danford,		Robinson, M. S.	Young, Casey.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. TIPTON. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. KNAPP, who is detained at his room, being unwell and unable to be here.

Mr. DUNNELL. I ask leave to withdraw my vote.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I object.

Mr. TUCKER. I feel bound not to vote on this question by reason of a pair made with the gentleman from Ohio, General GARFIELD, this morning. If the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] only wants to test whether a quorum is present or not, I desire it to be understood that I am present, and will remain here in order to vote. I have written to General GARFIELD to return to the House or the pair must be at an end. I had no idea that gentlemen on the other side intended to refrain from voting, so as to break a quorum; if I had anticipated this, I should not have made the pair.

Mr. HALE. Let the gentleman from Minnesota, [Mr. DUNNELL] who voted inadvertently, withdraw his vote, and then let the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] vote.

Mr. McMAHON. I object to any withdrawal.

Mr. HALE. I think this is a fair proposition. Let the gentleman from Minnesota withdraw his vote and the gentleman from Virginia vote.

Mr. CONGER. I ask the Chair whether the gentleman from Minnesota has not a right to withdraw his vote?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is at loss to understand under what rule a vote can be withdrawn if objection is made.

Mr. TUCKER. I must hear from the gentleman from Ohio in a very short time.

Mr. HALE. My proposition is objected to on the other side.

Mr. CHALMERS. I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry. Would it be in order to ask a suspension of the roll-call until the gentleman from Virginia can have an opportunity to vote? He is present and is merely waiting to hear from General GARFIELD.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that a suspension of the roll-call would not be in order.

Mr. WADDELL. I rise to ask whether any member of this House—and in this inquiry I refer to my friend from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER]—has any right to make a pair whereby to obstruct public business by defeating a quorum?

The SPEAKER. That is not a question for the Chair to decide, but one for the Representative from Virginia to determine.

Mr. WADDELL. I hope my friend from Virginia will vote. I deny his moral right to make a pair with any member of this House to obstruct the public business by defeating a quorum. I do not think the gentleman would be violating any contract by voting.

Mr. TUCKER. I am very much obliged to my friend from North Carolina for his suggestion; but I have acted all my life on this principle: if there is any doubt about the question of honor, with me the doubt is always on the side of honor.

When the roll-call was concluded,

The SPEAKER said: On this question the Chair votes "no." The vote now stands yeas 3, nays 144; so the motion of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] to lay the bill on the table is not agreed to. The Chair desires to state in this connection that with his vote there are 147 members voting, making a quorum of a full House. But in his own mind he does not think that under present circumstances 147 votes are required for a quorum, as there are two vacancies.

Mr. HALE. Is the Chair prepared to make a definite ruling that anything less than a majority of the entire body can be regarded as a quorum?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not make any ruling in advance, because it is not necessary to do so; but he desires to have read a decision on this point made in the Thirty-seventh Congress; and he thinks it ought to be read now for information when the question is not involved.

Mr. HALE. I understand that the Chair does not make any decision on this point.

The SPEAKER. The Chair never makes a decision until some question is raised requiring a decision.

The Clerk read as follows:

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from New York insist on the demand for the previous question?

Mr. SEDGWICK. I do.

The House divided upon seconding the demand for the previous question; and there were—yeas 52, nays 41.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM. There is no quorum voting.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman raise that point of order?

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM. I do, unless debate is allowed.

The SPEAKER. The Chair decides that the question is decided in the affirmative. The gentleman from Ohio raises the point of order that 52 is not a majority of the quorum necessary to do business. The Chair understands that to be the point.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER. The Chair calls the attention of the House to the question what constitutes a quorum. The Chair will have read the provision of the Constitution on the subject. It is in article I, section 5.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Each House shall be the judge of the election returns and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business."

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now read article I, section 2 of the Constitution.

The Clerk read as follows:

"The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several States."

The SPEAKER. There were chosen to this Congress 183 members. The Chair decides under that clause of the Constitution that 92 would be a majority of all the members chosen, and the majority of a quorum would be 47. The Chair so decides.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM. I concur in that decision. Then the Chair decides that the previous question is seconded?

The SPEAKER. The Chair so decides.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM. I think the House consists only of the members sworn in. The SPEAKER. The Chair has held in this case that those chosen constitute the House, as they have been returned to the Clerk.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM. The Chair has no knowledge of any member unless he appears here. That question may become material by and by, and I save the point.

The SPEAKER. So far as that point is concerned, the Chair withholds its decision as to whether the House consists of those sworn in or of those known to have been elected; but the Chair is clear in his own mind that a majority of those chosen constitute a quorum.

Mr. WEBSTER. I ask that the joint resolution be again read.

The joint resolution was read.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has caused this to be read for the information of the House. It will be observed that Mr. Grow, a Representative from the State of Pennsylvania, made the decision which has been read by the Clerk.

Mr. HALE. Will the Chair allow me a moment?

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. HALE. I am very glad the Chair has not precipitated any decision upon this question. It seems to me that the circumstances of the case which has been cited are not in any degree analogous to the circumstances of this case. To this House there have been undoubtedly at one time or another two hundred and ninety-three members returned and certificated to the House. As this matter does not by any means end here to-day, in case this bill shall come back from the Senate, I will reserve all points as to a quorum, so that whenever the question does come up the matter may be before the House, it being understood that the Chair does not now forestall any question by a decision.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desired to have this information read to the House during a period of calmness, so that when the question does come up and a decision is given by the Chair, it shall not be said that it was precipitately given. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire at this time to call attention to another question which may arise in the deliberations of the House as to parliamentary ruling.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine will give his attention for a moment. The gentleman moved to lay the bill upon the table and made his statement that he wanted this side of the House should be responsible for the passage of the bill. There are yet remaining some amendments upon which no separate vote has been called and if there be no objection he will submit them in gross.

Mr. HALE. I had the impression, as is usual in such cases, that where no separate votes were asked the amendments had already been concurred in in bulk.

The SPEAKER. They were reserved.

Mr. HALE. That is customarily done and I do not object.

The remaining amendments of the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union were concurred in.

Mr. ATKINS moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

Mr. ATKINS demanded the previous question on the passage of the bill.

The previous question was seconded and the main question ordered.

Mr. KEIFER. I demand the yeas and nays on the passage of the bill.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 143, nays 117, not voting 30; as follows:

YEAS—143.

Acklen,	Davis, Joseph J.	Hewitt, G. W.	Robbins,
Aiken,	Dibrell,	Hooker,	Roberts,
Atkins,	Dickey,	House,	Robertson,
Banning,	Durham,	Hunton,	Ross,
Beale,	Eden,	Jones, Frank	Saylor,
Bell,	Eickhoff,	Jones, James T.	Scales,
Benedict,	Elam,	Kenna,	Shelley,
Bicknell,	Ellis,	Kimmel,	Singleten,
Blackburn,	Ewins, John H.	Knott,	Slemmons,
Bliss,	Ewing,	Landers,	Smith, William E.
Blount,	Felton,	Ligon,	Southard,
Boone,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Lockwood,	Sparks,
Bouck,	Finley, Jesse J.	Luttrell,	Springer,
Bragg,	Fleming,	Lynde,	Steele,
Bridges,	Forney,	Mackey,	Stenger,
Bright,	Franklin,	Maish,	Swann,
Buckner,	Fuller,	Manning,	Throckmorton,
Cabell,	Garth,	Martin,	Townsend, R. W.
Caldwell, John W.	Gause,	Mayham,	Turner,
Caldwell, W. P.	Gibson,	McKenzie,	Turney,
Candler,	Giddings,	McMahon,	Vance,
Chalmers,	Glover,	Mills,	Veeder,
Clark, Alvah A.	Goode,	Money,	Waddell,
Clarke of Kentucky,	Gunter,	Morgan,	Walker,
Clark of Missouri,	Hamilton,	Morrison,	Warner,
Clymer,	Hardenbergh,	Morse,	Whitthorne,
Cobb,	Harris, Henry R.	Muldrow,	Williams, James
Collins,	Harris, John T.	Muller,	Williams, Jere N.
Cook,	Harrison,	Patterson, T. M.	Willis, Albert S.
Covert,	Hart,	Pelphs,	Willis, Benj. A.
Cox, Samuel S.	Hartzell,	Potter,	Wilson,
Cravens,	Hatcher,	Pridemore,	Wood,
Crittenden,	Henkle,	Rea,	Wright,
Culbertson,	Henry,	Reagan,	Yeates,
Cutler,	Herbert,	Reilly,	Young, John S.
Davidson,	Hewitt, Abram S.	Rice, Americus V.

NAYS—117.

Aldrich,	Conger,	Henderson,	Neal,
Bacon,	Cox, Jacob D.	Hiscock,	Norcross,
Bagley,	Crapo,	Hubbell,	Oliver,
Baker, John H.	Cummings,	Humphrey,	O'Neill,
Ballou,	Danford,	Hungerford,	Overton,
Bayne,	Davis, Horace	Hunter,	Page,
Blair,	Deering,	Ittner,	Patterson, G. W.
Boyd,	Denison,	James,	Peddle,
Brentano,	Dunnell,	Jorgensen,	Phillips,
Brewer,	Eames,	Joyce,	Pollard,
Briggs,	Ellsworth,	Keifer,	Pound,
Brogden,	Errett,	Keightley,	Price,
Browne,	Evans, I. Newton	Kelley,	Pugh,
Bundy,	Fort,	Ketcham,	Taney,
Burchard,	Foster,	Killinger,	Randolph,
Burdick,	Frye,	Lapham,	Rice, William W.
Cain,	Gardner,	Lathrop,	Robinson, G. D.
Calkins,	Hale,	Lindsey,	Robinson, M. S.
Camp,	Hanna,	Majors,	Ryan,
Campbell,	Harner,	Marsh,	Sampson,
Caswell,	Harris, Benj. W.	McCook,	Sexton,
Chittenden,	Haskell,	McGowan,	Shallenberger,
Claffin,	Hayes,	McKinley,	Sinnickson,
Clark, Rush	Hazelton,	Mitchell,	Smalls,
Cole,	Hendee,	Monroe,	Smith, A. Herr

Starin,
Stewart,
Stone, John W.
Stone, Joseph C.
Strait,

Thompson,
Townsend, Amos
Townsend, M. I.
Van Vorhes,
Wait,

Ward,
Watson,
White, Harry
Williams, Andrew
Williams, C. G.

Williams, Richard
Willits.

NOT VOTING—30.

Bailey,
Baker, William H.
Banks,
Beebe,
Bland,
Butler,
Cannon,
Carlisle,

Dean,
Dwight,
Evans, James L.
Freeman,
Garfield,
Jones, John S.
Knapp,
Loring,

Metcalfe,
Powers,
Reed,
Riddle,
Sapp,
Stephens,
Thornburgh,
Tipton,

Tucker,
Walsh,
White, Michael D.
Wigginton,
Wren,
Young, Casey.

So the bill was passed.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Ohio. My colleague, Mr. KNAPP, is paired with my other colleague, Mr. TIPTON.

Mr. SAPP. I am paired with Mr. WIGGINTON. If he were here, I would vote "no" and he would vote "ay."

Mr. DEAN. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. BANKS, on all political questions. If he were here, he would vote "no" and I would vote "ay."

On motion of Mr. ATKINS, by unanimous consent the reading of the names was dispensed with.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. ATKINS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HEWITT, of Kentucky. I ask that by unanimous consent the Army appropriation bill be taken from the Speaker's table, and that the House non-concur in the Senate amendments and request a committee of conference.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that next Thursday night, at half-past seven o'clock, be made a special order for reports from the following committees: On Indian Affairs, on Revolutionary Pensions, on Railways and Canals, on Education and Labor, on Accounts, on Expenditures in the Treasury Department, and on Invalid Pensions.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I object.

Mr. THOMPSON. I move that the House do now adjourn.

CLAIMS REPORTED ALLOWED.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EDEN] asks the Chair to state the fact that he is called away from the House to-night by reason of the illness of a member of his family, and he asks consent to make a report from the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. THOMPSON. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. EDEN. I am instructed by the Committee on War Claims to report a bill making appropriations for payment of certain claims reported allowed by the accounting officers of the United States Treasury Department, and for other purposes, and ask for its present consideration.

Mr. HANNA. Is it the purpose to put this bill now on its passage?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. HANNA. Then I object.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the bill will be printed and recommitted.

There was no objection; and the bill (H. R. No. 6512) was recommitted to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

ADDITIONAL CLERKS.

Mr. THOMPSON. I withdraw for the present the motion to adjourn, and offer the resolution which I send to the desk. I understand it is an absolute necessity that it should be adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized to employ four additional clerks for the remainder of the session to assist in the engrossment and enrollment of bills, to be paid, out of the contingent fund of the House, such compensation as may be fixed by the Committee of Accounts.

The resolution was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. THOMPSON. I renew the motion to adjourn.

Mr. COX, of New York. Before the House agrees to adjourn I wish to arrange for the business to-morrow. I wish to have the unanimous consent of the House, with the aid of gentlemen on both sides, that after the reading of the Journal to-morrow we shall take up the Federal census bill.

Several members called for the regular order.

The question being taken on the motion to adjourn, there were—ayes 106, noes 63.

Mr. COX, of New York. I do not choose to take up the time of the House by asking for the yeas and nays. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York will be recognized to-morrow morning. His bill is next in order.

Mr. COX, of New York. I have been recognized every morning for some time, but have always failed in getting the bill taken up and disposed of.

The result of the vote on the motion to adjourn was then announced; and accordingly (at four o'clock and fifty-five minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as stated:

By Mr. BLAIR: The petition of Mount Prospect Grange, New Hampshire, for the passage of the Reagan interstate commerce bill—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. BLISS: The petition of Silas P. Knight, for an act authorizing the Commissioner of Patents to extend patent No. 20353—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. BURCHARD: The petition of H. H. Newcomer and others, for the removal of the charge of desertion from the military record of Charles Fletcher—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CLARK, of New Jersey: The petition of the women of Sparta Presbyterian church, Sussex County, New Jersey, for legislation to make effective the anti-polygamy law of 1862—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CONGER: The petition of Ida Cottrell and 120 other women, of Vassar, Tuscola County, Michigan, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. DANFORD: The petition of Mrs. Maggie J. Blackford and 56 other women, of Columbiana County, Ohio, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. DAVIS, of California: Memorial of the constitutional convention of California, protesting against the passage of House bill No. 6083—to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. DEERING: The petition of 158 citizens of Butler and Black Hawk Counties, Iowa, for the amendment of the patent laws—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia: Resolution of the members of Milldale Grange, No. 50, of Warren County, Virginia, asking the reduction of the tax on tobacco—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. LORING: The petition of 300 workmen in the shoe manufacturing of Haverhill, Massachusetts, for a renewal of the McKay sewing-machine patent—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. PRIDEMORE: The petition of Grange No. 434, Virginia, for the passage of the Reagan interstate commerce bill—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, the petition of Grange No. 434, Virginia, for the reduction of the tax on tobacco—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. ROSS: The petition of Sarah M. Barclay, Phebe Marshall, and other women, of Eatontown and vicinity, Monmouth County, New Jersey, for legislation to make effective the anti-polygamy law of 1862—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. STENGER: The petition of 843 citizens of Huntingdon and Millin Counties, Pennsylvania, against the passage of the bills S. No. 300 and H. R. No. 1612, relating to the patent laws—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. STEWART: Memorial of the Legislature of Minnesota, asking Congress to give to each living soldier and officer who served in the Army of the United States nine months or longer during the late civil or Mexican war one-quarter section of land, now or hereafter to be subject to entry under the laws of the United States—to the Committee on Public Lands.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Minnesota, for the improvement of the western channel of the Mississippi River at Saint Paul, Minnesota—to the Committee on Commerce.

IN SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, February 26, 1879.

The Senate met at eleven o'clock a. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. BYRON SUNDERLAND, D. D.

THE JOURNAL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will delay the reading of the Journal for a few minutes until Senators come in.

Mr. INGALLS, (at eleven o'clock and ten minutes a. m.) Mr. President, it appears to be past the hour to which the Senate adjourned yesterday, and I ask why the Journal is not read?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Simply because it is apparent there is no quorum present.

Mr. INGALLS. Has the want of a quorum been ascertained in any definite manner?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has been ascertained by view by the Chair. He regards it his duty under the first rule of the Senate not to permit the Journal to be read until a quorum is present.

Mr. INGALLS. I suggest that the proper method of ascertaining the presence or absence of a quorum would be by calling the roll.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is an order. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll.

Mr. KERNAN. I am requested to say that the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BAYARD) is in the room of the Committee on Finance and will come if needed. He is engaged just now on a conference committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is a quorum present, forty-one Senators having answered to their names. The Secretary will read the Journal of the proceedings of yesterday.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when,

On motion of Mr. INGALLS, and by unanimous consent, the further reading of the Journal was dispensed with.

CREDENTIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented the credentials of Nathaniel P. Hill, chosen by the Legislature of Colorado a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1879; which were read, and ordered to be filed.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from Alexander L. Holley, and endorsed by General Q. A. Gillmore, members of the board for testing iron and steel, recommending an appropriation by Congress to reimburse Mr. A. H. Emery for the moneys expended by him in the building of a machine for testing iron and steel at Watertown arsenal, Massachusetts; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented the petition of Mrs. Laura M. Seymour, of Carroll County, Illinois, praying for the removal of her political disabilities and that she may be declared invested with full power to exercise her right of self-government at the ballot-box; which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. WITHERS presented a memorial of Ashland Grange, No. 113, of Hanover County, Virginia, in favor of the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 3547) to regulate interstate commerce and to prohibit unjust discriminations by common carriers; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. RANDOLPH presented resolutions adopted by a mass meeting of cigar manufacturers at Hoboken, New Jersey, on the 21st instant, in favor of legislation by Congress for the proper establishment of cigar factories and prohibiting the manufacture of cigars in block tenement-houses; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of Cornelia C. Hussey, of East Orange, Essex County, New Jersey, praying for the removal of her political disabilities, and that she may be declared invested with full power to exercise her right of self-government at the ballot-box; which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He also presented the memorial of J. W. Dudley and others, citizens of New Jersey, engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes, remonstrating against the extension of the patent granted to McKay and Mathies for an improvement in sewing-machines; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WALLACE presented a memorial of Allen Grange, No. 526, of Lehigh County, Pennsylvania; the memorial of Welcome Home Grange, No. 551, of Berks County, Pennsylvania, and the memorial of Millville Grange, No. 131, of Erie County, Pennsylvania, in favor of the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 3547) to regulate interstate commerce and to prohibit unjust discriminations by common carriers; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. HEREFORD presented a memorial of Bowman Grange, No. 343, of Marshall County, West Virginia, and a memorial of Green Hill Grange, No. 8, of Berkeley County, West Virginia, in favor of the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 3547) to regulate interstate commerce and to prohibit unjust discriminations by common carriers; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of Bowman Grange, No. 343, of Marshall County, West Virginia, and a memorial of Green Hill Grange, No. 8, of Berkeley County, West Virginia, in favor of the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to internal revenue; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SHARON presented resolutions of the Legislature of Nevada, in favor of the passage of a law to donate arid lands to citizens who shall perfect flowing artesian wells in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois, presented the petition of P. B. Perkit and others, citizens of Pittsfield, Pike County, Illinois, praying for the passage of a law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in the District of Columbia except for medicinal, mechanical, and scientific purposes; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. HOAR, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1126) for the relief of Moses Meyers, executor of Meyer Meyers, deceased, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of A. Burwell, of the District of Columbia, praying compensation for the use and occupancy of his property at Vicksburgh, Mississippi, by United States troops during the late war, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Mrs. C. M. Pritchard, of New Orleans, praying for compensation for the use and occupancy of and damages to her property by United States military forces during the years 1863, 1864, and 1865, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

Mr. HOAR. The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of William H. Sneed, of Tennessee, praying compensation for the alleged use and occupancy of his property by the United States military forces during the rebellion, direct me to report orally that the prayer is for compensation for property taken and occupied for military purposes during the war in a State in insurrection and without any contract whatever for rent, and under the principles uniformly acted upon the claim ought to be denied. I therefore move that the committee be discharged from its further consideration.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SARGENT. The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom were referred the joint resolution (S. R. No. 55) authorizing the President to appoint Passed Assistant Surgeon John W. Ross a surgeon in the United States Navy, the joint resolution (S. R. No. 49) authorizing the President to appoint Surgeon J. Rufus Tryon a medical inspector in the United States Navy, the bill (S. No. 1734) authorizing the President to appoint Dr. Thomas Owens a surgeon (not in the line of promotion) in the regular Navy of the United States, the joint resolution (S. R. No. 45) authorizing the President to appoint Dr. William Martin a full surgeon in the United States Navy, have instructed me to report these joint resolutions and bill back and recommend that they be indefinitely postponed. In this connection the committee desire me to say that, while they believe in some of these cases there was considerable meritorious and perhaps self-sacrificing effort on the part of these persons, worthy of commendation, they do not think it is advisable, considering the interests of the public service and the harmony of the Medical Corps of the Navy, to recommend the passage of any of the measures just reported.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill and joint resolutions will be indefinitely postponed, if there be no objection.

Mr. SARGENT, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 6469) for the relief of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Page reported it without amendment.

Mr. SARGENT. The same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 5050) to authorize the settlement of the accounts of Acting Assistant Paymaster Edward K. Winship, United States Navy, have instructed me to report it favorably without amendment, and to ask that it be substituted for a Senate bill on the same subject heretofore reported favorably by the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That order will be made, and the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. SARGENT also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1818) to promote the efficiency of the corps of the naval constructors of the United States Navy, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1730) to reduce the number and fix the relative rank of the civil engineers in the Navy, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1670) to regulate and define the rank of the staff of the Marine Corps, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. SARGENT. I am also instructed by the same committee, to whom were referred the bill (S. No. 1787) for the relief of Jeronimus S. Underhill; the bill (S. No. 765) for the relief of Donald McKay; the bill (S. No. 336) for the relief of Nathaniel McKay; the petition of Secor & Co., (by Mary A. Secor, executrix, &c.,) praying for relief as to a claim for damages arising out of a contract for the construction of certain iron-clad vessels, and the memorial of Charles P. Choteau and William A. Steel, praying payment of balance alleged to be due for constructing the monitor Etlah, to report these several bills and petitions back and ask to be discharged from the further consideration of the petitions and that the bills be indefinitely postponed, and as covering the whole subject, I report a bill which I ask may be read the first and second times and placed upon the Calendar.

The bill (S. No. 1857) for the relief of the builders of iron-clad vessels for the United States was read twice by its title.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The order asked for by the Senator from California in the other cases will be entered.

Mr. SARGENT. The same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 245) for the relief of J. D. Graham, have instructed me to report adversely, but desire that the adverse report shall not be taken as concluding the bill if it shall be referred hereafter to another committee. I am also instructed to make the same report in relation to the bill (S. No. 293) to authorize the payment of prize-money to the captors of the steamboat New Era No. 5 and cargo. We desire that these reports shall be considered without prejudice, although we ask that the bills be indefinitely postponed at this session.

The bills were indefinitely postponed.

Mr. SARGENT. The same committee, to whom were referred the bill (S. No. 1145) to amend section 1485 and to repeal section 1486 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and the bill (S. No. 1180) to amend section 1471 and other sections of the Revised Statutes concerning the relative rank of staff and line officers in the Navy, instruct me to report them adversely, at the same time saying that on account of the multiplicity of duties that devolve upon the committee we have not been able to give the subjects involved in them, which is the relation between the line and staff of the Navy, the attention which their importance demands. We desire that the adverse reports shall be considered without prejudice to the bills. The bills proceed upon exactly opposite theories, one being in favor of the line and the other in favor of the staff.

The bills were postponed indefinitely.

Mr. VOORHEES, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment:

A bill (H. R. No. 585) for the relief of Daniel C. Putnam;

A bill (H. R. No. 4385) granting an increase of pension to Caroline Hawley;

A bill (H. R. No. 846) for the relief of Thomas C. Young, late private of Company F, Thirty-ninth Iowa Infantry;

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2944) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Parrott, of Hardin County, Ohio; and

A bill (H. R. No. 2489) granting a pension to John Gavin, Sixteenth New York Cavalry.

He also, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 6242) for the relief of soldiers and sailors becoming totally blind in the service of the country, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. VOORHEES, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4554) for the relief of James G. Harrison, reported it without amendment.

Mr. MORGAN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom were referred the message of the President of the United States communicating information in answer to a Senate resolution of November 8, 1877, in relation to an alleged unlawful rescue by an armed band from Mexico of prisoners lawfully confined in the jail at Rio Grande City, Texas, and a message from the President of the United States communicating, in answer to a Senate resolution of April 29, 1878, information respecting the terms and conditions under which the surrender of the Cuban insurgents have been made and in relation to the future policy of Spain in the government of the island of Cuba, asked to be discharged from their further consideration; which was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. No. 54) providing for a treaty with the Republic of Mexico, reported adversely thereon, and the joint resolution was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred a concurrent resolution of the Senate submitted May 9, 1878, touching the relations of the United States of America with the Republic of Mexico, asked to be discharged from its further consideration; which was agreed to.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1725) for the erection of a building for a post-office and United States courts in San Francisco, California, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred a letter of the Postmaster-General, in relation to the selection of a site for a city post-office in the city of Washington, reported an amendment to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred a letter of the Secretary of the Interior inclosing a copy of a letter from the governor of New Mexico in relation to the condition of the house occupied by him for the executive offices, and recommending an appropriation for the alteration and repair of the same, reported an amendment to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. ROLLINS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 6175) to incorporate the Mount Pleasant Railroad Company of the District of Columbia; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. McPHERSON, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1633) for the relief of the captors of the ram Albemarle, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. KIRKWOOD, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2769) granting an increase of pension to Catharine H. Gallagher, widow of Captain John Gallagher, late United States Navy, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. INGALLS, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4258) for the relief of settlers upon the Absentee Shawnee lands in Kansas and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. ANTHONY. I wish to make some reports from the Committee on Printing.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask consent of my friend from Rhode Island, as the Judiciary Committee is sitting and I desire to go down-stairs to attend it, to make a report from that committee, to go on the Calendar.

Mr. ANTHONY. I have no objection, if I do not lose the floor.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, which was instructed by a resolution of the Senate a few days ago to prepare and report as soon as might be provisions of law in a bill further to protect the constitutional rights of citizens and to punish violations of the same, to report a bill which the committee recommends be passed. I ask that it be read the first and second times.

The bill (S. No. 1858) further to protect the constitutional rights of citizens and to punish violations of the same was read twice by its title.

Mr. ANTHONY, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1541) to provide for additional maps of the battle of Gettysburg, asked to be discharged from its further consideration; which was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred a resolution submitted by Mr. CHAFFEE, to print 5,000 copies of the quarto reports and accompanying atlas sheets of the Geographical Surveys West of the One Hundredth Meridian, asked to be discharged from its further consideration; which was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the memorial of Franklin Rives, praying for an examination by the Committee on Printing into the propriety of making a contract with him for the printing of the debates of Congress, asked to be discharged from its further consideration; which was agreed to.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to whom were referred the memorial of the Medical Society of the City of New York, and memorials of the Public Health Association and Philadelphia College of Physicians, praying for the publication of the subject catalogue of the library of the Surgeon-General's Office, have instructed me to ask to be discharged from their further consideration. The committee look upon this as a very valuable contribution to medical science, but it is too late in the session to consider it at present.

The report was agreed to.

ADDRESSES ON REPRESENTATIVE HARTRIDGE.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a resolution to print 20,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of Julian Hartridge, late a member of the House of Representatives from the State of Georgia, have instructed me to report it with amendments. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendments reported from the Committee on Printing were, in line 2, to strike out "twenty" and insert "twelve;" in line 7, to strike out "five" and insert "three;" and in line 8, to strike out "fifteen" and insert "nine;" so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That 12,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the late Julian Hartridge, late a Representative from the State of Georgia, be printed: of which 3,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, and 9,000 for the use of the House of Representatives.

The amendments were agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, was concurred in.

ADDRESSES ON REPRESENTATIVE A. S. WILLIAMS.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to whom was referred a concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives to print 20,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of the late Alpheus S. Williams, instruct me to report it back with similar amendments. I ask for its present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendments reported from the Committee on Printing were, in line 2, to strike out "twenty" and insert "twelve;" in line 7, to strike out "fifteen" and insert "nine;" and in line 9, to strike out "five" and insert "three;" so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That there be printed 12,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of the late Alpheus S. Williams, late a Representative from the State of Michigan, of which 9,000 shall be for the use of the House, and 3,000 for the use of the Senate.

The amendments were agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, was concurred in.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES ON REPRESENTATIVE SCHLEICHER.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to whom was referred a similar resolution for publishing the memorial addresses delivered in honor of the late Gustave Schleicher, have instructed me to report it with similar amendments. I ask for its present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendments reported from the Committee on Printing were, in line 2, to strike out "twenty" and insert "twelve;" in line 6, to strike out "fifteen" and insert "nine;" and in line 8, to strike out "five" and insert "three;" so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, (the Senate concurring,) That there be printed 12,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of Hon. Gustave Schleicher; 9,000 for the use of the House, and 3,000 for the use of the Senate.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. WITHERS. I move to amend the resolution by adding to it a similar provision with regard to the addresses delivered in the House of Representatives and to be delivered in the Senate on the occasion of the death of Hon. Beverly B. Douglas, of Virginia.

Mr. ANTHONY. I have no objection to such an amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That can only be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. WITHERS. I ask unanimous consent.

Mr. HOAR. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made. Under the rule the resolution which the Senator from Virginia proposes must go to the Committee on Printing.

The resolution, as amended, was concurred in.

Mr. HOAR subsequently said: I desire to withdraw my objection to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Virginia to the resolution reported by the Senator from Rhode Island from the Committee on Printing. I understand that it has been a customary mode of ordering the printing in advance.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Virginia [Mr. WITHERS] asks unanimous consent to amend the resolution for printing the memorial addresses on the late Mr. Schleicher. The vote by which the resolution was passed will be regarded as reconsidered for that purpose.

Mr. WITHERS. I move to amend the resolution by providing that a like number of copies be printed in the case of Hon. Beverly B. Douglas, late a Representative from the first district of Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SAUNDERS. Will the Senator from Rhode Island allow me to make the same motion in relation to the memorial addresses on the late Hon. Frank Welch?

Mr. ANTHONY. Certainly.

Mr. SAUNDERS. That is exactly a similar case, and I move that the memorial addresses upon that occasion be also added.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. To this the Chair hears no objection, and the resolution will be so amended.

The resolution, as amended, was concurred in.

PRINTING OF A BILL.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to whom was referred a resolution to print 1,000 copies of Senate bill No. 1398 and the accompanying report for the use of the two Houses of Congress, have instructed me to report back the same without amendment and recommend its passage. I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That 1,000 copies of Senate bill No. 1398 and accompanying report No. 513 be printed for the use of the two Houses of Congress, the number heretofore printed being exhausted.

HAYDEN'S TENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to whom was referred the following resolution:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House concurring,) That there be printed and bound at the Government Printing Office, for the use of the Department of the Interior, 2,000 copies of Professor Hayden's tenth annual report of the Geological and Geographical Survey of the Territories for 1876, uniform with the edition ordered by Congress—have instructed me to ask to be discharged from its further consideration, as it has already passed in the form of a concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives.

The report was agreed to.

ARMY REGULATIONS OF 1863.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to whom was referred a resolution to print 1,500 copies of the Army Regulations of 1863, have instructed me to ask to be discharged from its further consideration, as it is provided for as an amendment in an appropriation bill.

The committee was discharged from the further consideration of the following resolution:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring,) That there be printed 1,500 copies of the Army Regulations of 1863; 500 copies for the use of the Senate and 1,000 copies for the use of the House.

PROFESSOR FONTAINE'S HYDRAULIC ENGINEERING.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. No. 63) accepting from Professor Edward Fontaine, of Louisiana, certain maps, drawings, and explanations of the same have instructed me to report it back with an amendment. I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Printing was to add to the joint resolution:

Resolved further, That the regular number of these maps and drawings, with the explanations, be printed in quarto form; and that 100 additional copies be printed for the use of Professor Fontaine.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RENT OF GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS.

Mr. DAWES. I am instructed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, who were directed by a resolution of the Senate to report to the Senate concerning the number of buildings rented by the Government in the District of Columbia, amount paid for same &c., to submit a letter from the Treasury Department giving the required information. I ask that this letter be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The order to print will be entered.

Mr. DAWES. I desire to call the attention of the Senate to the fact which it discloses, that the Government is paying annually for the rental of buildings in this city alone, outside of the buildings owned by the Government, an annual rental of more than $119,000.

Mr. BECK. I wish to ask the Senator from Massachusetts whether the account of the rents paid by the Government in this city was ordered to be printed in the RECORD. We may desire to see it before we pass upon the sundry civil appropriation bill, and there is no other way of seeing it.

Mr. DAWES. I think it would be well to have it published in the RECORD as well as published as one of the documents of the Senate.

Mr. BECK. We shall then be able to see it when we consider the sundry civil bill.

Mr. DAWES. It may be published both as a document and in the RECORD as well.

Mr. ANTHONY. What is the use of printing it in the RECORD when it is to be printed as a document?

Mr. DAWES. So that it may be here by to-morrow, if necessary to refer to it then.

Mr. BECK. We may desire to use it in the Committee on Appropriations in reference to the sundry civil bill, and we shall not be able to obtain it unless it appears in the RECORD to-morrow. We desire to report the bill back to-morrow.

Mr. DAWES. I think it is a very useful paper, and it will be of use in considering the sundry civil bill. It is not very long. I agree with the Senator from Kentucky that it should be published in the RECORD; but it should be also published as one of the documents of the Senate.

The communication was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., February 24, 1879.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 4th instant, inclosing copy of a Senate resolution requesting information as to the number of buildings in the District of Columbia rented by the various Departments of the Government, by whom rented, and for what purposes, and the amount of rent paid for each building.

In order to enable me to comply with your request it became necessary to apply to the several Departments for information as to the buildings rented by them respectively in this District, and a response to your letter has been on that account delayed until this time. I have now the honor to inclose herewith a statement exhibiting the information called for. From this statement it will appear that the amount of rent paid for buildings and rooms rented by the several Departments in this District is as follows:

War Department, (about).....	$48,460 52
Interior Department.....	26,800 00
Navy Department.....	3,920 00
Department of Justice.....	10,000 00
Post-Office Department.....	1,500 00
State Department.....	800 00
Treasury Department.....	27,800 00
Total.....	119,280 52

Very respectfully,

JOHN SHERMAN, Secretary.

HON. H. L. DAWES,
Chairman Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds,
United States Senate.

Statement of buildings and rooms rented by the United States Government in the District of Columbia, with location, purpose for which used, name of lessor, and amount of rent paid.

Location.	Name of lessor.	For what purpose.	Amount.
For use of Treasury Department, (annual rent:)
Fifteenth street, northwest, between D and E streets.....	Mrs. B. Y. Brownell.....	Bureau of Statistics.....	$3,600 00
No. 1421 G street, northwest.....	W. S. Thompson.....	Marine Hospital.....	1,800 00
Seventeenth street, northwest, corner New York avenue.....	Mr. McKean.....	Files-room Second Auditor's Office.....	1,200 00
No. 641 Seventeenth street, northwest.....	Mr. Clark.....	Property division Second Auditor's Office.....	1,200 00
No. 205 New Jersey avenue.....	B. F. Butler.....	Coast Survey and Office of Standard Weights and Measures.....	6,000 00
No. 211 New Jersey avenue, south. }	A. and T. A. Richards.....	Coast Survey.....	14,000 00
No. 215 South Capitol street..... }
			27,800 00
For use of Interior Department, (annual rent:)
Corner Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue.....	A. D. Jessup.....	Pension Office.....	16,000 00
No. 1421 G street, northwest.....	J. W. Wright.....	Education and Patent Office.....	7,200 00
No. 509 Seventh street, (third and fourth floors).....	Second National Bank.....	United States Geological Survey of Territories.....	2,400 00
No. 201 East Capitol street.....		United States Geological Survey of Rocky Mountain Region.....	1,200 00
			26,800 00
For use of State Department, (annual rent:)
No. 915 E street, northwest.....	John H. Clark.....	Carriage-house and wagon-shed.....	800 00
For use of Post-Office, (annual rent:)
No. 915 E street, northwest.....	A. C. Bradley.....	Office of topographer.....	1,500 00
For use of Navy Department, (annual rent:)
No. 174 New York avenue.....	James Towles, agent.....	Hydrographic Office.....	2,000 00
Corner Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue.....	W. W. Corcoran.....	Nautical Almanac Office.....	720 00
Corner Eighteenth and G streets, northwest.....	Mrs. Mary M. Kearney.....	Dispensary and medical board.....	400 00
Corner New York avenue and Fifteenth street.....	National Savings-Bank.....	Navy Pay Office.....	720 00
			3,920 00
For use of Department of Justice, (annual rent:)
Pennsylvania avenue, between Fifteenth and Fifteen-and-a-half streets.....	Commissioners Free-man's Savings-Bank.....	Department of Justice.....	*10,000 00
For use of War Department, (monthly rent:)
No. 612 Seventeenth street.....	James A. Shorter.....	Adjutant-General's Office.....	100 00
No. 616 Seventeenth street.....	John H. Clark.....	do.....	83 33 1/3
No. 618 Seventeenth street.....	do.....	do.....	83 33 1/3
No. 620 Seventeenth street.....	do.....	do.....	175 00
No. 1704 G street.....	do.....	do.....	216 66 2/3
No. 720 Seventeenth street.....	W. Thompson; F. P. Stanton, attorney.....	do.....	225 00
No. 1707 and No. 1709 New York avenue.....	W. H. Philip and W. S. Cox.....	do.....	250 00
No. 1705 G street.....	Margaret Aylmer.....	Adjutant-General's Office.....	80 00
Pennsylvania avenue and Seventeenth street, (2d and 3d floors).....	do.....	do.....	90 00
No. 1719 and No. 1721 G street.....	Joseph Redfern.....	Signal Office.....	158 33 1/3
No. 1719 and 1721 Pennsylvania avenue, (second floor).....	L. M. Saunders.....	do.....	40 00
No. 1813 F street.....	William Tracy, trustee.....	Explorations West of One Hundredth Meridian.....	133 33 1/3
No. 616 Eighteenth street.....	W. L. Drury, attorney, &c.....	do.....	80 00
No. 1733 G street.....	J. H. Collins.....	Medical dispensary.....	83 33 1/3
Square No. 232.....	E. W. Young.....	Quartermaster's stables.....	125 00
Square No. 231—lots 9 and 10.....	William Pettibone, agent.....	Subsistence department.....	13 41
Part of subplot 30, in square No. 167.....	A. Hyde, agent.....	War Department stables.....	20 00
No. 1214 F street.....	M. L. Reed.....	Paymaster-General's Office.....	375 00
Southwest corner Seventeenth and F streets.....	William M. Caldwell.....	Office for State, War, and Navy Departments, Washington Monument, and Public Buildings and Grounds.....	175 00
No. 1907 Pennsylvania avenue.....	Mrs. C. R. Dulany.....	United States engineer's office, in charge of Washington, Maryland, and North Carolina river and harbor improvements.....	40 00
Southeast corner Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue.....	Alexander Randall, executor.....	Quartermaster-General's Office.....	833 33 1/3
Northwest corner Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue.....	W. W. Corcoran; A. Hyde, attorney.....	Surgeon-General's Office.....	266 66 2/3

* The lease is for $17,000, but the sum paid has been the annual amount appropriated by Congress, being this fiscal year $10,000.

Statement of buildings and rooms rented by the United States Government in the District of Columbia, &c.—Continued.

Location.	Name of lessor.	For what purpose.	Amount.
Fifteen-and-a-half street, between Pennsylvania avenue and H street.	F. D. Lewis, attorney.....	Commissary-General's Office.....	$250 00
No. 1725 G street.....	Thomas Hyde, attorney.....	Signal Office, property division.....	100 00
No. 714 Nineteenth street.....	Samuel Statt.....	Office publication of records of rebellion.....	41 00
			4,028 41

RECAPITULATION.

Buildings.	Number rented.	Amount of annual rent paid.
Treasury Department.....	7	$27,800 00
Interior Department.....	4	20,800 00
State Department.....	1	800 00
Post-Office.....	1	1,500 00
Navy Department.....	4	3,920 00
Department of Justice.....	1	10,000 00
War Department.....	25	*48,400 92
	43	119,220 92

* About.

NOTICES OF BUSINESS.

Mr. THURMAN. I rise to say that as soon as the morning business is disposed of I shall ask the Senate to take up a bill reported from the Committee on the Judiciary day before yesterday, dividing the State of Louisiana into two judicial districts. There is a very pressing necessity for the immediate passage of this bill, and I hope the Senate at the close of the morning business will agree to take it up and pass it.

Mr. WITHERS. I desire to give notice to the Senate to-day that I shall ask to-morrow afternoon to take up for consideration the resolution sent from the House of Representatives on the occasion of the death of Hon. Beverly B. Douglas, late a Representative from Virginia.

EVENING SESSION FOR THE CALENDAR.

Mr. VOORHEES. I rise for the purpose of moving the Senate that the Senate this afternoon will take a recess and meet at half past seven o'clock this evening, for the purpose of then proceeding with the unobjected cases on the Calendar. I make that motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana moves that the Senate take a recess to-day until half past seven o'clock this evening, for the purpose of considering at the evening session unobjected cases on the Calendar of general orders. Is there objection to the suggestion? The Chair hears none, and it is agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. CONOVER asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1859) amendatory of and supplementary to the act entitled "An act to incorporate the Texas Pacific Railroad Company, and to aid in the construction of its road, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1871, and the several acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Railroads.

Mr. MAXEY asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1860) granting the right of way to and making a grant of land in aid of the construction of the New Orleans and Colorado Railway; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Railroads.

Mr. EATON asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 1861) for the relief of Elisha T. Smith; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. HAMLIN, it was Ordered, That Joseph H. Colton be authorized to withdraw from the files of the Senate such papers as were presented to the Senate in support of claims made against the government of Bolivia.

CLAIMS FOR ARMY SUPPLIES.

Mr. McMILLAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 6362) making appropriations for the payment of claims reported allowed by the commissioners of claims under the act of Congress of March 3, 1871, and acts amendatory thereof.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask the Senate to consider the amendments from the Committee on Claims as they are reached in their order in the reading of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments will be reported and acted upon as they are reached.

Mr. SPENCER. I suggest that only the amendments be read, and that we act on the bill as a whole. There is no use of reading those names.

Mr. COCKRELL. I see the committee omitted to note a correction in line 46, page 3, where the name is printed "Nadey K. Elkins" in place of "Nancy K. Elkins."

Mr. McMILLAN. That is a typographical error.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will correct it.

Mr. SPENCER. I move that only the amendments be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The time within which this measure may be considered by unanimous consent has expired. Is there consent that it be further considered?

Mr. ALLISON. When does the deficiency bill come up in regular order?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It comes up in regular order at this time.

Mr. ALLISON. Then I object to going on with anything else.

Mr. McMILLAN. This is a bill reported from the Committee on Claims and is an appropriation bill.

Mr. ALLISON. Undoubtedly, but we are considering one appropriation bill, and it is very important that we should finish one thing before we take up another.

Mr. SPENCER. I suggest that the deficiency bill does not come up in regular order until half past twelve.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair mistook the time. The call of the Calendar of general orders is now in order until half past twelve.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not desire to interfere with the regular order of business until the deficiency bill is in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The deficiency bill will come up as a matter of right in half an hour.

Mr. ALLISON. Then I have no objection to going on with this bill until that time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Until that time the Senate will consider the pending measure.

Mr. THURMAN. What is the order of the Senate?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Unanimous consent has been given for the consideration of the bill now pending, making an appropriation for the payment of southern claims, which has been partially considered.

Mr. HOAR. I understood the Senator from Alabama to ask unanimous consent that the amendments only might be read. This is a mere copy of the report of the southern claims commission, twice carefully examined and verified, first in the House of Representatives and next in the Senate. The reading of the bill would be merely reading forty or fifty pages of names and sums.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Shall the amendments of the bill only be reported? The Chair hears no objection to the suggestion, and the Secretary will read the amendments in order.

The first amendment of the Committee on Claims was, in line 202 of section 1, to insert the words "daughter of John H. McGavock;" so as to read:

To Sue J. McGavock, daughter of John H. McGavock, $1,211.12.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 251, to strike out "Louise E. Southwick, daughter of Emily Southwick," and insert "the legal representatives of Emily Southwick, deceased, late of Saint John's County, Florida;" so as to read:

To the legal representatives of Emily Southwick, deceased, late of Saint John's County, Florida, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 260, to strike out "Nedour" and insert "Nedorn;" so as to read:

To Nedorn L. Angier, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 459, after the word "said," to insert the word "heirs."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to strike out lines 486, 487, and 488, in the following words:

To E. T. Eggleston, executor of Sophia A. Fox, deceased, $6,874.

Mr. LAMAR. I hope the Senate will not concur in the amendment of the committee striking out these two lines. I am not in the habit of occupying the attention of the Senate upon any of these subjects, and would not do so now but for my conviction that the committee has fallen into one of those errors which it is impossible, with the utmost vigilance, to avoid in the press of the enormous mass of matters claiming their attention.

The facts in the case are simply these: This claim was filed before the commissioners of claims in December, 1871, by Mrs. Sophia A. Fox, of Warren County, Mississippi. It was for stock and farm products taken and used by the Army during the war, valued at $31,000. She filed her claim before the commissioners of claims, brought her proofs, and the claim was allowed by the commissioners. I simply wish to read an extract from the decisions of the commissioners, which is very short. Concerning the loyalty of Mrs. Fox, the commissioners say in their report:

She and her husband were natives of Connecticut, and she had a widespread reputation for her many virtues; she was pious, and hospitable, and was very kind to her servants, who were much attached to her in return. She swears to her loyal sentiments, to her opposition to secession and the war, and to her devotion to the Union. Several witnesses, including her own associates and officers of the Union Army, testify to her ardent expressions of loyalty; to her care of sick Union soldiers and officers, and to her general reputation for loyalty. She was not complicated with the rebellion in any manner. We find her loyal.

In 1873, after her petition was filed and after her proofs were taken, this estimable lady, Mrs. Fox, died, leaving a will in which Mr. Eggleston, the party named in this bill, was nominated executor of her estate, which estate she bequeathed and devised to certain persons living in Warren County, Mississippi. Now, sir, although the commissioners decided that this claim was well founded for $11,748; although they found the claimant to be loyal, and actually recommended $4,874 to be paid to one of the parties interested, they refused to award the other $6,874 because the loyalty of the other person to whom her estate was left was not established. If this amendment of the committee is concurred in, the effect of its action will be a confiscation of the estate of a citizen adjudged to be loyal.

Now, this claim was allowed by the commissioners of claims in December, 1876, and paid in the summer of 1877; it was presented by petition to the first session of the next Congress following—the Forty-fifth—and has been before Congress ever since, following after this act.

I presume that this statement of facts ought to be sufficient to satisfy the Senate that the bill should remain as it was sent to us from the House.

Mr. McMILLAN. There is but little time to engage in discussion on this bill if we wish to pass it at all. I will, therefore, content myself by saying that the claim stricken out by the Senate Committee on Claims is a claim which was rejected by the southern claims commissioners, that the House without any decision from the commissioners inserted it in the bill, and the Senate committee in their examination of the bill struck it out as not coming within the purview of the bill. This bill as amended contains only claims reported favorably by the commission. If there is any equity in the claim suggested by the Senator from Mississippi, that would be proper to be considered in a separate bill introduced into the Senate or the House of Representatives. But this claim, however, was stricken out because it was not allowed by the commissioners; and I hope the time will not be used in discussing this matter if the whole bill is not to fail.

Mr. LAMAR. I shall not discuss it except to add one sentence, and that is that the commissioners decided that the claimant was loyal and that her claim was equitable.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Committee on Claims.

The question being put, a division was called for, and the ayes were 19.

Mr. McMILLAN. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 26, nays 32; as follows:

YEAS—26.

Allison,	Ferry,	Matthews,	Saunders,
Anthony,	Hamlin,	Mitchell,	Spencer,
Burnside,	Hoar,	Morrill,	Teller,
Cameron of Pa.,	Howe,	Paddock,	Wadleigh,
Cameron of Wis.,	Ingalls,	Plumb,	Windom,
Dawes,	Kirkwood,	Rollins,
Dorsey,	McMillan,	Sargent,

NAYS—32.

Bailey,	Butler,	Dennis,	Grover,
Barnum,	Coke,	Eaton,	Harris,
Bayard,	Conover,	Enstis,	Hill,
Beck,	Davis of W. Va.,	Gordon,	Jones of Florida,

Kellogg,
Kernan,
Lamar,
McCreery,

McPherson,
Maxey,
Merrimon,
Morgan,

Randolph,
Ransom,
Shields,
Thurman,

Voerhees,
Wallace,
Whyte,
Withers.

ABSENT—18.

Blaine,
Booth,
Bruce,
Chaffee,
Chandler,

Cockrell,
Conkling,
Davis of Ill.,
Edmunds,
Garland,

Hereford,
Johnston,
Jones of Nevada,
McDonald,
Oglesby,

Patterson,
Saulsbury,
Sharon.

So the amendment was rejected.

The next amendment of the Committee on Claims was, in section 2, line 2, after the word "deceased," to insert "Mrs. Julia Elliott, widow and administratrix of Newell D. Elliott, deceased; Charles M. Holder, James Monroe, Mrs. Ellen G. Sleemaker, Alexander Davis."

Mr. HILL. I move after the name "Alexander Davis" to insert the name of "Edward Power." I will state to the Senate—

Mr. McMILLAN. The committee amendments are not through with.

Mr. HILL. I propose to add "Edward Power" to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. McMILLAN. I think we had better dispose of the committee amendments first.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Georgia after the committee amendments are disposed of.

Mr. HILL. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Claims was, in section 2, line 26, after the name "Armstead Burwell," to insert "and Mrs. Julia D. Elliott, widow and administratrix of Newell D. Elliott."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 31, after the word "cases," to insert "mentioned in this section."

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The committee amendments are disposed of.

Mr. McMILLAN. I am instructed by the committee to move to amend the bill on page 45, line 26 of section 2, by striking out the letter "D." after "Julia," so as to read "Mrs. Julia Elliott."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McMILLAN. I am also instructed by the committee to move to amend the bill by inserting on page 44, in line 2 of section 2, after the word "deceased," the words "William C. Napier, of Tennessee; J. C. Dobson, of Tennessee."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McMILLAN. These are claims which have been before the commissioners, and the commissioners communicated with the committee, recommending that they be referred back. The committee in no case have inserted a claim for reference back to the commissioners unless it was inserted in the House bill or upon the recommendation of the commissioners to the committee.

Mr. HILL. I move to add the name of "Edward Power" after the name of "Robert G. Colman," on line 15, page 45, section 2. I will say to the Senate that I have a memorandum from the Representative of the first district of Georgia in the other House stating that the claim of Edward Power was rejected by the southern claims commission because of the insufficiency of proof as to his heirship, and that this gentleman now furnishes the names of the witnesses by whom the deficiency in the testimony can be supplied.

I wish also to state in explanation, that I called the attention of the honorable chairman of the committee to this subject and he suggested that I see the southern claims commission and get them to make a recommendation to this effect, but I have not been able to see them; I have not had time. This matter has just come into my possession. It seems to have been delayed by the fact of the death of Mr. Hartridge, who was the member from the Savannah district and in whose charge this matter was. His successor has only a few days ago taken his seat in the House, a very excellent gentleman, and he has called my attention to it.

I think there will be no harm in referring this case back to the southern claims commission, and if it is not meritorious they will not pass favorably upon it, but the information I have from the honorable member of the House from that district is that the only deficiency in Mr. Power's case was the failure to prove the one point which I have mentioned. I do not know anything about it myself. The gentleman who would have attended to this matter ordinarily, has departed this life, is dead, and his successor has but recently taken his seat, and that accounts for the delay. I hope the Senate will adopt the amendment.

Mr. McMILLAN. I am not authorized and do not feel at liberty to consent to the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia. The rule of the committee has been to insert for re-examination only cases which are recommended to them by the commissioners of southern claims unless they are inserted in the bill coming from the House of Representatives, and this is not one of those cases.

Mr. HILL. I see no objection to inserting it in the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. HILL. The delay occurred in the manner suggested owing to the unfortunate death of the Representative from the Savannah district, or I have no doubt it would have been attended to in the ordinary way.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 10, noes 12; no quorum voting.

Mr. McMILLAN. We have had a great many requests of the same character and all have been refused.

Mr. HILL. I do not think there is any case standing upon this footing. The southern claims commission have not recommended it, and the reason why they have not, I have stated to the Senate as I understand. The gentleman who had charge of it is dead and cannot see to it, and I have not had the time. Under the peculiar circumstances of the case it cannot do any possible harm in any event and does not open a precedent. I hope the Senate will adopt it.

Mr. MORRILL. There are but five minutes more in which this bill can be considered. If Senators desire that the bill should pass, it ought to be suffered to go without further contest.

Mr. THURMAN. I ask that there may be another division. There is obviously a quorum here.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will put the question again on the amendment of the Senator from Georgia, [Mr. HILL.]

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 14, noes 20; no quorum voting.

Mr. McMILLAN. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HILL. As the disposition of the Senate is manifestly not to receive this amendment, though I think they ought to do it as it can do no possible harm and it cannot be a precedent, I withdraw the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment may be withdrawn by unanimous consent, the yeas and nays having been ordered. The Chair hears no objection. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. COCKRELL. We did not have time to discuss it in committee, but I suggest an amendment in the case of Mrs. Ellen G. Sleemaker whose name is inserted on page 44, section 2, line 4, that it be stricken out there, and that at the end of line 31 in the same section in her case these words be inserted:

In the case of Mrs. Ellen G. Sleemaker the commissioners are directed to reopen and examine the same and report the amount they may find to be equitably due thereon.

Mr. McMILLAN. That matter was not fully considered in committee I think, but the effect of that amendment would be to confer on the commissioners of southern claims, as I understand, equitable powers in this particular case. As far as I am advised I cannot consent to that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senate concur in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole?

Mr. McMILLAN. I desire to reserve the question upon the amendment upon which the yeas and nays were taken in committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota demands a separate question upon the amendment on page 21.

The SECRETARY. The amendment is on page 21, line 486, to strike out:

To E. T. Eggleston, executor of Sophia A. Fox, deceased, $6,874.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, will the Senate concur in the action of the Committee of the Whole in relation to this amendment?

Mr. McMILLAN. I do not see the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. LAMAR] in his seat.

Mr. COCKRELL. He is in the Senate Chamber.

Mr. McMILLAN. The amendment which was adopted in committee is one to which I cannot consent, and if the amendment is adopted I shall vote against the entire bill. This claim was stricken out in the Committee on Claims after full consideration of the matter.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The time has expired, and the Senate proceeds to the consideration of its unfinished business, being the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. SHIELDS. Mr. President, I ask permission of the Senate to consider the bill (S. No. 1810) to ascertain the amount of the claim of Joseph R. Shannon, of Louisiana.

Mr. ALLISON. I must object and insist on the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 6436) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and for prior years, and for those heretofore treated as permanent, and for other purposes, the pending question being on the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations, after line 454 of section 1, to insert:

For defraying the expenses of the Supreme Court and circuit and district courts of the United States, including the District of Columbia, and also for jurors and witnesses, and expenses of suits in which the United States are concerned, of prosecutions for offenses committed against the United States, and for the safe-keeping of prisoners, and for defraying the expenses which have been and may be incurred in the enforcement of the act approved February 28, 1871, entitled "An act to amend an act approved May 31, 1870, entitled 'An act to enforce the rights of citizens of the United States to vote in the several States of this Union, and for other purposes,'" or any acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $250,000.

Mr. THURMAN. I desire to hear some explanation of that. Here is a proposition to vote a quarter of a million dollars deficiency. I think there should be some explanation of it. There are some parts of it to which I wish to object.

Mr. BECK. If the Senator from Ohio will have the letter of the Attorney-General read which is now in the hands of the chairman of the subcommittee—and I hope it will be read—I think it will furnish the Senator from Ohio ample ground for voting against it. The whole object of this, in my judgment, is to pay men who were illegally appointed, who were conducting what they called elections, for the worst of party purposes, and it ought not to be inserted. But the letter of the Attorney-General will give the information called for. I hope it will be read.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Kentucky asks that the letter of the Attorney-General be read. I send it to the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. McCREERY in the chair.) The letter will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, D. C., February 20, 1879.

SIR: In answer to the request of the committee for the amount, if any, which will be required by the Department to complete its service for the current fiscal year, I reply that such estimate must necessarily be approximated and based upon the expenditures of the preceding years.

For the year ending June 30, 1878, an appropriation was made to this Department of $2,630,000. A subsequent bill was passed for a deficiency of $150,000, and a deficiency of $110,000 has been asked for by me in addition, which will probably meet all the expenditures for that year, making in all the sum of $2,910,000.

The current appropriation is for $2,750,000. I should have hoped to have made the expenditures for the current year something less than for the year previous, say $2,600,000, which would have left a deficiency of only $50,000 to be provided for; had it not been for two classes of expenditures; one for deputy marshals appointed under section 878 of the Revised Statutes, to attend elections, (the expenses of supervisors not being paid through the judiciary fund,) and the other for carrying on prosecutions necessarily caused by violations of the election laws. These two items will, in my opinion, amount to $200,000, of which $75,000 will be for the expenses of the deputy marshals, and $125,000 for the expense attending the prosecutions. These latter expenses will necessarily be large, especially in the States of Louisiana, Alabama, and South Carolina; but the means of estimating them precisely I do not possess.

Under section 878 large expenditures are made on behalf of the defendants in many cases by direction of the presiding judges.

I respectfully suggest, therefore, that if it is thought advisable to cover the anticipated deficiency for the current fiscal year by an appropriation, the sum appropriated should be $250,000.

I inclose a draught of an amendment to the deficiency bill, as suggested by you, which follows substantially the language of former appropriations.

I ought to add in this connection that a considerable portion of the expenses caused by prosecutions for violation of the election laws will come under the appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, which of course are not taken into consideration in connection with what I have said as to such expenditures for the current fiscal year. Many continuances are granted by the presiding judges, and the cases cannot be concluded during the present fiscal year, although I endeavor to press them to a speedy determination.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES DEVENS,
Attorney-General.

Hon. WILLIAM WINDOM,
Chairman Appropriation Committee, United States Senate.

Mr. THURMAN. Mr. President, I am opposed to concurring in this amendment of the Committee on Appropriations. This letter which has just been read I have heard for the first time. I believe it is still in manuscript, and I would thank the Clerk to send it to me.

Now, Mr. President, it strikes me as a very extraordinary thing that the Attorney-General should ask us to appropriate no less than one quarter of a million of dollars for defraying expenses in the payment of salaries and in the prosecution of criminals. What kind of a case does this very extraordinary letter present? We have been accustomed to make appropriations for the Department of Justice on a scale that was liberal in the extreme. What new circumstances have arisen that have caused the Department of Justice to exceed the appropriations one quarter of a million dollars, and by what authority of law have those obligations thus been incurred? How comes it, I should like to know, that the Department of Justice, that was inaugurated and ordained to compel obedience to law, has itself transgressed the law so far as to expend one quarter of a million of the people's money without an appropriation to cover it, or to incur obligations to that amount?

Mr. President, as I have said that I have not had time to look at this letter, and with twenty Senators talking around me I could scarcely hear a word of it as it was read. I shall take occasion to read it before this debate gets through, and see what it is and what explanation can be made of this most astonishing fact that we are asked to appropriate a quarter of a million dollars as a deficiency for the Department of Justice. If I am correctly informed, this is to be done in order to pay a set of men who have been engaged ostensibly in preserving the purity of elections, but really in corrupting the purity of elections; really in intimidating voters, and in bribing voters. Sir, I may be mistaken about this, and I cannot tell exactly until I read this letter carefully by myself to see whether this deficit is occasioned entirely by expenses in the courts, or whether it covers the pay of supervisors of election and deputy marshals, who were, as we are told, as thick as blackberries last year, and who were more corrupt than any bulldozer or repeater that ever stained this land with his footsteps.

A word or two on this subject while I am up. I am only sorry that I am so unwell to-day that I cannot do the subject the justice I hope to do it before this session is at an end. Sir, we expended last year, according to the reports already in, $202,000 to preserve the purity of elections; that much expended, or that much was incurred, or estimated to be incurred, under the provisions of the election law; no, sir; I will not say under the provisions of the election law, but in despite of that law, (for that law limits the power to appoint these deputy marshals to cities having a population of twenty thousand and upward,) under an interpretation of the general law the marshals have appointed just as many deputies as they pleased, and charged them with the duty which this special act charged upon them in cities of twenty thousand and upward. The general law for the appointment of deputies of United States marshals relates simply to the appointment of deputies to execute judicial process under the judicial laws of the Union; and yet there has been an interpretation, as I am told, placed on those laws which completely overrides the act of Congress limiting the appointment of deputy marshals for election purposes to cities having a population of twenty thousand and upward.

Now, sir, under what pretense is this money expended and have these men been appointed? It has been heralded forth that it was to protect the poor negro down South in the exercise of the elective franchise. We have had bloody shirts waved over us. We have been told of negroes being slaughtered in order to prevent their exercise of the elective franchise. We have been told that these election laws are necessary to protect the poor freedmen down South in the exercise of the elective franchise. Now, sir, where is the money spent? Two hundred and two thousand dollars was spent last year, and all the accounts are not in yet. Where was that money spent? One hundred and ten thousand dollars of it in the State of New York; $40,000 of it in the State of Pennsylvania; $8,000 in the State of New Jersey; $5,000 or $6,000 in one single county in the State of Ohio; and pray, sir, what was the result? A gain to the republican party of fourteen or fifteen members of the House of Representatives.

What was the way that money was spent? Look at the reign of terror created by Davenport in the city of New York, where men were dragged by scores, if not by hundreds, and put in a cage in his office on the day of election in violation of the law, as the court has since decided, for it has discharged every one of them that it could lay its hands upon. In view of the intimidation, and in view of the testimony that has been taken in one of the contested elections in the House of Representatives showing how this money was used under pretense of appointing deputy marshals, there is no difficulty in understanding how, with this machinery, men are bribed and elections carried. I hold in my hand the testimony taken in one of the contested-election cases in the House of Representatives, and by that it appears, if my hasty reading of it is right, that twelve hundred and odd deputy marshals were appointed in the city of Saint Louis alone. What were they appointed for? Their testimony shows you how they were appointed and why they were appointed. Witness after witness comes up and testifies that he was sent for by the man who "ran the machine," not the marshal himself, for he devolved it upon another man, and when he came to that man he was inquired of, "Are you a democrat?" "Yes." "If I will appoint you deputy marshal at $3 or $5 a day"—I do not remember which it was—"will you agree to vote and work for the republican candidate?" If he said "no" he was turned off; if he said "yes" he was appointed; and all that he had to do was, not to keep the peace, not to preserve the purity of elections for which he nominally took the bribe, but to work for and vote for the republican candidate. Ay, sir, and they carried three democratic districts in that city by this means. This was in 1876.

Mr. BECK. Will the Senator from Ohio allow me to interrupt him a moment? I wish to read a question and answer from the testimony bearing on the precise point.

Mr. THURMAN. I shall be obliged to the Senator if he will do so; in fact I shall be very much obliged to him if he will take the floor. I will cheerfully give it to him.

Mr. BECK. Oh, no, I do not wish the Senator to do that. W. D. W. Bernard, chief marshal of Saint Louis, at the election of 1876, was asked the question how many marshals were put there and what was the use of them. He answered:

I think about 1,028, sir.

The question was put and the answer given as follows:

Question. In order to be precise, I will say independently of all party consideration, was there any more necessity for the appointment of marshals for that election than for any previous election?

Answer. Oh, well; you gentlemen know very well that in a political struggle for party ascendancy it is necessary for the co-ordinate branches of the Government to be in accord, and there was an effort on the part, so I interpreted it, of the party which I acted with to gain control of the House of Representatives.

Q. That party was the republican party, was it not?

A. The republican party, sir.

Mr. ALLISON. May I ask the Senator from Kentucky to state what election that was?

Mr. BECK. This is the testimony of the marshal at the election of 1876, two years ago. I merely wanted the Senator from Ohio to have his attention called to the admission of this marshal that there was no other use of the deputies except for party purposes, and all the money was spent for those purposes.

Mr. THURMAN. It does not matter whether that was in 1876 or 1878, or when it was; it shows the way in which this law is executed. That is the point. It shows that this money, instead of being used to preserve the purity of elections, is simply a bribery fund. It shows that the money of the people of the United States is used to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars to corrupt the voters of the United States. That is what it shows. It shows that instead of this law being a law to preserve the purity of elections, it is a wholesale bribery law, the money with which the votes are bought coming out of the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. President, I hope that, come what may, that law under which this thing is authorized will be stricken out of the statute-book. I, for one, am willing to stand here from this time until this day next year before I will ever agree that this law shall remain on the statute-book.

Now, Mr. President, let us see how it was last year. I said that this fund is not used for the purpose of protecting the poor freedman. Let us see just how it was in 1876. In 1876 the amount paid was $220,515.64, of which but $54,777.96 were expended in the South, and all the remainder of that sum, being four-fifths of the whole sum, was expended in the North. It was still worse last year. Last year the amount expended in the South was $24,636.74, to protect the poor helpless freedman, while in the North there was expended $177,654.35, being more than seven-eighths of the whole sum, and all of Johnny Davenport's bills are not in yet.

Talk about preserving the purity of elections; talk about protecting the poor, helpless, and defenseless freedmen! Why, the fact is as apparent, Mr. President, as your face in that chair, that the system under this law, executed as it has been and executed as it yet is, is a wholesale and stupendous system of bribery, the bribery fund coming out of the Treasury of the United States, and the men engaged in the bribery being officers of the United States.

I will not vote for one single dollar of this appropriation unless I am far better advised of the honesty of those who claim this pay than I am and convinced of the necessity for the payment being made. I think altogether, for I have no idea they can show a clean bill of health, I shall for the present vote against concurring in this amendment which is put in by our committee and is not in the bill as it came from the House, and I now move to strike out a portion of the text if that is in order. I think it is in order to move to strike out part of the amendment. I think that was done the other day. It has occurred to me that perhaps the proper way would be to ask for a division of the question, so that the question would be upon concurring first in one part and then concurring in the other part; but the other day I believe a motion to strike out was sustained, and if that motion is in order I move to strike out all after the word "prisoners," in line 460, page 20, down to and including the word "dollars" in line 470. I know that will strike out the appropriation; but if that motion prevails, then the Senator who has charge of the bill or anybody else can move to put in a sufficient sum to pay for the expenses provided for in the first branch of the section. If that motion is in order I submit it; if not I shall demand a division of the question on agreeing to the different branches of the amendment of the committee.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, in reply to what has been said by the Senator from Ohio I desire to say a word or two. This amendment, as will be observed, is in the very language of the statute of last year appropriating in all $2,750,000 for expenses of United States courts, and therefore this deficiency covers every item of expense included within that appropriation—

Mr. BAYARD. I ask the Senator to yield to allow me to make a conference report.

Mr. ALLISON. I yield.

INTERNAL-REVENUE LAWS.

Mr. BAYARD. I present the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments to the bill (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to internal revenue.

Mr. ALLISON. Will it lead to debate?

Mr. BAYARD. I think not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to internal revenue, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from that portion of its amendment numbered 16 striking out all of line 1 and down to and including the words "and provided," in line 6, on page 10.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the remainder of said amendment 16, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 70, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 81, and agree to the same, amended to read as follows:

SEC. 22. That whenever and after any bank has ceased to do business by reason of insolvency or bankruptcy, no tax shall be assessed or collected, or paid into the Treasury of the United States, on account of such bank, which shall diminish the assets thereof necessary for the full payment of all its depositors, and such tax shall be abated from such national banks as are found by the Comptroller of the Currency to be insolvent; and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, when the facts shall so appear to him, is authorized to remit so much of said tax against insolvent State and savings banks as shall be found to affect the claims of their depositors.

That in making further collections of internal-revenue taxes on bank deposits, no savings-bank, recognized as such by the laws of its State, and having no capital stock, shall, on account of mercantile or business deposits heretofore received, upon which no interest has been allowed to the parties making such deposits, be denied the exemptions allowed to savings-banks having no capital stock, and doing no other business than receiving deposits to be loaned or invested for the sole benefit of the parties making such deposits, without profit or compensation to the banks, if such bank has paid the lawful tax upon the entire average amount of such business or mercantile deposits; but nothing in this section shall be construed to extend said exemptions to deposits hereafter made, or in any way to affect the liability of such deposits to taxation.

That section 3408 of the Revised Statutes be amended by striking out all after the thirtieth line, and inserting the following:

"Associations or companies known as provident institutions, savings-banks, savings funds, or savings institutions, doing no other business than receiving and loaning or investing savings deposits, shall be exempt from tax on so much of such deposits as they have invested in securities of the United States, and on $2,000 of savings deposits, and nothing in excess thereof, made in the name of and belonging to any one person. That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this section be, and the same are hereby, repealed."

And the Senate agree to the same.

T. F. BAYARD,
FRANCIS KERNAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. R. TUCKER,
WM. M. ROBBINS,
HORATIO C. BURCHARD,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. BAYARD rose.

Mr. CONKLING. I was about to ask a question, but if the Senator from Delaware is going to make a statement I would rather hear him.

Mr. BAYARD. There were three amendments made by the Senate from which the House disagreed. The first numbered 16, the second 70, and the third 81. The first amendment was the disagreement of the Senate to the proposition of the House to diminish the license fee to persons who rectify, purify or manufacture less than five hundred barrels of distilled spirits, that is the smaller distillers or manufacturers and refiners. The Senate struck out that provision. The House insisted upon the amendment, and the Senate conferees receded, so that by the law as it now stands in the report of the conferees it will make the license fee $100 for the smaller rectifiers and purifiers and manufacturers of distilled spirits who manufacture less than five hundred barrels annually, a special tax of $200 for all over that. That is the effect of the first amendment of the House in which the Senate has now concurred.

The second is to be found on page 93 of the bill. The House abolished the stamp tax upon lucifer matches. The Senate have insisted upon the amendment restoring the tax, and the House conferees concurred in the Senate amendment, so that by this report the stamp tax upon lucifer matches is retained.

Mr. CONKLING. As it is now?

Mr. BAYARD. As it is now.

The third amendment is the last in the bill, and the first part I read from page 99:

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, when the facts shall so appear to him, is authorized to remit so much of said tax against insolvent State and savings banks as shall be found to affect the claims of their depositors.

The effect of that is that the release cannot exceed six months of tax, and it may be of six weeks. If the bank becomes insolvent, and that fact is established to the satisfaction of the Department, and is being wound up and in the course of liquidation by the Comptroller, and the deposits insufficient to reimburse the depositors, the tax of the Government is not subtracted from the fund. That is the Senate amendment and the House concur in that.

The next feature is the extension of the exemption from tax given by existing law to savings-banks proper upon their deposits. By section 3408 of the Revised Statutes amended by the act of 1874 savings-banks, whether they have a reserved fund of deposits upon which interest is paid to their depositors, or whether they have it reserved in the shape of capital stock and profits in the shape of dividends are paid to depositors, are alike exempted from the tax on deposits imposed on other banking institutions. This amendment was so fully explained by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. ROLLINS] in the Senate that it is not necessary for me again to repeat it to the Senate inasmuch as the House has concurred in the action of the Senate on that subject.

The last portion of the amendment, to be found on page 100, is in the following words:

The deposits in associations or companies known as provident institutions, savings-banks, savings funds, or savings institutions, recognized solely as such by the laws of their respective States, shall be exempt from tax on so much of their deposits as they have invested in securities of the United States, and on $2,000 of each deposit made in the name of any one person, firm, or corporation.

Mr. CONKLING. That is the language of the conference report.

Mr. BAYARD. That is the language of the conference report. A further amendment of the Senate is to be found on lines 33, 34, and 35, adopted on motion of the honorable Senator from Kansas, [Mr. PLUMB,] in which this exemption from tax on deposits is extended to any legally organized banks whatever. To that there was a strong expression of disagreement by the House conferees, and from that the Senate conferees have receded.

It appeared to the committee that the effect of the amendment would be to lessen very materially the revenues of the Government upon deposits, under the broad provision of the amendment of the Senator from Kansas. From that the House dissented most positively, and the Senate have receded and stricken out the amendment of the honorable Senator from Kansas. This is the substance of the amendment. The last section has been very carefully considered on the part of the Senate and upon which the action has taken place between the two Houses that the present law, exempting deposits in savings-banks from the tax on deposits, shall not be enlarged further to savings-banks, and when the investment is not for the use or profit of the individual who makes the deposit they are to pay a tax. That is the principle which is fixed upon by existing law and it is that simply and in substance.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Mr. President, an effort was made in this body to so shape the bill that has been under consideration by the committee of conference as to do something like what some others and myself conceive to be justice and fair play to the section of the country in which I live. Through the action of the committee of conference that effort has failed. While savings invested in certain portions of the country are allowed to escape taxation wholly because they are invested, under the laws of the State where invested, in a particular way, savings invested in the State where I live under the laws of that State are not exempted. I suppose of course it is of no use at this stage of the session to attempt to effect anything in opposition to this conference report, but I wish to say that if it should be my fortune to return to this body hereafter I shall give some industry and exertion and whatever of ability I may have to have this thing equalized, and either to have savings deposits in all sections of the country exempted from taxation or have them all taxed.

Mr. FERRY. As a member of the committee of conference on the part of the Senate I will say that while I agree with the report on the first and third items of disagreement between the two Houses I could not agree to the second, which involves the continuance of the tax upon lucifer matches. It will be recollected that the Senate Finance Committee disagreed to the section passed by the House repealing the tax upon matches. The Senate upon a direct vote non-concurred in the recommendation of the committee, but finally, after it had been amended, changed the vote and non-concurred in the House provision. I have not been able to bring my judgment to assent to the continuance of the tax upon matches, especially when the bill reduces the tax upon luxuries and continues it upon this prime necessity so generally consumed by the people of the country. Therefore, failing to change the judgment of my associates on the conference, I felt it my duty to withhold my name from the report and shall vote against concurrence in the report of the committee of conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McCREERY in the chair.) Will the Senate agree to the report of the conference committee?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Before the vote is taken I wish to say that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DAVIS] is out of his seat.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. Here I am.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Ah! That Senator has shown some interest in this matter, and I was desiring to have the report delayed until he could be here. Whether he desires to say anything in regard to it I do not know.

The report was concurred in.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. No. 4126) for the relief of Paulina Jones, widow of Alexander Jones, deceased, Company E, Second North Carolina Infantry;

A bill (H. R. No. 4639) to authorize the Secretary of War to release certain lands of the United States to the people of the State of New York;

A bill (H. R. No. 3155) to authorize the Secretary of War to deliver to A. B. Rhett, T. Pinckney Lowndes, and others four Napoleon guns, with caissons and harness, now at Greensborough, North Carolina, for use of the Marion Artillery, Charleston, South Carolina;

A bill (H. R. No. 3171) to relieve Solomon Robinalt, late private Company G, Forty-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, from the charge of desertion;

A bill (H. R. No. 3635) for the relief of John Becker;

A bill (H. R. No. 4872) granting a right of way across Water Shops Pond, in Springfield, Massachusetts, to the Springfield and New London Railroad Company;

A bill (H. R. No. 6508) for the relief of A. B. Rowden;

A bill (H. R. No. 6509) for the relief of Dr. John Blankenship;

A bill (H. R. No. 6510) for the relief of the widow of Colonel Lyman M. Kellogg;

A bill (H. R. No. 6240) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 15) authorizing the Secretary of War to issue to the governor of the State of Texas certain arms for the use of the Galveston Artillery.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had yesterday approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. No. 36) to create an additional associate justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, and for the better administration of justice in said District;

An act (S. No. 658) to authorize the restoration of Michael O'Brien to the rank of first lieutenant in the Army; and

An act (S. No. 1307) directing the Secretary of War to purchase a lot of ground situated near the city of Columbus, Ohio, now used by the United States as a cemetery.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

On motion of Mr. ALLISON, the bill (H. R. No. 6240) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. ANTHONY, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred a letter of the Treasurer of the United States transmitting, in obedience to law, copies of accounts rendered to and settled with the First Comptroller for the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1878, asked to be discharged from its further consideration; which was agreed to.

Mr. VOORHEES, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1359) granting pensions to the widow and minor children of Michael Meenan, deceased, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 3816) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary G. Harris, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. MAXEY. I offer an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, for the purpose of paying the expenses of the northern judicial district of Texas, created by the act of Congress approved February 24, 1879. I move its reference to the Committee on Appropriations, and that it be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported an amendment to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, to provide for a pedestal for the statue of General Greene; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. No. 6463) making appropriations for the construction, repair, preservation, and completion of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PADDOCK. I offer an amendment to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes. As it relates to printing, I move that it be referred to the Committee on Printing without being printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MORGAN. Yesterday I offered an amendment to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, in reference to the police of the city of Washington. I move that it be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL, Mr. WITHERS, Mr. MERRIMON, Mr. HILL, Mr. BECK, and Mr. PLUMB submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 5215) to establish post-routes in the several States herein named; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. WITHERS and Mr. MAXEY submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 6240) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BARNUM. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred a letter from the commissioners of the District of Columbia, transmitting plans and estimates for an additional supply of water for Washington and Georgetown, to ask that it be printed and referred to the Committee on Appropriations, as an amendment to the sundry civil bill. I ask also that the communication be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. ANTHONY. What is that to be printed in the RECORD?

Mr. BARNUM. A communication from the commissioners of the District of Columbia and a detailed statement in regard to the water supply of the city.

Mr. ANTHONY. I will not object, but it is cumbering the RECORD up.

The communication is as follows:

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, February 25, 1879.

SIR: In answer to the request of the Senate committee, the commissioners of the District of Columbia have the honor to present herewith estimates for the completion of an aqueduct from the present distributing reservoir to a point in the vicinity of the city of Washington, for the construction of a distributing reservoir of a capacity of two hundred and thirty-five million gallons, the connection of the reservoir with the present distributing mains, and for the completion of the dam at the Great Falls of the Potomac. These plans contemplate the completion of the water-works and the development of their full capacity of supply.

Tracings showing the line selected and a profile of the country are also forwarded. The time allowed has been too short to admit of preparing plans for many of the minor details of the conduit, but the general plan has been sufficiently studied to determine within a narrow limit the ultimate cost of the entire work.

The principal work to be done consists in the construction of a conduit nine feet in diameter, mostly in tunnel, for a distance of 21,400 feet. This tunnel will be driven for about two-fifths of its length through a hard blue gneiss, and for the remaining three-fifths through clay and sand. Its level will be that of the bottom of the present reservoir. The conduit will, therefore, be run under a pressure very much less than that employed in other works which have been constructed in this country.

It is assumed that at various times the water must be turned off from the conduit for some days for purposes of repair, and an estimate is added for the cost of a reservoir sufficient to supply the city during such an interval. This involves, in addition to the expense of construction, a large item for the condemnation of land in addition to the right of way and condemnation along the line of the conduit. The depth of the reservoir has been taken at thirty feet. The cost may be reduced, at the expense of the storage capacity, by a reduction of this depth.

The point selected for re-enforcing the present distributing mains is that from which they radiate to South Washington and Capitol Hill. The mains in the extreme northwestern sections of the city may be re-enforced at their highest points by short connections with the conduit, as may become necessary. The principal connection, and the only one that will be necessary for many years, will be by a four-foot main eight thousand two hundred feet in length from the reservoir and down New Jersey avenue.

The estimate of $200,000 for the completion of the dam at the Great Falls has been taken from the previous estimates by others, that part of the work not being under the charge of the commissioners, and the amount may be larger than will be found necessary at the present time.

The total estimate for conduit, reservoir, mains, gate-house, and land condemnation is $1,108,541.91; to which must be added whatever amount may prove necessary for the completion of the dam.

By order of the board.

S. L. PHELPS,
President.

Hon. S. W. DORSEY,

Chairman Senate Committee on the District of Columbia.

ENGINEER DEPARTMENT, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, February 25, 1879.

MAJOR: I have the honor to transmit herewith plans and estimates for an additional supply of water for Washington and Georgetown.

It is proposed to bring in this supply by means of a nine-foot conduit from the distributing reservoir to an available site for another reservoir east of Seventh street west, thence, for the present, by a four-foot cast-iron main along New Jersey avenue to the principal mains which now radiate from the vicinity of L and G streets to all parts of Washington and to Georgetown. The twelve-inch main along Boundary street is also to be connected with this new main.

The accompanying plan and profile gives the location of the conduit, reservoir, and four-foot main. The line of the conduit is carried close to the northern boundary of the city, and will be provided with outlets for tapping at intervals with other mains as the future supply may require.

In order to retain the services of the present distributing reservoir the conduit is made to tap it at the bottom. The shortest practicable line is taken, and to avoid land condemnation this follows as much as possible existing streets and county roads.

Rock Creek may be crossed either by a gang of large cast-iron mains laid as siphons through the bed of the creek or by a tunnel through the compact rock which underlies this stream. If borings in this rock are satisfactory the latter method is, I believe, the best and cheapest. The former has the advantage of requiring for the present only as many mains as are necessary to bring the requisite supply of water, with provision for adding others when needed. It is, however, a perishable construction while the former method is for all practical purposes eternal.

The line is so located that the conduit rests throughout on the natural ground where not in tunnel, and is protected, where covered by embankment, by side walls computed to resist independently the entire water pressure.

Assuming that the reference of one hundred and forty-five feet above tide for the water-surface of the distributing reservoir is maintained, this conduit will bring to the city, at the site of the new reservoir, the following quantities of water, in round numbers, per diem, viz:

At 144 feet above tide, 48,000,000 gallons.
At 143 feet above tide, 69,000,000 gallons.
At 142.50 feet above tide, 80,000,000 gallons.
At 141.25 feet above tide, 99,000,000 gallons.
At 140.94 feet above tide, 111,000,000 gallons.
At 139.91 feet above tide, 137,000,000 gallons.
At 138.88 feet above tide, 159,000,000 gallons.
At 134.85 feet above tide, 178,000,000 gallons.

The latter quantity is a little beyond the safe limit for constant service, giving a velocity of about 4.3 feet per second, but the conduit will be capable of delivering for a limited time, at 122.50 feet above tide, 265,000,000 gallons in twenty-four hours, the velocity in this case being 6.45 feet per second.

The amount which may be taken from the distributing reservoir at one hundred and forty-five feet will depend upon the height of the dam to be constructed across the Potomac at Great Falls and the safe limit of head under which the upper conduit may be run. The capacity of the new conduit will, of course, be much greater than that of the present conduit from the Great Falls on account of greater head available.

I do not think it advisable to disturb the existing system of mains leading from the distributing reservoir, and now supplying Washington and Georgetown, at least until the new conduit shall have been for some time in successful operation, and even then it may perhaps be considered advisable to retain them as a reserve source of supply in case of accident to the lower conduit.

Over the whole line of the conduit it is proposed to condemn a roadway sixty feet wide wherever the line leaves existing roads and streets, and this object has been kept in view in selecting the route.

The site selected for a new reservoir is central, and gives the greatest storage capacity nearest the city, and at the least expense. The ground for this site should be condemned and purchased at once, together with a sixty-foot roadway running south to Boundary street.

The flow-line of the reservoir is proposed for a reference of one hundred and forty feet—depth of water, thirty feet—giving a storage capacity of (approximately) two hundred and thirty-five million gallons.

The following estimates are necessarily approximate, but will cover reasonable contingencies:

Estimate for the construction of the conduit reservoir and four-foot main.

	DAMAGES.
Condemnation of land:
40 acres for reservoir, at $500	$20,000 00
24.4 acres around reservoir, at $500	12,045 00
54 acres between gate-house and Fourteenth street, at $500	2,750 00
3 acres between Fourteenth and Nineteenth streets, at $400	1,200 00

5 acres between Nineteenth street and Rock Creek, at $300	$1,500 00
1.7 acres between Road and High streets, at $500	850 00
2 acres between Ridge and Conduit Roads, at $200	400 00
Improved property on conduit	3,000 00
Improved property on reservoir	37,000 00
	78,745 00
EXCAVATION.
24,940 cubic yards rock on conduit, at $6	149,640 00
4,930 cubic yards rock on conduit, at $8	39,440 00
1,564 cubic yards rock on conduit, at $3	4,692 00
42,847 cubic yards of earth, at $3	128,541 00
	322,313 00
MASONRY.
1,225 cubic yards of coursed, at $5, G. A.	6,125 00
400 cubic yards of coursed, at $5.50, C. A.	2,200 00
6,492,207 brick, including packing, at $30	194,946 21
	203,371 21
EMBANKMENT.
162,500 cubic yards of earth at reservoir, at 40 cents	65,000 00
7,530 square yards of paving for slope, at $2.25	16,987 50
45,300 square feet of lining, at $1	45,300 00
	130,287 50
EXCAVATION.
1,138,900 cubic yards of earth at reservoir, at 20 cents	226,780 00
TIMBER.
4,380 pieces 12"×10"×10" for conduit, b. m.	438,000
26,136 pieces 10"×2"×12" lagging, b. m.	522,720
60 pieces 15"×8"×8" shafts, b. m.	4,800
90 pieces 6"×6"×8" shafts, b. m.	2,880
396 pieces 10"×1"×12" lining of shaft, b. m.	3,960
	972,360, at $20,	19,447 20
MAIN.
8,200 lineal feet 4-foot main, 1½", 725 pounds per foot, 2,659 tons, at $22	58,498 00
Laying 8,200 lineal feet, at $4	32,800 00
	91,298 00
GATES.
1 36-inch	800 00
1 30-inch	600 00
	1,400 00
GATE-HOUSE.
Built of granite and brick, with influent and effluent gates	35,000 00
SUMMARY.
Conduit	545,031 41
Mains with gates	92,698 00
Land damages	78,745 00
Work on reservoir	357,067 50
Gate-house	35,000 00
	1,108,541 91
Completion of dam at Great Falls	200,000 00
	1,308,541 91

Contingent expenses are included in the items estimated.
Very respectfully,

R. L. HOXIE,
Lieutenant Engineers.

Major WILLIAM P. TWining,
Corps of Engineers, U. S. A.,
Engineer Commissioner District of Columbia.

Mr. FERRY, Mr. CAMERON of Wisconsin, (by request,) Mr. ALLISON, Mr. PADDOCK, Mr. VOORHEES, Mr. GARLAND, Mr. KELLOGG, Mr. KIRKWOOD, Mr. KERNAN, Mr. SPENCER, Mr. GARLAND, Mr. GROVER, Mr. BURNSIDE, Mr. LAMAR, Mr. SPENCER, Mr. HAMLIN, Mr. PLUMB, Mr. FERRY, Mr. OGLESBY, Mr. COCKRELL, and Mr. GORDON submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, with the accompanying papers, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. INGALLS, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 6436) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and prior years, and for those heretofore treated as permanent, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. This amendment is for a deficiency covering, as I said before, precisely the same class of expenses as were included to be provided for in the original appropriation for the expenses of United States courts. The argument of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. THURMAN] might be one of force if applied to a bill now pending in the Senate or in one of the committees of the Senate providing for the repeal of certain sections of the election laws, so called; but I cannot see under what rule we can refuse to make these appropriations for the expenses which are necessary to carry out and compel the enforcement of existing laws. The expenses of supervisors of election are not included at all in this deficiency appropriation bill, allow me to say to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. THURMAN. What is that?

Mr. ALLISON. The expenses of the supervisors of election are not included in this appropriation.

Mr. THURMAN. Then let me ask the Senator what is?

Mr. ALLISON. The language of the amendment clearly indicates what is, namely, all the expenses of United States courts, and all the expenses of marshals and their deputies are included. Of course so far as deputy marshals are appointed under the election law, they will be paid out of this appropriation; but the Attorney-General, in his letter read at the Secretary's desk, says that only $75,000 of this appropriation will be required to pay deputy marshals. The Attorney-General can use, if he chooses to use, any portion of the $2,750,000 appropriated for the current year for this purpose, even though this amendment should not be adopted and become a law. The appropriation for the current year is a general appropriation including all these items, and he may use that appropriation for any one of them, so that whether this deficiency shall pass or not, the deputy marshals at elections can be paid. But this class of expenses, it seems to me, ought to be paid as well as any other expenses included in this general appropriation. The Attorney-General is not responsible for these expenses. Under the election law it is made the duty of the marshals to appoint deputy marshals in cities of twenty thousand inhabitants.

Mr. THURMAN. The Senator certainly does not mean to be understood that appointments have only been made in cities of twenty thousand inhabitants.

Mr. ALLISON. I do.

Mr. THURMAN. Of these deputy marshals? The Senator must be aware that under the general power to appoint deputy marshals a great many more have been appointed, and they have discharged duties which only properly belong to deputy marshals appointed under the election law. That is one of the unlawful things which have been done and of which I complain.

Mr. ALLISON. If unlawful things have been done, that is another and a very different question. If a marshal of the United States in violation of law appointed deputy marshals, then that marshal of the United States ought to be removed, or impeached, if the impeaching power is adequate.

Mr. THURMAN. We cannot do it because the Attorney-General has so construed the law. He is the man who ought to be impeached, if anybody.

Mr. ALLISON. Do I understand the Senator from Ohio to claim that the Attorney-General has construed that this is a law to authorize a marshal to appoint as many deputies as he may choose to appoint to keep the peace at elections?

Mr. THURMAN. I have seen it so stated, and I have never seen it contradicted, and I believe that is the fact. I believe that a grosser misinterpretation of the law never took place in the world. I can only say in justice to the present Attorney-General that I understand the same thing was done by his predecessor, and I find in the reports that they appointed 11,615 deputies in 1876.

Mr. ALLISON. In 1876! That was three years ago, and every dollar of that expenditure has been paid already and by appropriations made by Congress.

Mr. WITHERS. I would call the attention of my friend from Iowa to the fact that in a previous deficiency bill the provision for the payment of $250,000 as a deficiency to pay United States marshals was stricken from that bill. They may have been paid, but they were not paid under the operation of the law. The House of Representatives in this very bill appropriates $110,000 for deficiencies in the Department of Justice for the year 1878.

Mr. GARLAND. I wish to ask the Senator from Iowa one question on the point he is now on. The appropriation of $110,000 is for general expenses of the United States courts, I take it. I wish to know if this $250,000 deficit accrues entirely under the effort to enforce the act of May 31, 1870.

Mr. ALLISON. I will answer the Senator. That is a very pertinent question. Fifty thousand dollars of this sum, as the Attorney-General tells us in his letter, will be required for the current fiscal year to carry on the ordinary operations of the United States courts; $75,000 of this appropriation will be required to pay deputy marshals appointed under the election law of 1870, as suggested by the Senator from Arkansas; and $125,000 of this sum, the Attorney-General tells us, will be required, or about that sum, to carry on prosecutions for criminal offenses under the election and other laws of the United States.

Mr. GARLAND. Now, I would suggest that the amendment be corrected in such a way as to indicate the different items and purposes for which the different sums are to be used. If there are $50,000 needed to be appropriated for general expenses of the courts, I should not object to that; but I feel compelled to object to appropriating $250,000 for a deficit caused by the efforts to enforce the act of May 31, 1870.

Mr. ALLISON. But if the Senator from Arkansas will turn to the statutes of last session he will see that these appropriations are made in the aggregate and the committee have followed the language of the last law. But of course the appropriations could be segregated and made specific if any Senator would offer an amendment of that kind. I want to call the attention of the Senator from Arkansas to the fact that $125,000 of this sum, the Attorney-General says, will be necessary to conduct prosecutions for criminal offenses under the laws of the United States.

Mr. GARLAND. Under the general laws?

Mr. ALLISON. Under the general laws, and he gives the sections of the Revised Statutes, and he not only says this will be necessary but he gives the reason why it will be necessary. He says that under section 828 of the Revised Statutes the courts order witnesses to be summoned at the expense of the United States on behalf of the defendants because they are unable to summon witnesses at their own expense.

Mr. GARLAND. Then I think the Senator from Iowa makes it imperatively necessary that this provision should be so amended as to specify the various items and where the moneys are to be used, and for what purposes. I should feel some embarrassment on voting for this $250,000 as a general appropriation as it is here, and yet, according to the statement of the Senator from Iowa, there are items covered by it that I would vote for very cheerfully.

Mr. ALLISON. I cannot see how the Senator from Arkansas can be embarrassed in voting for this appropriation, because the Attorney-General shows that each and every item is essential, $50,000 for the ordinary expenses of the courts, $75,000 to pay deputy marshals for services they have already performed, and $125,000 for the purpose of prosecuting criminals under the laws of the United States. If these laws ought to be repealed, repeal the laws; but as they stand upon the statute-book, I cannot see how any Senator can say that it is not the duty of the Government of the United States to prosecute offenders under those laws. The Attorney-General is not responsible for these prosecutions, nor for many of these expenses. The courts themselves order and direct these expenses in the different States of the Union, and the bills come for adjudication to the Attorney-General's Office and to the accounting officers of the Treasury, and they have very little, if any, discretion with reference to them. They are expenditures under the statutes of the United States, and the Attorney-General has no more control over them than any one of us here. So, whatever may be the opinion of Senators with reference to the propriety or impropriety of the election laws of 1870 and 1871, I do not see how any Senator can vote against the necessary appropriation to carry on the operations under these laws, unless it is proposed by indirection and now after the expenditures have been incurred to nullify these laws. That is all there is of this case.

These sums are necessary to carry on the courts of the United States for the remainder of this fiscal year, and it seems to me that the argument of the Senator from Ohio and all kindred arguments should be directed toward the repeal of these laws if they are unjust to any class of our people, and not to defeat the necessary appropriations to carry them out while they are on the statute-book.

Mr. BECK. Mr. President—

Mr. THURMAN. Before the Senator from Kentucky proceeds, I wish to say that I am not well satisfied with the course taken the other day in regard to a motion to strike out. I will not say it is not right; but at all events I think it is best to divide the amendment and take the question first upon the first branch and then upon concurring in the second branch of the committee's amendment. I withdraw my motion, in order that that course may be taken and that the amendment may be divided. I hope the Senate will not concur in any part of the amendment, for a fact shown to me by the Senator from Kentucky, which he will explain to the Senate, has satisfied me that no part of it ought to be adopted.

Mr. BECK. Mr. President, when this amendment was before the Committee on Appropriations I was one of those who objected to the appropriations. I did so for various reasons, some of which I will state.

All the expenses for the fiscal year that closed June 30, 1878, have been provided for, even according to the statement of the Attorney-General himself, and the deficiency now asked for is for the current fiscal year when two-thirds of the year have not yet run. The items asked for need not be provided and ought not to be provided for till after they are stated in detail and the amount to be paid to each marshal ascertained, instead of being anticipated now. The absence of any detailed information on that subject makes this amendment improper and wholly unnecessary, because it is for the current fiscal year, the year ending June 30, 1879, and we can provide for all just claims next year.

Mr. ALLISON. That is what this bill is for.

Mr. BECK. It is so only in part.

Mr. ALLISON. The whole bill?

Mr. BECK. I beg pardon. The clause immediately preceding this reads:

For expenses of United States courts for the year 1878, $110,000.

Mr. ALLISON. The theory of the bill is for deficiencies during this year, but of course it includes previous years also.

Mr. BECK. The theory of nearly every deficiency bill we pass is that it is to cover deficiencies for prior years. For the year ending June 30, 1878, and prior years many of the items in this bill are proposed. The deficiencies generally come in after the fiscal year has expired; that is, after all the expenditures have been ascertained to be legitimate and a deficiency is found to exist. When it is ascertained that enough money has not been appropriated for a given fiscal year to carry on the operations of the Government after it is closed, then it is for Congress to say whether or not it will make the legitimate deficit good by a deficiency appropriation.

Congress, as Senators will observe by looking at the letter of the Attorney-General, made for the fiscal year which closed on the 30th of June last a general appropriation of $2,650,000. A deficiency of $150,000 was afterward added to that. Now the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring, have granted $110,000 in this bill, making a total of $2,910,000. The letter of the Attorney-General, if carefully looked at, shows that this is sufficient for the service of the year. The Senator from Iowa does not make it as clear as I think he could have made it if he had simply read to the Senate the lines which I now propose to read. The Attorney-General says:

For the year ending June 30, 1878, an appropriation was made to this Department of $2,650,000. A subsequent bill was passed for a deficiency of $150,000, and a deficiency of $110,000 has been asked for by me in addition, which will probably meet all the expenditures for that year, making in all the sum of $2,910,000.

He adds:

The current appropriation for this year is $2,750,000.

That is, he has already received for the current fiscal year by regular appropriation that sum.

The Attorney-General continues:

I should have hoped to have made the expenditures for the current year somewhat less than for the year previous, say $2,800,000, which would have left a deficiency of only $50,000 to be provided for had it not been for two classes of expenditures.

The Senator from Arkansas will please notice what they are. He will observe that the Attorney-General admits that an appropriation of $2,750,000 has already been made for him, and in his own opinion not over $2,800,000 would have been necessary for the entire service of the current fiscal year, and he would not have to ask for more than $50,000 as a deficiency but for two things, which are as follows. I quote from his letter:

Two classes of expenditures, one for deputy marshals appointed under section 878 of the Revised Statutes to attend elections, (the expenses of supervisors not being paid through the judiciary fund,) and the other for carrying on prosecutions necessarily caused by violations of the election laws. These two items will, in my opinion, amount to $200,000, of which $75,000 will be for the expenses of the deputy marshals and $125,000 for the expense attending the prosecutions.

So that out of the $250,000 now asked it is specifically stated and admitted by the Attorney-General in this letter that he only desires and only needs $50,000 for any purpose except for the purpose of paying deputy marshals for manipulating elections, and $125,000 to carry on prosecutions that these (so-called) deputy marshals have instigated. Two hundred thousand dollars of the $250,000 asked are for political purposes only, and these expenses are created under a law which I suppose no man, at least on this side of the Chamber, has any doubt is unconstitutional, and which no man on either side of the Chamber will venture to assert has been carried on legally, either according to its letter or spirit, bad as both are, if it were constitutional.

A year or so ago, on the motion of the Senator from Delaware, [Mr. BAYARD,] the Attorney-General made a report, being Senate Executive Document No. 6, part 2, of the Forty-fourth Congress, second session, in which he showed how the $275,000 which he expended for supervisors and deputy marshals during the election of 1876 was expended. That report is a clear admission on its face that the action of those men was illegal and purely partisan from beginning to end, and renders it clear that no Representative of this people ought to vote away the money of the people to pay for such conduct. The report shows in detail in what States the money was expended, and how many supervisors and deputy marshals there were. He shows that there were twenty-seven hundred and thirty-seven voting places attended by 11,615 deputy marshals reported, and he states, as I understand it, that there would have been more voting places and more deputy marshals disclosed but for the fact that certain States and precincts had failed to make reports. He begins with Arkansas, and shows that 785 special deputy marshals were appointed in that State on the 7th day of November, 1876. They attended 3-1 voting places, and they were distributed, as set forth in this report, at 206 precincts, 1 deputy each; at 139 precincts, 2 deputies each; at 9 precincts, 4 deputies each; at 13 precincts, 5 deputies each; at 8 precincts, 10 deputies each; at 6 precincts, 20 deputies each, making in all 785 special deputies in the State of Arkansas.

The law says deputy marshals shall be appointed only in towns having twenty thousand inhabitants, but there is but one town in Arkansas with twenty thousand inhabitants that I am aware of. Is there any except perhaps Little Rock? I doubt whether Little Rock has twenty thousand. The time during which these men were allowed to serve was limited to ten days by the law, and yet it is shown by the report that in the State of California this state of facts existed:

Two hundred and forty-four deputies were employed on the 7th of November, 1876. The time of their service paid for was eight hundred and ninety-one days. "Many were employed actively for periods in excess of ten days, varying from fifteen to thirty-five days."

In the northern district of Mississippi a large number were paid where there was no law authorizing them.

In the eastern district of Missouri I read a portion of the testimony awhile ago showing that over a thousand deputies were appointed in Saint Louis, and no man can read the testimony taken in the case from which I read, without seeing that they were appointed for no other purpose except to elect republicans to office. They performed no legitimate duty, the State officers being able and willing to perform all the duties pertaining to the election.

These persons when sworn had to admit that unless a man agreed to vote and work for the republican candidate he could not be appointed and could not get the money; the officials did not care whether he was a democrat or a republican, or what he was, so he would agree to cheat, vote, and do dirty work to elect republicans to office; the chief marshal himself avowed that was what he was appointed to do, and he worked and drew his money for that purpose; they did succeed in electing the men they were employed to elect. The money they drew from the Treasury was simply as payment for bribery and corruption, and we are required to foot the bills.

Mr. VOORHEES. Allow me to make a suggestion to the Senator from Kentucky. I think he does not give the law on the subject of elections, which I regard as unconstitutional, its full scope which the text justifies in the appointment of supervisors. Section 2011 of the Revised Statutes reads as follows:

SEC. 2011. Whenever, in any city or town having upward of twenty thousand inhabitants, there are two citizens thereof, or whenever, in any county or parish, in any congressional district, there are ten citizens thereof, of good standing, who prior to any registration of voters for an election for Representative or Delegate in the Congress of the United States, or prior to any election at which a Representative or Delegate in Congress is to be voted for, may make known, in writing, to the judge of the circuit court of the United States, for the circuit wherein such city or town, county or parish, is situated, their desire to have such registration, or such election, or both, guarded and scrutinized, the judge, within not less than ten days prior to the registration, if one there be, or, if no registration be required, within not less than ten days prior to the election, shall open the circuit court at the most convenient point in the circuit.

Section 2012 provides:

SEC. 2012. The court, when so opened by the judge, shall proceed to appoint and commission, from day to day and from time to time, and under the hand of the judge, and under the seal of the court, for each election district or voting precinct in such city or town, or for such election district or voting precinct in the congressional district, as may have applied in the manner hereinbefore prescribed, and to revoke, change, or renew such appointment from time to time, two citizens, residents of the city or town, or of the election district or voting precinct in the county or parish, who shall be of different political parties, and able to read and write the English language, and who shall be known and designated as supervisors of election. (See sections 5521 and 5522.)

The provision of this section is not only that supervisors may be appointed in towns of over twenty thousand people upon the application of two citizens thereof, but it applies to any county or parish without regard to population or numbers where ten persons can be found to ask for the appointment of supervisors. When ten persons apply, then, in the extraordinary and odious language of this section, supervisors are to be appointed to guard and scrutinize elections.

I beg pardon of the Senator from Kentucky, but this law does not limit supervisors to cities or towns of twenty thousand people. They come under this law like a cloud, or like the lice and frogs of Egypt.

Mr. BECK. That may be the correct construction of the law. My attention has not been called to it carefully since it was passed in the House seven or eight years ago. I know twenty thousand inhabitants was the limit when the law was originally passed; I took part in that debate. Perhaps the Senator from Indiana may be correct.

Mr. ALLISON. I think the Senator from Kentucky does not appreciate the distinction of the honorable Senator from Indiana. He is speaking of supervisors of election, and I understand the Senator from Kentucky to be speaking of deputy marshals.

Mr. BECK. I am.

Mr. VOORHEES. One word on the subject of deputy marshals. I am very glad the Senator from Iowa recalls my attention to that point, because in a colloquial debate between the Senator from Ohio [Mr. THURMAN] and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] a few minutes ago I understood the Senator from Iowa to fall into the error that there was some limitation on the number of deputy marshals that could be appointed. There is none except this. It is true that the appointment of deputy marshals is confined to towns or cities having over twenty thousand inhabitants, but the number of deputy marshals that a United States marshal may appoint has no limitation whatever. He may appoint an army if he desires to. The section on that subject is this:

SEC. 2021. Whenever an election at which Representatives or Delegates in Congress are to be chosen is held in any city or town of twenty thousand inhabitants or upward, the marshal for the district in which the city or town is situated shall, on the application, in writing, of at least two citizens residing in such city or town, appoint special deputy marshals, whose duty it shall be, when required thereto, to aid and assist the supervisors of election in the verification of any list of persons who may have registered or voted; to attend in each election district or voting precinct at the times and places fixed for the registration of voters, and at all times or places when and where the registration may by law be scrutinized, and the names of registered voters be marked for challenge; and also to attend, at all times for holding elections, the polls in such district or precinct.

And there is no limitation in the number which the United States marshal may appoint. I will not trespass on the Senator from Kentucky at this time further in discussing the duties which this act devolves on the marshal and his deputies. Perhaps if the discussion continues I may take some time on that point.

Mr. BECK. The section last read by the Senator from Indiana was the provision I was commenting upon. It shows, as I stated, that deputy marshals were limited to cities of twenty thousand inhabitants; and as we are on this subject it may be well, as an additional reason why I shall not vote for this provision, to read section 2022:

SEC. 2022. The marshal and his general deputies, and such special deputies, shall keep the peace, and support and protect the supervisors of election in the discharge of their duties, preserve order at such places of registration and at such polls, prevent fraudulent registration and fraudulent voting thereat, or fraudulent conduct on the part of any officer of election, and immediately, either at the place of registration or polling place, or elsewhere, and either before or after registering or voting, to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits, or attempts or offers to commit, any of the acts or offenses prohibited herein, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States; but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the presence of the marshal or his general or special deputies, or either of them, or of the supervisors of election, or either of them, and, for the purposes of arrest or the preservation of the peace, the supervisors of election shall, in the absence of the marshal's deputies, or if required to assist such deputies, have the same duties and powers as deputy marshals; nor shall any person, on the day of such election, be arrested without process for any offense committed on the day of registration. (See sections 5521, 5522.)

These are the unconstitutional powers given to these marshals. They have a right, wherever they see, or think they see, any man committing any offense against any law of the United States, to arrest him without process; in short, to do pretty much what they please; and it was under that no doubt that a man by the name of Davenport, who, by the way, has not fully settled his accounts yet—we do not know how much he will set up in claim—issued thirty-one hundred warrants on the day of the election in the city of New York, arrested seven hundred people on that day, whose deputies, according to the statement in the RECORD I hold before me, were guilty of such conduct as no man pretending to be a United States officer ever before ventured upon. He issued thirty-one hundred warrants and seven hundred people were placed under arrest. He dismissed whom he pleased and held whom he pleased, and prostituted the office he held in every possible manner for the basest of purposes in that great city; and this is the money we are told we must vote because he and the miscreants whom he saw fit to employ have expended it to destroy and subvert liberty, and the Attorney-General has paid it.

This Congress should take care that the money of the people is not expended for illegal purposes; every part of this document from which I quote goes to show that in New York, in Philadelphia, in Cincinnati, in Louisville, in Saint Louis, everywhere, the whole supervisor and marshal system was nothing but a political machine whereby men were made deputy marshals in secret, often with no badges of authority displayed, so that no man could tell who was an officer and who was not. They were kept in public employment for five or ten, and in some instances as long as thirty days at $5 a day. It was simply a corruption fund, paid to the meanest class of republicans and democrats as a means of buying their vote and influence for republican candidates at the elections. And now, forsooth, we are told that we are untrue to the honor of the country, and are not acting in good faith, if we do not vote all the money that the Department requires us to pay to the men who did this dirty work.

The Attorney-General the other day furnished to a leading member of the House of Representatives a list of supervisors, marshals, and deputy marshals, employed to run the elections of 1878, except the chief supervisors in Northern and Southern New York, which have not been sent to the Department. The accounts for Eastern New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, he said, were not fully adjusted. He gives the total amount paid to chief supervisors $33,000, and the number of supervisors, 1,500; the amount paid supervisors other than chief supervisors, $101,000; the number of deputy marshals, 4,467, and the amount paid to them $65,202, making a total of $202,291, which he says he has paid out to these men; and he has not yet heard from the northern and southern districts of New York nor from Mr. Davenport, and the districts of New Jersey, Eastern New York, and Pennsylvania are not fully adjusted, yet he says $202,000 have gone. In the letter that he now sends to the Senate he tells us that we have given him all he needed for last year, that we have given him for this year already $2,750,000, and all he desired was $2,800,000 for all the legitimate expenses of his Department, so that he cannot have a legitimate deficiency of over $50,000. He seems to have taken care not to go to the people's representatives, at the other end of this Capitol, but he comes to the Senate supposing, I presume, that if he does not get it through now he never will, and admitting that out of $250,000, which he asks for in this amendment, $75,000 will go to pay deputy marshals, and $125,000 to pay for the prosecutions that those marshals have inaugurated in the States of the South in election cases, $200,000 are to be used up with the accounts of Davenport unadjusted, Northern and Southern New York unheard from, and a portion of Pennsylvania and New Jersey yet to come in. I will hand this table and the one for 1886 to the Reporter so that gentlemen may see them in the RECORD in the morning.

Senators will observe when they come to analyze and scrutinize this testimony that this law was not resorted to and enforced in the States of the South to anything like the extent it was in the great cities of the North. Is the State of New York unable to protect her own people at the polls? Is not the great State of Pennsylvania under republican rule, with Governor Hartranft and all his men, not able to protect the republican voters of the city of Philadelphia? Was it necessary to send to the city of Cincinnati republican marshals and deputy marshals, and hire the lowest order of bad men of both parties at $5 a day to protect the citizens of Cincinnati? Was such conduct necessary in New York or Cincinnati or Philadelphia for the purpose of aiding the authorities of those great States and cities to hold and enforce fair elections? No man will venture to say so. Yet nine-tenths of the money that has been expended by the Department of Justice has been expended in the great cities of the North as a corruption fund, and nothing but a corruption fund. That Department is thus creating deficiencies for base purposes after we have given them within $50,000 of what they asked. We first gave $2,750,000, when they only wanted $2,800,000; and they tell us now that for all the legitimate expenditures of the Department $50,000 would be all that they would need except for these two outrageous items.

The Attorney-General creates a deficiency in carrying on the legitimate work of that department of the Government to pay spies, informers, deputy marshals who are employed to corrupt elections in the great cities of the North and the West, and then tells the Congress of the United States that he cannot carry on the other branches of his Department unless we give him more money. If he had not expended that $200,000 in the way he has done, but allowed it to remain in the Treasury to go in the direction indicated by Congress, then we could see whether these men were honestly employed and did honest duty in Cincinnati, in New York, in Philadelphia. Then we could see how Johnny Davenport and his men with their thirty-one hundred warrants and seven hundred citizens arrested and imprisoned came to do it; I would let them wait until the accounts can be investigated. If the Attorney-General had pursued that course and had confined his payment to legitimate expenditures, he would not need one dollar of this money to-day. The very fact that he did not venture to go to the House of Representatives and in the expiring hours of this Congress seeks the Senate committee to put it through in hot haste or defeat the whole deficiency bill—for that will be the result—is conclusive against this amendment. I say he can wait, and should be required to wait until a full investigation can be had.

I believe in the first place that the enforcement law is unconstitutional, null, and void. I believe that every provision of it has been violated for the foulest and most revolutionary purposes, even admitting that it is constitutional, that the purity of the ballot-box has been invaded; the rights of the States, especially of the North and West, have been overthrown by Federal interference and by the connivance of the Attorney-General and his emissaries, marshals, and supervisors, by the use of a fund to corrupt voters, and by the payment out of the public Treasury to the vilest set of men ever employed by any government, men who would sell their own consciences, if they ever had any, for pay; and then we have to supply out of the public Treasury the means necessary to carry on this villainy. I would let the deficiency bill go, and every item of it fail, before I would vote a dollar for any such purpose.

Let the Attorney-General wait until he can show us how he has legitimately expended the money he is asking for; let him go to the representatives of the people and tell how much Mr. Davenport expended, and for what purposes; how much was expended in Philadelphia, how much in Cincinnati, and who the men were whom he employed and paid. He dare not do it, in my opinion. He comes here under pretense that there are many legitimate expenditures necessary; therefore he puts in a lumping sum of $250,000, and has to admit that only $50,000 of it is necessary for any legitimate purpose.

I thought at first that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. THURMAN] was wrong in wishing to divide the amendment, but I am not now sure about that. Probably I would agree to retain the words from line 455 down to the end of line 460, the provision—

For defraying the expenses of the Supreme Court and circuit and district courts of the United States, including the District of Columbia, and also for jurors and witnesses and expenses of suits in which the United States are concerned, or prosecutions for offenses committed against the United States, and for the safe-keeping of prisoners.

And then insert there $50,000, and strike out, as suggested by the Senator from Ohio, that part of the amendment providing for the expenses of these political officers, and to strike out "$200,000," that makes up the item of $250,000.

That is all I care to say. I desired to state the reasons why in committee I voted, and why in the Senate I shall vote, against this appropriation except to the extent indicated.

Mr. GARLAND. Mr. President, on page 19, line 453, I move to strike out the word "ten" and insert "sixty," so as to make that item read:

For expenses of United States courts, for the year 1878, $160,000.

The purpose of that amendment is to put in force actually and in good faith the question that I submitted to the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] who has the bill in charge a few moments ago; for as anxious as I am to purge this appropriation bill of all the items that come under the act that is named in the clause now under consideration, yet I am equally as anxious to vote all proper, legitimate, and necessary appropriations required for the purpose of carrying on the courts, and enforcing the laws of the United States by and through those courts.

Now I will recur to the letter of the Attorney-General on this point:

The current appropriation is for $2,750,000. I should have hoped to have made the expenditures for the current year something less than for the year previous—say $2,800,000—which would have left a deficiency of only $50,000 to be provided for—

In the clause preceding the one under discussion there is an appropriation of $110,000 for the general purposes of the courts to meet this requirement.

Mr. BECK. That is for 1878.

Mr. GARLAND. The Senator from Kentucky suggests that possibly I have got the amendment in the wrong place, but that can be placed. I propose to give the $50,000 that the Attorney-General shows is necessary for the general purposes of the judiciary. Now he proceeds. He had hoped this would be sufficient and would leave only $50,000 to be provided for—had it not been for two classes of expenditure: one for deputy marshals appointed under section 878 of the Revised Statutes, to attend elections, (the expenses of supervisors not being paid through the judiciary fund,) and the other for carrying on prosecutions necessarily caused by violations of the election laws. These two items will, in my opinion, amount to $200,000—

But he claims $250,000 in this provision—of which $75,000 will be for the expenses of the deputy marshals, and $125,000 for the expense attending the prosecutions.

Making a cool sum of $200,000 to enforce the law of 1870 relative to elections. I have no compunction at all in withholding my support from a law that I conscientiously believe to be unconstitutional; and when the Attorney-General suggests that these items are necessary, by virtue of this law he is in the attitude of a person who creates a dust and complains that he cannot see.

The Senator from Iowa has kindly invited us to a repeal of this law. An unconstitutional law, Mr. President, needs no repeal in one sense. He who believes it unconstitutional need not vote money to carry it out. But if it is upon the statute-book, and the Senator from Iowa, co-operating with a majority of the Senate, will not permit us to repeal it, we will try at least to take all the active and positive vitality out of it by withholding the means of enforcing it; and if we cannot slay the serpent, we will at least try to draw his fangs and still his rattle.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President, a few days ago there was an extraordinary vote cast by this body. The bill making appropriations for the support of the Army came here from the House with a provision making it an offense for any officer of the Army to carry troops to a place of voting in time of peace.

Sir, this is a republican form of government, and yet I doubt if any gentleman will for a moment pretend that a government is republican in spirit as well as in form which permits the Army to interfere with its popular elections. The proposition is astounding; yet the laws of the United States at this time allow it to be done. We are appropriating the people's money, raised by the overworked taxpayers of the country, to execute these laws. A distinct proposition to prohibit the use of troops at elections was deliberately voted down by a majority of this body. Is not this a most significant notice, not merely to this side of the Chamber but to the country and to the world, of the purposes that lie behind? We go so fast in these times that we often overlook legislation occurring not very long ago. In section 1989 of the Revised Statutes I find the following extraordinary provision:

It shall be lawful for the President of the United States, or such person as he may empower for that purpose, to employ such part of the land or naval forces of the United States, or of the militia, as may be necessary to aid in the execution of judicial process issued under any of the preceding provisions, or as shall be necessary to prevent the violation and enforce the due execution of the provisions of this title.

The provisions of this title relate to elections, and here is a broad, sweeping enactment that the President of the United States or anybody that he may authorize for that purpose may order such portion of the land or naval forces as he may see fit to surround the ballot-box, take possession of the polls, and, in the language of another section upon this subject, "guard and scrutinize" the American people while they are voting! Will any Senator here pretend that such a provision is consistent with a republican form of government? Need I stand here and rehearse the lessons of history? Does not every Senator know that laws of this kind are the forerunners of usurpation and tyranny, and that they have heralded the downfall of every free government in the past?

Clothe the executive of a government with the power to invade the precincts of an election with the army, and the days of liberty are numbered. This is the solemn verdict of universal history. And yet we have been for the last eight or nine years administering this Government under laws by which the President of the United States may at his own discretion hurl the Army, with fixed bayonets and with shotted cannon, against the voting precincts of the American people.

There are nearly one hundred sections of the Revised Statutes of the United States on the subject of elections, every one of which clothes the Federal Government with supervising authority over the people, not merely supervising authority, but inquisitorial authority—nearly one hundred sections of the Revised Statutes, and the Army standing by to enforce them! Supervisors are provided for in all the towns, the parishes, and the counties of the United States, with authority to go into the room where voting is going on, in express words empowered to stand before or behind the voting place, inside or outside of the room, to challenge voters, and to stop the voting whenever they please; have the ballot-box opened in order to scrutinize and inspect and supervise the same; and if anybody menaces one of them, threatens one of them, obstructs one of them, does anything which one of these superserviceable, servile, abject creatures of party spirit may construe to be a menace or a threat or an obstruction, the law says that he may have such person arrested at once and without process. He may arrest either the judge of the election, or any member of the board, or anybody else. One of these creatures of party, without process, without delay, may arrest any American citizen and take him to the nearest commissioner for commitment to prison if he cannot give bail. How like a mockery of American institutions all this seems!

Sir, I am told that there are at this hour between forty and fifty reputable citizens of Baltimore languishing in prisons under sentences of Judge Bond, men who were officers of elections and in some way did something that was construed by these Federal supervisors as a menace, a threat, or an obstruction in the discharge of their duties. These gentlemen have been convicted and sentenced to terms of one or more years' imprisonment in the penitentiary, men of character, men who are pure and patriotic in their intentions, who never contemplated the violation of the laws of their country. They are in prison simply because some person selected on account of his intense party spirit has construed their conduct to be an obstruction to the discharge of the duties devolved on him by this law. I am told that in one case a gentleman has been convicted who in some sort of mild degree protested against one of these Federal spies upon the people's right to vote going in and sitting behind the poll, opening the ballot-box, stopping the voting, and seeing what was in the box; and for that protest this gentleman is separated from his wife and children, bearing the stigma of a convict, and herding with felons.

If anybody here or elsewhere expects me to vote one dollar or the smallest possible fraction of a dollar to uphold a law that works such an outrage as this, he is entirely mistaken in my action as a Senator. I would not tax the people whom I have the honor to represent for such a purpose as this to save my own life.

When this law was originally enacted I was a member of the other branch of Congress. I discussed and denounced it then. It is the worst law ever put upon the statute-book of a free country. It is the herald of advancing despotism. It sounds the knell of free government. Free institutions cannot live under the blight and shadow of such legislation. I care not in what form this question arises, whether in an appropriation to supply a deficiency for executing these measures, or as an amendment to any other appropriation bill. I am ready to meet it. If an extra session is involved in it I cannot help it. I can afford to do what I conceive to be right, and trust the consequences to the future.

When Senators say that it is revolutionary to attach measures of liberty, justice, and right to appropriation bills, I answer them that before the people's money shall be taken for the support of the Government let them be assured of free elections and fair trials by jury. On that issue I stand. If the dominant party justify themselves in revolutionary measures against liberty and justice, against impartial trials by jury, against free elections, I am ready to embrace revolution in favor of them. If revolution comes to destroy free government, it ought to be met by revolution in behalf of those eternal principles for which our fathers died. If Senators on the other side can afford to be responsible for revolution in behalf of the doctrines of despotism, of coerced and duressed elections, of tyranny and injustice, of jury trials which do not answer the provisions of the Constitution, certainly we on this side need not shrink from the responsibility of revolution in the opposite direction.

I have estimated my own responsibility on this question, and it gives me no trouble.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Will the Senator be kind enough to inform the Senate what he means by allusion to jury trials? I do not understand what it is he means. We have, I suppose, the same system of jury trials we have had for many years.

Mr. VOORHEES. How well the Senator from Iowa knows what I mean! How well the Senator from Iowa knows that by law we have ostracized from the jury-box nearly the entire intelligence and a large proportion of the virtue of all the Southern States! How well the Senator from Iowa knows that by existing law a citizen anywhere throughout the United States, in order to be qualified in the Federal courts either as a grand or traverse juror, has to hold up his hand and swear that he has never directly or indirectly given aid or comfort to the late rebellion! Is that kind of ostracism and proscription to last forever? Does not the Senator from Iowa know that that provision was put there for the purpose of enabling the Federal courts in the South to pack juries, whether of white men or black men, in the interest of the republican party? It is useless to try to deceive ourselves or deceive the country. I ask but for a fair jury. I ask for the abrogation of a law which excludes from the jury-box nearly every gentleman sitting near me on this floor. I ask for the repeal of a law which says to the Senators here from the South, "You are not qualified to act as jurors; you are unfit to try the commonest and plainest questions that arise in courts of justice, because you cannot take this miserable test oath." In a cause like this I am willing to stay here until this great wrong is wiped out. I am willing to stay here until we have the further guarantee that the Army shall not surround the polls.

Sir, what can be more important than the questions on which I am addressing the Senate? Are there any in the whole range of human affairs that lie closer to the foundation of liberty? Free elections and impartial trial by jury! Secure these and all is safe; without them the Government is not fit for freemen, but rather for a race of slaves.

I am not to be deterred by the argument that this is an aggressive policy. I am not to be deterred by the plea of conservatism. Justice and right are never timid. If those who in my judgment are sapping the foundations of free government can afford to be aggressive, so can we. Whether it is right to be aggressive or not does not depend upon a mere analysis of the word; it depends upon its application. If aggression is applied to a wrong cause, then aggression is wrong. If aggression is applied to a just cause, then God will bless the aggressor. If the policy which I advocate is to be denominated as an aggressive one, and therefore denounced, I rely for my vindication on the purpose we have in view. That purpose is to wipe out the deepest stain that has ever been inflicted upon a republican government; to remove offensive, obstructive, and oppressive legislation upon the subject of elections and jury trials.

Sir, there was a time in this country when the idea of the Federal Government sending its officials to the villages, the hamlets, the towns, to all the voting precincts of this broad land, to supervise elections, to invade the polls and the ballot-boxes, would have startled the community like the ringing of a fire-bell in the night. An emissary of the Federal Government on such a mission would have been regarded in years past like some wild and curious beast bent on mischief and improperly at large. Yet now it appears to be a debatable point whether we shall withhold supplies to a Government administered by such emissaries, and which systematically violates the fundamental principles of liberty and justice.

Mr. President, I did not expect to detain the Senate as long as I have. I will detain it no longer at this time.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Mr. President, I do not propose to go into a general discussion of the election laws on our statute-books. I called the attention of the Senator from Indiana while he was speaking to what he had said in regard to juries organized in the United States courts. He indulged somewhat in denunciation, and said that under the present law the intelligence, worth, &c., of our people, especially in the Southern States, could not be represented upon our grand or petit juries in the courts of the United States. I have recently had occasion to look into that matter somewhat, and I find that there is a great deal of loose and violent and, as I think, most unjust denunciation in that regard. I think I have evidence that will tend to show that even in the Southern States fair juries are had. Recently I found in a Mississippi newspaper, called the Brandon Republican, this language:

North Mississippi exchanges are showing rascality practiced by the Federal officials in selecting grand and petit jurors for the present term of court at Oxford. Both juries are composed of white and black radicals of the most malignant type, and selected expressly to find bills against and convict democrats, whether guilty or not. Green Chandler is the district attorney, and Vasser, of Aberdeen, the foreman of the grand jury. Judge Hill—

That is the judge of the district court—is also a republican, but we look upon him as an honest man, and he will see that honest men are protected in their rights.

Remarking upon that and comments in the Okolona Messenger, the Memphis Avalanche has this to say:

The Okolona Messenger outstrips its Brandon contemporary by mildly and gently alluding to the jurors as "radicals, soreheads, ballot-box stuffers, murderers, and vindictive rascals, whose chief desire seems to be to avenge themselves upon their personal and political enemies."

That, of course, is said out of the United States Senate, or it would not be said in that way. The Memphis Avalanche proceeds to remark further:

If those charges be true, the journals alluded to have done a public service by exposing the vindictive rascals. But the Oxford Eagle—

I have the paper here—

whose Bourbon democracy cannot be questioned, shows quite clearly that the allegations are not founded on any facts known to the acquaintances of the gentlemen selected as jurors.

Now I will read briefly from the Oxford Eagle upon that point:

We do not doubt the honesty and sincerity of our old friend, Colonel Frantz—

That is the editor of the Brandon Republican—in the utterance of the above. He is full of enthusiasm—

As my friend from Indiana is—and overflowing with love and devotion to the democratic organization—

And that my friend from Indiana is—and strikes with all his might at anything and everything that smacks of radicalism.

As my friend from Indiana does.

But in this instance he is totally ignorant of the facts, and does not only officials of the Federal courts but members of the juries gross injustice. We do not know personally but few of the grand jurors, but assure our esteemed contemporary that some of its members are gentlemen of honor and integrity, and democrats whose loyalty to the party has never been questioned.

I see both the Senators from Mississippi in their seats, and I will read in their presence the names:

As to the petit jury, it is only necessary to say that such men as H. P. Burney, son of Rev. S. G. Burney, one of the pillars of the Cumberland Presbyterian church; J. L. Boone, a prominent citizen, and all his life a democrat; J. T. Short, an esteemed citizen of this county, and a democrat; S. T. King, one of the oldest, purest, and best citizens of Oxford; Richard Swain, a citizen of La Fayette, against whose character and honor there has never been a whisper; J. F. Brown, another citizen of our county, whose loyalty to his party and love for the white people of his section has never been questioned; T. A. Hutchinson, a merchant of Oxford, and a man of unimpeachable character; A. P. Webster, of Toccapola, recently elected mayor of that place by white votes, and a man of standing in the community in which he lives; C. W. Harris, a citizen of Oxford, and a man respected and esteemed by our entire community, and other gentlemen of equal character and standing are members of this jury. If this jury is packed, it is evident that it is packed with true and uncompromising democrats. This much we are constrained to say in behalf of our much abused, misrepresented, and slandered fellow-citizens.

Mr. President, I do not know any of the gentlemen whose names I have read; I hope they are just such gentlemen as they are said to be; and if that be so, it shows to some extent at least that the Senator from Indiana is mistaken in supposing that the wealth and intelligence of the State of Mississippi, at least, cannot be represented on juries in the United States courts in that State. One other brief extract in regard to the effects of the election law from the same paper I will read. It is an editorial, as follows:

Some of our contemporaries have, no doubt innocently, exaggerated the number of election indictments returned by the late grand jury.

The date of this paper is January 23, 1879.

Mr. LAMAR. Will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. LAMAR. Perhaps it is proper to state here that the judge of the district court is a very estimable and intelligent gentleman; that he has on all occasions, so far as I am aware, enforced harsh and oppressive laws in a benignant spirit, and within my recollection he has not required the iron-clad oath of persons sitting as jurors. In the exercise of discretion that judge has not required that oath.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I trust, Mr. President, that all our district and circuit judges are estimable and intelligent gentlemen, and that they will not apply the requirements of that statute unless in cases where in their judgment and belief, as intelligent and estimable men and sound lawyers, they judge that the interests of the country require that it should be done.

But let me read further touching the operations of this election law. This same paper, the Oxford Eagle, of date January 23, 1879, as I have said, contains this editorial:

Some of our contemporaries have, no doubt innocently, exaggerated the number of indictments returned by the late grand jury. There are eleven now pending against twenty-two different persons, and several of these are included in two indictments.

Now mark:

Three defendants plead guilty of ballot-box stuffing—

The sympathies of the Senator from Indiana certainly do not go out to them; they certainly were not convicted by a packed jury, but were found guilty upon their own plea, upon confession in court of the stuffing of ballot-boxes—and one of these also for failing to do his duty in preserving order at the polls.

That is no crime, is it?

Mr. VOORHEES. Was that any reason for loading this man with fines?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Will the Senator let me read this short extract through so that it will be in the RECORD in connection?

Mr. VOORHEES. I thought the Senator stopped for an answer.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. No.

and one of these, also, for failing to do his duty in preserving order at the polls—

If he failed to do his duty in that regard, guarding the ballot-box, which is the safety for all our institutions, he ought to have been punished, ought he not?

and one inspector was tried and convicted of negligently permitting his box to be stuffed.

Is it an outrage upon the rights of American citizens that such a man should be punished under this law?

This is the whole of it. We are told that the grand jury very properly refused to indict except where the proof showed some wrong done, or a willful neglect of duty.

As I said, I do not intend, at this time at least, to go into the discussion of the general question of the United States election laws and their effect, but I have endeavored to show that in the State of Mississippi, certainly a State in which there is as much danger to be apprehended as in any other in the Union if wrong was to be done under these laws, that wrong has not been done and that confessed crime, and crime in regard to our elections that I think no man will stand here to defend, has been punished.

A single word more and I have done. The Senator from Indiana tells us that he will stand here until the end of time, or his time at least, until these laws be repealed. That is his privilege, and it may be the privilege of some of us to stay here with him to prevent them being repealed.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President, it is not my purpose to protract or broaden the discussion of this question at this time. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." But inasmuch as the Senator from Iowa has dwelt upon the jury law and its administration especially in Mississippi, I may be pardoned a few words in reply.

It so happens that since the war closed I have spent a considerable time in the Federal courts in Mississippi, and it happens, as one of the compensations the people of Mississippi have for the many curses that have been inflicted upon them, their United States district judge, Judge Hill, is a benign, liberal, and kind judge, and if he should die to-morrow justice perhaps would not be administered by his successor in the same temper and spirit. The inference from the Senator's remarks is that we had better depend upon the frail tenure of human life, better depend upon an individual for the administration of justice than depend on the law. Is it an answer to the statutes on this subject, that here and there a man is found with a superior sense of justice to those who enacted the law under which he holds his courts? Is it an answer to these bad laws that here and there is found a man who in the administration of them takes off the merciless edge which was put to them by the legislators who enacted them? In answer to what the Senator from Iowa said as to Judge Hill's administration of his court, let me show you what the law is. The law is what I complain of. Judge Hill is one of many judges, he may die to-morrow, and if he be succeeded by a man like Judge Bond of Maryland, who is sending men to the penitentiary for what another judge, Judge Hughes, in Virginia, says is no offense at all, what may be expected? What can be said in favor of a law that allows such a liberty of discretion on the part of the Federal judiciary? The qualification of jurors in the Federal courts is thus prescribed; in section 812 of the Revised Statutes we find the following:

SEC. 812. No person shall be summoned as a juror in any circuit or district court more than once in two years; and it shall be sufficient cause of challenge to any juror called to be sworn in any cause that he has been summoned and attended said court as a juror at any term of said court held within two years prior to the time of such challenge.

Then turning over to section 820 we find:

SEC. 820. The following shall be causes of disqualification and challenge of grand and petit jurors in the courts of the United States, in addition to the causes existing by virtue of section 812—

Which I have just read—namely: without duress and coercion to have taken up arms or to have joined any insurrection or rebellion against the United States; to have adhered to any insurrection or rebellion, giving it aid and comfort; to have given, directly or indirectly, any assistance in money, arms, horses, clothes, or anything whatever—

The giving a cup of cold water or a crust of bread to a son, a brother, or a comrade would disqualify a person living in the South, a man of the purest virtue and highest character from going into the jury box—or anything whatever to or for the use or benefit of any person whom the giver of such assistance knew to have joined, or to be about to join, any insurrection or rebellion, or to have resisted, or to be about to resist, with force of arms, the execution of the laws of the United States, or whom he had good ground to believe to have joined, or to be about to join—

How inquisitorial, and I say respectfully, how infernal in inquisitorial power these laws of prescription always are, whether prescribing test oaths or anything else—or about to join any insurrection or rebellion, or to have resisted, or to be about to resist, with force of arms, the execution of the laws of the United States; or to have counseled or advised any person to join any insurrection or rebellion, or to resist with force of arms the laws of the United States.

If an aged father had reason to believe that his young, impulsive, and ardent son, with the sympathies of his own people, not capable of resisting the impulses of humanity to which we are all subject in communities in which we live—if the aged father had reason to suspect his son was about to join, or had in contemplation to join, the confederate forces in the rebellion, which is now fading away into the shade of history, which is growing dimmer each year, and that father gave his son a horse, or a pair of boots, or a pair of spurs to ride with, or a lunch to eat on the way, the district attorney of this great Government may challenge him from the jury-box and replace him with somebody else of a very different character. I am informed by my gifted and excellent friend from Louisiana [Mr. FUSTIS] of a case where a Federal officer who had fought under the old flag was excluded from the jury-box under the provision of this law because he had assisted a confederate officer who was wounded, and, sir, the law justifies such a construction, the law justifies the district attorney of the United States in challenging the officer in blue, the Federal soldier, if he gave a cup of cold water to alleviate the suffering thirst of a confederate after the battle was over.

Mr. KERNAN. If my friend will allow me, he may do it although the district attorney served himself in the confederate army.

Mr. WITHERS. Or the judge on the bench.

Mr. KERNAN. That can be done although the judge who sits on the bench and the district attorney who makes the challenge had both served in the confederate army.

Mr. VOORHEES. That is true; that is a good speech. Section 821 reads as follows:

SEC. 821. At every term of any court of the United States the district attorney or other person acting on behalf of the United States in said court may move, and the court in their discretion may require, the clerk to tender to every person summoned to serve as a grand or petit juror or venireman or talesman in said court the following oath or affirmation, namely: "You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you will support the Constitution of the United States of America; that you have not without duress and constraint taken up arms or joined any insurrection or rebellion against the United States; that you have not adhered to any insurrection or rebellion, giving it aid and comfort; that you have not directly or indirectly given any assistance in money or any other thing to any person or persons whom you knew or had good ground to believe to have joined or to be about to join said insurrection or rebellion or to have resisted or to be about to resist with force of arms the execution of the laws of the United States; and that you have not counseled or advised any person to join any insurrection or rebellion against or to resist with force of arms the laws of the United States." Any person declining to take said oath shall be discharged by the court from serving on the grand or petit jury or venire to which he may have been summoned.

A repentant rebel may go upon the bench; a repentant rebel may be in the district-attorney's office; a gallant Federal soldier may present himself in the jury-box and because he may have assisted a friend, a relative, or a class-mate in time of distress after the battle was over on the stricken field, he can be challenged and set aside because he cannot take that oath!

Sir, am I drawing a fancy picture? Is this overwrought? It is best to avoid all personality in a discussion of this kind, but it is not difficult for me to understand how the enforcement of a law like this might give rise to harsh feelings against those who are regarded by their fellow-citizens as men who abandoned their principles for place and pelf. I do not believe the southern people are required to be crushed by such legislation as this. I believe the southern men who were in the confederate army would make as fair jurors as anybody else in the world. This test oath rises as an abomination to me as I enter a court of justice in the South.

Whatever the merits or demerits of the late unhappy and bloody controversy which was submitted to the dreadful arbitrament of arms, no man pretends that participation in it stains individual or personal character; nobody pretends that it destroys the manhood, the American fiber that is in the southern people, but this test oath assails not only men who bore arms but men who assisted those who did. Are these men to be stigmatized as unfit to assist in the administration of justice? It is monstrous; it is an abomination. I have no hesitation in saying what perhaps it is not necessary at all for me to say, that the history of mankind does not furnish an instance where a people, overrun by victorious armies, shattered and broken as they were, have born themselves so well, with such dignity, such integrity of purpose, and such powers of recuperation as the people of the Southern States. Loaded down with the worst legislation I ever knew, invaded by hordes and packs of hungry adventurers like jackals following in the wake of armies, they have not lost their dignity as American citizens, and for them as well as for myself, as an American claiming to know no geographical section, loving one section as well as another, believing in the people of one section as much as another, I do not intend to vote money to execute such provisions of law as these.

It may be premature to bring this feature into debate at this time; but if it is, the Senator from Iowa is perhaps more responsible for it than I. At any rate, I will leave the question at this point for the present.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I move that the five-minute rule be applied to this paragraph of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. McCREERY.) Is there objection to the five-minute rule being applied?

Mr. SAULSBURY and others objected.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the five-minute rule be applied to this paragraph.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I hope that motion will not prevail. This is a subject of very great importance which the Senators desire to discuss.

Mr. EDMUNDS and Mr. ALLISON. It is not debatable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is not debatable.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Several gentlemen desire to give the reasons why they will vote against this appropriation. They want an opportunity to give the reasons why they will vote against the appropriation which seems to be required by the head of a Department. I hope, therefore, the motion will not prevail.

Mr. ALLISON. I submit it for the Senate to decide.

Mr. BAYARD. I hope the Senator will withdraw the motion for the present.

Mr. ALLISON. I will withdraw the motion for the present to accommodate the Senator from Delaware, but will renew it in a very few minutes as soon as I have an opportunity.

Mr. BAYARD. Mr. President, the question before the Senate is upon striking out, on page 29 of House bill 6436, an appropriation of $250,000. This is an amendment of the Senate committee; it did not come from the House of Representatives but has been added by the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate. It proposes to expend $250,000, or, as is explained verbally by the honorable Senator in charge of the bill, about four-fifths of that sum, in defraying the expenses which "have been and may be incurred" in the enforcement of the act approved February 28, 1871, entitled "An act to amend an act approved May 31, 1870, and certain amendments thereto." Questions have been raised as to the regularity of the amendment, and subjects have been brought into this debate than which none are, or can be, more interesting and vital to the American people. I do not think it will be questioned that the men who founded this Government loved liberty. They sought peace with the sword and to establish liberty under law. They knew well its value, and they did all that men could do to obtain and secure it. They sought to secure liberty under a government of laws; they transmitted it to us as our best inheritance; and, so far as in me lies, recognizing the great principle, I propose to secure liberty only under law, and I believe that man best serves his country and the cause of liberty who insists upon a constant observance of laws as the only means by which, and under which, liberty shall be maintained.

So it was in 1870 and 1871, when on the floor of this Chamber there stood with me a scanty handful of men, among whom, ever conspicuous, was my honored friend from Ohio, [Mr. THURMAN,] that we steadfastly opposed the enactment of the so-called enforcement laws, and stood here, by day and by night, endeavoring, by strenuous debate to awaken the American people to a sense of the dangers contained in such legislation, and to make some attempt, vain though it should be, to dissuade the great party majority that enacted these laws. I believed then that these laws were arbitrary, that they violated the spirit of justice which laws must contain in order to be useful and respected, that they were violative of those limitations upon Federal power which the Constitution had imposed. I then endeavored to point out their capability for gross abuse and injustice; and all the dangers that I then apprehended, and the injustice and the mischief which such laws would necessarily cause, have been more than fulfilled in what we have witnessed in the last four years.

For what purpose and in what name and in what cause were these laws enacted? They were professed to be in the interest of peace and purity of elections. Have they been productive of peace? Have they been productive of purity? Have the agencies which the Administration have employed to carry out these laws been such as can, with common honesty, be claimed to be in the interest of peace, good order, and purity in elections? Have they not rather been proven to be agencies for corruption and for the grossest intimidation? I ask, plainly, all over this country have these laws been administered in the cause of public justice, or have they been administered in the cause of one political party? In all the millions of money that have been appropriated and spent, has one dollar, one farthing of that money, ever reached any but a partisan's hand? Has any man, but the members of one of the great political parties, ever felt the adverse power of this legislation? Has any man but a member of one political party felt his dishonest or improper action restrained by this legislation? Can the records of any Federal court show any indictment found or prosecuted against any but the members of one of the political parties of this Union? Can any Senator suggest the record of a single case in which this unjust and partisan discrimination has failed to be made?

I said I intended to walk in the path of law and the spirit of law, and to find, under law, remedies for all injustice, for, in my belief, one danger of our time is the confusion in the public mind and in the minds of honest men of the spirit and meaning of the laws which should protect our liberty. Sir, there can be nothing more insidiously dangerous than to accomplish injustice under the pretended forms of justice, nothing more dangerous than to overthrow law under pretense of enforcing law. Laws perverted from their meaning, laws in which the letter is followed and the spirit is killed are the most essential frauds upon a free government. By all the decisions of the courts, by the decision of every parliamentary body in a free country, the presence of armed forces at the polls of popular elections ipso facto avoids the result of that election at the demand of the defeated party. To my sorrow, as an American be it said, I witnessed the other day the array of the united majority of Senators on the other side of this Chamber in favor of the doctrine, that in time of profound peace it should be lawful to bring a standing army to the peaceful polls of election—not one voice of all, not one man in that array of intelligence and ability, was found to be willing to raise his voice in favor of a principle so plain and essential that I had not believed there could be a difference about it among those who intended to preserve a government of laws.

But, sir, if the presence of well drilled, and disciplined armed forces at an election shall, of itself, be sufficient to avoid that election, how much greater is the danger, how much more excessive is the terrorism and intimidation which follow unlimited arrest without warrant, of trial before packed juries, of fine and long imprisonment, punishment so excessive in proportion to the offense that is to be punished as dwarfs into insignificance the sentences which have been imposed by State laws for like offenses.

I said the juries were packed; I said it in the face of laws which stand on our statute-book which have just now been read by the honorable Senator from Indiana, [Mr. VOORHEES,] to show that to-day scarcely a fraction, scarcely one man out of one thousand in fifteen States of this Union, can sit upon juries if it pleases the district attorney or the judge to purge him with such an oath as necessarily disqualifies him. To-day we see members of the Cabinet, we see Senators to-day, and Representatives in Congress, men of both parties in each House to-day, district attorneys who are to present men for prosecution, nay the very judges, from whose lips sentence of condemnation is to proceed, are themselves disqualified by this law from sitting upon the panel of the jury which they are to instruct and whose findings they are to set aside or maintain in their discretion! Why, sir, the very statement of the case is sufficient to shock every sense of justice; and I do not believe, and I cannot believe, in the face of the intelligence and good feeling of the American people, that this Congress is to adjourn until that stain, at least, is removed from the statute-book of their Government.

But, Mr. President, this is not the case of an appropriation added irregularly. It professes to be an appropriation to carry into effect existing law. If so, it is lawful and unobjectionable. Is it an appropriation to carry into effect an existing law? Is it in truth and in fact an expenditure of money in the past or in the future authorized by law? Standing here in face of the facts, I deliberately deny it. This money was spent in violation of law, this money was spent in perversion of law, not merely of its spirit, but its letter. Its expenditure was without warrant, and there is no just reason why it should be paid.

Large amounts lavishly paid to these countless deputy marshals for doing that which they could have no right to do, interfering with free elections in the States. Paid to men who under the color of existing statutes were not warranted in being near the polls. Taking this law as it stands upon the statute-book, that, in cities having over twenty thousand people, deputies ad libitum may be appointed, how many of such deputies, how much money for such purposes, is comprised within this quarter of a million which we are asked to vote? Who has segregated this? Who shall tell us that when the first law officer of the Government, the Attorney-General of the United States, has broken the law, when he has undertaken to recommend to us the payment of money for which no existing law gives authority, what should be our answer to him? What is our answer to any administrative officer of the Government who, without law to warrant it, makes a contract or incurs an expense?

Mr. ALLISON. I wish the Senator from Delaware would state to us wherein this appropriation is intended to be applied in violation of law.

Mr. BAYARD. It is intended to be applied in violation of law in paying men for doing that which no law warranted their doing, for acts in which they were trespassers, and for which they should have been, and I hope at some day will be, punished by the laws of the States for their invasion of the rights of their fellow-citizens. There cannot be a more flagrant and a more dangerous doctrine than that an administrative officer of the Government can bind the people to pay money to do that which there was no law to authorize him to order. That is what has been done in the case now before the Senate, and that is a large part of the money which the honorable Senator has recommended the Senate now to vote an appropriation for.

Mr. ALLISON. Now, I want the Senator from Delaware to tell us wherein the Attorney-General of the United States has authorized the expenditure of money or directed the expenditure of money not expressly authorized by law?

Mr. BAYARD. I take it for granted that the Attorney-General of the United States has recommended this appropriation.

Mr. ALLISON. He has.

Mr. BAYARD. What is the appropriation he recommends? Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, of which $200,000 are for defraying expenses which have been incurred in the enforcement of the acts approved February 23, 1871, and May 31, 1870. Now, it is well known to every member of the Senate, it is well known, or can be well known, to my honorable friend from Iowa, that perhaps thousands of men were employed at $5 per day for such number of days as marshals saw fit to employ them to attend the polls and supervise elections. I mean now deputy marshals electioneering—I do not stop with the word supervising—and interfering in elections when the law of the United States forbids their presence or employment except in cities of a certain population.

Mr. ALLISON. Now, this appropriation is intended to cover the present fiscal year. Do I understand the Senator from Delaware to maintain that during the elections in 1878, last year, deputy marshals were employed and used in violation of law; and, if he so charges, I want him to state to us in what States this employment was conducted.

Mr. BAYARD. Well, Mr. President, I think it is rather cool in the honorable Senator from Iowa, who comes into the Senate and asks us to appropriate $250,000, to ask me for the items which are within and those which are without the law. He has come here and asked us for a sum in gross. Senators on this floor, from Louisiana in one case—for one case is as good as a thousand—tell you that that State was deluged with deputy marshals at polls where they had no right under the law to go; that is to say, they did go to towns having less than twenty thousand inhabitants. The same thing was true of the State of Arkansas. The Senators are here to speak for themselves.

Mr. ALLISON. But that was in the year 1876, two years ago, appropriations for which were made in 1877.

Mr. BAYARD. I do not mean to say how far back you may go, to 1876 or 1878.

Mr. WITHERS. This bill is for 1878 and prior years.

Mr. McDONALD. In answer to the Senator from Iowa, I wish to say that in South Carolina, outside of cities of twenty thousand inhabitants, there were numbers of deputy marshals.

Mr. ALLISON. Undoubtedly the marshals of the United States have authority to appoint deputy marshals.

Mr. BAYARD. To supervise elections at cities of less than twenty thousand?

Mr. ALLISON. They have authority to appoint deputy marshals to preserve the peace, as the States have authority to appoint deputy sheriffs to preserve the peace of the county; and that is all, as I understand it, that has been done in the State of South Carolina.

Mr. BAYARD. I state in the presence of the Senators from Louisiana and Arkansas, and on what I understand to be their authority, that in towns containing less than twenty thousand people, under this enforcement law, the Administration assumed to send, and did send, deputy marshals.

Mr. EUSTIS. Any number of them.

Mr. BAYARD. Yes, any number of them. I therefore say, Mr. President, that even were I in favor of the method in which this law has been administered, I should feel myself bound to object to this appropriation. How much more is my disposition to resist this amendment increased when I see the claim of power with which this law has been administered at the last election in 1878, as well as in 1876? I see in it almost an abnegation, almost a denial, of the principle of free election by the people, which it is necessary that we should maintain if we ever expect under the forms of law to redress abuses or to reform systems and change our rulers.

Mr. President, I believe that all over this country, outside of those heated partisans who make up the rank and file of the two great parties, there stands an authoritative mass of intelligent, independent, upright, liberty-loving, American citizens, who will never consent that the principle of free election, that great safety-valve, that great American substitute for revolution, shall be invaded or overthrown, directly or indirectly. When the American people, having the facts and the issue broadly, fairly, and openly presented to them, shall say that it is lawful for the executive branch of the Government to have unlimited power to take possession of all the police powers of any State, to place at the polls an authority paramount to any which the State could place there, officials without number, beyond the power of arrest, officials paramount to any State authority, and so go through the form of an election, or allow the people to go through it, in the grasp of such a mighty power as I have described, I say when the American people shall look on and decide in favor of that, then my hope of republican government in this country will have died within me. I do not believe they will ever so decide. I do not believe that they are prepared to part with their liberties; I do not believe that when fairly and honestly and straightforwardly this issue is presented to them, there will be a doubtful voice or a doubtful expression of that voice. I do not believe that they are prepared to bid farewell to this grand system of republican government which has so dignified humanity, which has been so fair, and so just, so glorious, and so noble, which has given the plain poor man in this country the status of his manhood, and recognized the true dignity of humanity; I do not believe they will part with all this at the bidding of any political party for the sake of continuing itself in power. And, sir, I can only say that whether it be with the great majority which I think I shall find with me in that issue, or whether it be in the feeblest minority, that, mindful of the Constitution of our fathers, mindful of the liberty for which they struggled, mindful of the principle of laws under which they endeavored to establish this Government, I shall ever be found steadfast; for I know that it involves the vital spirit of republicanism, without which our system would become a despotism or sink into anarchy.

Mr. ALLISON. I move now, Mr. President, to apply the five-minute rule to this debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is moved that the five-minute rule be applied to this discussion.

The question being put, the yeas were 14.

Mr. SARGENT. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WITHERS. On this question I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas, [Mr. DORSEY.] He would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 32, nays 31; as follows:

YEAS—32.
Allison,	Conover,	Ingalls,	Patterson,
Anthony,	Davis of Illinois,	Jones of Nevada,	Plumb,
Blaine,	Dawes,	Kellogg,	Rollins,
Booth,	Edmunds,	Kirkwood,	Sargent,
Burnside,	Ferry,	Matthews,	Saunders,
Cameron of Pa.,	Hamlin,	Mitchell,	Spencer,
Cameron of Wis.,	Hoar,	Morrill,	Teller,
Chandler,	Howe,	Oglesby,	Wadleigh,
NAYS—31.
Bailey,	Eaton,	Jones of Florida,	Morgan,
Barnum,	Eustis,	Kernan,	Ransom,
Bayard,	Garland,	Lamar,	Saulsbury,
Beck,	Gordon,	McCreery,	Shields,
Butler,	Grover,	McDonald,	Thurman,
Cockrell,	Harris,	McPherson,	Voorhees,
Coke,	Hereford,	Moxey,	Wallace,
Conkling,	Hill,	Merrimon,
ABSENT—13.
Bruce,	Dorsey,	Randolph,	Withers.
Chaffee,	Johnston,	Sharon,
Davis of W. Va.,	McMillan,	Whyte,
Dennis,	Paddock,	Windom,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The five-minute rule is applied to this question.

Mr. WALLACE. Mr. President, this appropriation does not stand on the footing of ordinary appropriations. It stands solely upon the letter of the Attorney-General. We have under date of the 16th of January a printed document, known as House Executive Document No. 13, giving in detail the deficiencies in the several Departments of the Government for the fiscal year 1879. In this is found reported a deficiency for the Department of Justice, but there is no word or letter about the deficiency named in this amendment. On the contrary, the $250,000 now claimed as a deficiency is not found in the document. The House of Representatives has had no information in regard to the subject of a deficiency in the Department of Justice as found in this amendment. The item that is now proposed is not in the House bill which comes to us under date of the 15th of February, and the letter of the Attorney-General, which is dated the 20th of February, gives us the first information on the subject. It provides for a deficiency of $250,000 for past expenses and future expenses during the current year; but $75,000 thereof are to be expended in the payment of marshals' expenses created during the past portion of this fiscal year. There are no details given in this demand of the Attorney-General, and there ought to be. We want to know who the men are, who were employed, in what cities, by what authority, what are their names, and the amount paid to each.

Who were these deputy marshals? Are they the refuse of the slums of the cities of Philadelphia, New York and Cincinnati, or are they men of character and position upon whom the insignia of the Government of the United States has been placed? We have tried again and again in Philadelphia to get the names of the deputy marshals employed there, and we have failed. The press has sought it at the hands of the marshal, and he refuses to give their names. We have demanded their names again and again and failed to get them or a detail of their pay, and now the Attorney-General, without giving us the name of a man, without giving us a single item of detailed statement as to where this deficiency occurs, whether in Philadelphia, New Jersey, South Carolina, Louisiana, or Ohio, asks us to give him $75,000 for the payment of marshals and $125,000 for expenses to be incurred in the prosecution of causes in the courts in the South.

This is a subject that affects not alone the southern people but it affects the northern people as well who are to be wronged by this appropriation of their money. If we examine the appropriations made prior to the enactment of the law of 1871 for the Department of Justice, they are but about one million and a half annually by the regular appropriation bills, but immediately after this enactment, commencing in 1872, the appropriations for the Department of Justice swell to the enormous sum of $3,300,000; and until the democracy came into power in the other branch of Congress there was no reduction in these enormous sums. The appropriations now are over $2,800,000 annually. From $1,200,000 in 1871 they have swollen to two million and three-quarters annually. Is there any other cause for it than the provisions of the act of 1871? Dates and figures seem to charge this result to the cause I have named; the act of 1871. What we want of the Committee on Appropriations is details and figures, and not the mere statement of the Attorney-General that there is and will be a deficiency. He says there is a deficiency. In what? For what? To whom paid? What amount? In what cities? In what States? Let us have this information, and then we can vote intelligently.

MR. SAULSBURY. Mr. President, I regret that the majority of the Senate has limited debate upon this amendment to five minutes. The law is one odious in its character. It was passed by the majority of the Senate, and it has been a subject of dissatisfaction to the people of the country. Under its operation there has been great injustice and great oppression exercised toward the freemen of this land. Now when a question comes up upon which legitimate discussion upon the character of the laws of 1870 and 1871 can be had, the majority of the Senate limits debate to five minutes, so that a full exposure of the pernicious consequences which have resulted from these laws cannot be had. It is true that in debate which has already proceeded there has been demonstrated the iniquities that have been practiced under the operation of this law. But in a question affecting the liberties and rights of the people there should be the most enlarged freedom of discussion.

Yet when this question, involving the principle of free elections, is brought to the attention of the Senate and the attention of the country, the honorable Senator from Iowa moves in his place that debate upon the subject shall be limited to five minutes. Sir, there are greater rights than that of appropriating the public money. There is the right, the inalienable right, of freemen involved in this discussion.

I again repeat my regret that the Senator from Iowa should have felt impelled to move that the five-minute rule be now adopted in this discussion. But sufficient time has elapsed, and will still elapse, in the discussion to call the attention of the country fully to the wrongs that have been practiced by our republican friends under the law of 1870 and 1871.

The Attorney-General asks us to give him an appropriation of $250,000 for what? The language of the amendment, which I understand was prepared by the Attorney-General, or in his office, is to pay expenses that have occurred and that may hereafter occur in enforcing these laws. How have the laws been enforced? If I were to assign but one reason why I should withhold my vote from this amendment I could find ample reason and justification for my vote in the manner in which the law has been in the past enforced.

We have heard to-day that in the city of New York alone thirty-one hundred warrants were issued by the supervisors of elections. I see from published statements that there have been a very large number of deputy marshals in that city and in other cities. Some twelve hundred were appointed in the city of Saint Louis, and for what purpose? Every man who applies common sense to the inquiry as to the purpose and object of the appointment of such a number in Saint Louis will find it in the fact that there were three close election districts in that city which by the oppressive operations of this law were carried by the republicans. Three districts which had heretofore by small majorities returned democratic members to the other House, under the operations of this law, by the aid of these deputy marshals, were carried for the republicans. How was it in Cincinnati? Where two districts in that city had heretofore given small democratic majorities this law was put in operation and the vote of the democratic majority overborne by the interference of these deputy marshals. For the purpose of aiding the republican party the law was inaugurated, and it is to continue the operations of this law in that regard that the Attorney-General now asks that he may have this appropriation of $250,000 granted to him. I hope we shall not do it. I do not believe the law is constitutional, and it ought to be repealed. I do not believe it has been executed in the spirit of fairness and justice, and I believe that it strikes down the right of free elections which the people of this country have ever desired.

MR. KERNAN. Of course I do not intend to make any speech, but as we are appropriating money for a deficiency under the act of 1871, affecting the elections, I want to call the attention of the Senate to one or two facts that appear in sworn evidence on a report made to Congress, to show that we should have a detailed statement of how this money is to be spent before we vote it very liberally. I hold in my hand Report No. 800, Forty-fourth Congress, first session, containing the evidence that was taken in New York in reference to expenditures under this law, in reference to the election prior to 1876. You will find on pages 20 and 21 the testimony of Mr. Gibney, who says that he was employed under Mr. Davenport in supervising the election. He was paid $5 a day for ten days. He then says he drew $33 more, and I want to show you how he drew it. He says he made out a "bill for carriage hire by instructions of the president of the district."

Question. Although you had never paid a dollar?

Answer. No, sir.

But he made out a bill which he receipted, which was paid, for expenses incurred as "aid to chief supervisor in fourteenth assembly district," as follows:

October 25, carriage hire, $15.

October 26, carriage hire, $15.

October 26, stationery, $3.

He swears he never paid a dollar for carriage hire, nor a dollar for stationery, and yet these sums were paid to him.

Take another witness, named Cunz, whose evidence is on page 25. He testifies that he was connected with the secret service department, and that he belonged to a political club. There were expenses which were paid out of this fund for preserving the purity of elections, which, in this testimony, they call the kuklux fund. This witness is asked the following question:

By Mr. CAULFIELD:

Question. I ask you on the whole if you have any hesitation in saying that portions of this kuklux fund were used for political purposes?

Answer. I have no hesitation whatever.

By Mr. JOYCE:

Q. Explain what you mean by political purposes.

A. Such as employing men as stump-speakers, and traveling around the country and paying expenses of political clubs.

This witness who was then employed is compelled so to swear, as you will find by examining the evidence. One would suppose they were investigating a commission formed for political purposes, who were spending money raised by voluntary subscription or in some other way. The witness says all this came out of the kuklux fund, as he understands.

I submit we ought not to vote a deficiency when we look at what was done in the past under this law, by some one, who was to blame, without scrutinizing the past appropriation and seeing that at least it was used for the real purposes for which it was intended.

MR. TELLER. Mr. President, allusion has been made in this debate to the number of deputy marshals appointed in South Carolina. The number appointed in the whole State was sixty-one, forty-six of them in the county of Charleston, substantially in the city of Charleston, and fifteen in the counties outside. These fifteen were not specially appointed for elections, but were deputy marshals, expected to do the general duty of deputy marshals and also to attend to election duties. Of the forty-six in the county of Charleston eighteen were appointed on the recommendation and at the request of the democratic candidate for Congress, who I understand has now the certificate of election. Nearly one-third, then, of all in that county were democrats and appointed at the request of a democrat.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the first branch of the amendment of the committee, divided at the request of the Senator from Ohio, [Mr. THURMAN.]

MR. ALLISON. I think the Senator from Ohio withdrew the proposition for a division.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. He withdrew his proposition to strike out, but he did not withdraw the proposition to divide the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations, as the Chair understood.

MR. ALLISON. Yes, and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. GARLAND] offered some amendment to this amendment.

MR. BECK. I propose, if the proposition to strike out is withdrawn—

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposition to strike out was withdrawn and a proposition made to divide the question.

MR. BECK. I propose to modify the amendment thus—

MR. WHYTE. The Senator from Ohio is seated in the Chamber. I think he withdrew his proposition entirely.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. He withdrew his proposition to strike out and proposed to divide the question.

MR. WHYTE. How can he divide the question?

MR. CCKRELL. I suggest that the Senator from Ohio is in the Chamber, and probably knows what motion he made in regard to the matter.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of opinion that he knows himself. The question on the amendment from line 455 to the word "prisoners" in line 460 will be taken first.

Mr. CONKLING. Where does the division occur?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. After the word "prisoners," in line 460.

Mr. THURMAN. I withdrew my amendment, suggesting that I would ask for a division, but I did not ask for it. Therefore it is perfectly in order for the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK] to move any amendment that he sees fit. I wish to say further that after reflecting on the subject I am perfectly satisfied that it is in order to move to strike out any part of an amendment adopted by the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not decide that it was out of order.

Mr. CONKLING. The bill is still in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. THURMAN. I thought we were in the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. The bill is not out of committee yet.

Mr. THURMAN. I suppose the amendment is capable of amendment just as if it had been offered by any Senator whatsoever.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think so. I think that is the law.

Mr. BECK. If I have the right, I will move an amendment. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. GARLAND] has withdrawn his amendment because his proposition was to amend the clause in lines 453 and 454 applying to the last fiscal year. There is no deficiency for that which is questioned. He intended to apply it to the current fiscal year, and upon reflection the amendment was withdrawn. I propose to strike out after the word "prisoners" in line 460 down to and including line 470, in the following words:

For defraying the expenses which have been and may be incurred in the enforcement of the act approved February 28, 1871, entitled "An act to amend an act approved May 31, 1870, entitled 'An act to enforce the rights of citizens of the United States to vote in the several States of this Union, and for other purposes,'" or any acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $250,000.

And in lieu thereof to insert

Being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $50,000;

So that the amendment proposed by the Senate Committee on Appropriations will read:

For defraying the expenses of the Supreme Court and circuit and district courts of the United States, including the District of Columbia, and also for jurors and witnesses, and expenses of suits in which the United States are concerned, of prosecutions for offenses committed against the United States, and for the safe-keeping of prisoners, being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $50,000.

Thus leaving out all that appertains to the enforcement of the election laws and to the payment of marshals and the prosecution under the election laws.

Mr. EATON. I should like to ask my honorable friend from Kentucky if he is able, being a member of the Committee on Appropriations, from the information before him, to say that he knows there is any deficiency like $50,000 for the objects which he has mentioned?

Mr. BECK. The Attorney-General, in a letter sent to us, which has been read and very much commented on, shows that we have furnished him with all that is required for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, first by giving him $2,650,000, then $150,000, and the House in this bill have given him $110,000, making a total of $2,910,000 applicable to the last year.

The Attorney-General then proceeds to say:

The current appropriation is for $2,750,000.

That has already been given for the current fiscal year.

I should have hoped to have made the expenditures for the current year something less than for the year previous, say $2,800,000, which would have left a deficiency of only $50,000 to be provided for, had it not been for two classes of expenditures, one for deputy marshals appointed under section 579 of the Revised Statutes to attend elections, (the expenses of supervisors not being paid through the judiciary fund), and the other for carrying on prosecutions necessarily caused by violations of the election laws. These two items will in my opinion amount to $200,000, of which $75,000 will be for the expenses of the deputy marshals, and $125,000 for the expense attending the prosecutions.

I therefore propose to amend the committee's amendment so as to allow him $50,000 in addition to the $2,750,000 which we have already given him, and bring it up to the $2,800,000 which he says will be ample for all the legitimate expenses of the Department except to pay the deputy marshals and the expenses of the political transactions, which I do not propose to allow. That is the object of my amendment. I hope the Senator from Connecticut understands me.

Mr. EATON. I do, and I am much obliged to my friend from Kentucky. I shall support his amendment on the ground that the Attorney-General has said that $50,000 will pay all that I regard as the legitimate expenses of this Department. That is his official report. He may take care of his illegitimate expenditures himself. It will be sufficient for us if we appropriate money for the legitimate expenditures of the Department of Public Justice. Three million dollars in round numbers, more than it cost to pay all the expenses of the Government of the United States during the administration of Washington or the elder Adams, is expended by this one Department of Justice or injustice. I hardly feel disposed to pay the $50,000; but as my friend from Kentucky, who watches this thing very closely, says he is willing to do it, I will tie my belief to him this time and vote for his amendment; and in a time to come and upon another occasion, when the five-minute rule is not in the way, upon some other bill, I propose to be heard at length upon this enormity of this Department of Injustice.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not want to occupy time, but I do not understand the Attorney-General to draw any distinction whatever in reference to these expenditures in his letter. We allowed him by the appropriations last year $2,750,000 for all purposes of courts, including expenses under the election laws. Of course when that appropriation bill passed we could not anticipate that any causes would arise in any of the States of this Union requiring extraordinary expenditures, and it is because of these that this deficiency appropriation is made necessary. If there had been no difficulties in the Southern States, or in the Northern States, if you please, at the last election, these expenditures would not be required.

It is said that there were frauds committed at the elections last year. I do not know whether they were committed or not, but I know that the Attorney-General is prosecuting these frauds, and he asks the necessary money to aid him to do it. Senators on one side of the Chamber say that the Attorney-General shall be stopped in his effort in these criminal prosecutions because they will not vote the necessary funds. The Attorney-General draws no distinction in this appropriation.

I warn gentlemen of the fact that they cannot save these expenditures by the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky. The Attorney-General has $2,750,000 now at his disposal, or the balance of it yet unexpended, and he can use just such portion of it as he chooses to pay these deputy marshals, because the appropriation proposed in this deficiency is in the exact language of the law of 1878. Therefore, if Senators desire to prevent these prosecutions, they must prohibit the Attorney-General from using the $2,750,000 that he is now authorized to use by the act of 1878. They cannot accomplish their purpose by limiting this deficiency, because all the funds are as applicable to these election laws as they are to any other law on the statute-book.

Mr. BECK. Mr. President, when the Attorney-General tells the Congress of the United States that $2,750,000, which Congress has seen fit to give him to carry on his Department for this year, lacks only $50,000 of enabling him to carry on the Department of Justice, all the courts, and attend to all legitimate prosecutions and everything else, I propose, whether it is right or wrong, to give him $50,000 for that purpose; and I propose that this Congress shall refuse to give him $250,000 to pay Johnny Davenport, and I do not know whom else, who made the thirty-one hundred arrests.

Mr. ALLISON. This appropriation has no relation to Johnny Davenport or any other supervisor. It only relates to marshals.

Mr. BECK. I said that, and by the time I get through the Senator will see I am right. But I give him the $50,000 he asks, and if his friends come here and say that under the general powers we have given him, by the $2,750,000 to carry on the legitimate expenses of the Government, he can pay Johnny Davenport and he can pay the deputy marshals and he can pay the men that the republican party saw fit to try to buy to elect republican members of Congress, and that he can use it to overthrow the rights of the States of New York, and Pennsylvania, and Ohio, and Missouri by those election laws, and can carry it on for the purposes of fraud, if when he comes to make his report next year there is any deficiency beyond that, and if the $2,800,000 we shall have given him for the legitimate purposes of Government have been diverted by him to carry on fraudulent elections, and to pay marshals and deputy marshals who are appointed clandestinely for clandestine purposes, then Congress will find some way to reach that Attorney-General and all the men who aided him in carrying on that fraud.

I desire by this amendment to give the Attorney-General all that he even claims is necessary for the legitimate purposes of the Government, but to strike out all those provisions that authorize him to pay those marshals and deputy marshals and those political thieves that he has seen fit to maintain in the great cities of the North and West, and give him warning now in advance that if when we meet here next December the Attorney-General says in spite of the letter that I read to you, saying that only $50,000 are required to carry on the legitimate business of the Department by your own law, he has diverted it from that use and has paid Mr. Davenport and paid the men who went to Cincinnati and Saint Louis and Philadelphia and New York and sought to control the elections of those States and to supersede the laws of those States and to buy up political emissaries and pay them for the frauds they committed, we will see whether Mr. Devens and his administration can stand before Congress and give an account for what they have done under circumstances like these.

Therefore it is that I propose to allow him every cent necessary for legitimate purposes, but deny him the right to pay those fraudulent marshals and deputy marshals, until we have been advised who they are, what they did, what was paid them, what they were paid for, and let it pass under our scrutiny before he shall take the money out of the people that is withheld from him, to pay them right or wrong.

Mr. McDONALD. Mr. President, as I understand what we are doing, so far as the appropriation is concerned—and the inquiry has been made several times about the supervisors of election and about Supervisor Davenport, of New York—we have nothing to do with paying them. That is out of our power as long as the law stands as it now does. In 1871, at the time these supervisors' places were created, the payment of the expenses of the supervisors and their fees was put into the form of a perpetual and continuing appropriation, and they are continued from year to year without any agency of ours, and will be so until we repeal the law. That is the reason why Johnny Davenport does not appear here as to these other expenses, and it is a very good reason; he draws his money regularly out of the Treasury, as long as there is any in it, under the provisions of the act of 1871.

Mr. DAWES. Mr. President, I have been listening for some time here to the very free charges against the Attorney-General for paying fraudulent officials and using the money appropriated by the Government for a corruption fund, and grave charges against him for doing what the Senator from Indiana [Mr. McDONALD] says the law authorizes him to do. I should like to know whether if the Attorney-General has not done what the law authorizes him to do he would not be subject to impeachment for it? If the law authorizes him to do just what he has done in this particular, I fail to see upon what ground my distinguished friend from Kentucky will be able to find any way to reach him with the impeachment which he suggested or any other artillery which shall be in the power of that Senator and those operating with him when their numbers count more than those who are now engaged in upholding the law as it is.

I have listened to the debate all day thus far, and I have failed to hear a single scintilla of evidence disclosed here in it that the Attorney-General has departed the width of a hair from his duty as laid down in the statutes which the Congress of the United States have enacted; and until some evidence of his having done that shall be brought forward here, it strikes me as gratuitous, to say the least, to accuse him of using the funds of the Government in a corrupt manner, and in an attempt to carry elections, and to elect republican members of Congress.

I do not know of anything that the Attorney-General has done that the law not only does not sanction but requires him to do. I had supposed it was a part of the function of the Department of Justice to prosecute to a conclusion such arraignments of individual members of society as are charged with the violation of the laws of Congress. I may be mistaken about that. I expect to hear much teaching of a different kind very soon; but as at present advised my opinion—it is not worth much I know—is, that it is a part of his duty when grand juries that he does not create, assembled under existing laws, return indictments into court charging men with offenses against the law, to see to it that these indictments are prosecuted to a conclusion, not responsible himself for the result, of course only responsible for administering the law as he finds it upon the statute-book.

The law may be a very wicked law; I have no doubt it is a troublesome law; I have no doubt it interferes largely with plans and operations; but nevertheless it is a law that stands upon the statute-book, and is one of those laws that some people, having taken an oath to execute, feel some sort of obligation to see that it is executed. Not till there is some evidence besides the impression which seems to have been somehow made upon the mind of the Senator from Kentucky and those who come to the same conclusion with him that the Attorney-General has violated the law, it occurs to me that that presumption of the faithful discharge of duty, which is a principle of law, which any man, even the Attorney-General, has a right, in the absence of all evidence to the contrary, to have it presumed that he is doing his duty, should have arrested or rather given a different direction to this debate. This debate seems to have been turned into a channel of vituperation of an executive officer of this Government called to put in force the laws as he finds them. I do not recollect of any suggestion of the Attorney-General that he wants this power, or that he wants more of this power, or that he has any particular relish for the execution of these laws; but they are laws not made by him, not made by the administration of which he forms a part, but simply laws to be executed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. THURMAN. Mr. President, I do not know whether any of the remarks of the Senator from Massachusetts had reference to anything that I said. I did speak of the interpretation of the laws by the Attorney-General by which he held that it was in the power of a marshal to appoint any number of deputies under the general marshals act which was antecedent to the election law, and to charge them with the duty of interfering in elections, as an erroneous decision; but I did him the justice to say that if he had made such a decision, and of that I had no information except from newspapers, his predecessor had made a like decision.

While I have no disposition in the world to speak unkindly of the Attorney-General, who certainly in his intercourse with me has always been a gentleman, I do wish to say that there are some things connected with this prosecution of offenses in the South that do not meet my approbation. Who is the district attorney of the State of Louisiana? If I am correctly informed, he is a man named Leonard. If I am correctly informed, he is a man who openly in a Shreveport newspaper not a long time ago advocated the policy of killing every man who dared to set himself up as a republican candidate in the State of Louisiana. If I am correctly informed, he is a man who when examined before a committee of Congress admitted that he advocated that policy and defended it as a necessary means of protecting the people of Louisiana against scalawags, carpet-baggers, and thieves. Yet, Mr. President, that man who proposed the extreme policy of killing every man who dared to set himself up as a republican candidate in the State of Louisiana is now the district attorney of that State to prosecute these people who he says have violated the election laws. Who is the marshal of that State who arrests these men designated by the district attorney and drags them seven hundred miles by the ordinary course of travel to New Orleans to be tried? Who is that man? He is the man who led forty or fifty or sixty armed men across the river at Shreveport, according to his own testimony, to do what? As he said, to preserve the peace between the colored people there and a set of marauders from the State of Arkansas, but who preserved the peace by killing between fifty and sixty negro men. Ah, he was a most effectual preserver of the peace, and yet this Administration, and I must say this Attorney-General, because I understand that according to the usages of the executive department the President always has a report from the Attorney-General upon the appointment of district attorneys and marshals—this man has the imprimatur of the President of the United States, and yet we are asked to appropriate a quarter of a million dollars to put down violence in the South, to put down interference with the free exercise of the ballot at the South by the freed people of the South; and in order to do that, in order to secure the rights of the freedmen of the South and to put down violence in the South we appoint a district attorney who openly advocated the murder of every man who dared to set himself up as a republican candidate in the State of Louisiana. And who is placed in the position of marshal of that State? A man who led a band that slaughtered fifty or sixty colored people, according to the report of the republican members of this Congress!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky, [Mr. BECK.]

Mr. BECK. Let us have the yeas and nays. That is the only way to decide it.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BECK. Now let the Secretary read the amendment, so that we can all understand it.

The amendment was read.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. EUSTIS, (when his name was called.) On political questions I am paired with the Senator from Colorado, [Mr. CHAFFEE.] If he were here, I should vote "yea."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. SARGENT, (after having voted "nay.") I desire to withdraw my vote. I voted by inadvertency. I am paired on this and on all political questions with the Senator from Virginia, [Mr. JOHNSTON.]

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 34, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—34.

Bailey,	Eaton,	Lamar,	Saulsbury,
Barnum,	Garland,	McCreery,	Shields,
Bayard,	Gordon,	McDonald,	Thurman,
Beck,	Grover,	McPherson,	Voorhees,
Butler,	Harris,	Maxcy,	Wallace,
Coke,	Hereford,	Merrimon,	Whyte,
Davis of Illinois,	Hill,	Morgan,	Withers,
Davis of W. Va.,	Jones of Florida,	Randolph,
Dennis,	Kernan,	Ransom,

NAYS—35.

Allison,	Conkling,	Ingalls,	Patterson,
Anthony,	Conover,	Jones of Nevada,	Plumb,
Blaine,	Dawes,	Kirkwood,	Rollins,
Booth,	Dorsey,	McMillan,	Saunders,
Bruce,	Edmunds,	Matthews,	Spencer,
Burnside,	Ferry,	Mitchell,	Teller,
Cameron of Pa.,	Hamlin,	Morrill,	Wadleigh,
Cameron of Wis.,	Hoar,	Oglesby,	Windom,
Chandler,	Howe,	Paddock,

ABSENT—7.

Chaffee,	Eustis,	Kellogg,	Sharon,
Cockrell,	Johnston,	Sargent,

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SARGENT. Mr. President, though it is not entirely pertinent to the question under consideration, except to a certain extent, I desire to refer to a short extract from the New York Tribune, and to make a statement in regard to it. I announced a moment or two ago that I was paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. JOHNSTON] upon this and all political questions. Early in the session the Senator from Virginia and myself were both too sick to remain in our seats, and we then paired for the session, or until we got well, on all political questions. In the Tribune I see it stated as the reason why I did not vote on the Corbin case that it was probably the same reason that actuated my course upon the tobacco tax; that is to say, that I sold out in order to get votes on the Chinese bill. That is the statement made in this paper; and now see how plain a tale puts it down! This is the third repetition of that statement.

I voted against the reduction of the tobacco tax, and when the revenue bill finally passed with that provision in it I voted against the bill. I should like to know how I sold out on that proposition. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] voted against the Chinese bill. I was paired on all political questions with the Senator from Virginia, [Mr. JOHNSTON], and consequently could not vote upon the question of taking up the Corbin case, which was strictly a political question.

I do not know that it is worth while to make this statement.

Mr. WITHERS. In the same connection I will state that perhaps I was as active in the reduction of the tobacco tax as any man on the floor, and I voted against the Chinese bill.

Mr. SARGENT. Exactly. And that is true of very many prominent Senators from the South. I simply say that the statement is without foundation. And after the statement has been made by this paper that such a bargain had been made, and my name was used in it subsequently when I voted and spoke against the reduction of the tobacco tax, and antagonized the bill in every form, it looks to me as though it were a willful perversion of the truth.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. EUSTIS, (when his name was called.) On this question I am paired with the Senator from Colorado, [Mr. CHAFFEE.] If he were here, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SHIELDS, (when his name was called.) I am paired with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. SHABON] on all political questions. I should vote "nay" and he would vote "yea" if he were present.

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 36, nays 34; as follows:

YEAS—36.

Allison,	Conkling,	Ingalls,	Paddock,
Anthony,	Conover,	Jones of Nevada,	Patterson,
Blaine,	Dawes,	Kellogg,	Plumb,
Booth,	Dorsey,	Kirkwood,	Rollins,
Bruce,	Edmunds,	McMillan,	Saunders,
Burnside,	Ferry,	Matthews,	Spencer,
Cameron of Pa.,	Hamlin,	Mitchell,	Teller,
Cameron of Wis.,	Hoar,	Morrill,	Wadleigh,
Chandler,	Howe,	Oglesby,	Windom,

NAYS—34.

Bailey,	Dennis,	Kernan,	Ransom,
Barnum,	Eaton,	Lamar,	Saulsbury,
Bayard,	Garland,	McCreery,	Thurman,
Beck,	Gordon,	McDonald,	Voorhees,
Butler,	Grover,	McPherson,	Wallace,
Cockrell,	Harris,	Maxey,	Whyte,
Coke,	Hereford,	Merrimon,	Withers,
Davis of Illinois,	Hill,	Morgan,
Davis of W. Va.,	Jones of Florida,	Mordolph,

ABSENT—6.

Chaffee,	Johnston,	Sharon,
Eustis,	Sargent,	Shields,

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I offer the following amendment, to come in after the words "seventy-nine," on page 24, line 573 of section 1:

And all said appropriations shall be expended in accordance with the estimates of the commissioners of said District approved by the Secretary of the Treasury.

It relates to the appropriations for the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I have two or three small amendments relating to employees of the Senate, which I ask may be inserted after line 730 of section 1.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments will be reported.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert after line 730 the following items:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay Henry Cook, a skilled laborer, acting as a messenger of the Senate, from July 1, 1878, to June 30, 1879, the difference between the salary of the former and that of the latter, $440.

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay to the messenger of the Committee on Private Land Claims the difference between his pay as a mail-carrier and that of a messenger of the Senate of the United States, from July 1, 1878, to June 30, 1879, $240.

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay R. A. Birchett for services as a special messenger of the Senate during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, the sum of $915, the same being the salary of a messenger less the amount already received by him on account of said service.

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay George A. Clarke for his services as a messenger in the office of the Official Reporter of the Senate during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, the sum of $1,123.30, the same being the salary of a mail-carrier of the Senate, less the amount already received by him on account of said service.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to these several amendments proposed by the Committee on Appropriations? The Chair hears none, and they are agreed to.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I move to insert the names of Benjamin J. Thorn and George W. Smith, as they were acting in a similar capacity.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senator send up his amendment?

Mr. SARGENT. With the leave of the Senator from Nebraska, I will send up the amendment in due form.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be reported.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert after the amendment just agreed to the following:

To enable the Secretary of the Senate to pay to Benjamin J. Thorn and George W. Smith the difference between their pay as mail-carriers and that of a messenger of the Senate of the United States, from July 1, 1878, to June 30, 1879, $240 each, $480.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. In line 434, section 1, in the items for the office of the surveyor-general of California, after the word "seventy-nine," I move to insert:

And to be available until the work is completed.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I have one other amendment. I ask to change the amount in line 777 of $224,799.05, and to insert in lieu thereof $298,288.55. That is the amount, as I understand it, that should be inserted.

Mr. BECK. I should like to hear the amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. The amendment simply changes the footing of the appropriation.

Mr. ROLLINS. I desire to move to amend the figures and add to the amount the sum of $15,452.65.

Mr. KERNAN. Is not that included in the amount the chairman just specified?

Mr. ROLLINS. This is an additional sum that has already been audited and passed upon. I have a note here from the Postmaster-General stating that this amount has not been included.

Mr. KERNAN. Does he recommend it?

Mr. ROLLINS. He recommends it.

Mr. BECK. Was it sent to the Committee on Appropriations, allow me to ask?

Mr. ROLLINS. It was shown to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. ALLISON. These items are all for audited accounts in the Post-Office Department. The amount estimated by the Postmaster-General was three hundred and some thousand dollars, but the committee only put in what we could ascertain at the time had been audited and allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury. Now the Senator from Pennsylvania shows me an additional allowance, and it seems the Senator from New Hampshire has another allowance that has been audited. I accept them and will include them all in the footing.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I offer the following amendment, to come in as an additional section to the bill:

SEC. —. That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to readjust the salaries of all postmasters of the third, fourth, and fifth classes, under the classification provided for in the act of July 1, 1864, whose salaries have not heretofore been readjusted under the terms of section 8 of the act of June 12, 1860, who made direct official application or sworn returns of receipts and business for readjustment of salary to the Postmaster-General, the First Assistant Postmaster-General, or the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, such readjustments to be made in accordance with the mode presented in section 8 of the act of June 12, 1860, and to date from the beginning of the quarter succeeding that in which such application or sworn returns of receipts and business was made; and any sums which may be ascertained to be due shall be reported to the next Congress by the Postmaster-General.

Mr. BECK. I make the point of order that that is new legislation. It would be in order on the sundry civil appropriation bill, if presented, if in order at all.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the point of order is well taken.

Mr. BECK. The sundry civil bill is now being considered, and it can be looked at there.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Would it be in order on that bill?

Mr. BECK. I think so.

Mr. GARLAND. I suggest to the Senator from Iowa to have his amendment referred to the Committee on Appropriations as an amendment to the sundry civil bill, introducing it as an amendment to that bill.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Will it be any more in order then than it is now?

Mr. KERNAN. If reported, it will.

Mr. CONKLING. It has been reported once by a committee.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. This proposition comes from the Post-Office Committee. It is recommended by them, and has been sent to the Committee on Appropriations as an amendment to the bill under consideration, but they have not reported it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report of all the committees of the Senate would not cure the objection that it is legislation. The Chair will submit the question to the Senate, if the Senator desires.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I desire the Chair to submit the question of order to the Senate.

Mr. BECK. Having heard from divers members of the Post-Office Committee that they regard the amendment as being right, although I regard it as new legislation, I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I will renew it, Mr. President.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Will the Senator allow me to make a brief statement? Various postmasters were appointed in different parts of the country upon an arbitrary salary fixed by the Postmaster-General, varying from three to six and eight dollars per quarter. Their post-offices grew rapidly as railroads were extended, and in many instances the postmasters put in their post-offices, at their own expense, boxes, the income of which would be one, two, and three hundred dollars a year to the Post-Office Department. Yet, although these boxes were placed in those offices at their own expense, their salary arbitrarily fixed by the Post-Office Department at from three to six dollars a quarter was continued to them, and the Post-Office Department, because it had not money to pay, because the appropriations had not been made sufficiently large, declined to readjust their salaries under the law. This amendment appropriates no money whatever to authorize a portion of those postmasters, and only a portion of them, not to be paid, but to have their accounts readjusted, and the readjustment to be reported to Congress at its next session.

Mr. FERRY. If I understand my colleague on the committee, it applies only to those who made application at the time for an increase of their pay.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us devote ourselves to settling the question of order first.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Then I ask to have the question of order submitted to the Senate. The thing is so eminently just and fair that I think it ought to go in.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Shall the matter just reported by the Secretary be regarded as a pending amendment under the twenty-ninth rule of the Senate?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should be glad to have the Chair state the question as provided in Rule 29, whether this amendment is in order under that rule. I should like to have the Senate vote upon that question definitively as to that branch of the rule which excludes legislation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will put the question in that way, whether the amendment shall be admitted under the twenty-ninth rule.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to have the Chair put in whether it is in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is the matter just read by the Secretary in order as an amendment under the twenty-ninth rule of the Senate?

Mr. BAILEY. I ask that the twenty-ninth rule be read. I do not profess to be an adept in parliamentary law or to understand the rules of the Senate as some other Senators may; but I cannot comprehend why this amendment is not in order. It is offered by a committee of the Senate, and was referred to the Committee on Appropriations as an amendment to the bill now under consideration by the Senate; the amendment has not been acted on by the Committee on Appropriations, and it is now offered by the Senator from Iowa, as a representative of the Post-Office Committee. I do not understand why it is not in order, and for that reason I ask that the twenty-ninth rule of the Senate be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The twenty-ninth rule of the Senate will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

29. No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill; nor shall any amendment not germane or relevant to the subject-matter contained in the bill be received; nor shall any amendment to any item or clause of such bill be received which does not directly relate thereto; and all questions of relevancy of amendments under this rule, when raised, shall be submitted to the Senate and be decided without debate; and any amendment to a general appropriation bill may be laid on the table without prejudice to the bill.

Mr. BAILEY. I ask, and I ask respectfully, why this amendment is not in order under that rule?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Because, in the opinion of the Chair, it embraces new and general legislation.

Mr. BAILEY. I submit, if the Chair and the Senate will indulge me for one moment, that this amendment is not legislation at all. It makes no appropriation of money. It is not new legislation, for it simply directs that under existing law, under the laws that have been enacted by the Congress of the United States, the Postmaster-General shall execute a duty which he was required by law, and by the law now upon the statute-book, to perform. It requires of him no new duty, but the performance of a duty that already is binding upon him, and which should be executed.

If the Chair will only look at the amendment he will find that the Postmaster-General is required simply to readjust the salaries of those postmasters as is required to be done by the act of 1866. Therefore I submit it is not new legislation at all. It is simply an injunction upon an officer of the Government to perform a duty which the Congress of the United States has required that he shall perform.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has already submitted the question to the Senate.

Mr. CONKLING. Mr. President, but one consideration embarrasses me about this amendment, and to that I have heard no allusion. A few days ago this same amendment, if I mistake not, was offered to another bill. It was withdrawn by a very general request, with something like an assurance—I should like to know how much of an assurance it was; I remember it came from several Senators, some of whom were members of the Committee on Appropriations, that if the Senator who then moved the amendment would offer it on the deficiency bill there would be no objection to it. How far anybody, who was present particularly, is constrained by that, I am a little at a loss to know. But Senators around me I think will remember that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BAILEY] was induced to withdraw this amendment to save time on that bill and hasten a conclusion upon some sort of understanding, or promise, that on the deficiency bill it would be in order, and that no objection to it would be made. I should like to know if anything is obligatory upon me in that regard; otherwise I feel very clear about my vote.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. The Senator from New York states precisely the fact. At the time we were considering the Post-Office appropriation bill we spent a large portion of the night upon it—the Senate was tired and weary and anxious to get away. The Senator from Tennessee, [Mr. BAILEY], who had special charge of this measure in connection with myself, offered it as an amendment to that bill, and he was applied to from all parts of the Chamber to withdraw it, with the statement that it could be offered and would be unobjectioned to upon this bill. I cannot say that there was a general understanding of the Senate that that should be so, but the statement was made by many Senators in their places, and no objection was made to the proposition.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should not have said a word about this question but for what the Senator from New York and the Senator from Iowa have said, and would leave the Senate to decide this point of order without anything from me. I believe I was not present when the Post-Office appropriation bill was passed. I certainly was never present when there was any assurance or understanding given to my knowledge of the character to which the Senator from New York has referred. I read, I think two or three days ago, the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of what took place on an evening when I was not here, on the Post-Office appropriation bill, and saw that this amendment had been offered and withdrawn, some Senators saying that it would be just as much in place on the deficiency bill if anywhere, and it could be tried there, and it was withdrawn; but I fail to see anything in the RECORD which implied in the remotest degree that any question of order or of propriety was to be waived in respect of the amendment.

Mr. BAILEY. I must express my obligation to the Senator from New York for recalling the attention of the Senate to what occurred the other night. There was no assurance given, no general consent, that this amendment should be offered as an amendment to the deficiency bill, but certainly it was suggested by a number of Senators at a late hour of the night that it would be proper to offer it as an amendment to this bill. Although no agreement was made to that effect, certainly it was understood that it would be proper to offer it as an amendment to the bill now under consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is the proposed amendment in order under the twenty-ninth rule of the Senate?

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 33, noes 12. Mr. EDMUNDS. I guess we had better have the yeas and nays on that, Mr. President. ["Oh, no!"] Senators say "Oh, no!" It is so very clearly in order that I think I shall not ask for the yeas and nays.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment is admitted, and will be again reported.

The Secretary read the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment agreed to in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BECK. Yes, sir.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senator indicate it?

Mr. CONKLING. While the Senator is looking for the amendment he wishes voted on, I beg to make an inquiry of the Chair, if he will permit me. I am told that while some of us were detained in committees this morning an order was made in the Senate about a recess and a session afterward; may I inquire what that order was?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It was agreed that when the Senate took a recess it should be until half-past seven this evening.

Mr. CONKLING. And then that any particular business should be in order this evening?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The call of the Calendar for private bills.

Mr. CONKLING. Unobjectioned private bills?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Unobjectioned private bills.

Mr. VOORHEES. The motion I made this morning was that when we adjourn this afternoon we shall adjourn to meet at half past seven to consider the Calendar and take up unobjectioned bills on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator is right as to the last proposition. The motion was to take a recess.

Mr. VOORHEES. I stand corrected by the superior knowledge of the Chair.

Mr. FERRY. Is any other business to be transacted besides that?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That was the only motion.

Mr. VOORHEES. That was the only motion. The motion was that when we adjourn this evening we would take a recess to half past seven and then take up the Calendar and consider unobjectioned bills on the Calendar.

Mr. MORRILL. And no others.

Mr. FERRY. I want to know of the Senator from Indiana if any other business is to be transacted?

Mr. VOORHEES. No, sir.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded.

Mr. CONKLING. This is the regular order.

Mr. KERNAN. I merely want to express a desire that as the session to-night is to consider unobjectioned bills Senators will come here, so that those who do come will not be without a quorum.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from Kentucky indicate the amendments he desires to reserve?

Mr. BECK. I desire the Senate to vote on three amendments separately. The first is on page 8, line 186 to line 191, inclusive.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be reported.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order has been demanded, and the Chair cannot recognize the Senator.

Mr. MITCHELL. I rise to the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is whether the Senate will concur with the action of the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MITCHELL. I endeavored to get the attention of the Chair before the bill was reported to the Senate. I desire to offer an amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Amendments will be received after the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole shall be disposed of in the Senate. The first business in order is to concur or non-concur with the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole. After that the Chair will recognize the Senator from Oregon. The amendment reserved by the Senator from Kentucky will be reported.

The SECRETARY. After line 185, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, inserted the following clause:

For detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons guilty of violating the internal-revenue laws, or conniving at the same, including payments for information and detection of such violations, $24,130.20, being a deficiency for 1878 and prior years.

Mr. BECK. I will state in one word my objection to the amendment. The House appropriated in lines 182 to 185 $25,000 for the same purpose, and the Senate increased the appropriation from $25,000 to $50,000, which I think covered everything, but then added an additional $25,000 in the clause I have reserved, after giving $25,000 more than the House allowed in the preceding item.

Mr. ALLISON. I think the Senator from Kentucky is laboring under a misapprehension. Those two items are for totally different purposes. The one is for collectors of internal revenues and their deputies, and the other relates to special agents and their employes, who are engaged in detecting frauds.

Mr. BECK. Now, one word. We struck out of the House provision the words which the House inserted, "for additional amount to be used in suppressing illicit distilling," and retained the words "salaries and expenses of collectors of internal revenue," believing the word "expenses" was a less offensive word than to use "detections;" but we doubled the amount and put in $50,000 instead of $25,000, believing the expenses of collectors covered it all. Some of us very much opposed putting any special clause in simply for detecting, and if I had time, and it was proper to do so, I think I could show very clearly that it is a very proper thing for us to put it under the head of collectors of internal revenue instead of providing for a very bad class of men who are used for a very bad purpose. I have nothing further to say.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate as in Committee of the Whole by its action adopted the amendment just reported. The question is, Will the Senate concur in that action?

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 27, noes 27.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Upon this question, the vote of the Senate being equally divided, the Chair votes in the affirmative and the amendment is concurred in.

Mr. BECK. The next amendment on which I desire a separate vote is the amendment I proposed, to strike out on line 460, page 20, all after the word "prisoners" and insert "for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $50,000," striking out all the words in that clause after the word "prisoners" to the end of line 470.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be reported.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed after the word "prisoners," in line 460, to strike out:

And for defraying the expenses which have been and may be incurred in the enforcement of the act approved February 25, 1871, entitled "An act to amend an act approved May 31, 1870, entitled 'An act to enforce the rights of citizens of the United States to vote in the several States of this Union, and for other purposes,' or any acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $250,000.

And insert:

Being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $50,000.

So as to read:

For defraying the expenses of the Supreme Court and circuit and district courts of the United States, including the District of Columbia, and also for jurors and witnesses, and expenses of suits in which the United States are concerned, of prosecutions for offenses committed against the United States, and for the safe-keeping of prisoners, being a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $50,000.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. By the action of the Committee of the Whole this amendment was adopted.

Mr. ALLISON. No, Mr. President, this amendment was rejected in Committee of the Whole, and the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was concurred in.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky, [Mr. BECK.]

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 30, noes 23.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. EUSTIS, (when his name was called.) On this question I am paired with the Senator from Colorado, [Mr. CHAFFEE.]

Mr. MCCREERY, (when his name was called.) I am paired on all questions until twelve o'clock to-morrow with the Senator from Vermont, [Mr. EDMUNDS.]

Mr. SARGENT, (when his name was called.) I am paired with the Senator from Virginia, [Mr. JOHNSTON.]

Mr. SHIELDS, (when his name was called.) I am paired with the Senator from Nevada, [Mr. SHARON.]

Mr. SPENCER, (when his name was called.) On this question I am paired with the Senator from New Jersey, [Mr. RANDOLPH.]

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 31, nays 33; as follows:

YEAS—31.

Bailey,	Dennis,	Jones of Florida,	Ransom,
Barnum,	Eaton,	Kernan,	Saulsbury,
Bayard,	Garland,	Lamar,	Thurman,
Beck,	Gordon,	McDonald,	Voorhees,
Butler,	Grover,	McPherson,	Wallace,
Cockrell,	Harris,	Maxey,	Whyte,
Coke,	Hereford,	Merrimon,	Withers,
Davis of W. Va.,	Hill,	Morgan,

NAYS—33.

Allison,	Conkling,	Kellogg,	Plumb,
Anthony,	Conover,	Kirkwood,	Rollins,
Blaine,	Dawes,	McMillan,	Saunders,
Booth,	Dorsey,	Matthews,	Teller,
Bruce,	Ferry,	Mitchell,	Wadleigh,
Burnside,	Hamlin,	Morrill,	Windom,
Cameron of Pa.,	Hoar,	Oglesby,
Cameron of Wis.,	Ingalls,	Paddock,
Chandler,	Jones of Nevada,	Patterson,

ABSENT—12.

Chaffee,	Eustis,	McCreery,	Sharon,
Davis of Illinois,	Howe,	Randolph,	Shields,
Edmunds,	Johnston,	Sargent,	Spencer,

So the amendment of Mr. BECK was rejected.

Mr. BECK. The only other amendment on which I ask a separate vote is on page 37, line 45 to line 50 of section 2.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will report the amendment.

The Secretary read as follows:

For detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons guilty of violating the internal-revenue laws, or conniving at the same, including payments for information and detection of such violations, $24,130.20, being a deficiency for 1878 and prior years.

Mr. BECK. The objection I have to that is, that it is seeking to bring up old arrears of payments made to men under all sorts of fraudulent contracts. The Sanborn contracts are well known to the Senate, and well known to the other House, under which over $160,000 was taken. And what will we get out of this $24,000? Look at House Executive Document No. 30, third session Forty-fifth Congress, and you will see on page 4 John D. Sanborn gets $1,000 for 1876; lower down, in 1877, John D. Sanborn again, $439.07; John D. Sanborn again, in 1877, $74.08; in 1877, John D. Sanborn again, $126.77; again, in 1877, John D. Sanborn in partnership with Frank M. Green and James A. Briggs, $1,022.95; again, in 1878, John D. Sanborn, $25.24; John D. Sanborn, $1,656.62; John D. Sanborn again, $517.78, in 1878; again, John D. Sanborn, $280.58. Over $5,000 of this sum, nearly one-fourth of the whole, is given to a man proved before both branches of Congress to have taken from the Treasury of this country over $100,000 illegally.

Mr. ALLISON. I might add that he is a democratic member of the Massachusetts State Legislature.

Mr. BECK. If he is a democratic member of the Massachusetts Legislature, we have got one member in that Legislature who ought not to be there. But all this matter relative to arrangements that expired in former years, and of which John D. Sanborn was chief, well known to all of us, ought not to be in this bill, and here are claims that Congress ought not to provide for. I move to strike it out.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. By the action of the Committee of the Whole this amendment was inserted. Will the Senate concur in the action of the Committee of the Whole?

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 27, noes 31.

Mr. FERRY. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SHIELDS, (when his name was called.) I am paired with the Senator from Nevada, [Mr. SHARON.]

Mr. SPENCER, (when his name was called.) I am paired with the Senator from New Jersey, [Mr. RANDOLPH.]

Mr. SARGENT, (when his name was called.) Not deeming this a political question, I vote "yea."

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 26, nays 35; as follows:

YEAS—26.

Allison,	Cameron of Wis.,	Kellogg,	Plumb,
Anthony,	Chandler,	Kirkwood,	Rollins,
Blaine,	Conover,	Matthews,	Sargent,
Booth,	Dawes,	Mitchell,	Saunders,
Bruce,	Ferry,	Morrill,	Teller,
Burnside,	Hamlin,	Oglesby,
Cameron of Pa.,	Ingalls,	Patterson,

NAYS—35.

Bailey,	Dennis,	Hoar,	Ransom,
Barnum,	Eaton,	Jones of Florida,	Saulsbury,
Bayard,	Eustis,	Kernan,	Thurman,
Beck,	Garland,	Lamar,	Voorhees,
Butler,	Gordon,	McDonald,	Wadleigh,
Cockrell,	Grover,	McPherson,	Wallace,
Coke,	Harris,	Maxey,	Whyte,
Davis of Illinois,	Hereford,	Merrimon,	Withers,
Davis of W. Va.,	Hill,	Morgan,

ABSENT—15.

Chaffee,	Howe,	McMillan,	Shields,
Conkling,	Johnson,	Paddock,	Spencer,
Dorsey,	Jones of Nevada,	Randolph,	Windom,
Edmunds,	McCreery,	Sharon,

So the amendment was non-concurred in.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senate concur in the remaining amendments made as in Committee of the Whole?

The amendments were concurred in.

Mr. ANTHONY. I offer the following amendment, to come in on page 25, after line 599, section 1:

And hereafter the Public Printer is hereby authorized to print and bind, on requisition of the heads of Departments, books and documents in the same style as now authorized to be done for Congress; and the books required for the libraries of Departments may be bound in a style uniform with the volumes heretofore bound.

Mr. ALLISON. That is legislation, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken, in the opinion of the Chair. Shall it be submitted to the Senate?

Mr. ANTHONY. No, sir; I will not contest about it.

Mr. MITCHELL. I propose to submit an amendment, and after it is read, if the Senate thinks it is not in order, I shall submit—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Senator from Oregon.

The SECRETARY. On page 43, after line 189 of section 2, it is proposed to insert:

To reimburse William Beantor, of Oregon, the sum of $992.57, moneys taken from him under the rules of the military prison at Fort Alcatraz, in 1877, by First Lieutenant William W. Fleming, Fourteenth Infantry, and then treasurer of said military prison, and which amount was subsequently embezzled by said Fleming.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to submit a remark in relation to this matter. The history of it is simply this—

Mr. KERNAN. Does that come from a committee?

Mr. MITCHELL. It does not; but it was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. KERNAN. I raise the question of order; it is new legislation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken.

Mr. MITCHELL. I submit that the amendment was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and therefore is in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It embraces new legislation. The Chair thinks Senators mistake the rule. He does not think that the mere reference of any of these amendments obviates the objection which may be made under the twenty-ninth rule of the Senate, that they embrace new legislation, which the rule prohibits.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask an order of the Senate that this bill may be printed with the amendments of the Senate to facilitate its consideration in the House.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 6145) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. ABRAM S. HEWITT, of New York, Mr. WILLIAM A. J. SPARKS, of Illinois, and Mr. CHARLES FOSTER, of Ohio, managers at the conference on its part.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. No. 19) for the relief of Captain James M. Beeber;

A bill (S. No. 333) for the relief of Thomas J. Choate, Erastus Foster, Milton Ladd, Clarence E. Haney, William A. Hill, Kneeland F. Huckaby, and William Blackburn, late privates in Company F, Third Regiment Arkansas Cavalry Volunteers;

A bill (S. No. 401) for the relief of Charles H. Mosely;

A bill (S. No. 713) for the relief of Martin Clark;

A bill (S. No. 793) for the relief of Edwin R. Clarke;

A bill (S. No. 837) for the relief of the officers and privates of the New Mexico Mounted Volunteers;

A bill (S. No. 1268) to authorize the Secretary of War to convey to Jacob A. T. Wendell, Henry Van Allen, and John R. Bailey a part of the military reservation of Fort Mackinac;

A bill (S. No. 1365) to place Lewis Leffman, ordnance-sergeant United States Army, on the retired list; and

A bill (S. No. 1475) for the relief of the sureties, &c., of Samuel M. Reynolds, late additional paymaster of United States volunteers.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. No. 4408) authorizing the Secretary of War to restore the name of Thomas H. Carpenter, late captain Seventeenth United States Infantry, to the rolls of the Army; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

A bill (H. R. No. 4126) for the relief of Paulina Jones, widow of Alexander Jones, deceased, Company E, Second North Carolina Infantry;

A bill (H. R. No. 4639) to authorize the Secretary of War to release certain lands of the United States to the people of the State of New York;

A bill (H. R. No. 3155) to authorize the Secretary of War to deliver to A. B. Rhett, T. Pinckney Lowndes, and others, four Napoleon guns with caissons and harness, now at Greensborough, North Carolina, for use of the Marion Artillery, Charleston, South Carolina;

A bill (H. R. No. 3171) to relieve Solomon Robinalt, late a private in Company G, Forty-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, from the charge of desertion;

A bill (H. R. No. 3635) for the relief of John Becker;

A bill (H. R. No. 4872) granting a right of way across Water Shops Pond in Springfield, Massachusetts, to the Springfield and New London Railroad Company;

A bill (H. R. No. 6508) for the relief of A. B. Rowden;

A bill (H. R. No. 6509) for the relief of Dr. John Blankenship;

A bill (H. R. No. 4408) authorizing the Secretary of War to restore the name of Thomas H. Carpenter, late captain Seventeenth United States Infantry, to the rolls of the Army;

A bill (H. R. No. 5510) for the relief of the widow of Colonel Lyman M. Kellogg; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 15) authorizing the Secretary of War to issue to the governor of the State of Texas certain arms for the use of the Galveston Artillery.

COMMITTEE ON ORDNANCE.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I offer the following resolution and ask for its present consideration:

Resolved, That a committee of five Senators be appointed by the Chair to examine into and report upon the whole subject of ordnance as it relates to the Army, Navy, and militia; and that said committee shall have authority to examine departmental books and papers and to employ a clerk. The expenses of said committee shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate. The Secretaries of War and Navy are each directed to detail an officer as secretaries of said committee.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Let it go over. I do not see any necessity for it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the resolution lies over.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. BECK, it was Ordered, That leave be given to withdraw from the files of the Senate the papers in the case of John Adams, &c., being House bill No. 4143, for the relief of John Adams, William B. Clift, David Dunseath, William Killinger, J. F. Scott, administrator of the estate of Obediah Scott, deceased; Davis C. Peak, Charles Linderman, James Linnane, Patrick Carey, John McMahon, and James Gorman, administrators of the estate of Patrick Gorman, deceased, in accordance with the rules of the Senate.

RECOMMITTAL OF A BILL.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I move that the vote by which the bill (H. R. No. 635) for the relief of Moses F. Carleton, late second lieutenant of Company I, Fourth Michigan Infantry Volunteers, was indefinitely postponed be reconsidered and that it be recommitted to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter of the Postmaster-General, recommending an appropriation for the employment of two additional clerks in the free-delivery division of the Post-Office Department; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate a letter of the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a communication from the Commissioner of Education recommending an appropriation to defray certain expenses connected with his department; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate proceeded to consider its amendments disagreed to by the House of Representatives to the bill (H. R. No. 6145) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes.

On motion of Mr. BLAINE, it was

Resolved, That the Senate insist upon its amendments to the said bill disagreed to by the House of Representatives, and agree to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

By unanimous consent, it was Ordered, That the conferees on the part of the Senate be appointed by the Vice-President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT appointed Mr. BLAINE, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. WITHERS.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. HARRIS, Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. PADDOCK, Mr. PLUMB, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. SPENCER submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. BRUCE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2975) granting a pension to William Reynolds, late a private in Company G, Thirtieth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 3925) granting a pension to James H. Hayes, private in Company B, Thirty-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4701) granting a pension to George W. Staplin, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. VOORHEES. I report from the Committee on Pensions the bill (S. No. 1051) for the relief of Hardie Hogan Helper without recommendation and ask that it be placed on the Calendar at the request of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. BURNside] and the Senator from North Carolina, [Mr. MERRIMON.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. McCREERY in the chair.) The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. MAXEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. R. No. 15) authorizing the Secretary of War to issue to the governor of the State of Texas certain arms for the use of the Galveston Artillery, reported it without amendment.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HAMLIN. I now move to postpone all prior orders and proceed to the consideration of the Geneva award bill. I hope the Senate will allow that bill to be taken up to be informally laid aside for the evening session.

Mr. GARLAND. I move that the Senate take a recess.

Mr. BLAINE. One moment. I hope the Senator from Arkansas will let us have a vote on this first. It will not interfere with the recess.

Mr. GARLAND. If it is simply for the purpose of getting the measure in, I have no objection.

Mr. BLAINE. That is all.

Mr. HAMLIN. It is to have it left as the unfinished business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there unanimous consent that the bill referred to by the Senator from Maine be taken up for consideration? ["No." "No."] Then the question is, will the Senate postpone all pending orders for the purpose of proceeding to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 4553) for reviving and continuing the court of commissioners of Alabama claims, and for the distribution of the unappropriated moneys of the Geneva award?

Mr. BLAINE. Not to interfere with appropriation bills.

Mr. HAMLIN. Not to interfere with the appropriation bills.

Mr. INGALLS. There is another appropriation bill on the table.

Mr. BLAINE. What appropriation bill?

Mr. MERRIMON. I move to take a recess until half past seven.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arkansas, [Mr. GARLAND,] which is privileged.

Mr. ALLISON. I suggest eight o'clock in view of the lateness of the hour now.

Several SENATORS. Eight o'clock.

Other SENATORS. Say half past seven o'clock.

Mr. HAMLIN. If the Senate shall take a recess, will my motion be first in order on its reassembling?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks it will fall with the day.

Mr. BLAINE. Not with a recess. It falls with the day, but not with the recess.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator is correct; the motion would not fall with a recess.

Mr. BLAINE. It will be the first thing in order after the recess.

Mr. GARLAND. There is a special order for the evening session.

Mr. VOORHEES. An order was made to-day about one o'clock, by unanimous consent, that when the Senate rose this evening it would be to take a recess till half past seven o'clock, thereupon to consider the unobjected cases upon the Calendar as a special order. Now I shall have to insist upon that.

Mr. GARLAND. I must urge the motion that we take a recess.

Mr. ALLISON. Say till eight o'clock.

Mr. VOORHEES. No, half past seven. Do not fix it any later.

Mr. HAMLIN. If the Senator from Indiana will listen to me, I only ask that the Senate shall take up this bill, and when the time for the special order comes it can be laid aside informally. I do not want to interfere with the special order, but I want to have it taken up so as to be before this body when the special order shall have been executed.

Mr. GARLAND. I insist on my motion for a recess.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion is not debatable. Will the Senate agree to the proposition of the Senator from Arkansas that it now take a recess until half past seven o'clock?

Mr. BLAINE. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. ANTHONY. Is it in order to move to amend the proposition for a recess? If so, I move that the recess be till eight o'clock.

Mr. ALLISON. We cannot get back at half past seven.

Mr. BLAINE. Let us agree to eight o'clock.

Mr. VOORHEES. If the Senator from Maine is willing to meet us at eight o'clock and speaks for his side of the Chamber, of course

I shall concede it, though otherwise I would not break the force of the agreement to meet at half past seven. If the Senator from Maine asks that as a concession, with that understanding I shall be glad to do it.

Mr. BLAINE. All right; I will do it.

Mr. CONKLING. I wish to ask a question of the Chair. Is it not the order of the Senate that the recess be till half past seven?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is.

Mr. CONKLING. Then that cannot be changed except by unanimous consent.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask unanimous consent that the recess ordered for seven and a half o'clock may be till eight o'clock.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears—

Mr. WHYTE. I object.

Mr. BLAINE. Why is it not within the competency of the Senate to change that hour? On what rule does it require unanimous consent to do so?

Mr. SARGENT. Because it was established by unanimous consent.

Mr. BLAINE. Was it ordered by agreement or on motion? If it was an agreement, the suggestion is all right; but I was told by the Senator from Rhode Island that it was a motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It was a unanimous understanding of the Senate this morning.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. It was an agreement to consider the Calendar to-night.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair only suggests; of course Senators can override an understanding if they choose.

Mr. BLAINE. The Chair does not understand me as doing it.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to a question of order. The Chair asked unanimous consent of the Senate, and was just about stating the result of his appeal. The Chair had not finished the sentence in which he was making that statement when Senators rose to debate. I insist that the Chair shall finish his statement of the result of the appeal.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair asked if there was unanimous consent that the recess should be taken until eight o'clock, and was about stating that he heard no objection when objection was interposed.

Mr. WHYTE. I objected.

Mr. VOORHEES. There was objection all about me.

Mr. BLAINE. I want to make a statement any way. I made the suggestion I did because the Senator from Rhode Island told me the recess was ordered by a motion made and carried in the Senate. If that were so, of course it is amendable; if it is an understanding it is not. I merely want to put myself right.

Mr. VOORHEES. The Senator from Rhode Island is mistaken.

Mr. BLAINE. It is all right, then. I do not take any further interest in it.

Mr. VOORHEES. I insist on the regular order that we take a recess until half past seven.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. (at six o'clock p. m.) Will the Senate now take a recess? That is the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Under the former understanding of the Senate it now takes a recess until half past seven this evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The Senate reassembled at half past seven o'clock p. m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. HOAR in the chair.) According to the understanding this morning, the business in order is the consideration of the Calendar of unobjected cases.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, is there a quorum present?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri raises the question whether there is a quorum present. The Secretary will call the roll to ascertain it.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask the Senator from Missouri whether he desires a call of the House.

Mr. COCKRELL. I most certainly do not. But the Constitution has provided that no business shall be transacted without a quorum, and we cannot get a quorum here without a call of the roll, and I am in favor of forcing it in that way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. But thirty-two Senators have answered to their names; a quorum is not present.

Mr. VOORHEES, (at seven o'clock and forty minutes p. m.) I submit that the absence of a quorum must arise in the course of business, and as that fact has not been developed in the attempt to dispose of the business on the Calendar, I insist that we shall proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will call the attention of the Senator from Indiana to the second rule of the Senate, which is very peremptory on the point raised:

If either at the commencement of any daily session of the Senate, or at any time during its daily sessions, a question shall be raised by any Senator as to the presence of a quorum, the presiding officer shall forthwith direct the Secretary to call the roll of Senators, and shall announce the result to the Senate; and these proceedings shall be without debate.

Mr. HARRIS, (at seven o'clock and forty-five minutes p. m.) I move that the Senate do now adjourn. I shall vote against the motion, but I want to test the question whether there is a quorum present; and on that motion I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee moves that the Senate do now adjourn, and demands the yeas and nays on that motion.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BLAINE. I desire to state that the Senator from Minnesota, [Mr. WINDOM,] the Senator from Arkansas, [Mr. DORSEY,] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. DAVIS] are employed by leave of the Senate in the Appropriation Committee room where a subcommittee is in session, so they are practically in the Senate.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to say that my colleague [Mr. EDMUNDS] is paired with the Senator from Kentucky, [Mr. MCCREERY.]

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 2, nays 37; as follows:

YEAS—2
Yeas	Whyte.
Allison.	Davis of Illinois.
Anthony.	Dennis.
Bailev.	Eaton.
Bayard.	Garland.
Beck.	Grover.
Blaine.	Harris.
Barnside.	Howe.
Cameron of Pa.	Ingalls.
Cameron of Wis.	Jones of Florida.
Cockrell.	Kernan.
NAYS—37.
Kirkwood.	Rollins.
McMillan.	Saunders.
McPherson.	Teller.
Matthews.	Thurman.
Maxey.	Voorhees.
Merrimon.	Wadleigh.
Mitchell.	Withers.
Morgan.
Morrill.
Plumb.
ABSENT—37.
Barnum.	Dawes.
Booth.	Dorsey.
Bruce.	Edmunds.
Butler.	Eustis.
Chaffee.	Ferry.
Chandler.	Gordon.
Cake.	Hamlin.
Conkling.	Hereford.
Conover.	Hill.
Davis of W. Va.	Johnston.
Jones of Nevada.	Sargent.
Kellogg.	Saulsbury.
Lamar.	Sharon.
McCreery.	Shields.
McDonald.	Spencer.
Oglesby.	Wallace.
Paddock.	Windom.
Patterson.
Randolph.
Ransom.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate refuses to adjourn, but a quorum is present.

Mr. THURMAN. I ask unanimous consent to make a single suggestion; that is, that inasmuch as we have found ourselves without a quorum again and again because Senators are paired, I trust Senators who shall pair hereafter will reserve the right to vote if it be necessary to make a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will proceed to call the Calendar.

MATHIES AND M'KAY'S PATENT.

The bill (S. No. 1629) to allow the Commissioner of Patents to extend the patent No. 6535 of reissues was announced as the first bill in order on the Calendar.

The bill was read.

Mr. EATON. There is a report accompanying that bill which I had the honor to make and I wish it might be read. It covers the entire ground and gives all the information in regard to the subject which may be called for, and its reading will save any remarks of mine.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. Are there not two reports on that subject?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A majority and minority report.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. This case will give rise to debate.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask the Senator from Connecticut what is the object in calling for the reading of the report?

Mr. EATON. To save an explanation.

Mr. VOORHEES. Inasmuch as no explanation has been called for, I cannot understand the necessity of reading the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole unless objection be made.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I understand the Committee on Patents are not unanimous in reporting this bill, and that there are favorable and unfavorable reports from the committee on the subject. I think it had better go over.

Mr. EATON. I hope my friend from Iowa will not press the objection.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I do not think we ought to pass a bill of that kind without such a discussion of it as would enable Senators to understand it. As the committee have divided on it, a portion of the committee having made an adverse report, I think it is rather too much to ask that it be passed in silence without investigation.

Mr. GARLAND. Do I understand from the Senator from Iowa that there is an adverse report or a minority report?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I understand there is an adverse report as well as a report in favor of the bill. The committee have divided.

Mr. GARLAND. I have examined the question. I have seen the majority report, but have seen no minority report.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I know nothing of it; only what was said a moment ago. I heard that there were two reports.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are two reports.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I think the bill had better go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that to be an objection.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa objects. The bill goes over. The next bill on the Calendar will be stated.

SALARIES OF POSTMASTERS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1630) authorizing and directing the Postmaster-General to readjust the salaries of certain postmasters in accordance with the provisions of section 8 of the act of June 12, 1866.

Mr. INGALLS. That went on the deficiency bill this afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the Secretary and by the Senator from Kansas that the provisions of this bill were inserted as an amendment to the deficiency bill. It will be indefinitely postponed unless objection be made.

Mr. McMILLAN. In the absence of the Senator making the report in that case I ask that instead of any action being taken on it, it be passed over.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I do not know what is best to do with it.

Mr. McMILLAN. The Senator reporting the bill can have it indefinitely postponed when he comes in. The deficiency bill has not yet become a law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PENSION ARREARS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1288) to repeal section 4717 of the Revised Statutes.

Mr. THURMAN. What is section 4717?

Mr. INGALLS. That provision has been incorporated in the bill providing for arrears of pensions. This bill should be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to that order? The Chair hears none, and the bill is indefinitely postponed.

ADDITIONAL JUDGE IN DAKOTA.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1582) providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of the Territory of Dakota; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. INGALLS. I should like to hear the report read in that case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no report, the Chair is informed.

Mr. INGALLS. There should be some explanation of the bill.

Mr. SPENCER. The Senator in charge of this bill is absent tonight, and asked me to look after the bill if it came up in his absence. The area of this Territory is very large, and it is absolutely impossible for the judges to do one-half the business with the present arrangement. This bill has been petitioned for by the General Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, by a memorial sent here, and the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary has examined the bill and is satisfied with it.

Mr. MERRIMON. I beg to inquire why this bill did not go to the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. SPENCER. I did not introduce the bill.

Mr. McMILLAN. This belongs to the Committee on Territories, I suppose. It pertains to the organization of a Territory. Certainly the Judiciary Committee know nothing about the wants of a Territory in this regard.

Mr. MERRIMON. I should think a provision for creating a judgeship ought always to go to the Committee on the Judiciary, and if it be in order I move that the bill be now referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. McMILLAN. I hope the Senator from North Carolina will stay a moment with his motion. The Senate is aware that the Territory of Dakota is peculiarly situated with reference to its settlement. The city of Deadwood, in the southwestern portion of the Territory, has grown up very suddenly, and embraces a large population, and has peculiar interests separated from other portions of the Territory, so that it is almost impossible, or at least it is very inconvenient in the administration of justice, to have the interests of that portion of the Territory attended to under the present arrangement, which provides for the other portions of the Territory. The other portions of the Territory are in the southeastern part, adjoining Iowa and Minnesota, the northern part away up toward the British possessions. Deadwood and the country surrounding it is in the southwestern portion of the Territory. All along the Northern Pacific Road the country is settling up rapidly, and the circumstances as they are known to the Senate certainly, I think, would satisfy them that to allow this additional judge is but yielding to the reasonable requirements of the people of that Territory. I trust the Senate will not have this bill referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. It is a part of the organization of the Territory. The original supreme court, the whole court, was created by a bill reported from the Committee on Territories, and the Judiciary Committee know nothing of the condition of the Territory so far as its wants are concerned. Their duties would only pertain to some question affecting the administration of justice there, not the organization of the Territory or its courts. I ask that the bill be passed.

Mr. SAUNDERS. Mr. President—

Mr. MERRIMON. I do not want to consume time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska has the floor.

Mr. MERRIMON. If no member of the Committee on the Judiciary objects, I do not. I withdraw the motion.

Mr. SPENCER. I think there is no objection to the passage of the bill.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I was going to urge the passage of the bill; but if the Senate is ready to take a vote without anything being said, I do not care to take up the time of the Senate. I was on the committee before whom this bill was considered. One of the judges of the Territory was before the committee, and he also saw a number of the members of the Judiciary Committee on the subject, and he stated that the whole of the time of one of the judges was taken up with the business in the Black Hills country, and that the people have to go sometimes four hundred miles in order to reach some of these courts, and it is impossible for three to answer the purpose at the present time; the country is too large. On that account the bill was reported favorably by every member of the Committee on Territories.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I ask that section 7 be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report section 7. The Secretary read as follows:

SEC. 7. No justice of said Territory shall sit in the supreme court upon the hearing, or take any part in the decision or determination of any cause or matter tried or determined by or before him as presiding judge of the district court.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. It seems to me that that section is an anomalous one in relation to judges of Federal courts. Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States take part in appeals from their own decisions below; so do the judges in the circuit courts, where the district and circuit judges sit together to hear exceptions taken to the rulings of the district court. I think they ought to have the privilege of being present and participating in the discussion in relation to that subject. I therefore move that this section be stricken out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina withdraw his motion to refer?

Mr. MERRIMON. I withdraw the motion. I see no member of the Judiciary Committee takes any exception to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Then the question is on the motion of the Senator from Illinois to amend the bill by striking out the seventh section.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL H. CHEW.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1644) for the relief of Samuel H. Chew; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for paying to Samuel H. Chew, of Fayette County, Kentucky, $3,500, in full payment and satisfaction of all his claims for twenty horses taken and used by the United States forces under General S. G. Burbridge, in the year 1864, for the necessary purposes of the Army.

Mr. MORRILL. Will the Senator reporting the bill give a brief statement of the facts?

Mr. COCKRELL. It is simply as stated in the bill, that General Burbridge, pursuing the rebel general, Morgan, through the State of Kentucky, came to this gentleman's house and took these horses. They were necessary for the uses of the Army, and they were used for the Army. The claim was some $5,000. These were fine horses, blooded horses. I put the price at the same price that was then being paid for horses for the use of the Army.

Mr. MORRILL. Why was this claim not presented fifteen years ago?

Mr. COCKRELL. It was pending before the Quartermaster's Department for a long time. I believe it was investigated by a special agent about four or five times and the only question in the world was the question of loyalty; and this special agent reported that he thought this gentleman was an exceedingly clever gentleman and that he was just as loyal as any man could be who belonged to the democratic party. [Laughter.]

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM W. ROSS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1571) for the relief of William W. Ross; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, which were, in line 6, after the word "of," to strike out "sixty" and insert "fifty;" in the same line, after the word "cents," to insert the words "being the;" in line 7, after the word "amount," to strike out the words "charged against him by" and insert in lieu thereof the words "of funds in his possession as postmaster belonging to;" in line 8, after the word "Department," to strike out the words "for money, stamps, and envelopes;" in line 9, before the word "destroyed," to insert the word "and;" and in line 10 to add "without his fault," so as to make the bill read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to William W. Ross, of Sparta, Oregon, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $56.63, being the amount of funds in his possession as postmaster belonging to the Post-Office Department and destroyed by fire July 13, 1874, without his fault.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

POLYGAMY TRIALS IN UTAH.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 410) to provide for challenges to jurors in trials for bigamy and polygamy in the Territory of Utah, and to amend section 4 of the act entitled "An act in relation to courts and judicial officers in the Territory of Utah," approved June 24, 1874.

Mr. TELLER. Let that go over. It will lead to discussion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

LOUISE HOME.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1613) for the relief of the Louise Home.

Mr. HARRIS. A House bill on exactly the same subject, and accomplishing the same object, has been passed. Let this bill be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection to that course; and the bill will be indefinitely postponed.

DISTRICT STREET RAILROADS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1342) concerning street railroads in the District of Columbia.

Mr. HARRIS. On last Monday I reported a House bill from the Committee on the District of Columbia that is substantially the same as this. I ask that the House bill be taken up instead of the Senate bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that a House bill similar in terms may be substituted in the place on the Calendar of the present bill. The Chair hears no objection. This Senate bill will be indefinitely postponed and the House bill considered.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 4579) concerning street railroads in the District of Columbia.

The Committee on the District of Columbia reported the bill with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 11, to strike out the word "week" and insert "month;" so as to read:

And every such corporation shall, once in a month, redeem all such tickets issued by it which shall be presented by any other such corporation, by paying therefor at the rate of four cents in money for each ticket so presented.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 6, before the word "corporation," to strike out the words "the person or" and insert "such," and in line 7, after the word "to," to strike out "his or;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. Any street-railroad corporation refusing to receive, as above provided, any such ticket issued by any other such corporation, or refusing to redeem, as above provided, any such ticket of its own issue, shall forfeit, for each ticket which it shall so refuse, the sum of $1, to be recovered in action of tort by such corporation presenting the same, to its own use.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. "In an action of tort," does that say?

Mr. McMILLAN. Let that be read again.

The Secretary read section 2.

Mr. MORRILL. I should certainly like to hear some explanation of how this is to be administered. Here is a railroad that runs from the navy-yard to Georgetown. It issues a ticket, which is taken up by a short road, and the first railroad receives no compensation whatever, but must pay to the road that picks up this ticket its full price at last, and unless that road shall send as many passengers over the long road as it receives, of course it will be out of pocket to that extent. It seems to me that this bill will operate very unjustly. Some of the roads are short and some long, and I hardly think it is a bill that would meet the approval of Senators.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Vermont will allow me to say that this bill provides for the interchange of tickets only in cases where the fare is five cents; and every street railroad in the city except one appeared before myself as a subcommittee of the Committee on the District of Columbia and approved of the bill in the exact form that the committee's amendments place it, and it is perfectly satisfactory to the railroad companies except one, from which I have not heard at all. I do not know that it is unsatisfactory to that one, but I am not authorized to say that it is satisfactory to that.

Mr. ROLLINS. Will the Senator inform me to which road he refers? Was it not the Anacostia road that did not appear?

Mr. HARRIS. I cannot say which road it is that did not appear; nor can I name by name the roads that did appear.

Mr. ROLLINS. Such is the fact. The roads to which the Senator from Vermont refers appeared.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I suggest that in place of the words "in action of tort," in line 6 of section 2, it be "in any civil action." I hope the chairman will accept that.

Mr. HARRIS. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment will be made, the Chair hearing no objection. There is one more amendment proposed by the committee, which will be read.

The SECRETARY. The committee propose to strike out section 3, as follows:

SEC. 3. That all street-railroad corporations which have, for the past year, or longer, issued commutation-tickets at a less rate than charged for a single fare, shall be required to continue to issue them at the same rate or less, as now charged by said street-railroad corporations. And all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS. Inserting the amendment suggested by the Senator from Illinois makes it necessary to strike out the words "of tort" in the sixth line, having inserted "in a civil action."

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. It should read "to be recovered in a civil action," or you may say "in an action on the case;" I do not care which.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment has been made. The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL CURRENCY.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1661) to provide a uniform national currency, to retire the notes of the national banks, and prohibit their incorporation and their issue of notes, to utilize silver and silver coin and provide for the issue of coin and bullion certificates, to provide for the redemption or payment of the bonds of the United States and the issue of bonds bearing a lower rate of interest, and to provide for the expansion and contraction of the paper currency to meet the business interests and wants of the people.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. That certainly will lead to debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ELIAS B. BELL.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 2472) for the relief of Elias B. Bell, late private of Company E, Third Regiment West Virginia Cavalry; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

It is an authority to the Secretary of War to correct the record of Elias B. Bell, late private of Company E, Third Regiment West Virginia Cavalry, so as to remove the charge of desertion now standing against his name.

The Committee on Military Affairs reported an amendment to add to the bill the following:

And issue to him an honorable discharge, dated of the master-out of his regiment, June 30, 1865, and that he be allowed and paid any arrears of pay and bounty found due him upon the settlement of his accounts by the accounting officers of the Government.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS B. HUNT.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 174) for the relief of Thomas B. Hunt; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill proposes to suspend the provisions of law regulating appointments in the Army by promotion in the line so far as they affect Thomas B. Hunt; and the President is authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint Hunt, late captain and assistant quartermaster in the United States Army, to the same grade and rank of captain and assistant quartermaster held by him prior to February 26, 1874.

The Committee on Military Affairs reported an amendment to add to the bill the following proviso:

Provided, That his pay shall commence only from the date of his reappointment under this act.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I should like to have the report in such a case read or to hear the bill explained.

Mr. SPENCER. The report is quite long.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. An explanation of it will do, perhaps.

Mr. SPENCER. The bill is a perfectly proper and just one. This officer was court-martialed and unjustly dismissed. It was a conspiracy. This bill allows the President to reappoint him, and he cannot be reappointed without a special act. He can get no pay until he is reappointed. The bill has passed the Senate on previous occasions, but failed in the House for want of time.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there provision that this appointment shall be after a vacancy occurs? I desire to hear the bill read again.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read again.

The bill was read.

Mr. COCKRELL. I suggest that the words "if any vacancy occurs" or "in any vacancy now existing" be inserted.

Mr. SPENCER. "Now or hereafter occurring;" I have no objection to that; or to saying "when a vacancy occurs."

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it read: "any vacancy existing or which may hereafter occur."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be reported.

The SECRETARY. In line 11, after "1874," it is moved to insert: "in any vacancy now existing or hereafter occurring."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JENKINS A. FITZGERALD.

Mr. SPENCER. The next order of business is a Senate bill. The House bill exactly like it is Order of Business No. 943. I move to indefinitely postpone the Senate bill and take up House bill No. 796, which is exactly the same bill and which has passed the House of Representatives.

Mr. COCKRELL. The bill (S. No. 1271) for the relief of Jenkins A. Fitzgerald is the next bill.

Mr. SPENCER. Yes; but that is a Senate bill, and Order of Business No. 943 is a similar bill which passed the House. I ask unanimous consent to indefinitely postpone the Senate bill.

Mr. DAWES. And substitute the House bill for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama asks unanimous consent to substitute House bill No. 796 for the next bill upon the Calendar, and that the Senate bill be indefinitely postponed. The Chair hears no objection and it is so ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL. It is the object of the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, I presume, to have the House bill acted upon at this time.

Mr. SPENCER. I want the House bill acted upon now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is so ordered. The House bill takes the place on the Calendar of the Senate bill which is indefinitely postponed.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 796) for the relief of Jenkins A. Fitzgerald, assistant surgeon United States Army. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Assistant Surgeon Jenkins A. Fitzgerald, United States Army, $798.33, being a refund to him for moneys originally received from the Department of the Interior for medical services rendered at the Arapahoe and Cheyenne Indian agency, in the year 1869 and 1870, and which he was required to return into the Treasury by order of the Second Comptroller.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. CARMEN.

The bill (H. R. No. 541) for the relief of William H. Carmen was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of War to cause to be paid to William H. Carmen, late a private in Company E, Thirty-second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, the pay and proper allowances of a private soldier from the 10th of February, 1864, to the 14th of March, 1865, deducting therefrom any pay that he may have received during that time.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANDREW IVORY.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 4407) for the relief of Andrew Ivory; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Paymaster-General of the Army to pay to Andrew Ivory, late of Company —, Eleventh Pennsylvania Reserves Volunteer Corps, the full pay and emoluments of a second lieutenant from the date he was commissioned as such by the governor of Pennsylvania to the date of his discharge, deducting therefrom all pay received by him from the Government as sergeant for that period.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNA M. CLIPPINGER.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 1304) granting a pension to Anna M. Clippinger; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Anna M. Clippinger, mother of John R. Clippinger, late private of Company D, One hundred and twenty-sixth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PENSION BILLS.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to allow me at this time to clear the Calendar of the private bills reported from the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. GARLAND and others. Let us go on regularly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I hope the request of the Senator from Kansas will be granted. The pension bills can be passed in a little while.

Mr. INGALLS. They are all brief, Mr. President, and unless they are passed to-night the probability is that they cannot be acted upon in the House of Representatives. I should like very much indeed if the Senate would allow them to be acted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state again the request of the Senator from Kansas, the chairman of the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. KERNAN. Allow me to say that very many of them are House bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent that in passing over the Calendar the private bills granting pensions may have precedence. Is there objection?

Mr. SPENCER. I think we had better wait about an hour before we do that. After the pension bills are considered the Senate will ad-journal immediately. There are a great many bills on the Calendar which are not pension bills, to which there is no objection.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. There are a great many pension bills which will have to go to the House for action there. We can go back and consider the other bills on the Calendar, either this evening or to-morrow.

Mr. SPENCER. To-morrow night we shall have something else to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. GARLAND. I do not propose to make an objection, for I never object to anything reasonable; but I want to make a suggestion to the Senator from Kansas. I suggest that he postpone his request for a little while.

Mr. SPENCER. For an hour.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask, then, that at half past nine o'clock that order be made.

Mr. BECK. We will all agree to that.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask the Senate then to allow me to proceed to clear the Calendar of pension bills.

Mr. SPENCER. If you say a quarter to ten, no one will object.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. Oh, no; half past nine.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to proceeding at half past nine o'clock to take up and dispose of the private pension bills upon the Calendar? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The Secretary will report the next bill on the Calendar.

Mr. VOORHEES. I assume, then, that in the mean time, between now and half past nine, the pension bills that are reached on the Calendar will be passed over. ["No!" "No!"]

Mr. BECK. No; let us go right on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will proceed with the call of the Calendar.

CANCELLATION OF UNITED STATES NOTES.

The joint resolution (S. R. No. 51) directing the cancellation of the one and two dollar United States notes was announced.

Mr. SPENCER. There is objection to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution is objected to, and it goes over under the order of the Senate.

WILLIAM F. WHEELER.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 3553) for the relief of William F. Wheeler; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It authorizes the proper accounting officers of the Treasury, in adjusting accounts for expenses of courts rendered by William F. Wheeler, United States marshal for the Territory of Montana, to allow credit for the amount of vouchers for disbursements destroyed by fire in his office at Helena, on the 9th January, 1874; the allowance not to exceed the sum of $5,582, and before credit is given the marshal shall furnish proof of his losses to the satisfaction of the accounting officers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. JULIA ELLIOTT.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 5800) for the relief of Mrs. Julia Elliott, widow and administratrix of Newell D. Elliott, deceased.

Mr. HARRIS. That bill may go over for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over under the rules.

Mr. PADDOCK. It strikes me that the bill had better be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. McMILLAN. No, no.

Mr. HARRIS. I prefer that it be not postponed indefinitely. I desire that it simply go over for the present.

N. C. BLANTON.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1672) for the relief of N. C. Blanton; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay $430, without interest, to N. C. Blanton, for rent of blacksmith-shop and stables in Murfreesborough, Tennessee, from May 1, 1864, to March 31, 1865, occupied under contract with him, and for all of which rent vouchers, duly signed, certified, and reported, were given by the proper quartermaster.

Mr. HARRIS. I suggest that the name is Blanton, not Blanton. I chance to know the person.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment will be made.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The title of the bill will be amended according to the correction stated by the Senator from Tennessee.

JAMES TRABUE.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1673) for the relief of James Trabue; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It appropriates $600 to pay to James Trabue, of Louisville, Kentucky, holder and owner of six certified accounts issued to W. B. Gosa, of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, (he being the agent for Trabue,) for the rent of houses in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, from September, 1865, to February, 1866, for the use of the Army of the United States, in full discharge of all the demands of Trabue for the rent of the property.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY F. LINES.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1674) for the relief of Henry F. Lines; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It authorizes the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department to restate an account between the United States and Henry F. Lines, crediting him for services as cipher clerk and military telegraph operator, at the rate of $100 per month, from November 19, 1864, to September 18, 1865, and charging him therein with all sums, excepting bounty, shown to have been paid him during that period; and it authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Henry F. Lines such sum as shall be found due him according to the account as restated.

Mr. MORGAN. I move to amend the bill by inserting, in line 13, after the word "pay," the words "out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PANOCHÉ GRANDE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next bill on the Calendar will be reported.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. That will not be passed.

Mr. TELLER. Let the next bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is objected to, and it will go over under the order of the Senate. The Chair understands the Senator from Arkansas to address the Chair.

Mr. GARLAND. I understand that some one objects to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] objected.

Mr. TELLER. I did not object; but I intend to do so. I said the bill had better go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado objects.

Mr. GARLAND. I should like to have this bill treated regularly, because I wish to make a statement before objection is made.

Mr. TELLER. I will not make any objection if it is a bill which ought to be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is withdrawn.

Mr. PLUMB. I do not desire to interfere with any statement the Senator from Arkansas may desire to make, but the subject-matter of this bill has been reported adversely upon by a majority of the Committee on Public Lands, and I have no doubt that it will be the subject of considerable debate if taken up.

Mr. VOORHEES. The bill has not been read from the Secretary's desk yet, and consequently it is not the subject of an objection. Let it be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be reported. The Chair understands that an objection may be entertained at the time the title of a bill is announced.

Mr. KERNAN. I do not understand that we can object without having the bill read. Does an objection before a bill is read carry it over?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the rule to be, when the order of business is announced and a Senator gives notice that he objects, it is not then necessary to read the bill.

Mr. TELLER. I desire to say that I withdraw my objection.

Mr. GARLAND. I understand that the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] makes an objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair so understands.

Mr. GARLAND. I ask the Senator from Kansas to withdraw his objection for a few moments.

Mr. PLUMB. I withdraw the objection for the purpose of giving the Senator from Arkansas an opportunity to make a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is withdrawn, and the Chair will direct the bill to be read by its title.

The bill (S. No. 1683) in relation to the Rancho Panoche Grande, in California, was read by its title.

Mr. GARLAND. Mr. President, this bill which I have introduced and supported with a minority report from the Committee on Public Lands seeks to make a disposition, so far as Congress is concerned, of the claim of William McGarrah which has vexed the Congress of the United States for the last twenty-five years in one shape or another. The bill and the minority report steer entirely clear of any expression of opinion as to the merits of McGarrah's claim or the merits of the claim of any person or company that asserts a claim to that property. My deliberate impression is that if Congress wants to get rid of one of the most troublesome things that has ever come before it, it had better devote half an hour to the consideration of this subject and send it into the courts of the country, and compel all parties, the United States with the others, to litigate their rights to this property, and cease to have the question before Congress any longer.

The bill, in short, provides that McGarrah, with the New Idria Mining Company, and the United States, may go into the Court of Claims, must go there, a patent never yet having issued from the United States, and litigate their rights to the property designated in the bill, with the right of appeal by all parties to the Supreme Court. The report of the minority studiously avoids expressing any opinion upon the law of the case as to whether the United States in equity is entitled to hold that property yet; whether McGarrahan should have it, or whether the New Idria Mining Company should have it—the only three parties so far as I know, before the Committee on Public Lands, who have any claim to this property or at least the most valuable portion of it. I do not think it will take half an hour to dispose of this question if we go at it.

There is a majority report which decides expressly against the claim of McGarrahan, but as I understand, (that majority report being made when I was absent and I do not state it as a fact,) it makes no particular recommendation for the action of Congress. But suppose it did, and Congress should pass a bill this night that McGarrahan has no right to that property, within two weeks to come Congress may assemble here, he proposes his claim again, he asserts his right again, a committee is appointed, and this same investigation that troubled the Committee on Public Lands for three solid months almost is to be reheard and rehashed and reprinted, with a volume now before the Senate of over a thousand pages of testimony in this case.

The Senator from Kansas and myself have but four years now to stay here from the 4th of March next, and I want some other subject to consider while I am here besides the claim to the Panoche Grange in California, for it has taken up over three-fourths of my time. In mercy to the claimants, in mercy to the Senate, and in mercy to the Congress of the United States, I beg the Senate to-night to consider this question; and I do not believe we will be half an hour in disposing of it.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. If I had known this was the McGarrahan claim I would have objected pointedly. I did not know what it was at all. In the interest of all the private claims on the Calendar I object to this being considered.

Mr. GARLAND. One word, if the Senator pleases.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois withdraw his objection?

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I withdraw it.

Mr. GARLAND. The Senator from Illinois is mistaken again.

Mr. McMILLAN. Will the Senator from Arkansas permit me to appeal to him? The hour is passing, a great number of meritorious little bills are on the Calendar, and it is evident the bill to which he refers cannot be taken up to-night.

Mr. GARLAND. Very well; I want to acquit myself of a duty. Certainly there is no pension bill or any other bill on the Calendar more important than the bill which we have now reached on the Calendar. The Senator from Illinois is mistaken when he limits it to one subject and says that it is the McGarrahan claim. This is a bill in which the McGarrahan claim is involved, but the United States has a claim to this property, and the Interior Department is now hanging upon this very question, and will neither go one step forward nor one step backward because Congress will not act on this proposition. It is not the McGarrahan claim alone.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I will answer my friend by stating that the Committee on Public Lands, as I understand, had this subject under consideration two months, and made a majority report upon it. We came here to-night to dispose of claims that would not excite debate. Therefore I object to the further consideration of this claim in mercy to others.

Mr. GARLAND. I am a member of the Committee on Public Lands, and if the Senator had listened to me he would have been deprived of the pleasure of the last remark he made. This is a minority report from the Committee on Public Lands, and it is not the mere claim of one person; it is not the McGarrahan claim, or the New Idria claim, singly, but it is both of them, and the claim of the United States besides.

I have acquitted myself of my duty, and if there is anything more important for the Senate to do they can address themselves to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois objects, and the bill goes over under the order of the Senate.

MILITARY AND TIMBER RESERVATIONS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1054) to authorize the United States to secure title to certain military and timber reservations.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. That will not pass.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This bill is objected to, and goes over under the order of the Senate.

EDUCATION OF THE BLIND.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 4228) to promote the education of the blind.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. That had better go over.

Mr. BURNSIDE. No, no.

Mr. EATON. Is that the Kentucky bill?

Mr. SPENCER. That is the Kentucky bill.

Mr. EATON. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut objects.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I hope the Senator from Connecticut will allow the bill to be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the next bill on the Calendar.

REPRESENTATIVES OF ASBURY DICKINS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1695) for the benefit of the legal representatives of Asbury Dickins.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let that go over. We can keep that as a souvenir of Andrew Jackson's administration, as it originated then.

Mr. McMILLAN. It is older than the McGarrahan claim.

Mr. PADDOCK. I appeal to the Senator from Missouri in the name of humanity to withdraw his objection to this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made. The bill goes over under the rule.

GEORGE GLASS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1497) to authorize the President to appoint George Glass a master in the Navy, not in the line of promotion.

Mr. SPENCER. That is reported adversely, and is objected to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is objected to, and goes over under the rule.

WAR CLAIMS.

The next business on the Calendar was the joint resolution (H. R. No. 201) proposing an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the payment of claims of disloyal persons for property injured or destroyed in the late war of the rebellion.

Mr. VOORHEES. I object.

Mr. SPENCER. That is objected to, of course.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana objects, and the joint resolution goes over.

JAMES C. DAGGETT.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1705) granting an increase of pension to James C. Daggett; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of James C. Daggett, late a private in Company E, United States Signal Service, and to pay him a pension of $72 per month.

Mr. INGALLS. I move to amend the bill by adding the words:

From and after the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McDONALD. Is there a report on that bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a report.

Mr. SPENCER. It has passed. Let it go.

Mr. McDONALD. Very well.

DANIEL MIDDOUGH.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 529) granting a pension to Daniel Middough; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Daniel Middough, dependent father upon Orlando F. Middough, late a private in Company C of the Ninth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, who died in the service.

Mr. INGALLS. I move to amend the bill by adding the words:

Said pension to be paid from and after the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read a third time, and passed.

JAMES MAHEW.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 4793) granting a pension to James Mahew, late private in the Twenty-third Battery of Indiana Volunteers; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WITHERS. The same amendment is required there.

Mr. INGALLS. I move to amend the bill by adding the words:

Said pension to be paid from and after the passage of this act.

Mr. WITHERS. And strike out the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

Mr. INGALLS. Those words need to be struck out.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

PHILIP THON.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 4697) granting a pension to Philip Thon; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Philip Thon, late private in Company M, Seventh Illinois Cavalry.

Mr. INGALLS. I move to amend the bill in the same way that the previous bill was amended, by striking out the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws," and adding at the end of the bill, "and pay him a pension from and after the passage of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH TEAGARDEN.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 830) granting a pension to Elizabeth Teagarden; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-rolls the name of Elizabeth Teagarden, mother of Abraham C. Teagarden, late a private in Company K of the Sixteenth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers.

Mr. INGALLS. I move the same amendment to that bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A like amendment will be made.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

PRINTS OF PORTRAITS AND VIGNETTES.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1554) relating to printing impressions from portraits and vignettes.

Mr. VOORHEES. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana objects.

Mr. VOORHEES. If the Senator from Rhode Island is ready to vote on this bill, I will not object.

Mr. ANTHONY. Certainly I am.

Mr. VOORHEES. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is withdrawn and the bill will be read.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Printing with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and in lieu thereof to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury, at the request of a Senator, Representative, or Delegate in Congress, the head of a Department or bureau, art association, or library, be, and he is hereby, authorized to furnish impressions from any portrait or vignette which is now, or may hereafter be, a part of the engraved stock of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, at such rates and under such conditions as he may deem necessary to protect the public interests.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS S. FORD.

Mr. CONOVER. I ask the Senate to take up a bill for consideration out of its order. ["No!" "No!"] If Senators will hear me I will state that it is a bill which has stood first among the bills on the Calendar for more than a year.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I object.

Mr. CONOVER. On account of my absence on several occasions when it was reached on the Calendar it has been passed over. I ask the Senate to take up and consider it. There will be no objection to it.

Mr. BURNSIDE and others. I object.

Mr. CONOVER. It is order of business No. 27, being the bill (S. No. 263) to provide for a survey of an inland water route and canal from the Mississippi River to the Atlantic Ocean.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state the request of the Senator from Florida. The Senator from Florida asks that unanimous consent be given to take up the bill he has named at this time.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island objects, and the Secretary will proceed with the Calendar.

The bill (S. No. 1719) for the relief of Thomas S. Ford was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that section 1218 of the Revised Statutes shall not be construed so as to deprive Thomas S. Ford the privilege of receiving an appointment as a non-commissioned officer; and to this extent he as a private in Company M, Fourth Regiment of Cavalry, is relieved of the disabilities imposed upon him by that section of the Revised Statutes.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PETER YARNELL.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 4794) granting a pension to Peter Yarnell, late a private in Company D, Twelfth West Virginia Volunteers; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. INGALLS. I move to amend the bill by striking out the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws" and adding the words "and pay him a pension from and after the passage of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MILITARY LAND-WARRANT LOCATIONS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1035) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain and certify the amount of land located with military warrants in the States described therein, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a substitute reported from the Committee on Military Affairs, which will be read if there is no objection.

Mr. VOORHEES. I shall object, not because I have any objection to the bill, but simply because I think that other matters on the Calendar have a prior right to consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the bill goes over under the order of the Senate.

WILLIAM S. MASSIE.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 2294) to authorize the Secretary of War to place upon the rolls of Company H, Ninth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, the name of William S. Massie; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WITHERS. I should like to hear the report in that case. That places the man on the rolls from the beginning of the war, with all the pay and allowances from that time. I should like to hear the reasons for it.

Mr. SPENCER. There is a report, but it is quite lengthy, I understand.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a report, and the report will be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the following report, submitted by Mr. PLUMB January 28, 1879:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2294) for the relief of William S. Massie, having had the same under consideration, do make the following report thereon:

The following facts appear from testimony submitted to the committee: That on the 18th day of August, 1861, the said Massie was duly enlisted in the service of the United States in Company H, Ninth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, then being organized at Guyandotte, on the Ohio River, opposite Lawrence County, Ohio, from the citizens of which latter county the regiment was chiefly recruited; that on the night of the 10th of November following, the town of Guyandotte was attacked by confederate cavalry, who captured about seventy of said regiment, including said Massie, he (Massie) being thereafter taken to Richmond, Virginia, and subsequently to Salisbury, North Carolina, where he was confined in the military prison until about the 10th day of September, 1862, when he escaped, and after traveling about six hundred miles through the enemy's country, reached his home in said Lawrence County, Ohio, on the 13th day of October following, and the 25th day of said month he reported to his company commander for duty.

At the time of Massie's capture the muster-roll of his company was also captured, and afterward destroyed. It is satisfactorily proven that Massie's name was borne upon it; but he was not taken up on the new roll of his company, and there is no official record whatever extant of his connection with the regiment.

Mr. WITHERS. I am satisfied.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KANSAS INDIAN EXPENSES.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1650) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to ascertain and report to Congress the amount of money expended and indebtedness assumed by the State of Kansas in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAN ANTONIO ARSENAL.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1720) to enable the Secretary of War to purchase land to enlarge and protect the San Antonio arsenal; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It appropriates $14,000, to enable the Secretary of War to purchase, inclose, and improve the piece of land adjoining the United States arsenal grounds at San Antonio, Texas.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN T. NEALE.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 1286) granting relief to John T. Neale, an employé of the Provost-Marshal-General's department in 1861, for injuries sustained in the line of his duties; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to John T. Neale, late an employé of Brigadier-General Andrew Porter, provost-marshal of the District of Columbia (by whom Neale was assigned to duty as a special detective police officer, and sustained an injury while engaged in that service which resulted in making him a cripple for life) a sum equal in amount to that which he would have been entitled to had he been an enlisted man in the Army, for a permanent specific disability, to wit, the loss of one leg below the knee-joint.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HERMAN BIGGS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1692) authorizing the President to nominate Herman Biggs to a second lieutenantancy in the Army; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN W. CHICKERING.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. No. 1260) for the relief of John W. Chickering; which was read.

Mr. HARRIS. I should like to inquire of the Senator having this bill in charge if under the bill this appointment is confined to the company to which this particular officer belongs? Otherwise it seems to me it will materially interfere with the just promotion of other officers if he should be appointed in any other company or any other regiment than the one to which he formerly belonged.

Mr. WITHERS. There is a report in that case. Let us hear the circumstances that justify it.

Mr. SPENCER. There is a report in the case, a long report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

Mr. SPENCER. The report is quite long.

Mr. WITHERS. The Senator may state the facts.

Mr. HARRIS. Can the Senator state whether or not this bill authorizes his appointment and assignment to any other company than that to which he has formerly belonged?

Mr. SPENCER. Certainly not.

Mr. HARRIS. It does not do that?

Mr. SPENCER. It does not.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not understand the bill to confine it to that particular company; and if it does not so confine it, it seems to me it materially interferes with the just rights of promotion.

Mr. SPENCER. The Secretary of War could not appoint him anywhere else.

Mr. HARRIS. I chance to know that the Secretary of War has appointed, and as I am informed to the injustice of certain officers who would otherwise have been promoted but for the appointment in their command and regiment, persons who never belonged there before.

Mr. SPENCER. This puts him back where he was.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I think this bill had better go over.

Mr. SPENCER. I hope the Senator will not object. This is a just case.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. The Senator from Tennessee can confine the bill in that way if there is any doubt about it.

Mr. SAULSBURY. But it involves the question of undue promotion.

Mr. SPENCER. I dislike to see this case go over; it is a just case.

Mr. HARRIS. I hope the Senator from Delaware will not object to the bill. I should like to hear the bill reread, so that I can see if the appointment cannot be confined to that company.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I agree with the Senator about this matter. This officer was from my own State, and I think he was unjustly dealt with; and that is the main thing to guard, as he suggests.

Mr. SPENCER. I am perfectly willing to have the bill amended in any way in the world. It is just as meritorious as any bill on the Calendar.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I object. The bill proposes to elevate a gentleman unduly over other gentlemen, and I think it ought to go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the Senator from Delaware to object.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not know anything about this question; but I do not wish to see injustice done to other officers in the line who are perhaps as meritorious as this one.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Delaware to object?

Mr. SAULSBURY. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware objects, and the bill goes over under the rule. The Secretary will report the next bill on the Calendar.

THOMAS T. KNOX

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 3558) for the relief of Second Lieutenant Thomas T. Knox, regimental quartermaster First Cavalry; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the proper accounting officers in the Quartermaster's Department of the Army to allow Second Lieutenant Thomas T. Knox, regimental quartermaster First Cavalry, United States Army, a credit upon settlement of his accounts for the sum of $147.22, the amount claimed to have been stolen from his safe, and being moneys received by him for sale of subsistence stores.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MONTANA VOLUNTEERS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 2443) for the relief of citizens of Montana who served with the United States troops in the war with the Nez Percés and for the relief of the heirs of such as were killed in such service.

Mr. WITHERS. That bill had better go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is objected to, and it goes over.

Mr. SPENCER. I hope the bill for the benefit of those engaged in the Nez Percé war will not go over. I hope the Senator from Virginia will withdraw his objection. It involves but a small amount of money, and pays the volunteers who fought in that war in the Territory of Montana a year ago. If there is a just bill anywhere this is one. I appeal to the Senator from Virginia to withdraw his objection.

Mr. BECK. Is it in order for gentlemen to appeal to Senators to withdraw an objection after objection is made? If it is not in order I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is permitted only by unanimous consent. It is in the nature of debate.

Mr. BECK. Then I object.

ANN ANNIS.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 1144) for the relief of Ann Annis, widow of Harvey Annis, late second lieutenant Company G, Fifty-first Regiment United States Colored Infantry; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Ann Annis, widow of Harvey Annis, late second lieutenant Company G, Fifty-first Regiment of United States Colored Infantry, $235 for arrears of pay due Harvey Annis as second lieutenant from February 23, 1865, to April 27, 1865.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DAVID W. STOCKSTILL.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 2284) for the relief of David W. Stockstill, of Sidney, Ohio.

PENSION BILLS.

Mr. INGALLS. I think the hour has arrived at which the private pension claims were to be considered.

Mr. SPENCER. I ask the Senate to suspend that order for half an hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour having arrived when, under the order of the Senate, the pension bills upon the Calendar were to be proceeded with, the Secretary will report those bills in their order.

MICHAEL S. CORL.

Mr. INGALLS. The first is order of business No. 893.

The bill (H. R. No. 2927) to restore to the pension-roll the name of Michael S. Corl was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and in lieu thereof to insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to restore to the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension-laws, the name of Michael S. Corl, late a private in Company K, Fifty-fifth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL B. ROBERTSON.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 894.

The bill (H. R. No. 1055) granting a pension to Samuel B. Robertson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Samuel B. Robertson, late a second lieutenant Company B, Seventieth Regiment Indiana Volunteers.

Mr. INGALLS. I move to amend the bill by striking out the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws," and by adding:

And pay him a pension from and after the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

JOHN SMITH.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 895.

Mr. HOAR. I suggest to the chairman of the Committee on Pensions that unanimous consent be obtained for inserting that change in all the pension bills reached on the Calendar. They are very numerous, and it will save him the labor of stating the amendment to each bill.

Mr. INGALLS. In response to the Senator from Massachusetts I will say that the necessity for the amendment of the bills in this particular arises from the passage of the arrears of pensions act, and unless such amendment is made, many of these bills having been passed by the House before that act was passed, the claimants would be entitled to arrears from the time of their discharge or disability.

Mr. HOAR. I understand perfectly the reason of the amendment. My suggestion was that it is a mere matter of routine, and would hasten our work very much.

Mr. INGALLS. It would abbreviate the business very much if that understanding could be made.

Mr. HOAR. My suggestion is that all the pension bills on the Calendar as they are reached be treated as containing the clause moved to those that have been reached by the chairman of the Committee on Pensions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. COCKRELL in the chair.) If there be no objection all the pension bills that will be passed to-night will be considered as having the amendment suggested by the Senator from Kansas ingrafted into them without any formal motion.

Mr. KERNAN. That is to make them take effect from and after the passage of the act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the understanding. The bill designated by the Senator from Kansas will be reported.

The bill (S. No. 1728) granting a pension to John Smith was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of John Smith, late private in Company D, First Regiment of Maine Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE D. PHILLIPS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is No. 896 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 247) to grant a pension to George D. Phillips, a soldier of the war of 1812, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. INGALLS. I move to insert:

And pay him a pension from and after the passage of this act.

Mr. HOAR. By unanimous consent that amendment is to be inserted in all the bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment suggested by the Senator from Kansas will be ingrafted in the bill.

Mr. HARRIS. I hope that amendment will not be made, for the reason that in this case of George D. Phillips the existing law does not reach his case, and this amendment is unnecessary.

Mr. GORDON. The Senator from Kansas agrees not to move that amendment, I understand.

Mr. McMILLAN. Why should any distinction be made in the cases?

Mr. INGALLS. Because this man was a soldier in the war of 1812 to whom the arrears of pension act does not apply.

Mr. McMILLAN. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH WARD.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is No. 897 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 3150) granting a pension to Joseph Ward was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Joseph Ward, late a private in Company C, Thirteenth Regiment of Tennessee Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANDREW A. GOODING.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 898.

The bill (H. R. No. 2321) granting a pension to Andrew A. Gooding, of Fentress County, Tennessee, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZA A. SEMPLE.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 904.

The bill (H. R. No. 989) granting a pension to Mrs. Eliza A. Semple was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Eliza A. Semple, mother of James Y. Semple, late captain of the Fifteenth Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGINE THOMAS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 905.

The bill (H. R. No. 4687) granting a pension to Georgine Thomas, widow of General Charles Thomas, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Georgine Thomas, widow of General Charles Thomas, deceased, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understood the Senator from Kansas to say that an amendment was to be considered as adopted in each one of these cases.

Mr. INGALLS. In each case, wherever it is necessary.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JANE DULANEY.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 906.

The bill (S. No. 1723) granting arrears of pension to Mrs. Jane Dulaney was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Commissioner of Pensions to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Jane Dulaney, widow of Colonel William Dulaney, late of the United States Marine Corps, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $30 a month from the 4th day of July, 1868, when her husband died, less the pension heretofore paid her.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment in line 10, after the word "her," to strike out the remaining words of the bill and insert "under act approved —, 1876."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPHINE DA C. THOMAS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 907.

The bill (H. R. No. 3575) granting an increase of pension to Josephine Da C. Thomas was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to pay to Josephine Da C. Thomas, widow of Evan Thomas, late acting major Fourth United States Artillery, a pension at the rate paid widows of a major of artillery, in lieu of the pension now paid her.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will suggest that he is fearful it will be impossible to keep a record of these cases unless the amendment is suggested. If the amendment should be suggested to the Senate, then the entry of it could be made; but the clerks will not have the time to make the examination and the entry of an amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. The clerks will make the amendment in every case except where the chairman of the committee notifies them where it is not necessary. It is not necessary in every case, I understand.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Unless the chairman of the committee suggests otherwise, the entry will be made of the amendment.

ELIZABETH S. ROBERTS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 908.

The bill (H. R. No. 4294) to increase the pension of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Roberts was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It increases the pension now allowed by law to Mrs. Elizabeth S. Roberts, widow of the late Benjamin S. Roberts, lieutenant-colonel of the United States Army and brigadier-general of volunteers, to the sum of $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS BURGHOUS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 909.

The bill (H. R. No. 2711) granting a pension to Thomas Burroughs, late a private in Company G, First Vermont Cavalry Regiment, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MATTHEW O. REGAN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 910.

The bill (S. No. 1739) granting a pension to Matthew O. Regan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name Matthew O. Regan, late a private of Company E, Third United States Artillery.

Mr. BAILEY. By inadvertence the bill in that case does not state properly what is designed. Regan is receiving now $18 per month. It was intended to grant him a pension of $24 per month. I move an amendment to the effect that he be paid at the rate of $24 a month in lieu of the pension now paid to him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be reported.

The SECRETARY. The amendment is at the end of the bill to add:

At the rate of $24 a month in lieu of the pension now paid to him.

So as to read:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name Matthew O. Regan, late a private of Company E, Third United States Artillery, at the rate of $24 a month in lieu of the pension now paid to him.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REBECCA WILLIAMS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 911.

The bill (S. No. 1740) granting a pension to Rebecca Williams was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Rebecca Williams, mother of Loyd A. Williams, late a chief engineer in the United States Navy.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SIMEON INGALLS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 912.

The bill (S. No. 1514) granting a pension to Simeon Ingalls was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Simeon Ingalls, late a private in Company C, Eleventh Tennessee Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LUCINDA C. DILLAHENTY.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 913.

The bill (H. R. No. 4392) for the relief of Lucinda C. Dillahenty, of Tennessee, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-rolls the name of Mrs. Lucinda C. Dillahenty, of Purdy, McNairy County, Tennessee, the widow of Lewis Dillahenty, a captain of the war of 1812.

Mr. BAILEY. The name should be "Dillaheunty" instead of "Dillahenty."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letter "u" will be inserted in the name where it occurs in the bill.

Mr. BAILEY. This is the widow of a soldier of the war of 1812, and the amendment that has been adopted on the other bills should not apply in this case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The formal amendment which has been agreed upon will not be considered as applied to this case.

Mr. BAILEY. It is a House bill. The beneficiary is the widow of a soldier of the war of 1812.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY A. ALLEN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 914.

The bill (H. R. No. 550) granting a pension to Mary A. Allen was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary A. Allen, widow of George B. Allen, private in the Fourth Regiment of Michigan Volunteer Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JULIA H. TOTTEN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next case is order of business No. 915.

The bill (H. R. No. 2519) for the relief of Mrs. Julia H. Totten, widow of James Totten, late lieutenant-colonel and assistant inspector-general United States Army, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Julia H. Totten, widow of James Totten, late lieutenant-colonel and assistant inspector-general United States Army, and pay her a pension of $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN WILLANS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next case is order of business No. 916.

The bill (S. No. 1509) granting a pension to John Willans was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place upon the pension-roll the name of John Willans, late a captain and assistant adjutant-general United States volunteers, and pay him a pension as of the rank of captain.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SARAH H. BRADFORD.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 917.

The bill (H. R. No. 4983) granting a pension to Sarah H. Bradford was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Sarah H. Bradford, mother of William H. Bradford, deceased, late acting master's mate, United States Navy.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM W. STEPHENSON.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 918.

The bill (H. R. No. 480) granting a pension to William W. Stephenson, captain of Company H, Twenty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place the name of William W. Stephenson, who was a captain of Company H, Twenty-fourth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers, on the pension-roll, with the rank of captain instead of first lieutenant, as he now appears.

The bill was reported to the Senate.

Mr. INGALLS. In line 8, before the word "he," I move to strike out the words "this date" and insert the words "from and after the passage of this act;" so as to read:

And that from and after the passage of this act he be paid according to the rank of captain instead of first lieutenant.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL V. ADAMS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 919.

The bill (H. R. No. 3408) granting a pension to Samuel V. Adams was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Samuel V. Adams, late a private in Company B, First Regiment of New Jersey Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. BROWNING.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 920.

The bill (H. R. No. 1045) to place George W. Browning on the pension-roll was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place the name of George W. Browning, late an orderly-sergeant in Company D of the First Regiment of Tennessee Volunteers, on the pension-roll.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. COOK.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 921.

The bill (H. R. No. 4987) granting a pension to James H. Cook was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH McNEIL BENHAM.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 922.

The bill (S. No. 1741) granting a pension to Elizabeth McNeil Benham was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Elizabeth McNeil Benham, daughter of the late General John McNeil, United States Army, at the rate of $20 per month.

Mr. INGALLS. That bill does not require the amendment which has been agreed to in regard to the other bills, because General McNeil was a soldier of the war of 1812.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANCES McNEIL POTTER.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 923.

The bill (S. No. 1742) granting a pension to Frances McNeil Potter was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Frances McNeil Potter, daughter of the late General John McNeil, United States Army, at the rate of $20 per month.

Mr. INGALLS. That bill requires no amendment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DE FOREST DOTY.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 933.

The bill (H. R. No. 2172) granting a pension to De Forest Doty, of Timmouh, Vermont, late a private in Company B, Ninth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THEODORE HALBERSTADT.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 934.

The bill (S. No. 1465) granting a pension to Theodore Halberstadt was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Theodore Halberstadt, late a private in Company K, Seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteers, at the rate of $16 per month.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, after the word "dollars," to strike out "sixteen" and insert "eight;" so as to read "at the rate of $8 per month."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATHAN UDELL.

Mr. INGALLS. Order of business 1080 is next.

The bill (H. R. No. 698) granting a pension to Nathan Udell was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It grants a pension to Nathan Udell, late surgeon Seventeenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ROLLINS. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Kansas and ask if he has not passed over a pension bill, order of business 1029, granting a pension to Abigail S. Tilton.

Mr. INGALLS. That is not reported by the Committee on Pensions, but by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. HILL] from the Committee on Revolutionary Claims.

Mr. ROLLINS. There is only one revolutionary application for pension.

Mr. INGALLS. I obtained unanimous consent of the Senate to consider bills reported by the Committee on Pensions. The Senator from Georgia can call up that bill when he is able.

Mr. ROLLINS. I supposed we were to consider all pension bills on the Calendar.

DEDERICK BLANCH.

Mr. INGALLS. I call for order of business No. 1081.

The bill (S. No. 1511) granting a pension to Dederick Blanch was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll, subject to the limitations and provisions of the pension laws, the name of Dederick Blanch, late a private in Company B, Thirty-seventh Regiment Iowa Volunteers.

The Committee on Pensions proposed to amend by striking out the words "to begin to draw at the rate of — dollars per month from the date his application was filed in the Pension Office, and continue during life."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I move to add:

To take effect from the passage of this act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. COCKRELL in the chair.) That will be inserted under the understanding.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CATHARINE GEMMILL AND CHILDREN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next order of business is No. 1082.

The bill (H. R. No. 4702) granting a pension to Catharine Gemmill and children was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Catharine Gemmill, and pay her a pension, and also to pay her a pension for her minor children, John Andrew Gemmill, Jennie Gemmill, William T. Gemmill, and Catharine Gemmill.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES REED.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business 1083.

The bill (H. R. No. 1513) granting a pension to Charles Reed was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing the name of Charles Reed, late private in Company H, Eleventh Regiment Iowa Volunteers, on the pension-roll.

The Committee on Pensions proposed to amend the bill by striking out the words "to begin to draw at the rate of — dollars per month from the 5th day of September, A. D. 1877, and continue during life, or the existence of disabilities."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BENJAMIN HOLLINGSWORTH.

Mr. INGALLS. The next order of business is 1084.

The bill (H. R. No. 697) restoring the name of Benjamin Hollingsworth to the pension-roll was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for restoring to the pension-roll the name of Benjamin Hollingsworth, late a private in Company I of the First Regiment Iowa Cavalry Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PETER GETTERT.

Mr. INGALLS. The next pension bill is order of business No. 1085.

The bill (S. No. 1512) granting a pension to Peter Gettert was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll of the United States the name of Peter Gettert, late a private in Company C, Sixteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteers.

The Committee on Pensions proposed to amend the bill by striking out the words "to begin to draw, at the rate of — dollars per month, from the 12th day of April, 1878, and continue during life or the existence of his disability."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the time, and passed.

HELEN CRABBE.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1088.

The bill (H. R. No. 4698) granting a pension to Helen Crabbe was considered as in Committee of the Whole. By it the Secretary of the Interior is directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Helen Crabbe, daughter of the late Rear-Admiral Thomas Crabbe, and to pay her a pension of $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LOUISA BAINBRIDGE HOFF.

Mr. INGALLS. The next case is order of business No. 1089.

The bill (S. No. 1602) granting a pension to Louisa Bainbridge Hoff was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Louisa Bainbridge Hoff, widow of Henry Kuhn Hoff, late rear-admiral in the United States Navy, and daughter of William Bainbridge, late commodore in the United States Navy, at the rate of $50 per month from the date of her widowhood.

The Committee on Pensions proposed to amend the bill by striking out the words "the date of her widowhood" and inserting "and after the passage of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN McNULTA.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1090.

The bill (S. No. 1841) granting a pension to John McNulta was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of John McNulta, late colonel of the Ninety-fourth Regiment of Illinois Volunteers, at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN GRUBBINS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business 1092.

The bill (H. R. No. 4494) granting a pension to John Grubbins was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of John Grubbins, late a private in Company A of the Third Regiment of New Jersey Volunteers.

The Committee on Pensions proposed to amend by striking out the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws" and inserting "and that he be paid a pension of $8 a month from and after the passage of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. POLAND.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1093.

The bill (S. No. 1515) granting a pension to James H. Poland was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for James H. Poland, late a private in Company L, Seventh Iowa Cavalry.

The Committee on Pensions proposed to amend the bill by striking out the words "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws" and inserting "and that he be allowed a pension of $25 per month from and after the passage of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DONATIONS FOR MONUMENTS.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, we have nearly finished the pension bills; there are only nineteen more on the Calendar. On the next page, at the point where we now are, there are a few bills donating cannon for soldiers' monuments. They are all House bills and all very short, and in some instances I know of towns or associations that expect to have celebrations in the coming summer. I ask unanimous consent that those bills may be taken up now as they are reached or at the end of the pension bills, whichever the Pension Committee prefer.

Mr. INGALLS. At the end of the pension bills.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent now that when the pension bills are over the bills I have referred to may be taken up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate hears the request.

Mr. ROLLINS. If the Senator from Massachusetts will include all the pension cases, I will not object.

Mr. HOAR. Certainly. I do not propose to interfere with the pension cases.

Mr. ROLLINS. There is one pension case reported from the Committee on Revolutionary Claims.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator does not understand me. My request is that when the pension bills are over these condemned-cannon bills may be taken up next. That is all.

Mr. VOORHEES. Oh, no; the question of condemned cannon cannot stand in the way of pensions.

Mr. KERNAN. Regular order. Let us finish the pension bills.

Mr. HOAR. Will not the Senator allow unanimous consent to be asked for now?

Mr. KERNAN. We shall see how many are here when we get through with the pension bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made to the request made by the Senator from Massachusetts, the next pension case will be reported.

HANNAH HALLAM.

Mr. INGALLS. The next pension bill is order of business 1117.

The bill (H. R. No. 4691) granting a pension to Hannah Hallam was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of Hannah Hallam, widow of Michael Hallam, late private Company F, Fourteenth West Virginia Volunteers.

The Committee on Pensions reported the bill with amendments in line 4, after the word "pension-roll" to strike out "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws," and at the end of the bill to insert "and pay her a pension of $8 per month from and after the passage of this act."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MARIA L. MAXWELL.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business 1118.

The bill (H. R. No. 2289) granting a pension to Mrs. Maria L. Maxwell, widow of William C. Maxwell, Company D, Twelfth Ohio Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS MURPHY.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1119.

The bill (H. R. No. 1956) for the relief of Thomas Murphy, of Knox County, Missouri, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Thomas Murphy, of Knox County, Missouri, late a corporal of Company E, Twenty-first Regiment Missouri Volunteers.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to the bill by adding:

And that he be paid a pension from the date of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read the third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ANN CORNELIA LANMAN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is 1122 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 4795) granting a pension to Ann Cornelia Lanman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of Ann Cornelia Lanman at the rate of $30 per month.

Mr. INGALLS. That bill needs no amendment.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRIETTA STRINGHAM.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is 1123 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 3112) granting a pension to Henrietta Stringham, widow of Rear-Admiral Silas H. Stringham, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of Henrietta Stringham, widow of Rear-Admiral Silas H. Stringham, deceased, late of the United States Navy.

Amendments were reported from the Committee on Pensions in line 4, after the word "pension-roll," to strike out "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension law," and at the end of the bill to insert "and pay her a pension from and after the passage of this act."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read the third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

SUSAN HUMES.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is 1124 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 4391) granting a pension to Susan Humes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to restore to the pension-roll the name of Susan Humes, dependent foster-mother of George C. Humes, late first lieutenant of Company B, of the One hundred and nineteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH WIRT GOLDSBOROUGH.

Mr. INGALLS. The next in the order of business is No. 1130.

The bill (S. No. 1733) granting Mrs. Elizabeth Wirt Goldsborough, widow of the late Admiral Goldsborough, a pension of $50 per month, to be paid out of the naval pension fund, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to add to the bill:

But nothing in this act contained shall entitle the said Elizabeth Wirt Goldsborough to arrears of pension.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. SIDNEY A. HARRISON.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is 1131 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 4393) granting a pension to Mrs. Sidney A. Harrison was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Sidney A. Harrison, widow of Thomas Harrison, who was a soldier and military officer in the war of 1812, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

Mr. INGALLS. That bill needs no amendment.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LUDWIG UEHER.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is 1132 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 4371) granting a pension to Ludwig Ueber was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of Ludwig Ueber, late a private in the Thirty-seventh Regiment of Indiana Volunteer Infantry.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to add to the bill:

But nothing in this act contained shall entitle the said Ludwig Ueber to arrears of pension.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES C. SMITH.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is No. 1133 in the order of business.

The bill (S. No. 1848) granting an increase of pension to Charles C. Smith was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Charles C. Smith, late captain in the Tenth Regiment Indiana Volunteers at $25 per month.

Mr. VOORHEES. I move to strike out "Tenth Regiment Indiana Volunteers" and insert "Thirteenth Infantry United States Army."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN HALEY.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is 1134 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 1959) granting a pension to John Haley was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing upon the pension-roll the name of John Haley, late of Company G, Fifteenth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to add:

But nothing in this act contained shall entitle the said John Haley to arrears of pension.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

NATHAN A. WINTERS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1135.

The bill (H. R. No. 3362) granting a pension to Nathan A. Winters was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Nathan A. Winters, late captain of Company K, Forty-fourth Missouri Volunteers, on the pension-roll at such pension as his rank of captain and his degree of disability entitle him to receive according to the provisions and limitations of the general pension laws.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to add:

But nothing in this act contained shall entitle said Nathan A. Winters to arrears of pension.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

HUGH B. MAKIN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1136.

The bill (H. R. No. 3108) granting a pension to Hugh B. Makin, late private of Company A, Eighth Regiment United States Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to add:

But nothing in this act contained shall entitle the said Hugh B. Makin to arrears of pension.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ALICE B. MUNROE.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is No. 1137 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 3598) granting a pension to Alice B. Munroe was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Alice B. Munroe, widow of Captain Frank Munroe, deceased, of the Marine Corps of the United States Army.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to add to the bill:

But nothing in this act contained shall entitle said Alice B. Munroe to arrears of pension.

Mr. BAILEY. I reported that amendment; but it is unnecessary in the particular case, for the reason that the husband of Mrs. Munroe did not die of wounds received or injuries or disease contracted in the war of the rebellion. If the amendment is adopted, the bill will have to be sent to the House, and that may endanger it. I move that the amendment be not agreed to.

Mr. INGALLS. The amendment is unnecessary.

Mr. BAILEY. I have the arrears of pension act before me, and this case does not fall within it. This officer died eighteen months ago from disease contracted in the service of the United States in California.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. L. E. M'CAULEY.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1138.

The bill (S. No. 1849) granting a pension to Mrs. L. E. McCauley was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. L. E. McCauley, widow of Commodore Charles Stewart McCauley.

Mr. BAILEY. By a mistake the clerk of the Committee on Pensions prepared that bill improperly. In line 4 the words "place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of" should be stricken out for the reason that she is already receiving a pension of $30 a month, and it was the intention of the committee to bestow upon her a pension of $50 a month, to be paid out of the naval pension fund. She formerly received that pension, and it was the intention of the committee to restore it. Therefore I move to amend by striking out in line 4, after the word "to," the remainder of the words in that line and all on line 5 and to insert the words "pay to;" so as to make the bill read:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Mrs. L. E. McCauley, widow of Commodore Charles Stewart McCauley, a pension of $50 a month instead of $30 a month which she now receives.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CATHARINE BRENNAN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next case is No. 1139 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 1147) granting a pension to Catharine Brennan, widow of John Brennan, late private of Company B, Fifty-eighth Illinois Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to add to the bill:

But nothing in this act contained shall entitle said Catharine Brennan to arrears of pension.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

LUCY BASSETT.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is 1140 in the order of business.

The bill (S. No. 1400) granting a pension to Mrs. Lucy Bassett was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of Lucy Bassett, mother of William A. Bassett, deceased, late private in Company E, Sixteenth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to add to the bill:

But nothing in this act contained shall entitle said Lucy Bassett to arrears of pension.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CYNTHIA SPRADLIN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is 1141, in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 4696) granting a pension to Cynthia Spradlin, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Cynthia Spradlin, widow of Jacob M. Spradlin, late private in Company G, Sixth Tennessee Volunteers.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to add to the bill:

But nothing in this act contained shall entitle the said Cynthia Spradlin to arrears of pension.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MARY BRADLEY CROSS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is No. 1142 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 4379) granting a pension to Mary Bradley Cross was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Bradley Cross, widow of Colonel Osborn Cross, late a colonel in the United States Army.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment after the word "roll," in line 4, to strike out "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension-roll," and at the end of the bill to insert "and pay her a pension from and after the passage of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

JARVIS JACKSON.

Mr. INGALLS. The next case is No. 1151 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 2961) for the relief of Jarvis Jackson, of Laurel County, Kentucky, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for paying to Jarvis Jackson, of Laurel County, Kentucky, a pension of $16 per month, instead of $8, which he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WARD B. BURNETT.

Mr. INGALLS. The next case is No. 1152 in the order of business.

The bill (S. No. 1852) granting an increase of pension to Ward B. Burnett was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Ward B. Burnett at $50 per month in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HANNAH M'LAUGHLIN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is No. 1153 in the order of business.

The bill (S. No. 1854) granting a pension to Hannah McLaughlin was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY GROSSMAN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1164.

The bill (H. R. No. 1842) granting a pension to Henry Grossman, late a private in Company G, of the One hundred and fifty-fourth Regiment of Illinois Infantry Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SARAH E. WEBB.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is 1165 in the order of business.

The bill (S. No. 1759) granting a pension to Sarah E. Webb and minor children was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the names of Sarah E. Webb, widow of Osgood B. Webb, private Company C, Thirtieth Regiment Maine Veteran Volunteers, and Caroline E. and Walter H. Webb, minor children of Osgood B. and Sarah E. Webb.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES RILEY.

Mr. INGALLS. I call for No. 1167 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 4694) granting a pension to James Riley, late private in Company D, Fourth Regiment United States Infantry, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BENJAMIN SANDERS.

Mr. INGALLS. I call for order of business No. 1165.

The bill (H. R. No. 3676) for the relief of Benjamin Sanders was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Benjamin Sanders, late of Company A, First Regiment Minnesota Infantry Volunteers, upon the pension-rolls.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHANNA KUHLMAN.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask next for order of business No. 1168.

The bill (H. R. No. 4368) granting a pension to Johanna Kuhlman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Johanna Kuhlman, widow of Anton Kuhlman, late second lieutenant Company B, First Regiment of Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY W. JONES.

Mr. INGALLS. I now call for order of business No. 1169.

The bill (S. No. 1855) granting a pension to Mary W. Jones was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of Mary W. Jones, widow of Thomas ap Catesby Jones, late commodore in the United States Navy, at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of the pension she now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EMILIE R. HOOE.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business 1170.

The bill (H. R. No. 4386) granting arrears of pension to Emilie R. Hooe, widow of the late Brevet Major Alexander S. Hooe, Fifth Infantry, United States Army, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for paying to Emilie R. Hooe, widow of the late Brevet Major Alexander S. Hooe, of the Fifth Infantry, United States Army, a sum of money equal to $20 per month, from December 8, 1847, the date of the death of her husband, to the 1st of January, 1854, the time of the commencement of the pension given her by special act of Congress.

The bill was reported to the Senate.

Mr. VOORHEES. Instead of "Secretary of the Treasury," the bill should be "Secretary of the Interior." I move that amendment in line 3.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read the third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. GARRETT.

Mr. INGALLS. The next order of business is 1178.

The bill (H. R. No. 3196) granting a pension to William H. Garrett, late private in Company B, in the Fifty-sixth Regiment Illinois Infantry Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES BUCHANAN.

Mr. INGALLS. I next call up order of business No. 1179.

The bill (H. R. No. 4695) granting a pension to James Buchanan, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James Buchanan, late private in Company I, Thirty-first Ohio Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY BROWN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1180.

The bill (H. R. No. 491) granting a pension to Henry Brown, late a private in Company C, One hundred and Twenty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY LEGGETT.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1181.

The bill (S. No. 460) granting a pension to Mary Leggett was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Leggett, widow of Robert Leggett, late lieutenant-colonel of the Tenth Connecticut Volunteers, to date from September 18, 1874.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DANIEL C. PUTNAM.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1185.

The bill (H. R. No. 585) for the relief of Daniel C. Putnam was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing upon the pension-roll the name of Daniel C. Putnam, late a soldier of Company A, Twenty-fourth Regiment Missouri Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CAROLINE HAWLEY.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1186.

The bill (H. R. No. 4385) granting an increase of pension to Caroline Hawley was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for the issue to Caroline Hawley, widow of William Hawley, late first lieutenant in the United States Army, of a pension certificate at the rate of $30 per month, instead of the certificate for $17 per month she now holds.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS C. YOUNG.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1187.

The bill (H. R. No. 846) for the relief of Thomas C. Young, late private of Company F, Thirty-ninth Iowa Infantry, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACOB PARROTT.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1188.

The bill (H. R. No. 2944) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Parrott, of Hardin County, Ohio, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Jacob Parrott, of Hardin County, Ohio, late a private in Company K, Thirty-third Ohio Volunteers, at the rate of $20 a month, said Jacob Parrott first surrendering the pension-certificate now issued to him by the Secretary of the Interior for cancellation.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN GAVIN.

Mr. INGALLS. The next case is 1189 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 2489) granting a pension to John Gavin, Sixteenth New York Cavalry, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CATHARINE H. GALLAGHER.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1190.

The bill (H. R. No. 2769) granting an increase of pension to Catharine H. Gallagher, widow of Captain John Gallagher, late United States Navy, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of Catharine H. Gallagher, widow of Captain John Gallagher, late of the United States Navy, at the rate of $50 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY G. HARRIS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is order of business No. 1196.

The bill (H. R. No. 3816) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary G. Harris was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary G. Harris, widow of John Harris, late commandant of the United States Marine Corps, at the rate of $50 a month.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REPRESENTATIVES OF MICHAEL MEENAN.

Mr. INGALLS. I call next for order of business No. 1198.

The bill (S. No. 1359) granting pensions to the widow and minor children of Michael Meenan, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll, at the rate of $8 per month, the name of Emma Meenan, widow of Michael Meenan, deceased, late a corporal in Company E, Second Regiment Delaware Volunteers; also the names of Mary Meenan, William Meenan, George Meenan, and Edward Meenan, minor children of Michael Meenan, at the rate of $2 each per month, these pensions to be payable from and after May 15, 1876, the day of the death of Corporal Meenan.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HARDIE HOGAN HELPER.

Mr. INGALLS. I next ask for order of business No. 1197.

The bill (S. No. 1051) for the relief of Hardie Hogan Helper was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of Hardie Hogan Helper, who was disabled while on special duty under the command of General A. E. Burnside, in the war of the late rebellion.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM REYNOLDS.

Mr. INGALLS. The next is No. 1199 in the order of business.

The bill (H. R. No. 2975) granting a pension to William Reynolds, late a private Company G, Thirteenth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. STAPLIN.

Mr. INGALLS. I now call up order of business 1200.

The bill (H. R. No. 4701) granting a pension to George W. Staplin was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of George W. Staplin, late a private in Company C, Fifteenth Illinois Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, I want to invite, if I can get, the attention of the Senate for half a minute. We are all of us aware of a very large number of executive communications from the President upon our table. If we could have an executive session for the purpose of referring them, so that they could go to the appropriate committees to let the committees get ready to report, with an understanding that we shall do nothing else in executive session, nothing would forward public business so much.

Mr. ROLLINS. There is one other pension case.

Mr. HAMLIN. But that leads to discussion.

JOHN S. CORLETT.

Mr. VOORHEES. Before the motion is put—and I will join in it heartily—I desire to ask the privilege of reporting the bill from the Committee on Pensions (H. R. No. 711) granting a pension to John S. Corlett, and I ask it to be placed on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be received and put on the Calendar.

ELISHA FRANKLIN.

Mr. WITHERS. I would ask the Senator from Maine to withdraw his motion one moment in order that I may call up the bill to provide for granting a bounty land warrant to an old man who is one hundred years old.

Mr. HAMLIN. Go ahead.

Mr. WITHERS. I ask unanimous consent to take up House bill No. 6159, granting a bounty land warrant to Elisha Franklin, a survivor of the war of 1812.

Mr. ROLLINS. I will agree to that as soon as the pension cases are disposed of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia asks unanimous consent to take up the bill he has indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. ROLLINS. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire objects. The question returns on the motion of the Senator from Maine, [Mr. HAMLIN.]

Mr. ROLLINS. My ground is that there is a pension bill which has not been considered.

Mr. McMILLAN. I think both these cases can be disposed of by unanimous consent. Let it be understood that they will both be passed. One is a revolutionary pension and the other a bounty land warrant for a man a hundred years old.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maine that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HAMLIN. I stated that I withdrew that for the Senator from Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia made a request, which was objected to.

Mr. ROLLINS. I withdraw the objection if it is understood the two cases shall be considered.

Mr. HAMLIN. The case of the Senator from New Hampshire can hardly be considered to-night.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will again put the question. The Senator from Virginia asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of order of business No. 960, being the bill granting a bounty land warrant to Elisha Franklin, a survivor of the war of 1812.

Mr. ROLLINS. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire objects.

Mr. ROLLINS. I ask permission that both cases be considered.

Mr. WITHERS. We cannot consider two cases together.

Mr. ROLLINS. I do not expect that.

Mr. KERNAN. I object to any bargain.

Mr. ROLLINS. It was the understanding this evening that pension cases should be considered.

Mr. SPENCER and Mr. HAMLIN. Unobjected cases.

Mr. ROLLINS. Nothing was said about that. It was "pension cases."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire withdraw his objection?

Mr. ROLLINS. I withdraw it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no further objection.

By unanimous consent, the bill (H. R. No. 6159) granting a bounty land warrant to Elisha Franklin, a survivor of the war of 1812, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MILITARY LAND-WARRANT LOCATIONS.

Mr. VOORHEES. In the regular call of the Calendar I objected to the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1035) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain and certify the amount of land located with military warrants in the States described therein, and for other purposes. I did so because I thought other cases had priority in point of merit. I withdraw my objection now to the bill.

Mr. KERNAN. What are the "other purposes" of the bill?

Mr. BECK. If we are going back on the Calendar I hope the Senate will take up House bill No. 4228, to promote the education of the blind, which was read the other day and is quite as meritorious as any other;

and if the objection to that cannot be withdrawn, I shall object to any other bill being considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made to the request of the Senator from Indiana.

ABIGAIL S. TILTON.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, inasmuch as there is a variety of suggestions all around me, I think I shall ask the Senate to go into executive session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. WADLEIGH. I ask my friend, the Senator from Maine, to yield to me for a single moment while I ask the attention of the Senate to a pension case which has been omitted. It is to grant a pension to Abigail S. Tilton, who is the widow of a revolutionary soldier in New Hampshire. I hope there will be no objection.

Mr. BLAINE. That case ought not to be objected to. I hope it will not be objected to.

Mr. ROLLINS. The bill comes from the Committee on Revolutionary Claims.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Maine withdraw his motion?

Mr. McMILLAN. The objection is withdrawn by the Senator from Indiana to the bill in regard to the military land warrants, and I ask that that bill be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Maine withdraw his motion?

Mr. HAMLIN. I withdraw it for the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. WADLEIGH. I ask consent—

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. WADLEIGH. I ask my friend, the Senator from Missouri, to allow a pension to be granted to the widow of a revolutionary soldier. Who can have any objection to that?

Mr. COCKRELL. I want to understand this thing. Why is it that a pension claim does not go to the Committee on Pensions?

Mr. ROLLINS. This went to the Committee on Revolutionary Claims.

Mr. COCKRELL. If this is an actual living widow of a revolutionary soldier, I do not propose to object; but if it is a bogus concern, I do.

Mr. ROLLINS. It is not a bogus concern; it is bona fide.

Mr. WADLEIGH. I assure the Senator from Missouri that it is a meritorious and deserving case.

Mr. COCKRELL. I withdraw the motion to adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of the bill he has indicated. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. No. 399) granting a pension to Abigail S. Tilton. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Abigail S. Tilton, widow of Benjamin Stevens, late of Gilmanton, New Hampshire, who was a soldier in the war of the Revolution in Captain Samuel McConnel's company, in General Stark's brigade.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator from New Hampshire just tell the Senate why it is she never has had a pension before?

Mr. WADLEIGH. I think the explanation is that she married a second time.

Mr. ROLLINS. I have before me a report of the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions of the House in favor of a bill of this character, the same bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is her husband living now?

Mr. ROLLINS. No; he is dead. Here is the report, which can be read if anybody wants to hear it.

Mr. HAMLIN. We do not want to hear the report; we will pass the bill.

Mr. ROLLINS. Very well.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HAMLIN. Now I renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After eight minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. FERRY, Mr. DAWES, Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. PADDOCK, Mr. BARNUM, and Mr. MITCHELL submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BARNUM submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. No. 6463) making appropriations for the construction, repair, preservation, and completion of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

CANNON FOR MONUMENTS.

Mr. SPENCER. I ask unanimous consent to consider bills in reference to donation of cannon, &c.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. HOAR in the chair.) The Chair hears no objection. Those bills will be considered in their order.

The bill (H. R. No. 1277) donating condemned cannon and cannon-balls to the Colchester Monument Association, of Colchester, Connecticut, for monumental purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SPENCER. I suggest that it is not necessary to read these bills at length.

Mr. INGALLS. The rules expressly require that bills shall be read at length; and I think it is a violation of order and a very dangerous precedent to establish to allow under any circumstances bills to be passed without being read, at least once, at length.

The bill (H. R. No. 1278) donating condemned cannon and cannon-balls to Ledyard Monument Association of Ledyard, Connecticut, for monumental purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, and ordered to a third reading.

Mr. COCKRELL. Has the clause we agreed to in committee been put in all of these bills?

Mr. SPENCER. It has, that it can be done without detriment to the Government.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The bill (H. R. No. 4002) donating a condemned cannon and cannon-balls to Post No. 145, Grand Army of the Republic, district of Massachusetts, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The bill (H. R. No. 3871) donating condemned cannon to the city of Boston for monumental purposes was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BECK. I do not know what is coming next, but there are only five Senators present, and I object to any other business. I do not know what is coming next and do not care. If it is a good thing, we can pass it in the morning.

Mr. SPENCER. We had unanimous consent when there was a quorum present to stay here and pass sixteen or seventeen of these bills and do no other business. They are all just alike. I hope the Senator will not object. That was the unanimous consent when there was a quorum present. I suppose Senators are around the lobbies now, and some Senators left with the understanding that nothing but these bills should be acted upon.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not think we ought to act upon any bill that any Senator who has absented himself is interested in. If the five Senators present are interested in any one of these bills, I suggest that that bill be passed and that the rest be deferred. If the absentees do not stay to make up a quorum they have no right to ask us who stay to pass their bills.

Mr. BECK. I do not want to interfere with any understanding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Kentucky to object?

Mr. BECK. I take it all back.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is withdrawn. The Clerk will proceed.

The bill (H. R. No. 6272) donating condemned cannon to Bayard Post for purposes therein mentioned was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. COCKRELL. At what hour does the Senate meet, unless we change it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eleven o'clock.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. SPENCER. Let us finish these bills.

Mr. BAILEY. Before the Senate adjourns, I move that these bills be given precedence to-morrow morning. I do not think that we should pass these bills to-night with only seven Senators present, but I do approve of the motive and object and purpose of these bills. The purpose is to commemorate those who died in the defense of their country, and I hope that precedence will be given by unanimous consent to these bills, but I do not think it proper that seven Senators should pass them.

Mr. VOORHEES. One moment. Order of business 1075, Senate bill 1791, being a bill for the relief of Mark Walker, is here by the recommendation of the Secretary of War, not only verbally given to me, but in writing and by the unanimous report of the Committee on Military Affairs. Consequently there can be no risk in passing this bill; and I should be glad if we could pass it now and let it go to the other branch of Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri withdraw his motion?

Mr. COCKRELL. I will not object to taking that bill up and passing it the first thing in the morning.

Mr. VOORHEES. I beg the Senator to let me do it to-night.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Chair sees that there are only seven Senators present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is not debatable if the Senator from Missouri refuses to withdraw it.

Mr. COCKRELL. We can pass the bill in the morning.

Mr. VOORHEES. This man is dying for bread, and the Secretary of War in writing to me personally recommends the passage of this bill, and certainly it cannot be that the Senator from Missouri finds his public duty compelling him to object to it. I ask that it may be passed now. It is on the Calendar.

Mr. PLUMB. That is a very meritorious case, and I think if there is any case on this Calendar that would warrant the Senator from Missouri in withdrawing his motion it is this case of Mark Walker.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri, [Mr. COCKRELL.]

The motion was agreed to; and (at eleven o'clock and twenty seven minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, February 26, 1879.

The House met at eleven o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday was read and approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. GOX] is recognized to move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to resume the consideration of the census bill.

Mr. COX, of New York. I yield to my colleague, [Mr. WOOD.]

Mr. WOOD. I think it must be very obvious to the House that the Committee of Ways and Means should have an opportunity to report its bills for consideration. We have waited until the Committee on Appropriations has exhausted its bills. We are now willing to stand aside for the bill of my colleague in regard to the census. But I ask unanimous consent that a session to-morrow evening at half past seven o'clock be assigned for the consideration of reports from the Committee of Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. Subject to a morning hour, the Chair suggests.

Mr. WOOD. Yes, sir, subject to a morning hour.

Mr. HALE. I object.

Mr. WOOD. Then I move to suspend the rules, and that the order I have indicated be made.

Mr. HALE. I only object to the condition as to there being a morning hour.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I cannot consent to give up the morning hour.

Mr. HALE. I do not object to the original proposition, but I object to having a morning hour in the evening.

Mr. WOOD. I think it would be better to omit any reference to the morning hour. I am willing to take my chances in the evening.

Mr. WILSON. It is of the utmost importance that the Committee on Foreign Affairs have some time. I desire that Friday evening be set apart for the reception of reports from that committee.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit that proposition afterward.

Mr. CRAPO. What is the proposition of the gentleman from New York?

The SPEAKER. That a session to-morrow evening at half past seven o'clock be set apart for reports from the Committee of Ways and Means for action.

Mr. HALE. And nothing else but reports from the Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. SCALES. I object unless some other committees have a chance to report.

The SPEAKER. That is what the Chair desired in suggesting that there should be a morning hour. The Chair is in entire harmony with the gentleman from North Carolina as to having a morning hour.

Mr. WOOD. I move that the rules be suspended to make the order I have indicated.

Mr. SCALES. I withdraw my objection.

There was no further objection, and the order was made.

Mr. WOOD moved to reconsider the vote by which the order was made; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

DUTY ON QUININE.

Mr. COX, of New York. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ATKINS] for a moment.

Mr. ATKINS, by unanimous consent, presented resolutions of the Legislature of the State of Tennessee, in favor of placing quinine on the free list; which were referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Mr. RICE, of Massachusetts. Under instructions of the Committee on the Pacific Railroad, I offer the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk:

Resolved, That the House hold a session on Wednesday evening, February 26, beginning at half past seven o'clock, at which time it shall consider House bill No. 4397, entitled "A bill to extend the time to construct and complete the Northern Pacific Railroad," in the House as in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

Mr. SCALES. I object to that.

Mr. RICE, of Massachusetts. Then I move to suspend the rules and adopt it.

Mr. COX, of New York. I do not yield for that purpose.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Mr. BRIDGES. I ask consent to submit for consideration and adoption at this time the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk. The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That there be an evening session this evening, to commence at half past seven o'clock, the first hour of which to be set apart for the consideration of business before the Committee on Foreign Affairs and the remainder of the evening for general debate.

Mr. STRAIT. I object to that resolution.

Some time subsequently,

Mr. STRAIT withdrew his objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will again submit the question to the House. Is there objection to the resolution offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. BRIDGES?]

Mr. CLARK, of Iowa, and others objected.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

The SPEAKER, by unanimous consent, laid before the House the following; which was laid upon the table:

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, February 24, 1879.

To the United States Senate and House of Representatives,
Washington, District of Columbia:

Resolved, That the thanks of this convention be, and the same are hereby, tendered to the Congress of the United States for the triumphant passage of the bill restricting the immigration of Chinese to this country, and that the members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives who supported that vital measure merit and will receive the lasting gratitude of the people of California.

Resolved, That the secretary is hereby directed to transmit copies hereof to the Senate and House of Representatives.

E. F. SMITH,

Secretary Constitutional Convention.

CENSUS.

Mr. COX, of New York. I now move that the rules be suspended and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of proceeding with the consideration of the census bill.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Can we not have a morning hour?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that the census bill was made a special order under a suspension of the rules, and of course that privilege attaches to it right through. Therefore the Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] at this time to make his motion.

Mr. COX, of New York. It is also unfinished business in Committee of the Whole.

The motion of Mr. Cox, of New York, was then agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. CARLISLE in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee of the Whole now resumes the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1685) to provide for taking the tenth and subsequent censuses.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I do not propose to antagonize the bill of the gentleman from New York, [Mr. COX,] but I wish to inquire whether or not the bill to pension soldiers of the Mexican war is not the first in order in Committee of the Whole?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would state to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HEWITT] that the bill in relation to the taking of the tenth census was made a special order under a suspension of the rules, and as unfinished business in Committee of the Whole is now in order.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I do not propose to antagonize the bill at all.

Mr. COX, of New York. It will not take more than an hour or so to dispose of it.

The CHAIRMAN. By order of the House all debate upon the pending amendment and amendments thereto has been limited to ten minutes. The pending amendment is the substitute for section 4 of the Senate bill, reported from the committee of the House on the census.

Mr. COX, of New York. I move to strike out all of the amendment reported from the committee from and including the word "and," in line 5 of the printed bill, to and including the word "Secretary," in line 13, and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

The supervisors shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Mr. HALE. What are the words proposed to be stricken out?

Mr. COX, of New York. My motion is to strike out that portion of the section giving the nomination of supervisors to the governors of the respective States and Territories, and to leave the supervisors to be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. In the absence of my friend from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER,] and at his suggestion, I have offered this amendment. If voted down, very well. I wish to hurry on with the bill.

Mr. HALE. Let the words be read which it is proposed to strike out.

The Clerk read as follows:

And he shall immediately notify the governor of each State or Territory of the number of the supervisors and the boundary of the several districts therein. The supervisors shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, on the nomination of the governors of the respective States or Territories, except that the supervisor for the District of Columbia shall be nominated by the commissioners of said District and appointed by said Secretary.

Mr. GARFIELD. I do not hesitate to say that the amendment proposed is a marked improvement upon the section reported from the committee, and as such I will vote for it. The only objection, however, it seems to me, is that the proposed amendment provides a little too much machinery; requiring, as it does, so large a number of supervisors to be nominated by the President, and their names to be sent to the Senate for confirmation.

That difficulty, if it shall be one, can be arranged in the conference committee, and I hope that gentlemen will vote for this amendment as a substitute for the committee's amendment.

Mr. HALE. I move to amend by inserting after the word "and; "

In case the United States Senate shall not be in session, said appointments shall be made by the President.

Mr. GARFIELD. That would be wise, certainly, if there might be trouble about it.

Mr. COX, of New York. We can remedy it in the conference committee, if necessary.

Mr. GARFIELD. I think you had better put it in now.

Mr. MILLS. Let it go in.

Mr. COX, of New York. Very well; I have no objection to the amendment.

The question was taken on Mr. GARFIELD's amendment; and it was agreed to.

The question then recurred upon the amendment proposed by the committee as amended; and it was agreed to.

Mr. BUTLER. I offer what I send to the Clerk's desk as a substitute for the amendment proposed by the committee, section 4, and ask the attention of the committee to it.

The Clerk read Mr. BUTLER's amendment, as follows:

SEC. 4. The Secretary of the Interior shall, on or before the 1st day of March, 1880, designate and appoint the number of supervisors of censuses, to be appointed within each State or Territory, who shall be residents of the State or Territory. The total number of such supervisors shall not exceed one hundred and fifty. The Superintendent and the supervisors and enumerators shall, before entering upon the duties of their offices, respectively, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: I, ———, (Superintendent, supervisor, or enumerator, as the case may be), do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the Constitution of the United States, and perform and discharge the duties of the office of (Superintendent or other, as the case may be) according to law, honestly and correctly to the best of my ability; which oaths shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior. And each alternate supervisor for each State and Territory so appointed shall be from a different political party, and shall be so certified by the Secretary of the Interior. Each State and Territory shall have an even number of supervisors. And each alternate enumerator in each State or Territory to be appointed as herein authorized shall be selected and appointed from different political parties, and shall be certified to have been so selected and appointed. And it shall be unlawful for any enumerator to discuss any political subject or distribute or cause to be distributed any printed matter other than pertains to his office during his term of office. And any violation of this section shall be punished on conviction of the offender before any circuit court, upon information filed by the district attorney, by a fine of not less than $100 or more than $1,000.

Mr. BUTLER. I am physically unable to address the House upon this amendment. The amendment is a perfected copy of the amendment upon which the committee divided, 96 to 97, the other day. I have revised it very carefully, and my proposition is simply this, to have every other supervisor and every other enumerator of a different political party, so that there shall be, as far as possible, no chance for partisan action in the taking of the census.

What we want is an accurate census. If this is done it is no great consequence who appoints these officers. They had better be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, because the appointment by the President, if he give proper heed to the chiefs of his department and does not act outside of the interests of the Republic, will be made on the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior, by whom this census is in fact to be taken.

Now, everybody will know, in every State and Territory, what are the political opinions of the supervisors and enumerators. Then, there is a provision in this amendment that these supervisors and enumerators, while in the discharge of the duties of their offices, shall neither distribute political tracts or speeches nor make political speeches. That applies to the thirty or sixty days during which they will be engaged in their business, otherwise the provisions of the section are according to what the committee want and have reported.

The difference is that my amendment requires that the supervisors and enumerators shall be of different political parties, to prevent them from using their offices as means of political propagation.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Suppose there are more than two parties?

Mr. BUTLER. It makes no difference whether there are a half dozen political parties or not. The two enumerators are to be from different political parties, and it is not of any consequence to which political party they belong; that would be left to the good judgment and fair dealing of the Secretary of the Interior; it is not of any consequence what party they are from, if they are of different political parties under the restriction of the section.

I offered this amendment already, or substantially the same amendment, although it is different in some regards, for this, as I have said, is perfected. It was then asked, What would happen if there were three parties in the field? It is of no consequence about a third party. If there are two different parties represented they will see to it, each for the other, that there is fair play.

Mr. COX, of New York. I wish to say, in response to what has been urged by the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. HALE,] that it cannot affect this bill. The districts are not made up until after the supervisors are appointed, and they are not to be appointed until the 1st day of March. There can be no danger of a vacation of the Senate at the time these appointments are to be made. I object to the amendment of the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. HALE,] because it is impracticable, and therefore I will not argue it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that by order of the House debate upon this paragraph and all the amendments to it has been exhausted.

Mr. GARFIELD. I desire to say a single word.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is exhausted.

Mr. GARFIELD. I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Ohio that by order of the House debate has been limited upon this paragraph and the amendments thereto, and that debate is now exhausted.

Mr. GARFIELD. Very well; then I withdraw.

The question was taken on Mr. BUTLER'S amendment to the amendment reported by the committee; and on a division there were ayes 11.

Mr. BUTLER. I will not ask for a further count. I will only remark that ninety-six members voted for the amendment the other day.

No further count being demanded, the amendment to the amendment was not agreed to.

The question recurred upon agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended, and it was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 5. Each supervisor of census shall be charged with the performance, within his own district, of the following duties:

To propose to the Superintendent of Census the apportionment of his district into subdivisions most convenient for the purpose of enumeration;

To designate to the Superintendent of Census suitable persons, and, with the consent of said Superintendent, to employ such persons as enumerators within his district, one for each subdivision, and resident therein, who shall be selected solely with reference to their fitness, and without reference to their political or party affiliations, according to the apportionment approved by the Superintendent of Census;

To transmit to enumerators the printed forms and schedules issued from the Census Office, in quantities suited to the requirements of each subdivision;

To communicate to enumerators the necessary instructions and directions relating to their duties, and to the methods of conducting the census, and to advise with and counsel enumerators in person and by letter, as freely and fully as may be required to secure the purposes of this act;

To provide for the early and safe transmission to his office of the returns of enumerators, embracing all the schedules filled by them in the course of enumeration, and for the due receipt and custody of such returns pending their transmission to the Census Office;

To examine and scrutinize the returns of enumerators, in order to ascertain whether the work has been performed in all respects in compliance with the provisions of law, and whether any town or village or integral portion of the district has been omitted from enumeration;

To forward to the Superintendent of Census the completed returns of his district in such time and manner as shall be prescribed by the said Superintendent, and in the event of discrepancies or deficiencies appearing in the returns from his district, to use all diligence in causing the same to be corrected or supplied;

To make up and forward to the Superintendent of Census the accounts required for ascertaining the amount of compensation due under the provisions of this act to each enumerator of his district.

Mr. COX, of New York. On behalf of the committee I move to amend by adding to the fifth paragraph of the pending section these words:

And under the direction of the Superintendent of Census, and to facilitate the taking of the census with as little delay as possible, he may cause to be distributed by the enumerators, prior to the taking of the enumeration, schedules to be filled up by householders and others.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANNING. I move to amend by adding to the seventh paragraph of the pending section the following:

To keep said returns open for inspection by the public in his office for fifteen consecutive days, and that he shall give notice thereof by publication for fifteen consecutive days in two newspapers published within or nearest to his district in which such returns were taken.

Mr. Chairman, it is not my purpose to argue this amendment. It speaks for itself. It offers a guarantee for the good faith of the supervisors in performing their work. As will be observed from the reading, it will be competent under this amendment for any person whose name is left off the list to go to the supervisor and have it placed thereon; or if there is any omission of any material interest of the district, it will be competent for any man to avail himself of this opportunity to have the omission corrected. It seems to me the amendment will commend itself to members of the House irrespective of party.

Mr. COX, of New York. I hope the amendment will be voted down.

Mr. HANNA. I will ask the gentleman proposing this amendment whether it would not involve the Government in an immense expenditure?

Mr. MANNING. I have considered that point; and, in my opinion, the expense of having these advertisements published as proposed (it will be perceived they are to be for only two weeks) cannot amount to a very great sum. It is provided that these notices of the supervisors shall be published in only two newspapers in each district; and there are one hundred and fifty districts provided for in the bill.

Mr. HANNA. This advertising would of necessity cost hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Mr. MANNING. Oh, no; it could not do so. I think the gentleman is very greatly in error in making that statement. I am not able, however, to state precisely the amount that will be expended in this way.

The amendment was not agreed to, there being—ayes 47, noes 90.

Mr. CLAFLIN. I move to amend by inserting after the word "enumerators" in the sixth paragraph of the pending section the following:

And for a certified copy of such returns, to be deposited in the treasury of each State or Territory.

It will be perceived that the bill makes no provision for any copy of the census returns. The original returns may be lost in the course of transmission to the capital, or may in various ways disappear. It seems to me that this amendment, which conforms, I understand, to the law as adopted in relation to former censuses, should be agreed to.

Mr. COX, of New York. The making of this copy would cost $125,000. In the taking of the census of 1870 only one list was lost. I learn from letters received from the secretaries of state in various States that nobody ever consults the census returns deposited in the State offices. Gentlemen ought to understand that to copy 48,000,000 of names, forty names to the page, must be enormously expensive, and what return is there for it?

Mr. CLAFLIN. Additional safety.

Mr. COX, of New York. There is no advantage in the world, except that if any return is lost a duplicate may possibly be found in the office of the secretary or treasurer of the State.

Mr. CLAFLIN. If one return should be lost, it will cost more to retake the census to supply the list than the whole expense which the gentleman speaks of.

Mr. COX, of New York. This point has been fully considered by the committee. In taking the census of 1870 only one return was lost, and the retaking of the census in order to supply that return cost only $1,000.

The amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 6. Each supervisor of census shall, upon the completion of his duties to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior, receive the sum of $500 in full compensation for all services rendered and expenses incurred by him, except an allowance for clerk hire may be made, at the discretion of the Superintendent of Census.

SEC. 7. No enumerator shall be deemed qualified to enter upon his duties until he has received from the supervisor of census of the district to which he belongs a commission, under his hand, authorizing him to perform the duties of an enumerator, and setting forth the boundaries of the subdivision within which such duties are to be performed by him. He shall, moreover, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation:

"I, _____, an enumerator for taking the _____ census of the United States, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will make a true and exact enumeration of all the inhabitants within the subdivision assigned to me, and will also faithfully collect all other statistics therein, as provided for in the act for taking the _____ census, and in conformity with all lawful instructions which I may receive, and will make due and correct returns thereof as required by said act, and will not disclose any information contained in the schedules, lists, or statements obtained by me to any person or persons, except to my superior officers."

(Signed) _____

Which said oath or affirmation may be administered by any judge of a court of record, or any justice of the peace empowered to administer oaths; and a copy thereof, duly authenticated, shall be forwarded to the supervisor of census before the date fixed herein for the commencement of the enumeration.

SEC. 8. It shall be the duty of each enumerator, after being qualified in the manner aforesaid, to visit personally each dwelling-house in his subdivision, and each family therein, and each individual living out of a family in any place of abode, and by inquiry made of the head of such family, or of the member thereof deemed most credible and worthy of trust, or of such individual living out of a family, to obtain each and every item of information and all the particulars required by this act, as of date June 1, 1880. And in case no person shall be found at the usual place of abode of such family or individual living out of a family competent to answer the inquiries made in compliance with the requirements of this act, then it shall be lawful for the enumerator to obtain the required information, as nearly as may be practicable, from the family or families or person or persons living nearest to such place of abode: Provided, That Indians not taxed shall be omitted from the enumeration; but the Superintendent of Census may employ special agents or other means to make an enumeration of all Indians not taxed, within the jurisdiction of the United States, with such information as to their condition as may be obtainable.

Mr. HANNA. I desire to ask the attention of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] to the language embraced in the first five lines of this section:

It shall be the duty of each enumerator, after being qualified in the manner aforesaid, to visit personally each dwelling-house in his subdivision, and each family therein, and each individual living out of a family in any place of abode.

Does this language contemplate that the enumerator shall go beyond his district to visit persons? If so it will impose a labor that it may be impossible to perform.

Mr. GARFIELD. It means within the district, as a matter of course. There might be, for instance, a wood-chopper living out in the forest; and the object is that such a person should not be omitted from the enumeration.

Mr. COX, of New York. Yes, sir; the purpose is to include everybody.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 9. And it shall be further the duty of each enumerator to forward the original schedules, duly certified, to the supervisor of census of his district, as his returns under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 10. The compensation of enumerators shall be ascertained and fixed as follows:

In subdivisions where the Superintendent of Census shall deem such an allowance sufficient, an allowance not exceeding two cents for each living inhabitant, two cents for each death reported, ten cents for each farm, and fifteen cents for each establishment of productive industry enumerated and returned, may be given in full compensation for all services; and no claim for mileage or traveling expenses shall be allowed in such subdivisions: Provided, That the subdivisions to which the above rate of compensation shall apply must be designated by the Superintendent of Census at least one month in advance of the enumeration; and no account of the time occupied in enumeration shall be required for the purpose of ascertaining and determining the compensation of enumerators in such subdivisions. For all other subdivisions, rates of compensation shall be fixed in advance of the enumeration by the Superintendent of Census, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, according to the difficulty of enumeration, having reference to the nature of the region to be canvassed, and the density or sparseness of settlement, or other considerations pertinent thereto; but the compensation allowed to any enumerator in any district east of the Rocky Mountains shall not exceed an average of $4 per day of ten hours' actual field work each; and the compensation allowed to any enumerator in any district west of the Rocky Mountains shall not exceed $6 per working day of equal length. And the Superintendent of Census may prescribe a uniform method and suitable forms for keeping account of the time occupied in field work, for the purpose of ascertaining the amounts due to enumerators, severally, under the provisions of this act.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. I find that this section, in fixing the compensation of the enumerators, provides that it shall not exceed $4 a day east of the Rocky Mountains, or $6 a day west of the Rocky Mountains. Now, the Rocky Mountains comprise in themselves a vast area, and they are inhabited by a very large population. But I would suggest to the gentleman having the bill in charge that an amendment be received which will make the maximum of compensation $6 from the eastern limits of the Rocky Mountains extending westward.

Mr. COX, of New York. I have no objection to that.

Mr. GARFIELD. I think this follows nearly all of our laws in relation to land surveys; that we have taken the boundary of the Rocky Mountains, and given a larger amount west than east, and it seems to me we ought not to break from that rule. If we do we shall keep pushing eastward.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. Let me suggest to the gentleman from Ohio that you make the line east of the Rocky Mountains $4 and west of the Rocky Mountains $6, while there is no provision for taking the census in the Rocky Mountains, which is worth a great deal more than taking it east or west of those mountains.

Mr. GARFIELD. I presume the gentleman is right about that, but the difficulty is where we shall find this boundary. I would rather, if it is adopted at all, the gentleman should say west of a certain meridian.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. Say west of the one hundredth meridian as the dividing line between the great range of mountains.

Mr. GARFIELD. I understand that during the taking of the last census it was necessary to find out for official purpose where the eastern foot of the Rocky Mountains was, and it was impossible to tell. If the gentleman will say the one hundredth meridian I will agree to that.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. Very well, let the maximum of $6 commence westward of the one hundredth meridian.

Mr. COX, of New York. There is no objection to that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Colorado will reduce his amendment to writing.

Mr. GARFIELD. It can be reached by striking out "Rocky Mountains" and inserting "one hundredth meridian" in lines 24 and 27.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. Has that proposition been finally adopted?

The CHAIRMAN. It has not.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I desire to say a word about it. I have been told in this House that the presence of the Chinese on the western slope has greatly reduced wages. If that be so, if the wages on the western slope have been so severely reduced, I am certainly opposed to paying higher wages there than in other portions of the United States.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Oregon. To alleviate any apprehensions of danger to the Chinese on the Pacific in the mind of the gentleman from New York, I suggest to him that he had better move an amendment that in districts west of the Rocky Mountains the duties prescribed by this act shall be performed by Chinamen.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. The truth is, I do not believe wages have been reduced on the western slope, but I believe wages paid to white men on the western slope are, in private life as under the laws of the United States, higher than any other spot on the face of the earth, than any other spot upon which God's sun shines.

Mr. COX, of New York. I am willing to agree to that amendment.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. My amendment is to strike out the words "Rocky Mountains" wherever they occur in the section and to insert in lieu thereof "one hundredth meridian."

The committee divided; and there were ayes 66, noes not counted. So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 11. The subdivision assigned to any enumerator shall not exceed four thousand inhabitants, according to the census of 1870, nor shall any such subdivision contain less than three thousand inhabitants in any case where the last preceding census shows the number of inhabitants thereof. The boundaries of all subdivisions shall be clearly described by civil divisions, rivers, roads, public surveys, or other easily distinguished lines.

Mr. COX, of New York. I move the following amendment, to come in after the word "thereof" in line 6:

Provided, That in the Territories and in the States admitted into the Union since 1870 the supervisor of census may appoint additional enumerators in cases where in his judgment the census cannot be properly taken in thirty days by reason of the increase of population or the physical features of the said district.

Mr. GARFIELD. If the gentleman in charge of the bill will strike out all the words after "1870" down to the end of the sentence and insert what has just been read, I think it will be still better. The limitation of three thousand is absolutely out of the question in those sparsely settled countries. There are places indeed which had three thousand in 1870 which are away beyond that now by unusual, almost abnormal, growth. I think that limitation ought not to be there. We should leave it to the discretion of the department having charge of the census. The clause the gentleman puts on is a wise one. If he will allow me, I will move to insert after "1870" what he has had read.

Mr. COX, of New York. I have no objection to modify my amendment in that way, as it obviates the objection I am trying to cure. I will modify my amendment as suggested by the gentleman from Ohio.

The Clerk read the amendment as modified, as follows:

Strike out these words:

Nor shall any such subdivision contain less than three thousand inhabitants in any case where the last preceding census shows the number of inhabitants thereof. The boundaries of all subdivisions shall be clearly described by civil divisions, rivers, roads, public surveys, or other easily distinguished lines.

And in lieu thereof, insert as follows:

Provided, That in the Territories and in the States admitted into the Union since 1870 the supervisor of census may appoint additional enumerators in cases where in his judgment the census cannot be properly taken in thirty days by reason of the increase of population or the physical features of the said district.

The amendment, as modified, was adopted.

Mr. WILSON. I move further to amend by striking out the word "four" and inserting "eight;" so it will read:

The subdivision assigned to any enumerator shall not exceed eight thousand inhabitants, &c.

The amendment giving to an enumerator the power to appoint an assistant would justify an increase of the number to eight thousand instead of four thousand.

Mr. COX, of New York. I hope that will not be adopted.

Mr. WILSON. I will make it six, then, instead of eight thousand. In view of the amendments that have been made to this section it will be perfectly competent to employ an assistant enumerator, and there would be no trouble and no embarrassment. On the contrary, there would be great embarrassment if the number is left at four thousand. My amendment would be in the line of retrenchment and economy, would reduce the expense, and facilitate the work.

Mr. COX, of New York. The only difficulty about accepting the amendment of the gentleman from West Virginia is that the work requires to be done within thirty days, and in order to accomplish that object there must be small districts. If that amendment were adopted it would not be in harmony with the remainder of the bill.

The question being taken on Mr. WILSON's amendment, it was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read section 13, as follows:

SEC. 13. That if any supervisor shall receive or secure to himself any fee, reward, or compensation as a consideration for the employment of any person as enumerator or clerk, or shall in any way receive or secure to himself any part of the compensation provided in this act for the services of any enumerator or clerk, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $500 nor more than $3,000, in the discretion of the court.

Mr. TUCKER. I offer the following amendment:

Strike out the word "supervisor" in line one of the section, and insert the word "person."

That is a broader term and will cover every case of impropriety.

Mr. COX, of New York. I have no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read section 14, as follows:

SEC. 14. That each and every person more than twenty years of age, belonging to any family residing in any enumeration district, and in case of the absence of the heads and other members of any such family, then any agent of such family, shall be, and each of them hereby is, required, if thereto requested by the superintendent, supervisor, or enumerator, to render a true account, to the best of his or her knowledge, of every person belonging to such family, in the various particulars required by law, and whoever shall willfully fail or refuse shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding $100. And every president, treasurer, secretary, general agent, or managing director of every corporation from which answers to any of the schedules provided for by this act are herein required, who shall, if thereto requested by the superintendent, supervisor, or enumerator, willfully neglect or refuse to give true and complete answers to any inquiries authorized by this act, such officer shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than $500 nor more than $10,000, to be recovered in an action of debt in any court of competent jurisdiction, in the name and to the use of the United States, and in addition thereto shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be imprisoned for a term not exceeding one year.

Mr. COX, of New York. I am instructed by the committee to offer the following amendment:

In line 19, after the word "officer" insert the words "or agent;" so that it will read "such officer or agent shall forfeit and pay," &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the second paragraph of section 17, as follows:

Schedule No. 1 shall contain inquiries as to the relation of each person enumerated to the head of the family, whether wife, son, daughter, servant, boarder, or other; as to the civil conditions of each person enumerated, whether married, widowed, or single; as to the place of birth of the parents of each person enumerated; and as to the physical and mental health of each person enumerated, whether active or disabled, maimed, crippled, bed-ridden, deaf, dumb, blind, insane, or idiotic, and whether employed or unemployed, and if unemployed, during what portion of the year. From the same schedule the inquiries as to the value of real and personal estate owned shall be stricken out.

Mr. COX, of New York. I offer the following amendment, reported by the committee:

In line 11, after the words "parents of each person enumerated," insert the words "as to all foreign-born, whether alien or naturalized persons."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill, and read the fifth paragraph of section 17, as follows:

Schedule No. 4 shall contain inquiries relating to the public indebtedness of cities, counties, and towns; and such additional inquiries respecting public paupers and criminals as the Superintendent of Census shall deem necessary to secure full information respecting the numbers and condition of these classes.

Mr. COX, of New York. I am instructed by the committee to offer the following amendment:

After the word "towns" insert "and of the ownership of the public debt of the United States, by whom owned, and the respective amounts;" and after the word "respecting" the words "the same, as well as respecting the."

Mr. WARD. It seems to me that by this amendment proposed by the committee it is sought to establish a different regulation and inquiry with regard to the public debt of the United States and the persons by whom it is owned and the respective amounts than are attempted to be established with regard to any other species of property. I do not understand why the bill should establish a different rule with regard to that kind of property from that which is attempted to be established with regard to any other. There is certainly no reason why people who have seen proper to invest their money in the public loans of the United States should be treated in a manner more inquisitorial, more calculated to reveal their private business and drag into public view their private and social affairs, than is meted out to the owner of any other class of property-holders. Does the majority of the committee desire to punish people for their patriotism in preferring the nation as the custodian of their earnings and savings?

If there is one thing that to the American citizen is distasteful it is the inquisitorial process of attempting to pry into his private affairs. I say to the committee having this important measure in charge that nothing will be more unpopular and nothing will more tend to frustrate the design that should govern in collecting and collating a careful and valuable census than the effort to inject into it this species of prying inquiry.

I notice that very properly, by a previous paragraph of this section, there are stricken out from schedule 1 "the inquiries as to the value of real and personal estate." I think that is a proper provision.

Mr. COX, of New York. That is not stricken out. It is put in another schedule.

Mr. WARD. The words are these:

From the same schedule the inquiries as to the value of real and personal estate owned shall be stricken out.

Mr. COX, of New York. Yes, from that particular schedule; but they come in elsewhere. It would not be a proper census if it did not include those inquiries.

Mr. WARD. No other species of security than the public debt of the United States is exposed to this public inspection. I hope the amendment will not be agreed to because it is inequitable in its operations. Why should the railroad bond and stock holder, the mortgage owner, or the millionaire, be exempted from disclosing to the census-takers their securities and their treasures, while the Government bondholder is discriminated against by this annoying investigation. I will not charge that the majority of the committee or the majority of this House would like to see the United States loans depopularized. Possibly the idea is that only the rich will be annoyed by this provision. That is a great mistake. The Government bonds are found in the hands of the poor in small amounts, and distributed among thousands of the people, as well as in the possession of the wealthy. Why should they be exposed to this inquisition when the books of the Treasury Department will reveal the names of the owners of the registered bonds, and in this form they are held principally by those of large means. I will never vote for invading the sanctity of a man's family or his business when no practical public good is to follow from the step which is so obnoxious to American feeling.

The question being put on agreeing to the amendment, there were—ayes 83, noes 10.

Mr. WARD. A quorum has not voted.

The CHAIRMAN. A quorum not having voted, the Chair will order tellers, and appoints the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. WARD, and the gentleman from New York, Mr. COX.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported ayes 82.

Mr. WARD. I do not demand further count.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LATHROP. I offer the following amendment:

After the word "counties" strike out the word "and," and insert after the word "towns" the words "and school districts;" so that it will read: Schedule No. 4 shall contain inquiries relating to the public indebtedness of cities, counties, towns, and school districts.

School districts are a class of public corporations exactly corresponding to towns, but smaller.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PATTERSON, of New York. I offer the following amendment: After the word "counties" insert the words "incorporated villages."

Mr. COX, of New York. I have no objection to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph of section 17:

Schedule No. 5 shall contain inquiries as to the birthplace of the father and mother of each person reported as having died during the year, and as to the usual occupation of each such person.

The Committee on the Census reported the following as an amendment to the clause:

The Superintendent of Census shall require and obtain from every railroad corporation, or the lessee or receiver thereof, the following facts, to exhibit the condition of such corporation, and the condition, characteristics, and operations of the railroad or railroads owned or controlled by such corporation, or the lessee or receiver thereof, on the 1st of June of the year 1880, to wit: The name of the corporation or company, with the corporate names of all leased lines; the number of miles projected or authorized by law or charter, with the several terminal points of the same; the number of miles completed, exhibiting separately the length of lines within each State; the number of miles operated during the last complete fiscal year preceding June 1, 1880; the capital stock allowed by law or charter, and the amount paid up; the amount of funded and of unfunded debt, with period of funded debt, and rate of interest thereon, and the amount of all sinking funds provided for the redemption of such debts; the number of acres of land derived from public grants remaining unsold; the total cost of construction, of equipment, and of all permanent investments, including the cost of purchase of other lines of road and of telegraph lines; the amount and character of rolling stock; the number and class of employees; the receipts of such corporation or company for the last complete fiscal year preceding June 1, 1880, exhibiting separately the earnings from through freight, from local freight, from passengers, from expresses, and from mails; the expenses of such corporation or company for said fiscal year, exhibiting separately the amount paid for salaries and wages, for fuel, for national, State, and municipal taxes, for interest on bonds and other debts, for dividends, for repairs, for damage to freight and personal injuries; also, the operations of said fiscal year, including mileage of freight, of passenger, and of construction and repair trains separately, the number of passengers carried, and the amount and class of freight transported each way; also, the number, character, and, so far as ascertained, the cause of all casualties by which life was lost, which occurred upon or within the trains, the tracks, or the buildings of said corporation or company, during said fiscal year, and the extent of injury to life and limb resulting therefrom; also, the terms of all agreements and contracts by which sleeping-cars, palace and parlor cars, so called, express cars, and cars of transportation companies, not identical with the corporation or company making the return herein required, are run upon such road or roads, and the extent of such service, and the amount of all receipts therefrom during the said fiscal year.

The Superintendent of the Census shall require and obtain from the owners, proprietors, or managers of every express company the following facts, to wit: Name of corporation or company; capital paid up; total capital stock; length of lines in miles; whether the business is conducted by rail, vessel, or otherwise; total amount paid to railroads or vessels for use of line or lines; number of officers; number of persons engaged in general administration; number of agents and messengers; total receipts; total expenditures, exhibiting separately amount paid for salaries, for repairs, and for general expenses. He shall also in like manner require and obtain, from the owners, proprietors, or managers of every telegraph company, the following facts, to wit: Name of corporation or company; terminal points connected; capital and capital paid up; length of lines in miles; miles of wire; number of officers; number of persons engaged in general administration; number of persons engaged as telegraph operators; the number of messages transmitted by officers of the United States; the number of messages transmitted for the press; the number of messages transmitted for private parties; total number of messages transmitted; total receipts from messages; total expenditures of the company, exhibiting separately the amount expended for salaries, for repairs, and for general expenses. He shall also, in like manner, require and obtain, from the officers or managers of all life-insurance companies, the following facts, to wit: Name of company; amount of capital and paid-up capital; the number of persons employed in the general administration; the number employed as agents; the total gross assets of the company, exhibiting separately realized assets, deferred and unpaid premiums, and premium notes and loans; total liabilities of the company, exhibiting separately losses adjusted and unadjusted, losses resisted, scrip and other dividends, dividends to policy-holders not applied, reinsurance fund; all other claims, including capital; receipts from cash premiums; receipts from all other sources; total cash expenditures, exhibiting separately amount paid for losses and claims, dividends to stockholders, dividends to policy-holders, commissions, officers' salaries, medical examiners' fees, national, State, and local taxation, and all other cash expenditures; amount and character of deposits in each State to secure policy-holders; premium-note expenditures; the number and amount of policies issued during the year; also, exhibiting policies terminating during the year, the number and amount terminated by death, by expiration, by surrender, by lapse, by change; total number and amount of policies in force, and the amount of the premiums; the amount of losses in cash and notes and the percentage of the loss to the total amount of policies in force; percentage of assets to risks in force. He shall in like manner require and obtain, from every fire and marine insurance company, the following facts, to wit: Name of company, amount of capital stock; the amount paid up; the number of persons employed in general administration; the number employed as agents; the gross assets of company; the total liabilities, exhibiting separately the amount of losses adjusted, losses unadjusted, losses resisted, reinsurance fund; all other liabilities, including capital; also, the total receipts, exhibiting separately fire premiums, marine and inland premiums, and receipts from all other sources, including interest, dividends, and rents; also, the total expenditures, exhibiting separately the number and amount of fire losses, of marine and inland losses, dividends, commissions, officers' salaries, State, national, and municipal taxes, and all other expenses. He may require such other information, as to the subjects of this section, as, in his judgment, may be necessary to secure such returns as will exhibit the transactions of said several companies.

Mr. GARFIELD. I move to strike out all after line 95 to the end of the amendment, beginning with "The Superintendent of the Census shall require and obtain from the owners, proprietors, or managers of every express company the following facts," &c.

I do this reluctantly in view of the object of these inquiries, for they are very good, and I should be glad to see all these statistics. My experience and study of this question, ten years ago, demonstrated that the effect of the overloading of the schedule with so many inquiries was that all would share in the imperfection of the work.

Now, there is a provision in the next section by which the Superintendent of the Census is empowered to employ an expert to make such special inquiries on general subjects as the Superintendent and the Secretary of the Interior think can be safely done without too much enlarging the work. I think if the railroad statistics required here were collected they would make a very large volume. Now we have by the private enterprise of Mr. Poor a work that really gives us the meat of all that matter. Again, we have an Auditor of Railroad Accounts here in our Government, and if it were necessary we could empower him to make special inquiries and report and do it at his leisure, and he would do it better than it can be done if the work be crowded in the thirty days.

So in regard to life, fire, and marine insurance companies—that would make a voluminous record, and I think it would trouble us to get it with fairness and carefulness, and, if we obtained it, these reports being ten years apart would not be of great value. I hope, therefore, that for the sake of the statistics of the census and of this very good bill, which is a great improvement on the old law, the gentleman will consent that the amendment shall be agreed to.

Mr. MILLS. There will be no difficulty, Mr. Chairman, in obtaining the statistics provided for by this clause of the bill. They are not to be taken by the ordinary enumerators provided for in the bill, but by experts who understand this business. They will be taken by intelligent persons, appointed by the Superintendent of the Census, to go to the railroad and other companies and get this information from them.

All these companies have their annual reports, as manufacturing companies do; and as we are seeking to obtain all the possible information we can of the material growth and prosperity of our country, it would seem to me that we should omit a material part of it if we adopted the suggestion of the gentleman from Ohio.

Now, we know from Poor's Railroad Manual, to which the gentleman from Ohio referred, that we have five billions of dollars' worth of property invested in railroads, but we have no such information about insurance companies, about express companies; we have no such information about telegraph companies. There is a vast amount of money invested in these enterprises, and it is utterly impossible to get at certain information as to the extent of that capital. A knowledge of it is essential to us, because we have a large public debt, and it may at some time be necessary to tax some of these companies. We have a right to do so. Congress can tax the property invested in railroads, but we cannot tax real estate, because the Constitution provides that the tax upon real estate shall be in proportion to population. The Constitution requires that, but it seems to me that we ought to have some way of getting at reliable information as to the amount of capital invested in life, fire, and marine insurance companies and what the profits of these companies are; also how many miles of railroad there are in the United States; what they cost, what profit they have paid, so that we may if needful lay some taxation on that class of property.

We want to know how much capital is invested in the stock of express companies; what it is paying; how much is invested in telegraph companies. All this information can be obtained with much less labor than the enumeration of the population of the United States, because it will be taken by experts who understand their business and who will obtain their information from the companies themselves.

Mr. STONE, of Iowa. I desire to offer an amendment, to come in after the word "stock," in line 99 of the printed bill:

And to what extent the same has been watered, and how often corners have been made on such watered stock.

Mr. THOMPSON. And how many more can be made.

Mr. COX, of New York. I do not object to that amendment.

Mr. STONE, of Iowa. I think if my amendment is adopted, as I have no doubt it will be, the amendment reported from the committee will then be perfect.

Mr. COX, of New York. It is not very technically expressed, but we can perfect it in the conference committee.

The amendment offered by Mr. STONE, of Iowa, was then agreed to.

Mr. CLAFLIN. I move, in line 97 of the printed bill, to amend by inserting before the words "express company" the word "incorporated."

Mr. COX, of New York. I have no objection to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

The question recurred upon the motion of Mr. GARFIELD to strike out of the amendment reported from the committee the last paragraph as amended by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. COX, of New York. One word in reply to what has been said by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. GARFIELD.] The committee have proposed certain special inquiries, although there is a general provision comprehending these marine, fire, railroad, and other companies. If the amendment of the committee shall fail we will have to rely on the Superintendent of the Census making out a schedule under that general provision. I am myself not very particular about the amendment, but we may have superintendents of the census who may have crotchets and peculiar ideas. I think some superintendents would prefer that the law should fix the schedule for them. In fact that is the course adopted in England. There the law fixes the schedule, and it is found that they have more weight and sanction when the enumerators come to ask the questions of these companies. If the gentleman from Ohio insists upon his motion to strike out, and it should be agreed to, I will then fall back on the general provision contained in the bill. I think it would be wiser, however, at this time to vote in the amendment proposed by the committee.

The question was taken upon the motion to strike out, and it was not agreed to, upon a division—ayes 57, noes 82.

The amendment reported from the Committee on the Census, as amended by the Committee of the Whole, was then agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

SEC. 18. Each enumerator in his subdivision shall be charged with the collection of the facts and statistics required by each and all the several schedules, with the following exceptions, to wit:

In cities where an official registration of deaths is maintained, the Superintendent of Census may, in his discretion, withdraw the mortality schedule from the several enumerators within such cities, and may obtain the statistics required by this act through official records, paying therefor such sum as may be found necessary, not exceeding the amount which is by this act authorized to be paid to enumerators for a similar service, namely, two cents for each death thus returned.

Whenever he shall deem it expedient, the Superintendent of Census may withdraw the schedules for manufacturing and social statistics from the enumerators of the several subdivisions, and may charge the collection of these statistics upon experts and special agents, to be employed without respect to locality. And said Superintendent may employ experts and special agents to investigate in their economic relations the manufacturing, railroad, fishing, mining, and other industries of the country, and the statistics of telegraph, express, transportation, and insurance companies, as he may designate and require. And the Superintendent of Census shall, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, prepare schedules containing such interrogatories as shall, in his judgment, be best adapted to elicit this information, with such specifications, divisions, and particulars under each head as he shall deem necessary to that end. Such experts and special agents shall take the same oath as the enumerators of the several subdivisions, and shall have equal authority with such enumerators in respect to the subjects committed to them; and they shall receive compensation at rates to be fixed by the Superintendent of Census with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That the same shall in no case exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses.

No amendment was offered.

The Clerk read the following:

SEC. 19. The enumeration required by this act shall commence on the 1st day of June, and be taken as of that date, and each enumerator shall prosecute the canvass of his subdivision from that date forward on each week-day without intermission, except for sickness or other urgent cause; and any unnecessary cessation of his work shall be sufficient ground for his removal and the appointment of another person in his place; and any person so appointed shall take the oath required of enumerators, and shall receive compensation at the same rates. And it shall be the duty of each enumerator to complete the enumeration of his district, and to prepare the returns herebefore required to be made, and to forward the same to the supervisor of his district, on or before the 1st of July, 1880. And in any city having over ten thousand inhabitants under the census of 1870, the enumeration of population shall be taken within two weeks from the 1st of June; and any delay beyond the dates above respectively, on the part of any enumerator, shall be sufficient cause for withholding the compensation to which he would be entitled by compliance with the provisions of this act, until proof satisfactory to the Superintendent of Census shall be furnished that such delay was by reason of causes beyond the control of such enumerator.

Mr. COX, of New York. I have just learned that the 1st day of June, 1880, will come on Sunday. I therefore move to amend this section so that in lines 2 and 18 it shall read "first Monday of June."

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HERBERT. I move to amend the section by adding to it that which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

That each enumerator shall, previous to making his returns, cause a correct list signed by himself of the persons enumerated in his subdivision to be set up at two of the most public places in the same, there to remain for the inspection of all concerned, (for each of which copies he shall be allowed $1,) together with a notice that on a day certain not less than ten days from the posting of such notice and list he will be at some designated point therein for the purpose of correcting errors; and on the day named, and from day to day thereafter, for not less than five days, the enumerator shall attend at the place designated, and upon satisfactory proof correct all such errors as may be made apparent by adding or striking out names improperly omitted or inserted.

Mr. HERBERT. If I can get the attention of the committee for a few moments, I desire to explain the purpose of this amendment. It provides substantially that each enumerator shall make out a full and complete list of all the persons enumerated within his subdivision, and post two of those lists at the most public places within his subdivision, there to remain for not less than ten days for the inspection of all concerned; and that accompanying such list shall be a notice that he will attend at a place designated in his subdivision, on a day fixed by his notice, for the purpose of correcting errors in the enumeration of names, and names only. The amendment is confined simply to names for the reason that it is more important that the inhabitants should be correctly enumerated than that any other part of the census should be correctly taken. Therefore, only a list of the names enumerated in each subdivision is to be posted up for the benefit of all concerned, and the enumerator is to attend at a place designated for not less than five days, there to receive proof, and upon satisfactory proof he is to add to or subtract from said list, if it is incorrect in any respect. In that way there will be an opportunity for every list of names to be corrected by the people living within each subdivision. It seems to me this is absolutely fair. The purpose of the amendment is the same as that of the amendment offered some time since by the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. MANNING.]

Mr. DURHAM. Is it the custom in your State to pursue that plan by the assessor of taxes?

Mr. HERBERT. A similar plan is pursued in my State.

Mr. DURHAM. Are the tax assessors in your State required to revise their lists as is here proposed?

Mr. HERBERT. Yes, there is a provision in the law of my State that the lists made out for taxation shall be open for public inspection.

Mr. DURHAM. And for correction?

Mr. HERBERT. And for correction.

Mr. DURHAM. I never heard of such a thing before.

Mr. MANNING. There is hardly a State in the Union that does not allow persons to come in and have an opportunity to correct these returns of assessors.

Mr. HERBERT. Mr. Chairman, I will say, since the gentleman has suggested it to me, that in the matter of taxes it is usual not only in the State of Alabama, but in other States, to allow an opportunity to the tax-payer to correct in this way any erroneous assessment. This amendment provides a plain, simple mode of correcting any mistakes in the enumeration to be made under this bill. That is the whole purpose of it.

The objection made by our republican friends to the amendment offered awhile ago by my friend from Mississippi [Mr. MANNING] was that it would cost too much to publish the notices in the newspapers. This amendment provides that these two lists (and neither list will contain over four thousand names) shall be posted at the two most public places in the subdivision by the enumerator thereof, for which he is allowed to charge only one dollar for each list, so that there will be only two dollars additional allowed to each enumerator under the law, for making out and posting these lists. This will be the whole of the expense; and it seems to me something of this kind is absolutely necessary in order to get a fair, full, and satisfactory enumeration of the people of the country.

Now, the apprehension on the one side and the other of the Chamber is that one party or the other may use the taking of this census for partisan purposes; but under this amendment there will be no opportunity whatever for such influences to impair the correctness of the returns. In each subdivision the inhabitants will have an opportunity to see that there is no mistake, or if there is any mistake that it be properly corrected.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. COX, of New York. I hope there will be a vote on this amendment.

Mr. MANNING. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman rise to oppose the amendment?

Mr. MANNING. No, sir; to advocate it.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the gentleman from Mississippi will proceed.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I object.

Mr. MANNING. In order to obviate the objection, I move to amend the amendment by striking out the last word. This motion will give me an opportunity to be heard.

The CHAIRMAN. That motion is in order. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. MANNING. Mr. Chairman, in the earlier and better days of this country, when men were at least as pure as they are now, a proposition of this kind was regarded as a judicious provision in the census law. Assuming that it was wise then, assuming that there was then necessity for it, the measure now commends itself still more strongly, as we have since that time grown perhaps more demoralized. In the census of 1800 it was provided in the seventh section that—

Each assistant shall, previous to making his returns to the marshal, cause a correct copy, signed by himself, of the schedule containing the number of inhabitants within his division, to be set up at two of the most public places within the same, there to remain for the inspection of all concerned; for each of which copies, &c., he shall receive $2.

A little while ago I moved an amendment dissimilar to this in one respect only. It provided for the publication of notices in two newspapers of each supervisor's district. The objection was instantly made on the other side that the amendment, if adopted, would involve an expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars, and on this side also by one member the amendment was opposed. I have taken occasion since that objection was raised to estimate what would be the cost of these notices. There will be one hundred and fifty supervisors' districts throughout the land, and as the notices are to appear in two newspapers of each district there would be three hundred newspapers in all. Ten dollars for each newspaper would, I apprehend, be a reasonable charge for publication such as the amendment indicated for fifteen days. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] probably supposed, and I apprehend gentlemen on the other side also supposed, that my amendment contemplated the publication of the whole return of the enumerators. It contemplated no such thing, and was capable of no such construction. The notice would contain only five or six lines, not more than ten at most, stating that the work of the enumerators was done, that their lists were open for inspection, and that if any person had been omitted or any interest overlooked the necessary correction might be made. Upon the failure of the supervisor to take notice of such suggestions of error it would be competent for the citizen to make complaint to the Superintendent of the Census. The opening of the returns to public inspection is, it seems to me, a guarantee that is desirable, and any officer irrespective of party would like to be able to give it to the country in support of the accuracy of his work. If I am correct in the estimate I have made $3,000 would be the whole cost of these advertisements.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I rise to a question of order. I submit that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MANNING] is not discussing the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. MANNING. I am, sir. The gentleman will see in a moment that my remarks are pertinent in connection with this amendment. If it would cost only $3,000 to publish these notices in the newspapers it will cost a great deal less—

Mr. RANDOLPH. I make the point that the gentleman is discussing his own proposition, which was voted down, and not the amendment of the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. MANNING. If I can show that it will cost only $3,000 to publish these notices in the newspapers, I think it must convince gentlemen that it will cost a great deal less to make publication by written notices. The objection that the proposed amendment will prove expensive cannot be maintained. It is not possible that harm can result from its adoption, while it is probable that injustice will be done, either intentionally or unintentionally, if it is rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the remarks of the gentleman from Mississippi are in order under the practice of the House.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes; "under the practice of the House." That is the only ground on which the decision can be put.

Mr. MANNING. Now, sir, it seems to me this amendment must commend itself to the committee. I do not think any sound objection can be urged against it. All should desire that the greatest good faith should be observed, and the returns will be much more freely credited by all classes in the country if the widest and most general examination can be afforded.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. MANNING. I withdraw the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. HANNA. By reference to the eighth section it will be found that it is made the duty of the enumerators to visit every family and learn from the head of every family the names of the persons composing families, and if information cannot be thus obtained to visit those who may be absent for the time. It seems to me all the necessary information can be obtained by compliance with the provisions of that section, and to adopt this amendment would impose on the official a duty which to me seems, first, to be unnecessary, and secondly, the compensation provided for is wholly inadequate for the amount of labor which would be required of the person by the adoption of the amendment. So that in either event I think no practical result would be obtained by the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. HERBERT. Let me ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. HANNA. Yes, sir.

Mr. HERBERT. Suppose mistakes are made, either intentional or otherwise, in the enumeration as provided for in the bill, without this amendment what opportunity is afforded, by the bill or by any amendment heretofore offered, to the people in that subdivision to correct those mistakes?

Mr. HANNA. My answer to that is that I presume the persons appointed under the provisions of this bill will be of such character that they will not intentionally make mistakes, but will undertake correctly and in good faith to enforce the law, and secondly it does seem to me when you require the officer to visit the family himself, to go to that source where he can most likely obtain the most correct information, that is all that is required of us as legislators. I submit this thing of posting up notices would more likely result in the practice of fraud on the Government officials than to leave the law as it is.

Mr. HERBERT's amendment was disagreed to.

Section 20 was read, as follows:

SEC. 20. The sum of $3,000,000 is hereby fixed and limited as the maximum cost of the census herein provided for, exclusive of printing and engraving; and it shall not be lawful for the Secretary of the Interior or the Superintendent of Census to incur any expense or obligation whatever, in respect to said census, in excess of that sum. And the sum of $250,000 for printing and other preliminary expenses is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. CLAFLIN. I move in that section, in line 10, to insert these words:

Which sum shall form part of the $3,000,000 fixed as the cost of the census.

Mr. COX, of New York. There is no objection to that amendment as it conforms to the intention of the committee and the provisions of the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 22. That if any State or Territory, through its duly appointed officers or agents, shall, during the two months beginning on the 1st of June of the year which is the mean of two years on which a census of the United States is by this act directed to be taken, take and complete a census in all respects according to the schedules and forms of enumeration in the census of the United States, and shall deposit with the Secretary of the Interior, on or before the 1st of September following, a full and authentic copy of all schedules returned and reports made by the officers and agents charged with such enumeration, then the Secretary of the Treasury shall, upon receiving a certificate from the Secretary of the Interior that such schedules and reports have been duly deposited, pay, on the requisition of the governor of such State or Territory, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum equal to 50 per cent. of the amount which was paid to all supervisors and actual enumerators within such State or Territory at the United States census next preceding, increased by one-half the percentage of gain in population in such State or Territory between the two United States censuses next preceding: Provided, That the blank schedules used for the purposes of the enumeration herein provided for shall be similar in all respects of form and size, of heading and ruling, to those used in the census of the United States.

Mr. HANNA. I desire to call the attention of the gentleman having charge of this bill to the language in line 15—"on the requisition of the governor of such State or Territory." Those words, I presume, were inserted upon the presumption that the governors would have the appointment.

Mr. COX, of New York. No; it has no relation to that at all. This refers to a quinquennial census between the two decennial periods, and has no relation whatever to the matter referred to by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. GARFIELD. I observe an inaccuracy in the language of this section. I have not thought of it long enough to get the points. The language in the lines 3 and 4 of this section to me seems to be blind. It is there provided "that if any State or Territory, through its duly appointed officers or agents, shall during the two months beginning on the 1st of June of the year which is the mean of two years on which a census of the United States is by this act directed to be taken," &c.

It does not say two consecutive censuses. For instance, 1865 might be the mean between two censuses forty years apart. It seems to me it is an unfortunate expression, "the year which is the mean of two years on which the census is taken." I think it would be better to say a mean in the middle of a decade between two consecutive censuses.

Mr. COX, of New York. I see what the gentleman desires to accomplish, and I will arrange it after we get through with the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection, and the gentleman from New York will be allowed to make the change in the language as proposed.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 23. The Superintendent of Census, with the consent of the Secretary of the Interior, may, at any time, remove any supervisor of census, and fill any vacancy thereby caused or otherwise occurring; and the supervisor of census may, with the consent of the Superintendent of Census, remove any enumerator in his district, and fill the vacancy thereby caused or otherwise occurring; and in such cases but one compensation shall be allowed for the entire service, to be apportioned among the persons performing the same, in the discretion of the Superintendent of Census.

Mr. GARFIELD. It is necessary to make a change in the twenty-third section to make it conform with an amendment already adopted. Section 23, as it stands now, provides that the Superintendent of the Census, with the consent of the Secretary of the Interior, may at any time remove any supervisor of census. Now, as we have provided that the supervisors shall be appointed by the President, it will be necessary to say "with the consent of the President of the United States." I suggest, therefore, that the words "Secretary of the Interior" be stricken out and that the words "President of the United States" be inserted.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COX, of New York. I now offer, as an amendment to section 22, the following:

After the word "mean" strike out the words "of two years on which a census" and insert the words "between two decennial censuses."

Mr. GARFIELD. It was agreed that that verbal amendment should be made.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COX, of New York. I offer the following amendment to the twenty-third section:

In line 6 strike out "such" and insert "the;" so that it will read: "and fill the vacancy thereby caused."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COX, of New York. I move that the committee rise and report the bill.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I would suggest to the gentleman from New York that he allow this bill to be laid aside, and that we go on with other bills on the Calendar.

Mr. MILLS. Oh, no, let us pass this bill.

The motion that the committee rise was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. CARLISLE reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (S. No. 1685) to provide for taking the tenth census and subsequent censuses, and had directed him to report the same with sundry amendments.

Mr. COX, of New York. I move the previous question on the bill and amendments.

Mr. CARLISLE. Before the gentleman moves the previous question I ask him to allow me to offer an amendment. I desire to move to strike out from the amendment adopted as a substitute for section 4 of the bill these words:

And in case the United States Senate is not in session, then said supervisors shall be appointed by the President of the United States.

So that it will read:

The supervisors shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The Senate will be in session when these appointments are made. It will not be necessary to have the supervisors appointed before the 1st of March.

Mr. TUCKER. I hope those words will be stricken out.

Mr. GARFIELD. I suppose the words were offered to provide for the case of the occurrence of a vacancy. As a matter of fact, the time when this bill goes into operation will be when the Senate is here for the long session, but I do not think anything is lost by retaining those words.

Mr. TUCKER. I have no objection as regards the appointment to a vacancy, but this has reference to the original appointments.

Mr. HANNA. I would like to have the section read as it will be if the words indicated by the gentleman from Kentucky are stricken out.

The Clerk read as follows:

The supervisors shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. What is the proposition in regard to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. CARLISLE?]

Mr. CARLISLE. I desire to offer it now so that it may come under the operation of the previous question. I understand there is no objection to that.

Mr. GARFIELD. I do not think it is quite right in the absence of the gentleman who offered that amendment, the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. HALE,] that we should consent to those words going out.

The SPEAKER. The House can vote them out.

Mr. GARFIELD. I see the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] coming in.

Mr. BURCHARD. Suppose an appointment should be made and no confirmation should follow during the session of the Senate, would there be a power under the language now proposed, after the adjournment of the Senate, for the President to make an appointment?

Mr. TUCKER. The Constitution authorizes the President of the United States to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate.

Mr. BURCHARD. But then there is a question relating to the payment of the officer. I reported a bill during this session to authorize the payment of officers whose confirmation failed.

Mr. TUCKER. I think there will be no difficulty about that. The person appointed, as long as he is in office under the appointment of the President to fill a vacancy, would be entitled to his pay.

Mr. HALE. It will do no harm to have the amendment which I offered in Committee of the Whole go in, and I do not consent that it shall go out.

Mr. MILLS. If the President of the United States sends a nomination to the Senate and the Senate refuses to confirm, then the President makes another nomination.

Mr. BURCHARD. But if the Senate adjourns, what then?

Mr. HALE. It will certainly do no harm to retain the words.

Mr. TUCKER. It will do this harm, that the original appointments ought to be made by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and by retaining those words he may make the appointments without the advice and consent of the Senate.

Mr. HALE. If, when the appointments are made, the Senate is in session, then they require to be confirmed by the Senate. But if anything happens so that the Senate is not in session then the words which the gentleman from Kentucky proposes to strike out will authorize the President to appoint.

Mr. KEIFER. Suppose the Senate has adjourned until the next regular session, and the duties of the supervisors have all to be performed in the interval between the two sessions. The question is, can the President, under the provisions of this bill with this amendment stricken out, appoint in that case an officer all whose functions are to be performed within the interval; so that when the Senate again meets the officer has performed all his duties and his term of office has expired. May not that happen in the carrying out of this law?

Mr. TUCKER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] will remember that the only interval we will have will be from the 4th of March of this year to next December, and during that time there will be no duties of supervisors to be performed. What we want to secure is that the original power of appointment shall be in the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Mr. CARLISLE. I insist on my amendment.

Mr. COX, of New York. I demand the previous question on the bill and amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] permits the amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. CARLISLE,] to strike out the words which have been read, to be offered, and demands the previous question on the bill and amendments.

Mr. COX, of New York. I do.

The previous question was seconded and the main question ordered.

The SPEAKER. There have been various amendments made by the committee; and if there be no objection the Chair will submit the question in gross on all those on which separate votes are not asked.

Mr. HANNA. Do I understand the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] consents that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] may offer the amendment which has been read?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York did consent; otherwise it could not be admitted.

Mr. FORT. Has the gentleman from New York the sole power of accepting an amendment in that way?

Mr. HANNA. I would like to have the action of the House upon that.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman's right; he can demand a separate vote on the amendment.

Mr. HANNA. I do.

Mr. COX, of New York. I have no objection to that.

Mr. WARD. I ask for a separate vote on the amendment on page 14, in section 17, lines 36 and 37.

Mr. COX, of New York. I do not think the gentleman can demand a separate vote on a motion to strike out.

The SPEAKER. Oh, yes; any member in the House has a right to ask a separate vote on any amendment reported by the committee.

The question was taken on the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union with the exception of those upon which a separate vote was asked; and they were agreed to.

The first amendment upon which a separate vote was asked by Mr. WARD was on page 14, lines 36 and 37, as follows:

And of the ownership of the public debt of the United States, by whom owned and the respective amounts.

The question was taken; and the amendment was agreed to.

The question recurred upon the amendment offered in the House by Mr. CARLISLE, to strike out from the amendment reported by the committee the following words:

And in case the United States Senate is not in session, then said supervisors shall be appointed by the President of the United States.

Mr. HALE. What is the effect of the amendment?

The SPEAKER. Those who desire the lines which have been read to be stricken out will vote "ay;" and those who desire that they be retained will vote "no."

The question was taken on Mr. CARLISLE's amendment; and on a division there were—ayes 96, noes 85.

Mr. HALE. I call for the yeas and nays on that amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 129, nays 115, not voting 46; as follows:

YEAS—129.

Aiken,	Cullerson,	Hooker,	Ross,
Atkins,	Cutler,	House,	Saylor,
Banning,	Davidson,	Hunton,	Scales,
Beale,	Davis, Joseph J.,	Jones, Frank,	Shelley,
Bell,	Dibrell,	Kenna,	Singleton,
Benedict,	Dickey,	Kimmel,	Slemmons,
Bicknell,	Durham,	Knapp,	Smith, William E.,
Blackburn,	Eden,	Knott,	Southard,
Bliss,	Eickhoff,	Landers,	Sparks,
Blount,	Elam,	Ligon,	Steele,
Boone,	Evins, John H.,	Lockwood,	Stenger,
Bouck,	Ewing,	Luttrell,	Throckmorton,
Bragg,	Finley, Ebenezer B.,	Lynde,	Townsend, R. W.,
Bridges,	Finley, Jesse J.,	Maish,	Tucker,
Bright,	Fleming,	Manning,	Turney,
Buckner,	Forney,	Martin,	Vanco,
Cabell,	Fuller,	McKenzie,	Waddell,
Caldwell, J. W.,	Garth,	McMahon,	Warner,
Caldwell, W. P.,	Gause,	Mills,	Whitthorne,
Candler,	Gibson,	Money,	Wigginton,
Carlisle,	Giddings,	Morgan,	Williams, James,
Chalmers,	Goode,	Morrison,	Williams, Jero N.,
Clark, Alvah A.,	Gunter,	Morse,	Willis, Albert S.,
Clarke of Kentucky,	Hamilton,	Muldrow,	Willis, Benj. A.,
Clark of Missouri,	Hardenbergh,	Muller,	Wilson,
Clymer,	Harris, Henry R.,	Phelps,	Wood,
Cobb,	Harris, John T.,	Pridemore,	Wright,
Collins,	Harrison,	Rea,	Yeates,
Cook,	Hartzell,	Reagan,	Young, Casey,
Covert,	Hatcher,	Rice, Americus V.,	Young, John S.,
Cox, Samuel S.,	Henry,	Robbins,
Cravens,	Herbert,	Roberts,
Crittenden,	Hewitt, G. W.,	Robertson,

NAYS—115.

Aldrich,	Davis, Horace,	Keifer,	Rice, William W.,
Bagley,	Deering,	Keightley,	Robinson, G. D.,
Bailey,	Denison,	Kelley,	Robinson, M. S.,
Baker, John H.,	Dunnell,	Ketcham,	Sampson,
Ballou,	Dwight,	Killinger,	Sapp,
Blair,	Eames,	Lapham,	Sexton,
Boyd,	Ellsworth,	Lathrop,	Sinnickson,
Brentano,	Evans, I. Newton,	Lindsey,	Smalls,
Brewer,	Evans, James L.,	Majors,	Smith, A. Herr,
Briggs,	Fort,	Marsh,	Starin,
Brogden,	Foster,	McCook,	Stewart,
Browne,	Frye,	McKinley,	Stone, John W.,
Burchard,	Gardner,	Mitchell,	Stone, Joseph C.,
Burdick,	Garfield,	Monroe,	Strait,
Butler,	Hale,	Neal,	Thompson,
Cain,	Hanna,	Norcross,	Tipton,
Calkins,	Harmer,	Oliver,	Townsend, Amos,
Camp,	Harris, Benj. W.,	O'Neill,	Townsend, M. I.,
Campbell,	Haskell,	Overton,	Van Vorhes,
Cannon,	Hayes,	Patterson, G. W.,	Wait,
Caswell,	Hendee,	Peddie,	Ward,
Chittenden,	Hiscock,	Phillips,	Watson,
Clark, Rush,	Humphrey,	Pollard,	White, Michael D.,
Cole,	Hungerford,	Powers,	Williams, Andrew,
Conger,	Hunter,	Price,	Williams, C. G.,
Cox, Jacob D.,	Ittner,	Pugh,	Williams, Richard,
Crapo,	James,	Rainey,	Willits,
Cummings,	Jones, John S.,	Randolph,	Wren,
Danford,	Joyce,	Reed,

NOT VOTING—46.

Acklen,	Felton,	Loring,	Shallenberger,
Bacon,	Franklin,	Mackey,	Springer,
Baker, William H.,	Freeman,	Mayham,	Stephens,
Banks,	Glover,	McGowan,	Swann,
Bayne,	Hart,	Metcalfe,	Thornburgh,
Beebe,	Hazelton,	Page,	Turner,
Bland,	Henderson,	Patterson, T. M.,	Veeder,
Bundy,	Henkle,	Potter,	Walker,
Clafin,	Hewitt, Abram S.,	Pound,	Walsh,
Dean,	Hubbell,	Reilly,	White, Harry,
Ellis,	Jones, James T.,	Riddle,
Errett,	Jorgensen,	Ryan,

So the amendment was agreed to.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. REILLY. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. SHALLENBERGER. If he were present, he would vote "no" and I should vote "ay."

Mr. RYAN. I am paired with Mr. FRANKLIN.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. BEEBE. If he were present, I should vote "no."

Mr. METCALFE. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. BLAND.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. I am paired with Mr. ERRETT. If he were present, he would vote "no" and I should vote "ay."

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. COX, of New York, moved to reconsider the votes by which the various amendments were agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. COX, of New York. I move the previous question on the passage of the bill.

The previous question was seconded and the main question ordered; and under the operation thereof the bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. COX, of New York, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A joint resolution (S. No. 63) accepting from Professor Edward Fontaine, of Louisiana, certain maps, drawings, and explanations of the same.

The message further announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to the internal revenue.

BILLS BECAME LAWS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his clerks, announced that the President had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

An act (H. R. No. 1582) to create the northern judicial district of the State of Texas, and to change the eastern and western judicial districts of said State, and to fix the time and places of holding courts in said district;

An act (H. R. No. 4779) donating to the board of education of school district No. 1, Arapahoe County, Colorado, block numbered 143, in the east division of the city of Denver, Colorado, for common-school purposes;

An act (H. R. No. 5217) to fix the pay of letter-carriers;

An act (H. R. No. 5477) to authorize the issue of certificates of deposit in aid of the refunding of the public debt; and

An act (H. R. No. 6464) for the relief of the Louise Home, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. HEWITT, of New York, Mr. SPARKS, and Mr. FOSTER as the conferees on the part of the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. No. 6145) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I call for the morning hour.

Mr. ROBBINS. I believe I am entitled now to call up the bill for the regulation of the duties on sugar.

Mr. FINLEY, of Ohio. I desire to raise the question of consideration, in order that we may have a morning hour.

Mr. ROBBINS. Under the order of the House I have a right to call it up immediately after the reading of the Journal, and it is a special order from day to day, until disposed of. I hope the gentleman from Ohio will not antagonize me in doing so.

Mr. FINLEY, of Ohio. We were told that we should have a morning hour after the census bill was disposed of.

The SPEAKER. The order of the House will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ROBBINS moved that the rules be suspended so as to enable him to report from the Committee of Ways and Means and the House to pass the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee of Ways and Means have leave to report the bill (H. R. No. 6134) entitled "A bill to regulate the duties on sugar" on Thursday, the 15th instant, immediately after the reading of the Journal, and that said bill be set for consideration in the House as in Committee of the Whole on said day immediately after it is reported as aforesaid and from day to day thereafter until disposed of, not to interfere with the regular appropriation bills; all such amendments to be in order and such only as relate to the subject of the tariff on sugar.

Mr. ROBBINS. And I have reported the bill under that order, so that it could be printed for the information of the House, and I now call it up.

Mr. FINLEY, of Ohio. The gentleman did not avail himself of the order.

The SPEAKER. Because he could not help himself. First, the appropriation bill was in the way, and then the census bill came up under a suspension of the rules and had the priority.

Mr. FINLEY, of Ohio. Can we not raise the question of consideration at this time, so as to have a morning hour?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks there should be some conclusion reached by the House so that a morning hour may be had.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I have insisted upon a morning hour, not for any one special bill, but for the general business of the House now before the committees and upon the Speaker's table.

Mr. HALE. I would inquire what good a morning hour would do in the last six days of the session?

The SPEAKER. It would do this good: it would enable the House at the expiration of the morning hour to go to business on the Speaker's table.

Mr. HALE. The House can do that at any time by a suspension of the rules.

The SPEAKER. Yes.

Mr. HALE. And a morning hour is of no use within the last six days of the session, because the whole of the time could be taken up by motions to suspend the rules. I have never known a morning hour during the last six days of the session, because it is of no account to committees.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. A single word. I believe that upon the regular call of committees within the last two months but two or three committees have been reached; in other words, we have had but two or three morning hours.

Mr. HALE. That is always so.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. And all business before the committees of the House is suspended, because while those committees are prepared to report to the House for action, there has been no morning hour during which to make such reports.

Mr. HALE. A morning hour will do no good.

Mr. ROBBINS. I have already been postponed for weeks and weeks, and now, when I am entitled to the floor, I hope the morning hour will not be brought in to prevent the House from considering the bill of which I have charge.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. The Committee of Ways and Means have had an opportunity to report, and other committees have had no opportunity whatever.

Mr. BURCHARD. At this time a motion to suspend the rules would be in order, and suspension of the rules will be in order from now until the end of the session, and could take the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WHITTHORNE] off the floor even if we had a morning hour, were it not that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROBBINS] is in charge of a bill which under a suspension of the rules has been made the regular order for consideration at this time; so that even a motion to suspend the rules could not interfere with that.

The SPEAKER. You cannot pile one motion to suspend the rules on top of another, of course.

Mr. BURCHARD. Very well, until that matter is disposed of no other business can be in order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROBBINS] to call up his bill. But the Chair really thinks it is proper for him to say to the House that there ought to be a morning hour so that business on the Speaker's table can be reached.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Can I not test the sense of the majority of the House, so that they can determine what they will do with their business?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the proposition of the gentleman from North Carolina, [Mr. ROBBINS], being under a suspension of the rules, must now be considered. When that matter is disposed of the Chair will then test the sense of the House as to a morning hour.

Mr. BURCHARD. And the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WHITTHORNE] has no right to antagonize the bill of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROBBINS] without the consent of that gentleman.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not admitted the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BURCHARD. And even if the gentleman from Tennessee should make the motion, a motion to suspend the rules would be in order.

Mr. HALE. Of course.

Mr. BURCHARD. Gentlemen on this side of the House will insist upon their right to move a suspension of the rules.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that when this and other orders were agreed to by consent (which was equivalent to a suspension of the rules) the right to raise the question of consideration was expressly reserved by me, and the Chair recognized that that right should be reserved.

The SPEAKER. But that was not done, the Chair thinks, as to this bill.

Mr. CONGER. As to this very bill; that was insisted upon.

The SPEAKER. The question on making this bill a special order was taken by yeas and nays.

Mr. CONGER. That may have been so. I thought it was by the agreement of the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina, [Mr. ROBBINS.]

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I wish to inquire whether it would not be in order now to postpone the bill with which the gentleman from North Carolina wishes to proceed, for the purpose of considering the bill to grant pensions to soldiers of the Mexican war.

The SPEAKER. That bill is in Committee of the Whole, and the House can go into committee by a majority vote.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. Can the House go into Committee of the Whole now?

The SPEAKER. That motion is not in order now, because the rules have been suspended by a two-third vote, and the House has determined to consider the bill to regulate the duties on sugar.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. The bill granting pensions to the soldiers of the Mexican war was reported from the committee in the early part of last session, and has been on the Calendar from that day till now. I think it just to the old soldiers of that war that this House should give their case fair consideration. I hope the House will refuse to go on with the sugar bill till we have considered the claims of these old defenders.

The SPEAKER. The House can very readily dispose of the sugar bill, if it wishes to do so, by laying it on the table.

Mr. ROBBINS. Mr. Speaker, the Earl of Chatham, on a certain occasion—

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I desire to know whether it is competent for the House to postpone the consideration of this tariff bill.

Mr. ROBBINS. Mr. Speaker, is there a chance for me to get a hearing?

The SPEAKER. The House by a two-third vote on yeas and nays fixed this bill as a special order; and it is not competent for the House to avoid its consideration except by laying the bill on the table.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I move to lay the bill on the table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has not the floor for that purpose.

Mr. ROBBINS. I decline to yield. I had the floor and had begun my remarks.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I desire to know whether the gentleman proposes to antagonize and defeat the bill pensioning the soldiers of the Mexican war.

DUTIES ON SUGAR.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROBBINS] is entitled to the floor, but before he proceeds the Chair will cause the bill to be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. No. 6134) to regulate the duties on sugar.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That tank-bottoms, sirups of sugar-cane juice, melado, concentrated melado, concentrated molasses, and all sugars not above No. 13, Dutch standard in color, shall pay a duty of two cents and forty hundredths of a cent per pound; above No. 13 and not above No. 16, Dutch standard in color, shall pay a duty of two cents and seventy-five hundredths of a cent per pound; all above No. 16, Dutch standard in color shall pay a duty of four cents per pound: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to alter or repeal the act entitled "An act to carry into effect a convention between the United States of America and His Majesty the King of the Hawaiian Islands, signed on the 30th day of January, 1875," which act was approved August 15, 1876.

Mr. ROBBINS. Mr. Speaker, the Earl of Chatham on a certain occasion in the House of Lords is said to have used the word sugar in a connection which made it seem ludicrous, and a ripple of merriment ran through the house. The earl's pride was touched, and, pausing a moment, he repeated the word in such an imperious manner that his auditors were instantly hushed into respectful silence. But when once again, in his loftiest and most majestic style, he reiterated "sugar, my lords," the peers were completely overawed and sat arrectis auribus in an attitude of the profoundest reverence and attention. I used to think all this was due to the imposing presence and marvelous power of that great man; but recent study and observation have led me to change this opinion. I think now it was not the speaker but the subject which produced such a surprising impression. The House of Lords were overawed by sugar and not by Chatham!

Sugar! We all know how interesting a thing sugar is to the little folks and how they beg for a lump when their mothers go to the side-board. But I have lately found that sugar is a subject of very great interest to grown-up men also. Magnates, millionaires, editors, pamphleteers, great corporations, powerful rings, domestic and foreign ministers,—all these I find "take sugar in their." The commercial and industrial interests of mighty nations are deeply concerned. "There's millions in it." Every day when it is supposed that the question of sugar may come up here our desks are loaded with documents, memorials, arguments, remonstrances, petitions, telegrams, relating to sugar and showing the profound feeling which exists in the bosoms of sundry persons interested in it. But I am bound to say that, so far as I can see, the parties who besiege our eyes and our ears so persistently and importunately with their representations and memorials on this question all seem to be governed by the boy instinct; and when you boil down and crystallize all they print and all they say, it simply means, "Give us a lump."

In this connection I want to call the attention of the House to one or two considerations which ought not to be overlooked. The concentrated efforts which are put forth so opportunely and so skillfully on every occasion when our sugar bill is likely to come up, either to prevent its consideration at all or to sway our judgments and influence our decision upon it, prove one thing conclusively. They prove that very powerful influences are at work behind the scenes, and that these influences and interests are in few hands, so that they can easily take counsel together and concert their plans. Telegrams arrive here, addressed to various gentlemen, from divers remote points, on the same morning, and couched in almost identical terms. These things point to a common origin. They indicate that somewhere in the dark, and behind the curtain, some giant monopoly, some selfish ring, with plenty of means and brains at command, is seeking either to obstruct all action here or to dictate what we shall do. All these are the old familiar devices of monopolists. The people are unskilled in their use. The millions of unsuspecting citizens, busy on their farms and in their shops, all over this broad land, know little of such means of influencing legislation. They confide in us. They are unheard here except as they are heard through us. I trust that we, the Representatives of the people, will see to it that their interests are not overlooked or neglected in whatever action we may take on this subject. In what we do I hope that we shall be moved by no unfriendly feeling or purpose toward any legitimate industry or business, whether it be in few or many hands; but while guarding as far as we may the special interests of the few, I trust we shall be swayed most by what appears to be the general interest of all; for it is to promote, not the special aggrandizement of individuals, but the general well-being of our whole forty-five millions of people, that the Government exists and has a right to levy taxes and imposts for its support.

It is conceded by almost everybody that the existing law fixing the duties on sugar urgently needs amendment. The Secretary of the Treasury informs us that by reason of defects in the law its true and original spirit and intent are evaded to such an extent that the Government annually loses several million dollars of the revenue which it is legitimately entitled to receive and which it was intended it should receive when this law was enacted; and he says, also, that it is impracticable to remedy this without some further legislation by Congress. The evil would not be so great if what the Treasury loses were gained to the people by a corresponding reduction of the cost of sugar to them—if their aggregate burden were thereby correspondingly lightened. But this is not the case, as I will show in the course of these remarks.

The evasion of the law is not and cannot be much practiced with reference to high grades of sugar. It is practiced almost entirely in connection with the lowest and darkest colored grades. The law as it now stands, being thus evaded, in effect discriminates so largely in favor of the dark-colored grades of sugar, which pay the lowest duty, that all who deal in the lighter colored grades, whether producers or importers or refiners, are pushed to the wall. The foreign producer who makes the darkest grades of this commodity, and a very small number of American sugar refiners who use these darkest grades in their refining business, are the only parties who derive benefit from the evasion of the law. They pocket the entire sum, which is lost to the Treasury. I shall speak presently of the effect of this on the business of making sugar abroad, and of the injury to ourselves which has resulted from the consequent changes in the sugar-growing countries in the processes of making sugar and in the character of the product they turn out for our market.

But with regard to the American refiners who use these dark grades of sugar in their business on which the true duty is thus systematically evaded, I may as well say now as at any time that though they are scarcely more than half a dozen in number they make through the operation of these causes millions of dollars every year, and are thereby becoming a mighty monopoly which defies rivalry or competition, crushes out other classes of refiners, is rapidly acquiring control of the whole sugar trade, and dealing out to consumers in the United States sugars good, bad, or indifferent, pure or adulterated, as it may choose, and at whatever prices it may see proper to exact. The people who buy sugar are at the mercy of these monopolists, delivered over bound hand and foot, and powerless against their extortions, because every rival interest which by competition might keep down the prices of this article is being undermined and driven out of the business.

A single statement will show how this is. Three years ago, when the law was put in its present shape, there were forty-two sugar refineries in this country. To-day there are but twenty-one; just half of them ruined and crushed out in three years. I am told, also, that some of these twenty-one which remain are struggling for existence, and that in a short time the number will be reduced still further, so that the entire business will pass into the hands of half a dozen or so powerful sugar-refining houses. One gentleman who was examined before the Committee of Ways and Means, a gentleman who is at the head of the most powerful refining-house in the country, and who declared that the American sugar-refining business was growing in importance and increasing its capital, was asked to explain this singular mortality among the refineries in the last three years. His reply, given rather hastily and inadvertently, so it seemed to me, was very significant, and told the whole story. Said he, "The big fish will swallow up the little ones." That is it exactly. In short, the most of those who are engaged in this American industry of refining sugar are being ruined. But while house after house goes down, and the laborers they employed are being turned out to starve, a few great monopolizing houses survive, and thrive on the ruin of their rivals, through the evasion of our law. And yet we are told that we must be cautious how we legislate lest we injure this great and growing American industry. Amid the wreck and ruin which is taking place in the more honest and legitimate branches of this business, such talk sounds to me like the mocking sneer of Mephistopheles.

Four distinguished gentlemen on the Committee of Ways and Means antagonize the bill which in obedience to instructions from the majority of the committee I have had the honor to report; but they will not, either of them, I believe, controvert what I have said about the defective state of the present law, its liability to evasion, and the great loss of revenue which results therefrom. Nor do I think any of them can deny what I have said about the tendency of the whole refining business to fall into a few hands and become a monopoly. Certainly the fact is incontrovertible that there are now only twenty-one refineries, while three years ago there were forty-two. However these gentlemen may differ from me in the deductions and observations I have been making, they will all agree that the law is imperfect and concur in the declaration that it is the imperative duty of Congress at this session to amend it. The only question is as to what should be the nature of the amendment.

An ad valorem tariff, in this as in perhaps every other case, is the most equitable and perfect in theory; and if it were possible to enforce it honestly in practice I should never be in favor of any other. But it is found to be utterly impracticable to frame a sugar tariff on the ad valorem principle in such a manner as will secure it against fraud and evasion. As a consideration which should have weight with those who are prepossessed in favor of this kind of a tariff, I point to the fact that the very evasions of the sugar duty from which the revenue is now suffering have principally become noticeable since we introduced, in part, the ad valorem feature into the law three years ago. The means are various by which the ad valorem tariff on sugar can be evaded. In some instances, importers make themselves partners in the foreign establishments which produce the sugar; in other cases, they enter into a fraudulent collusion with the foreign producer. But in whatever way it may be done, the result is that the invoices of prime cost abroad, on the basis of which the ad valorem duty must be levied, are put below the true and honest figure, without the possibility of detection, and the revenue suffers from continual frauds. It is not necessary to enlarge on this point. All may be said in one sentence: an ad valorem sugar tariff will work well when all men become honest; but unhappily that good time seems yet remote.

Since, therefore, we are obliged to resort to some form of specific duty, the question is narrowed down to this: what is the fairest and simplest method of classifying and distinguishing the several grades of sugar and of determining to what grade any hogshead or cargo imported belongs? And then this further but subordinate question: what duty shall be imposed upon each of these grades thus determined? The aim all the while being so to classify and grade the different kinds of sugars and so to fix the rate of duty on each grade that, to a reasonable extent and so far as may be practicable, the ad valorem principle shall be approximated, each grade of sugars paying a duty as nearly as possible proportioned to its value.

On what does the value of sugar depend? The answer is that up to No. 13, Dutch standard in color, the value depends solely on its richness in saccharine material, or, in other words, on the amount of pure sugar which can be extracted from it by refining. All the grades below No. 13 are what is called refiners' sugars, and are so dark-colored and impure that none of them are fit to enter directly into consumption by the people without being first refined.

Above the grade of No. 13, Dutch standard, up to No. 16 are what are called grocers' sugars, which are sufficiently light-colored to be capable of going at once to the consumer without passing through the refining process. In these grades of sugar lightness of color becomes an element of value as well as their saccharine strength.

Above No. 16 come the various grades of what may be properly termed refined sugars. They are of different degrees of whiteness; but when not artificially adulterated they are all approximately pure, containing very nearly 100 per cent. of saccharine matter, and their value depends, it may be said, solely on their whiteness of color and on their form, that is, whether they are ordinary crystallized sugars simply, or lump, or loaf, or crushed, or powdered.

Here, then, we have three reasonably well-defined and distinct classes, to one or the other of which every kind of sugar is assignable. The first class derives its value from its saccharine strength alone; the second class, from its strength and color combined; the third class, from its color and form alone. The first are refiners' sugars; the second, grocers' or coffee sugars; the third, refined sugars. After giving the most earnest thought and study to this subject that I am capable of, I can see no better system of classification than this. It is, of course, not absolutely perfect, for some few so-called refined sugars, for instance, may not grade as high as No. 16, and some grocers' sugars may go above No. 16. But for practical use and easy application in this vast sugar trade, the majority of the committee believe that no better system of grading can be devised, and have therefore brought in their bill, which adopts this simple plan, rates all sugars as of one or the other of these three classes, and imposes a duty on each class bearing at least some approximate relation to the value of the sugars in each class.

Before going further it may be useful for me to explain to those who have not had an opportunity to examine this subject what is meant by that expression "the Dutch standard of color." I have procured and have here on my desk a complete series of the various numbers and grades of sugar according to this standard, which gentlemen can examine for themselves. It is a method of grading sugars solely according to their color, and it takes its name from the fact that it was first devised and used by the Dutch, formerly the most extensive traders in this commodity. It is based upon the chemical fact that perfectly pure sugar is white, and upon the further idea—which was nearly true, also, in their day and in reference to the sugars they dealt in, but is far from being true now on account of the changed processes of making this article—that in whatever degree sugar falls below whiteness of color in the same degree it deteriorates in saccharine strength and purity. The coloring material, it was judged, was so much impurity, and the more there was of this impurity the darker would be the sugar. Color alone was thus established as the measure of purity and consequent value.

When the Dutch adopted this color-test it was reasonably accurate, as I have said, as applied to the sugars with which they were acquainted; for those sugars were made by old-fashioned processes, simple and uniform in their operation; and the recent artful methods of disguising really strong sugar under a dark color were then unknown. Moreover, as light-colored sugar was more valuable, the producer had no motive as he has now under our tariff to color his sugars down. So the color-test was a pretty correct test, then; and it still remains tolerably correct in regard to raw sugars of the lighter-colored grades from No. 13 upward. But the Dutch standard will not do as a test of saccharine strength in the lower grades of sugars as they are now made.

The reason for this lies in the fact that by artificial devices in sugar-making it is perfectly practicable to give a very dark color to sugar which is really very rich and of high percentage in saccharine strength, and which would have a much lighter color if not interfered with in the making. And the dark color can be secured, too, without introducing any substance not already in the cane-juice. Suppose, for instance, you are boiling your juice down in the old simple way in kettles. Just about the time the boiling is finished and the juice is sufficiently concentrated for crystallization to begin you push the fire for a few moments and burn a very small quantity of the sugar into what is named "caramel." Do gentlemen know what caramel is? It is simply burnt sugar. It is the same thing, I am told, which is employed to give an amber tint to whisky. When freely used in a solution of whisky it is said to have a powerful coloring effect even upon a man's nose. A very small quantity of this caramel, produced by overheating the cane-juice just as the boiling is finished, will give a dark color to a very large quantity of sugar. In this way the sugar-maker, at a perfectly trifling cost, can color down his product without affecting sensibly the percentage of real sugar in it. In like manner, when the sugar is made by the vacuum-pan process, it is easy to color it very dark with caramel, and at the same time leave the product of a high percentage in saccharine matter.

But the cheapest and most convenient way, perhaps, to make dark-colored sugars of a really high grade in strength is through the "centrifugal" process, as it is called. This process of making sugar consists in placing the previously somewhat concentrated cane-juice in cylinders whose sides are perforated with an infinitude of small holes, and then making these cylinders—called "centrifugals"—revolve rapidly. You do not have to wait for the slow influence of evaporation to rid you of the superfluous liquid. You sling it out quickly through the little orifices in the sides of the centrifugals in the form of molasses, and you leave the sugar crystals within. Now such is the practical operation of this process that the color of the sugar produced depends upon the rapidity with which the centrifugals are made to revolve. If they revolve fifteen hundred times a minute, the molasses is thrown out quickly and a light-colored sugar is left. But if they revolve only seven hundred times a minute, the molasses oozes out more slowly and coats the sugar crystals as they form with the dark hue of the molasses which adheres to their outside; and thus the sugar produced is of a dark color, and of a low grade when tried by the color standard, while yet it may be of a very high grade in real purity and saccharine strength.

If I have been fortunate enough to make these things clear, gentlemen can easily understand how our present sugar-tariff law is evaded in its true spirit and intent. Our law adopts the Dutch standard of color, even as low down as No. 7, as the basis of classifying sugars. The duty imposed on melada, and sugars not over No. 7, is $2.19 per 100 pounds; on sugars above No. 7 and not over No. 10, $2.50 per 100 pounds; on sugars above No. 10 and not over No. 13, $2.81 per 100 pounds. Now by making them of a very dark color, through the means I have just described, sugars, of which the real strength and purity would equal those of No. 12, (say,) and which our law meant should pay $2.81 per 100 pounds, are graded down perhaps below No. 7 by their color, and pay $2.19 per 100. This is systematically done by sugar producers abroad. They have changed their style of sugar-making so as to color their product down. Our law has caused this; for it virtually offers a premium in the shape of lower duties for the dark-colored grades whatever their strength. It is only just to all parties for me to say here—and I say it on my own responsibility for the benefit of those importers who have been in difficulties with the Government about this business—that this making and bringing in of dark sugars is not properly a "fraud;" it is at most only an evasion of the true intent of the law. But the letter of the law permits it. If your tariff on imported animals should discriminate in favor of mules as against horses, it would not be fraud to raise and import mules in preference. So the law in effect favors dark sugars, and dark sugars are therefore made and sent to this country. It is the defect of the law which invites this.

The consequence is that the importation of higher grades is rapidly diminishing and that of the low grades increasing.

Let me give a few statistics on this point. I will not bore you with too many figures. In 1876 our entire sugar imports amounted to 1,561,000,000 pounds in round numbers. In 1878 it was 1,552,000,000 pounds—a falling off of 9,000,000 pounds in two years. I mention this incidentally to show that our aggregate sugar trade is not increasing, as some contend, under the present law favoring low-grade importations. But in 1876 our import of sugars under No. 7 in color was 534,000,000 pounds, while in 1878 it was 860,000,000 pounds, an increase of 324,000,000 pounds of this low grade. In 1876 the import of sugars over No. 7 and not over No. 10 was 860,000,000 pounds; in 1878 it was 618,000,000 pounds, a falling off of 251,000,000 pounds. Of sugars from No. 10 to No. 13 we imported in 1876 150,000,000 pounds; in 1878, only 72,000,000 pounds—not half as much. Of sugars from No. 13 to 16 in 1876 we imported 6,000,000 pounds; in 1878, only 1,000,000 pounds. On grades above 16 the import is trifling, and becoming still more so. These figures are taken from official reports. They speak for themselves. They show a small decrease in the whole trade, but they show that our commerce in all grades above No. 7 is rapidly running down, and that above No. 10 it is already very limited.

But the most startling fact of all is that our sugar imports in 1876 cost us only $63,860,713, and in 1878 they cost us $78,986,070; that is, we got less sugar and of lower grade, but we paid $15,000,000 more for it. These fifteen millions are the premium we pay the foreigner for making and sending to us bad sugar, our law as now standing and now evaded discriminating so in favor of the lowest grade that the foreign producer can actually secure a higher price for it than for better grades.

Can it be possible that there is a man in the United States interested in maintaining a sugar tariff at all akin to this which makes the American people pay so much more money for so much less sugar and of so much worse quality? Yes; there are about a half dozen men so interested. Who are they and how so interested? They are a small squad of sugar-refining monopolists who refine these low-grade sugars, and who by excluding the better grades make their monopoly impregnable. To accomplish this they can afford to pay the foreigner his high price for low grades, because, being monopolists of the trade, thereby, they can exact out of the American people in turn more than enough to reimburse themselves. The foreigner thrives; the monopolist grows richer than a prince, but forty-five millions of people must pay dearer for every lump of sugar they put in their coffee and tea, or give to their children.

There is but one way to stop this great wrong. It is to levy one rate of duty on all sugars up to No. 13. This our bill does, and it proposes to put the duty at $2.40 per 100 pounds. This is not exorbitant, and in fact is no increase over the present rate in the aggregate, but rather less. Now the three classes below No. 13, classes which are really indistinguishable in saccharine strength and true value, and whose differences in color in fact mean nothing, pay a duty respectively of $2.19, $2.50, and $2.81, per hundred. The proposed rate of $2.40 falls below two of these, and only exceeds the lowest of them by 21 cents on the 100 pounds. Adopt this and you stop the evasion of the law; you secure to the Treasury the millions now lost through this evasion and, better than all, you give the people cheaper and better sugar. And in doing all this you injure nobody. You do not hurt the legitimate sugar-refining industry. I have in my possession letters from a majority of the refiners, urging the passage of the bill. The half dozen refiners who oppose and are making desperate efforts to defeat it do so because it threatens to break down their monopoly. I submit to the House whether their selfish outcry ought to deter us from marching forward promptly to accomplish an object which will benefit everybody else in America except six men, and will only restrain their grasping avarice within the bounds of reason.

The color test, while it is, as I think I have shown, practically worthless as to the grades below No. 13, remains the best test we can resort to in the higher grades. No. 13, Dutch standard, marks the broad line of distinction in raw sugars between those which must be refined before they are fit for use and those which are of sufficient purity and whiteness to enter at once into consumption without further refining. The raw sugars between Nos. 13 and 16, which are sometimes called "grocers' sugars," are not easily capable of being counterfeited in the process of making. Color has now entered into them as an element of value itself in part, but not enough so to make it an inducement to a foreign sugar-maker to color up a poorer article so as to bring it above No. 13, when it would have to pay a higher duty. Of course nobody would care to color down a sugar above No. 16 when high color is so valuable and bring it below No. 16, thereby decreasing the value of his product; and if he did, it would not hurt anybody but himself. Color, therefore, in the high grades is a reasonably fair and correct index of the real quality and strength of the sugar. Our bill relies upon the color test as to these grades. The proposed duty on them is $2.75 per 100 pounds. The existing duty on them is $3.44. It will be seen that we propose here a very considerable reduction in the duty, and I will give some of the reasons for this.

The present duty on these grades is so high as to be nearly prohibitory. In 1876 our import of them was the insignificant quantity of 6,127,732 pounds, in 1877 it fell to 4,536,195 pounds, and in 1878 to 1,474,118 pounds, showing that the trade in this class of sugars is nearly extinct by the operation of the present law. You can only revive it by reducing the duty on these sugars, and thus making it more equitable as compared with the duty on lower grades.

Again, by lightening the duty and thus admitting more of these grocery sugars which can be used without refining, you promote the commerce of those of our ports where there are no sugar refineries. The present sugar tariff not only gives a monopoly of the sugar business to a few refiners, but it also secures a monopoly of the import trade in this commodity to a few large ports where the refineries exist. Formerly sugar entered the country at the various ports of Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware, Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, and Alabama. Now, not a pound of sugar, I believe, comes to any of these ports, certainly not to those south of Baltimore, and even the sugar trade of Baltimore is dying out. The entire trade has fallen into the hands of the three great sugar-refining cities of Boston, New York, and Philadelphia. It is not unnatural, therefore, that the three distinguished gentlemen on the Committee of Ways and Means who represent those three cities are strenuous opponents of the pending bill. I am happy to know that the no less distinguished gentleman from New York who sits in front of me, [Mr. Cox,] faithful and true as he always is to his immediate constituents, but nevertheless willing to "live and let live," views this subject like a statesman. He believes, doubtless, that New York is powerful enough to take care of herself without the aid of legislation to protect her from the rivalry of the small ports. He is willing to give the rest of us a chance to get a little "sugar in ourn," and so he favors the bill; for which I thank him.

Another reason for lowering the duty on grocery sugars and allowing them to come in more freely is that this will operate as a partial check at least on what threatens to become a monstrous evil, namely, the adulteration of sugar by the refiners. From evidence laid before the committee there is reason to believe that the lower grades of refined sugars so-called are extensively adulterated with glucose and other substances. Glucose is a faintly sweetish extract from corn. It is now constantly employed in its liquid form to mix with cane sirups, being cheaper because easily made and of little intrinsic value. I see in a late number of the New York Grocer an advertisement which throws light on this subject, and I therefore insert it:

SIRUPS.

The introduction of glucose in the manufacture of cane sirup has been the means of placing before the public a greater variety of shades and styles of this sweet than has ever been known before. The trade are aware that the light shades in sirup are generally produced by the admixture of glucose, which is a harmless sweet extracted from corn, and this business has been brought to such perfection that retailers can now suit the most fastidious taste of the consumer, both in color and flavor, and at the same time sell at a much lower price than formerly. Orders addressed directly to us, or through agents, will be filled to the satisfaction of the dealer, who may rely upon our judgment, as we will handle no goods but what are perfectly healthful and reliable. We recommend our different brands quoted in column 1 as being entirely free from any injurious ingredient, and if desired will repack in smaller quantities for the accommodation of small dealers at a slight advance over barrel price.

Very respectfully,

FRANCIS H. LEGGETT & CO.

This glucose when evaporated to dryness becomes a kind of starch, very much resembling sugar in appearance but very inferior in sweetness. By the way, if I may digress a little, it is a curious fact in organic chemistry that starch and sugar, different as they are in quality, are composed of the very same four elements—oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen, and carbon—in precisely the same proportions, so that the difference in them arises solely from their atomic arrangement. I can illustrate this. Suppose a bevy of four persons, two boys and two girls, sitting in the parlor. Seat the two boys side by side and the two girls side by side, this is starch. But seat each boy by the side of a girl, (everybody can see this is much sweeter,) this is sugar. The elements are identical, but the arrangement is different. But reconnais à nos moutons. Some of the sugar refiners, it is said, use a great deal of glucose, and with it and the dark-colored raw sugars before mentioned turn out a low grade of so-called refined sugar, rating in color about No. 14 or 15, Dutch standard, but very poor in saccharine strength. This adulterated and comparatively worthless product they send into the country and impose upon the unsuspecting humble citizen who, in his frugality, contents himself with sugar of a medium color. It is a base fraud. The way to stop it is to pass the pending bill and let in grocery sugars above No. 13, Dutch standard, which the people can use if driven to it and thus protect themselves from imposition by dishonest and adulterating refiners.

Mr. ROBERTS. I would like to ask the gentleman whether No. 16 would not subserve the interests of the consumers of this country to a very much greater extent than No. 13?

Mr. ROBBINS. I will answer by saying that in some points of view No. 16, as a single line of division between the higher and the lower classes of sugar, might be preferable, but the adoption of that line alone would perhaps work a little unfairly to our refining industry; it would be a little too hard to cut down and obliterate all the lower grades in that way. While I might personally be willing to favor No. 16, I think to reconcile all the interests, to do no injury to any legitimate interest, the grades we have adopted in our bill are the fairest. Special interests would be promoted by adopting other grades. I myself do not represent special interests, whether sugar-makers or sugar refiners. I represent the people; I speak for them and for the general interest. I have not a cent's worth of personal interest in the subject in any way, shape, or form. I desire to establish a law that will benefit all and hurt nobody.

Mr. ROBERTS. Let me ask this further question: have not the refiners themselves clearly intimated the important fact that they stand to-day possessed of such facilities that they require no protection whatever, but are willing to compete with the world and can do it successfully?

Mr. ROBBINS. Some of them have said that. But what the refiners want most, as I see it, is to be protected from one another; and that is what our bill aims at—that this sugar interest may not fall into a few hands, which would certainly raise the price of sugar to consumers. I do not want to legislate for a few men or a few special classes. I want to legislate for the American people and for the advancement of the country's interests, commercial, industrial, and every other; and at the same time protect consumers against the oppression and extortion which must result from a monopoly.

Besides glucose, other adulterants are said to be used, such, for instance, as muriate of tin, alum, &c. The first named being a deadly poison which gives whiteness to sugar by greatly improving its color and making it more marketable vastly increases the refiner's profits, with trifling cost. I have here on my desk some specimen lumps of white sugar which do not taste sweet till you have eaten the tin off the crystals. Gentlemen can help themselves to it. I have had enough. The public health demands that we stop, so far as we can, the adulteration of an article of such universal use. As an additional significant circumstance I mention the fact that since this House has been agitating this question of amending the sugar tariff in a way that tends to stop adulteration of sugars, the price of glucose has fallen very much; but if the monopolists shall succeed in staying off a vote on our bill and thus defeat it, I have no doubt the price of glucose will go up again.

On all grades of sugar above No. 16 the bill of the committee imposes a duty of $4 per one hundred pounds. The existing rate is $4.06 up to No. 20, and $5 above that. It will be seen that we propose some, but no great, reduction on these highest grades, which are denominated "refined sugars." The duty now imposed on this class of sugars is nearly prohibitory. We imported of them in 1878 only 777,362 pounds. The duty on these sugars proposed in the pending bill will also be substantially prohibitory. This much, in a spirit of compromise, we leave untouched for the benefit of the American sugar-refining industry, and surely it ought to be content with this. We hereby shut out the competition of foreign refiners, and secure to our own the exclusive control of the domestic market in really refined sugars. It is a great boon; in reason and decency they cannot ask more.

To sum up the argument in favor of the bill, it will, if made a law, save millions each year to the Treasury, break down the sugar monopoly, foster the legitimate refining interest, check adulteration of sugar, enlarge our commerce, give the smaller ports a share of the sugar trade, stop the payment of a premium to foreigners for a bad article, and secure to the American people cheaper and purer sugar; in short, it will benefit everybody and hurt nobody, unless it be an injury to put down deceit and extortion and wrest from Shylock his pound of flesh.

A few words now upon the antagonistic propositions of the gentlemen who oppose the bill and I have done. The first is the substitute of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. GARFIELD,] which proposes to retain the test of color even down to the lowest grades, but provides that "any sugars not above No. 10, Dutch standard in color, which shall contain over 92 per cent. of crystallizable sugar shall pay the duty now chargeable on sugar above No. 10 and not above No. 13, Dutch standard in color; and the per cent. of crystallizable sugar shall be ascertained by the polariscope or such other means as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury."

This obviously concedes what I have said about the untrustworthiness of the color test in the darker grades of sugar, for it looks to the use of some other test; and still it proposes to continue also the color test as to them. One objection which of itself ought to be fatal to this proposition is that it would establish two tests inconsistent in character and entirely different in the results they might give for the same sugars. Who is to say in any given case which of these two tests is to be applied—the color test or the percentage test? A hog-head or a cargo comes in rating somewhere below No. 10 in color; shall it in any case be permitted to pass the custom-house on paying the duty chargeable according to color only, or shall all these sugars be tested by the polariscope or other prescribed means so as to find their percentage?

If the latter is done and you do not rely in any case upon the color test as to these sugars, but always resort to the percentage test, what possible good can there be in continuing the color test at all for the dark sugars? After having tested them for percentage of sugar strength why not levy your duty solely according to that percentage and say no more about the color, since color in these dark sugars is no element of value itself? The more I think of this plan of introducing two inconsistent tests for the same article, the more I am convinced that its effect would be to bring confusion and complexity into the law and its administration and open the door wider than ever to frauds and evasions of the duty.

If you could use any instrument or process which could be relied upon to show with accuracy the percentage of crystallizable saccharine matter in sugars, the sugar-growing world would find a way to dodge the law by a change in the methods of sugar-making, just as they have done with reference to the existing law. If you enact the substitute into a law, and thereby tax, for instance, a sugar No. 7 in color and 93 in percentage $2.81 on the one hundred pounds, while a No. 7 sugar testing not over 92 per cent. only pays $2.19 on the one hundred pounds, it is easy to see what the foreign sugar-makers would do. They would at once go to making all their sugars for our market not over No. 7 in color and just below 92 in percentage. The difference in value between a 91 per cent. and a 93 per cent. sugar is very trifling, but the difference in duty—one at $2.19 and the other at $2.81 a hundred—is relatively very considerable. The discrimination would be in favor of the low per cent. sugars, just as it now is in favor of the dark-colored sugars, and we should have a repetition in another form of the very same evasions of the true intent of our law which the revenue is now suffering from, and which have driven us to consider how we can legislate to prevent them.

The substitute of the gentleman from Ohio ought not to be adopted for another reason, and that is that there is no practicable and trustworthy means which the Secretary of the Treasury can prescribe to ascertain the percentage of saccharine matter in sugar with sufficient accuracy and uniformity to meet the requirements of the tariff without ruin to the sugar trade. Chemical analysis, of course, would be a perfect test; but the Secretary could not prescribe that, because we could not employ so costly a process upon the millions of packages of imported sugar. The only other means known to science for this purpose is the polariscope.

I will not undertake here to describe this instrument, for without seeing it and witnessing the manner of its use no one would be likely to get any satisfactory idea of it from anybody's description. Gentlemen who have studied the science of optics know something about the polarization of light by double refraction and the production thereby of two rays of different properties. Putting a solution of sugar into the horizontal tube of the polariscope, and looking into this tube through the eye-piece at one end, there is seen at the other end of the tube a round disk divided by a perpendicular line into two half disks of diverse colors, because each is illuminated by a different one of the two rays of the polarized light. I have myself looked into the polariscope tube and seen this. Now revolve the instrument to the right and these half disks gradually assimilate in color until at a certain point in the revolution they become of the same shade, the polarization of the light being at that point neutralized by the transmission of the rays through the sugar solution. The distance you must revolve the instrument to produce this effect depends on the percentage of saccharine matter in the solution through which the rays are transmitted—though it seems to me density of the solution produced by any other matter might produce the same effect—and an index pointing to and moving over a graduated scale shows the degree to which you have revolved the instrument, and consequently the percentage of pure sugar in the solution used. This is the theory of the polariscope.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Many MEMBERS. Let the time of the gentleman [Mr. ROBBINS] be extended. We want to hear this.

No objection was made; and the time was extended indefinitely.

Mr. ROBBINS. I certainly feel very much obliged to the House for their kindness and courtesy to me.

Mr. Speaker, I am passionately fond of science in all its departments; not that I am by any means much skilled in it, but I love and sympathize with its earnest search into nature's mysteries and its diligent study of nature's lessons. Nature and the Bible are two volumes of one work by the same Author; both full of instruction to us all, and worthy of the most reverential study; the latter being the simpler in style and diction and more easily understood, but the former testifying to its true authorship on every page; for "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork;" and it was the Same who said, "Let there be light, and there was light," with all its beautiful and wonderful properties, including this peculiar and interesting capability of polarization.

I delight in science, its ingenious discoveries and cunning instruments. So when my attention was drawn to the polariscope and its interesting scientific theory I was at first strongly prepossessed in its favor, as my colleagues on the committee know. All my prejudices impelled me to approve its adoption, and to believe in its accuracy as a means for determining the true grade and value of imported sugars. By it I hoped we might fix a specific duty on each grade so adjusted to value as to carry out substantially the ad valorem principle—essentially the correct principle—in our tariff on sugar.

Thorough investigation of the subject, however, has brought me to a different conclusion. The polariscope is such a delicate instrument that the indications it gives of saccharine percentage in the samples tested by it are altered many degrees by the most trifling circumstances, so that it would be utterly untrustworthy and deceptive when applied as a test in the immense business of grading sugars, under the variable conditions which would necessarily attend its general employment for that purpose. A very slight difference of temperature in the room where it is used; a little moisture, more or less, in the air about it; some color-blindness in the operator, or some unskillfulness in weighing, clarifying, or otherwise preparing the sample of sugar to be tested, or some other insignificant and unnoticeable error in the process, will so change the verdict rendered by this instrument that no dependence can be placed upon its accuracy, even when the operator is specially skillful, as would often not be the case, and perfectly honest, as he might not be. If he were corrupt and dishonest there is no means of detection. He looks into the eye-piece of his polariscope tube and declares what he sees, and the sugar is graded accordingly. If somebody else looks also and sees the colors differently, it is nothing (so they will say) but a mere difference in acuteness or accuracy of color perception in the eyes of different persons. There may be falsehood and fraud, but you can never prove it. You are at the mercy of one man. It is no better than to give your sugar sample to a juggler, who goes into a darkened room and after certain incantations declares oracularly what grade your sugar belongs to and what duty you must pay.

My conclusion, unwillingly reached, is, therefore, that the polariscope is only a beautiful scientific curiosity, well fitted to be placed among the treasures of a college laboratory and to amuse and instruct students in optics under the manipulation of a professional expert in natural science; but for practical use in our custom-houses to determine the grade of sugars and the proper duty on them in the hands of the average inspector, sometimes unskillful and sometimes dishonest, I am obliged to say that in my judgment it would prove an entire failure.

From evidence before the committee it appears that even when the very same sample of sugar is submitted to the test of the polariscope twice, there is often a difference of as much as 5° in the two verdicts rendered by the instrument. But out of the same hog'shead there may come very different samples of sugar, as any one can see by looking at the miniature specimen of a hog'shead which I hold in my hand. Here the molasses and the crudities are seen to have settled to the bottom, making the contents there much more impure than at the top. Apply the polariscope to the different samples which may be taken from such a hog'shead and there is no telling how great would be the variety of its indications. Moreover, the thousands of hog'sheads in a cargo would of course vary still more in the quality of the sugar they contain than the different parts of the same hog'shead. Carelessness or corruption in the sampler, who is but an inferior and poorly paid customs official, may therefore cause a cargo of sugar to be largely underrated or overrated by the polariscope.

This also is true of the color test in the darker sugars when you have many grades; and the only way to avoid it is to have but few well-marked and easily distinguished grades, as our bill proposes, so that the chances of confounding one grade with another by false sampling may be reduced to a minimum.

In speaking a while ago of the manner of using the polariscope, I said that the instrument must be made to revolve to the right to find the degree of crystallizable sugar, this being, in the parlance of the scientists, a dextro-rotating substance. But mingled with all impure sugars is a greater or less quantity of what are likewise called levo-rotating substances, the influence of which in the polariscope is to neutralize to an extent never ascertainable the effect of the dextro-rotating sugar. So that here we have another element of confusion and uncertainty in the workings of this delicate instrument. There are many other niceties in its scientific principle which tend to make its indications uncertain and untrustworthy in all cases, and especially where it is not used with the most exquisite skill of an expert. Now, I submit that we cannot afford to introduce into our tariff law so delicate, recondite, and uncertain a test in determining what duty shall be paid on an article so largely imported as sugar. If we do we shall set a deadfall to catch and ruin honest importing merchants. Such a merchant, in the utmost good faith, might purchase a cargo of sugars abroad which, according to all the tests and means of judging which he can apply, falls within a certain grade and is liable to a certain duty, and on this basis rests his whole calculation of safety or profit in the transaction. But, to his amazement, when his cargo is submitted to the polariscope in our custom-house his sugar is decided, perhaps erroneously, to be of a different grade and liable to a much higher duty than he expected. He is ruined, and that, too, by a circumstance which he could not foresee and provide against.

The law should be so simple and plain in its workings that every man can know and calculate when he buys a commodity in a foreign country exactly how much it will cost him to lay it down in our market. This will be the case if our bill is passed; for no man need be in doubt whether his sugar is above or below No. 13 in color, or above or below No. 16; and knowing this he can foresee at once what duty he must pay. Of all the wrongs that a government could commit against the citizen, it seems to me one of the most needlessly cruel and oppressive would be to make its laws so uncertain in their administration as to entrap and destroy those who in good faith mean to observe them.

But I will not enlarge further on the polariscope and its defects, some of them inherent in itself, some of them incidental to the manner of its use and the degree of skill in the operator. I think enough has been said to show this House that however interesting in theory the polariscope may be, it is entirely unsuited for employment as a practical means of determining grades and duties on so large a scale as would be required in this immense business of the sugar trade.

The substitute offered by the gentleman from Ohio proposes no change in the existing law on the grades above No. 10 in color. It takes no account of and presents no remedy for the evils I have indictated growing out of the high, the practically prohibitory duty on grocers' sugars grading between Nos. 13 and 16 in color. It leaves the law in such shape as to continue the monopoly of sugar importation to the three cities of New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, excluding from the business practically, as matters now stand, the other cities and ports of the United States. The bill of the committee proposes a check upon this monopoly, and while seeking to injure no city, no section, and no legitimate interest, aims to secure more exact justice and a more equal chance to all. This House, representing as it does every part and every interest of our common country, will find no difficulty, I trust, in deciding which of these propositions it ought to adopt.

It is urged by some as an objection to our bill that it is a measure which will work mostly for the interest of the Cuban sugar producers. There could not be a greater mistake. It is our present law which does that. It would be difficult to devise a law more favorable to the Cubans than the existing law is as one brief reference to statistics will show. In 1870 Cuba sent us only 52 per cent. of her sugar crop, that being under the old tariff. In 1878, under the present tariff, Cuba sent us over 90 per cent. of her sugar crop; so that under our law as it now stands we take all her sugar except about 10 per cent. of it. When the law is already so perfectly in her favor, it is absurd in the highest degree to say that any change which we could propose would be in Cuba's interest. So I dismiss this objection as unworthy of further notice in view of the facts.

As to the amendment which the committee through courtesy gave the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BANKS] leave to offer, I will only say now that it proposes to use the polariscope as the sole test of sugars of all grades, from the lowest to the highest, and to fix a different rate of duty for each degree of saccharine matter as indicated by that instrument. All that I have said of the impropriety of relying upon the polariscope, even to a limited extent and in respect to a few grades of sugar, applies with increased weight to a proposition to use it through all the grades. I feel confident the House will not sanction such a revolution in the entire system of sugar inspection and classification.

But I have trespassed far enough upon the courtesy of the House, for which I am very grateful, and will now conclude these remarks. I have endeavored to discharge my duty in reference to this question. The subject is one of such importance that this Congress should not fail to take action upon it. Millions of revenue are involved in it; but far above that, the interests of all the people are involved as against a powerful and growing monopoly. On all issues arising in the great controversy—constantly coming up here in so many shapes—of The People vs. Monopolies, my voice and vote always have been and always will be on the side of the people; not that I shall ever pander to mere popular prejudices; not that I have any sympathy with communistic ideas; but monopolies and overgrown fortunes heaped up through unequal laws in few hands beget popular discontent and disregard of property rights and engender communism; and these are the conditions precedent to imperialism.

Our Government has weathered many storms, but it is now confronted by these dangers, not less formidable because more insidious than any perils of the past. A free and stable republic, with universal suffrage, can only exist among a people comparatively equal in condition, where the laws are so shaped and so administered that every man has a chance; that the humblest may be happy and prosper if he will. It is this which in the past has constituted the glory of our free American institutions. It is this which has enabled them to survive thus far and which makes them worthy to endure always. Only by adhering to these principles, by repressing monopolies and special privileges on the one hand and communistic and agrarian tendencies on the other, can we perpetuate the Republic and render the Empire forever impossible.

Mr. GARFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I regret that I am not feeling well enough to address the House on this subject to my own satisfaction. By the kindness of my colleague on the Committee on Ways and Means, [Mr. TUCKER,] who paired with me, I left the House yesterday in consequence of feeling quite ill, and I should not be here today were it not that I am charged with the duty of presenting the bill approved by the minority of the committee; but I will try to state the case if I can have the forbearance and attention of the House.

It must be manifest to every one that any considerable change in our tariff laws at the present session is impossible, and no change whatever should be undertaken at this late day unless demanded by the most imperative necessity. That such a necessity exists for the modification of the tariff on sugar will appear further on.

The pending bill, like all bills which relate to customs duties should be considered in its relation to four great interests: the revenues, home industries, foreign trade, and the interests of consumers. First, as a source of revenue for the support of the Government, we are receiving about $37,000,000 in coin per annum from duties on sugar in its various forms. That is about one-sixth of all our revenues from all sources. The effect of any measure upon so large a part of the revenue is vital to our finances and to the fiscal credit of the Government.

Second, it affects two great producing industries of our people. The first of these is the growth of cane and the production of cane sugar, to foster which Congress has for a long time levied a discriminating duty, though only a single State is pursuing the industry. Notwithstanding the fact that sugar is one of the necessities of the daily life of our people, they have consented to pay a tax which, under existing laws, averages about 62½ per cent. ad valorem upon all the sugar they consume. This burden is borne cheerfully for the purpose of protecting and promoting a great home industry in one of our Southern States.

A second important industry which has grown up in connection with the sugar trade and has developed to great magnitude in recent years is the business of refining. It is one of the interesting evidences of the progress of civilization that people are using less and less of the raw sugars of commerce and more and more of refined sugars. And this change of habit is not merely a refinement of luxury but is demanded by a better knowledge of the laws of health. In a recent investigation made by the Analytical Sanitary Commission of England appointed to examine the various kinds of food, Dr. Hassell, the chairman, reported among other things the following:

We feel, however reluctantly, that we have come to the conclusion that the sugars of commerce are in general in a state wholly unfit for consumption.

That is the latest voice of science in England on the subject of unrefined sugar. And if gentlemen will turn to The Popular Science Monthly, of New York, for February, 1879, they will find a very interesting scientific discussion of the various insects that infest food, and on pages 508 and 509 occurs a passage relating to sugars, which I quote:

The sugar-mite, T. sacchari, [a magnified wood-cut of which accompanies the passage,] is most commonly found in brown sugar. It is large enough to be seen with the naked eye, and sometimes appears as white specks in the sugar. It may be detected by dissolving two or three spoonfuls of sugar in warm water and allowing the solution to stand for an hour or so. At the end of the time the mite will be found floating on the surface, adhering to the sides of the glass, and lying mixed with the grit and dirt that always accumulate at the bottom. In ten grains of sugar as many as five hundred mites have been found, which is at the rate of three hundred and fifty thousand to the pound. Those who are engaged in handling raw sugars are subject to an eruption known as "grocers' itch," which is doubtless to be traced to the presence of these mites. They are almost invariably present in unrefined sugars, and may be seen in all stages of growth and in every condition, alive and dead, entire or broken in fragments. Refined sugars are free from them. This is in part due, perhaps, to the crystals being so hard as to resist their jaws, but principally to the absence of albumen, for without nitrogenous matter they cannot live.

These degraded and disgusting forms are not proper food-stuffs, nor is their consumption unavoidable. Pure articles, in an undamaged condition, do not contain them; and their presence in numbers in any article of food is proof that it is unfit for human use and should be rejected.

This scientific testimony is corroborated by the experience of all persons who manipulate raw sugars, while no such effects result from the handling of refined sugars. For these reasons the consumption of raw sugars in this and in all other civilized countries has rapidly fallen off. And so, although in former years a large quantity of what is known as grocers' sugars went directly into consumption without going through the process of refining, the amount of sugars of that class now used has been reduced to almost nothing.

To exhibit something of the magnitude of this industry, I state a few facts: omitting maple, sorghum, and beet sugar, we consumed last year in round numbers one billion seven hundred million pounds of cane sugar. Of this amount we produced in our own country two hundred million pounds; the remaining one billion five hundred million pounds were imported. Reduce the whole to tons, the people of the United States consumed seven hundred and forty thousand tons of cane sugar last year, or an average of about forty-five pounds to each inhabitant. Of all this vast amount of sugar not 2 per cent. was consumed in the raw or unrefined state. Nearly all of it passed through some process of refining to fit it for the use of our people.

From this it will be seen that in addition to the business of cane-planting and sugar-making there has grown up in this country a second industry of sugar refining, the importance of which may be shown by a few additional facts. There are twenty-five thousand laborers in the United States to-day employed in the business of refining sugar and fitting it for use, in addition to those employed by the sugar producers. In this work they employ coopers, blacksmiths, mechanics, machinists, and other classes of laborers. They consume thirty millions of pounds of bone-dust, eighteen thousand kegs of nails, thirty thousand car-loads of staves, and three hundred thousand tons of coal.

In this statement I do not take into account the refining done by Louisiana planters in preparing their products for market, though a large majority of the sugar growers have connected with their mills some form of refining. I have stated these facts to show the extent of the two home industries, which we should keep in view in any legislation on the subject.

The third interest to be considered is our foreign commerce, of which only a word needs to be said. We are compelled to buy abroad about 85 per cent. of all our sugar. We buy it from tropical countries with which, on every ground of public policy, we ought to maintain healthy and active relations of trade. If we are able, by our superior skill, to refine their low-grade sugars more cheaply than our neighbors and send them back with the added value of American labor, it will strengthen us industrially and commercially; and the fact that our refining interest has grown to such perfection that we have been able to sell in a single year to tropical countries about seventy million pounds of refined sugar, is a gratifying one on every account. No change should be made in the law which will injure our commercial prospects in this direction.

The fourth interest, one of vital importance, is that of the consumers of sugar. They are not a class; they are the whole population of the United States; and there must be reasons of controlling strength that will justify any considerable tax on an article of food of universal consumption and of such prime necessity as sugar. That reason has been found partly in the necessity for revenue, but chiefly in the purpose of enabling our people to become self-supporting, and as far as possible to produce their own sugars, that they may not be dependent upon foreign countries for so important an article of food. In short, the chief reason for the tax is that American labor may find employment in producing and preparing food for American tables.

The duty on sugar has been levied in various forms. Up to 1846 sugars were classified into raw and refined sugar, with a low rate on the raw and a higher rate on the refined. But as the processes of manufacture and refining have been improved, additional grades have been added to the law from time to time to meet the new conditions. It was found in 1870 that the lower grades embraced so wide a range of products that a uniform tax upon one whole class was neither equitable nor just; and hence the law was so amended as to increase the number of classes and make the tax ad valorem in principle but specific in form; that is, sugar in all its forms was graded into seven classes, arranged in the order of its value, and a specific duty was levied upon each class, the lowest rate being imposed upon the sugars of lowest value and a higher rate upon each successive class. The tax thus adjusted has been an efficient means of raising revenue. I have already shown that it produces more than $37,000,000 a year. That it has afforded sufficient protection to the producers and refiners of sugar will not be denied. The theory of protection may perhaps be thus summarized: on any imported article which comes in competition with an American product the rate of tax should be proportionate to the amount of human labor which has been expended upon it at the time of importation. That which represents the least labor should bear the least burden of tax; that which represents the most should bear the greatest. This principle has generally prevailed in all our tariff laws relating to sugar.

As the law now stands, the duty is adjusted by classifying all sugars into seven grades. First, the lowest, crudest, and cheapest product, which comes in liquid form and is known as melada. On that we levy a specific duty equal to about 40 per cent. ad valorem. The next grade of sugar is represented by the specimen I hold in my hand, and is known in the trade and to our law as Dutch standard No. 7. Until a recent period all sugar was manufactured by the simple process of boiling down the cane-juice and clarifying the product by means of clay. By that process the purity and strength and hence the value of all crystallized sugar were exhibited by its color. Here, for example, [holding up a specimen,] is a specimen of the lowest and crudest forms of crystallized sugar. Gentlemen will notice its dark color. It is known and graded as Dutch standard No. 7, and forms the second class in our present law. Here [holding up another specimen] is another specimen advanced higher, embodying more human labor, having less impurity in it, being advanced to a condition fit for use. It is known as Dutch standard No. 20. Ranging between these two specimens are several grades, the seven classes of the present law being—

First, melada, as I have described it.

Second, No. 7 and under.

Third, all above No. 7 and not above No. 10.

Fourth, all above No. 10 and not above No. 13.

Fifth, all above No. 13 and not above No. 16.

Sixth, all above No. 16 and not above No. 20, (a specimen of which I have just exhibited.)

Seventh, all above No. 20.

The theory of the law is that these various grades of sugar represent a scale of increasing value, an increasing amount of labor; and therefore the higher the grade the heavier the duty. For ease of comparison I reduce the specific rates to ad valorem, and show the status of the existing law. On the lowest form of sugar, melada, the rate is about 40 per cent. ad valorem. On the next grade, which includes all not above the Dutch standard No. 7, it is about 45 per cent.; on the next grade, including No. 10, it is about 46½ per cent.; on sugars between No. 10 and No. 13 it is 49½ per cent.; between 13 and 16, 68½ per cent, and so on, the rate increasing according to the value of the sugar and the amount of the labor expended upon it. This method of taxation seems to be fair and just; for if the principle of protection be applied to sugar at all, it ought to be applied on some plan of graduation which imposes the heaviest burden upon those grades which involve the most foreign labor and which are the most valuable.

I believe the correctness of the principle of the present law is not called in question anywhere. Although the aggregate rate of duty is high, consumers are not complaining; for the sugar used by our people is cheaper to-day than it has been during any previous period of our history. In 1869 the average price in the United States of all grades of sugar was 15 cents a pound. In 1878 the average price was 9 cents a pound. A dollar will to-day buy more sweetening than it would have bought at any previous period in our history. A day's work even, will buy more sweetening to-day than it would have bought ten years ago. Therefore the consumers of sugar of this country are not complaining that the rate of tax is too high. The planters of Louisiana are not complaining that they are not sufficiently protected by the present law; for they get an average protection of 62½ per cent., far greater than we get on most of our northern products.

Who, then, is complaining, if neither the producers of sugar nor the consumers complain? The Treasury alone is now making complaint. The Secretary tells us that new processes of manufacture have enabled foreign producers to produce sugar of as high a grade of sweetness and as pure as this specimen [showing a light colored sugar] but which has a color as low as this, [showing a dark sugar,] and therefore, as the letter of the law fixes the rate of duty on the basis of color alone, high-grade sugars in sweetness and value, but of low color, are brought in at a rate below the intent of the law, and so the revenue is defrauded. Two recent processes of manufacture known as the centrifugal process and the vacuum-pan process, have so changed the character of the product, especially in Cuba, that high-priced sugar comes in graded at low rates; and of that the Secretary of the Treasury complains. He says, and so say his experts, that we are probably losing from four to five million dollars a year, in consequence of this undervaluation of sugar.

To meet this defect in the law should be the sole object of the present bill. To whom should we look for the suggestion of a practical and efficient remedy of the only evil complained of? First of all, we should look to the officer who is charged by law with the duty of collecting the revenue. And he, the Secretary of the Treasury, has proposed a remedy. He does not ask us to change the rate of duty. He does not ask us to raise or reduce the present rate. All he does ask is that we give him the power to prevent undervaluations which he cannot prevent as the law now stands. He does not complain that the color test has been proved altogether worthless. It is still as valuable as ever for all sugars of the higher grade; but the two new processes of which I have spoken have enabled manufacturers to evade the spirit of the law in the lower grades, especially in grades below No. 10, Dutch standard; and he declares that if we will authorize him to apply other tests which will correct the undervaluation in these lower grades, he can collect the revenue fairly and fully, according to the original intent of the law, without any change of the rates or change of the grades already established. In a word, he asks us to give him the requisite authority and means for enforcing the present law according to its real intent and purpose.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I believe that I have stated all the trouble complained of in the present law. We are not asked to legislate either for the consumer or the producer, for Louisiana or for New York, or for the great West. We are asked to legislate to protect the Treasury against loss of revenue by undervaluation. That is all. And what is the remedy proposed? The Secretary of the Treasury proposes what I now offer on behalf of the minority of the Committee of Ways and Means as a substitute for the pending bill, and I ask the Clerk to read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, &c. That from and after the — day of —, 1879, in the classification of imported sugars for assessment of duty, any sugar which shall not be above No. 10, Dutch standard in color, which shall contain more than 92 per cent. of crystallizable sugar shall pay the rate of duty now chargeable to sugar above No. 10, and not above No. 13, Dutch standard in color, and the per centum of crystallizable sugar shall be ascertained by the polariscope or such other means as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. GARFIELD. The Secretary simply asks us in that amendment to give him the power to superadd to the color test the use of the polariscope or any other tests which he may find effective in making crystallizable strength and color correspond. That is all.

If there had been no virtual evasion of the color test, there would have been no need of any change in the law; and it is only to meet that evasion that he asks authority to do what he cannot now do, add to the color test the polariscope test or any other scientific test he may choose.

Mr. ROBBINS. Is it proposed to apply the polariscope test to all sugars below No. 10 in every instance?

Mr. GARFIELD. It is, wherever found necessary.

Mr. ROBBINS. How will the officers of the Government know the need of applying the test?

Mr. GARFIELD. I will tell the gentleman. Whenever an imported sugar bears evidence on its face that the color and sweetness are in harmony the color test will remain undisturbed; but when for any reason the inspectors of the revenue or other officers of the Government have reason to believe that the sugar is of a higher grade than its color would indicate, or that its color is below what the law intended, they will apply the polariscope and correct the valuation.

The bill I offer is the simplest and plainest method that can be had to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to enforce existing law.

Mr. ROBBINS. Who is to determine whether the sugar looks upon its face as sweet as it is represented to be?

Mr. GARFIELD. The Secretary of the Treasury, by his regulations and orders to his officers appointed for that purpose. What the gentleman says would be equally applicable to his own bill.

The gentleman himself in his own bill recognizes the Dutch standards of color, and how is he going to determine whether any given sugar is above or below No. 13 Dutch standard? How does he draw the line in his own bill, and who is to determine whether the sugar is above or below that standard?

Mr. ROBBINS. In reference to No. 7, who is to determine whether the sugar imported is higher or lower than No. 7?

Mr. GARFIELD. I answered the gentleman before; the executive officers of the Government charged with the office of collecting these duties under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and under the rules and regulations which he may make.

Now, Mr. Speaker, whatever difficulties the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROBBINS] may have or I may have or you may have, it must be taken for granted that the officers who will discharge this duty are intelligent and vigilant.

The present Secretary of the Treasury tells us that with the simple measure I have offered he can administer the law and collect the revenue. That being so, I do not think it quite becomes us to say that he cannot do it, and deny him the provision that he asks for, and all he asks for, to enable him to put five millions more revenue into the Treasury without increasing the rate of taxation.

For one, I am unwilling to take upon my shoulders the responsibility of refusing the Secretary the means he asks for to enable him to collect the revenue, and, instead, give him a remedy of my own devising.

Suppose he fails; he can very well say that Congress refused the instrument he wanted and gave him one of their own devising. In that case the responsibility will fall not upon him but upon Congress for forcing upon him a plan he did not ask for or recommend.

I say, therefore, on general principles, that when an executive officer whom we have a right to trust for his intelligence, skill, and character as a public man, comes to us and asks for a certain definite, plain provision of law, we ought to have very strong reasons of our own why we do not grant it, especially when he asks us not to change the rate of duty, not to tear down the structure of the law, but simply to give him the means to enforce it. This is the ground on which, in the first place, I plant my argument for the amendment I have offered as against the new and larger and, as I think, the very perilous scheme proposed by the majority of the Committee of Ways and Means.

Let us next consider the scheme which they have offered. I want gentlemen to understand that of the seven lower grades of sugar as they now stand in the law, each paying a different rate of duty and a rate increasing as the sugar advances in quality, by the bill of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROBBINS] it is proposed to consolidate into one the first four of those grades, that is, melada and three lowest grades of sugar, and to provide that all four grades shall be put on a dead level of equality and shall pay a duty of 2.40 cents per pound. This is a radical and sweeping change in the present law, for it covers about 90 per cent. of all sugars imported.

To show how important to the revenue those four lower grades are, I state a fact furnished by the Bureau of Statistics. It is this, that out of $37,000,000 of revenue received last year from sugar, $34,955,000, almost 90 per cent., was received from sugar of the three lower grades. I cannot emphasize this fact too strongly in considering the radical change proposed by the Robbins bill.

Mr. BUTLER. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him a moment?

Mr. GARFIELD. Certainly.

Mr. BUTLER. How much of that duty comes from grades under No. 7?

Mr. GARFIELD. I have not the figures before me.

Mr. BUTLER. Well, I have.

Mr. GARFIELD. Of the grades under No. 10, Dutch standard, there were received $35,000,000 out of $37,000,000; and of the grades under No. 7 I think about $14,000,000 or $15,000,000. But from No. 10 down we get thirty-five millions of the thirty-seven millions collected on sugar. What effect this change will have on the revenues it is difficult to say; but I have no doubt it will wholly prevent the importation of the lowest grades, will increase the price of sugar to the consumer and probably decrease the revenue. At all events it is a dangerous experiment to make in view of our present financial necessities.

But I desire to show how it will operate as a protective measure. I have already shown that by our present law sugar pays a duty of 40 per cent., 45 per cent., 46 per cent., 49 per cent., 68 per cent., &c., increasing in rate from the lower to the higher grades. Now note the effect of consolidating the lower grades, as proposed in the Robbins bill, and fixing the single rate of 2.40 cents per pound. Melada, which is the lowest grade and now pays about 40 per cent. will then pay 80 per cent. ad valorem. The second grade, (that is, sugar not above No. 7,) which now pays 45 per cent., will then pay 68½ per cent. ad valorem. The next grade will pay 60 per cent., the next higher 53 per cent., the next higher 45 per cent., and the next 42 per cent. ad valorem.

In short, the Robbins bill is an inverted cone; the lowest grade of sugar must bear the highest rate of duty, and the highest grade will bear the lowest rate. In other words, the less labor there is in the imported product, the heavier the rate of tax upon it; and the more labor, foreign labor remember, there is in it, the least burden of tax will be put upon it.

The fundamental doctrine of protection is completely overturned and reversed by this bill. Yet it is by no means a free-trade bill. It so happens that on the grades upon which the extreme high rate of duty is imposed, our friends from Louisiana will receive a very considerably larger protective duty than the present law gives them. Hence the favor with which this proposition is received by gentlemen from that portion of the country.

Mr. KELLEY. I desire to say that there is such a noise coming from the galleries that we sitting here by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GARFIELD] cannot hear what he is saying.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Unless silence is observed in the galleries they will be cleared.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I desire to say that the noise is not all in the galleries; much of it is on the floor of the House.

Mr. GARFIELD. Now, Mr. Speaker, I object to this bill, first, because it violates the fundamental principles of a just and equitable taxation; and I object to it in the second place because it puts a prohibitory duty upon the low-grade sugars that are refined by American skill, and become the cheap sugar in common use among our people. It injures one portion of our industrial interests and gives an unreasonable protection to another. It violates the canons of free trade on the one hand, and of protection on the other. It destroys absolutely the business of refining the cheap low-grade sugars, and will increase the cost of sugars most in use.

Let me illustrate still further. How is it that this day while I speak to you sugar is cheaper in the United States than it has ever been before? Because we have built up in this country a great industry, by which we are eclipsing the world as refiners of sugar. When the French manufacturers were at Philadelphia at our Centennial, they were amazed to see that our sugar products there rivaled the best products of the Old World. They did not understand how it had been done. But it was the result of the same skill that has enabled America to surpass so many other countries in the recent exposition at Paris and to carry off more medals in proportion to their exhibitors than any other five countries of the globe.

We were so successful in the refining of sugar that two years ago we were exporting seventy million pounds of our refined product. It was becoming and it will become, if we are allowed to carry on this industry, a great element in our export trade. We are trading with Cuba and South America; we are compelled to depend largely upon the tropics for our raw material. Is it not wise for us to be able to send back the refined product in exchange? Or shall we so legislate as to give an undue protection to our Louisiana planters, and drive the refining business out of the United States, allowing Cuba, England, and other countries to do our refining for us? Refined sugar we must have. The day is gone by when our people will eat the animals which abound in the raw unmanufactured sugars of the world. I say, therefore, that this bill as drawn sins against the consumer and against the refining interest and unreasonably protects the producing interest of the country.

Let me illustrate a little further. In the Philippine Islands there is a class of people who have not enough intelligence and resources to take the first simple step toward clarifying sugar. They have no limestone on their islands; they cannot even furnish the lime to drop into the sugar vats and clarify the product just a little. But they take the juice of the cane and boil it down in the crudest, rudest, simplest way, by labor the cheapest and least skillful; and when they have reduced it to a black cheap form of crystallized sugar, the dirtiest yet known, they put it up in sacks of one hundred and fifty pounds each, so that a man can carry it on his back down to the landing to be shipped away. Our people are buying largely of that low grade of sugar from the Philippine Islands. We are buying it also from other countries where the production is of a low grade. This sugar we bring here and by our skill and labor make it into a cheap clean sugar for table use. Shall we now by law impose a prohibitory duty on all that trade and industry, an 80 per cent. rate or a 65 per cent. rate, keeping it all out and bringing in only the sugar that has been advanced by the higher and more intelligent processes of our nearer neighbors, thus cutting off the whole business of refining these low-grade sugars? I hope not.

I know there is some controversy among the refiners themselves. Some of them—indeed, quite a number of most estimable gentlemen—say, "Let this bill pass and we can do a better refining business than is done now; we can refine the high-grade sugars." Now, I am glad to have those gentlemen work the higher grades of sugar and make a success of them; but I see no reason why our refineries should not also take the lowest grades of sugar, that which has the least value, the least labor in it, and bring it up by our American labor to a cheap, useful, merchantable form; and therefore I am unwilling, for the sake of helping one class of refiners, to destroy another. I do not believe it is necessary to destroy either.

I regret that the refiners do not unite on some common ground on which all could have had a fair chance. But there seems to have been an internecine war among them; and with such a war I have no sympathy.

Having now stated my objections in brief to the bill of the gentleman from North Carolina, [Mr. ROBBINS,] I turn to answer his criticisms of the measure I have proposed, which is the bill of the Treasury Department. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROBBINS] says that the polariscope is an unsatisfactory instrument, and that, however perfect it might be, there is serious difficulty in sampling the sugars to be tested. I admit that there is trouble about sampling. Suppose a hoghead of sugar is allowed to remain lying on its side for a month, and the sampler bores a hole in the hoghead and draws out a sample close to the bottom. He gets a wet, black, coarse portion of the sugar. On the other hand, if he draws his sample from the top, he gets a dry, lighter-colored, better grade of sugar.

Mr. BUTLER. How much foreign labor is there in the settlings of that sugar? [Laughter.]

Mr. GARFIELD. There certainly is a good deal of dirt in it. [Laughter.] As a matter of course if that sampler has been bought by some importer he may take the samples out of the bottom of the cask only, which will not represent the character of the whole. But whether the system proposed by the gentleman from North Carolina, [Mr. ROBBINS,] or that of the Treasury Department prevails, we must leave the details of carrying it out to the Secretary of the Treasury. Under the regulations of the Treasury Department an official is not permitted to sample a hogshead of sugar in one spot only. He samples above and below and at the center; and the different samples being mixed into one, make a pretty fair average sample of the cask; and then taking every tenth cask of the cargo, a pretty fair set of samples of the whole cargo is obtained. But the trouble about sampling, inheres in any graded system, and no one proposes to abolish all the grades.

But the gentleman thinks the polariscope test is good for nothing. I have some evidence on that subject.

In the first place, Mr. Speaker, the polariscope, being a scientific instrument, (into the details of which I will not go as my learned colleague on the committee did,) the Secretary of the Treasury sent it about two years ago to the American Academy of Sciences, of which Professor Henry was president, with the request that it be examined and a report made as to the advisability of its use by the Government in determining the value of sugars for revenue purposes. After a thorough examination, and with the assistance of persons well qualified to judge, Professor Henry reported to the Secretary of the Treasury on the 5th day of February, 1878, as follows:

After due deliberation on the subject, the following are our final conclusions: That the quantity of crystallizable sugar in imported raw sugars should be estimated by the polarimeter, which is an entirely trustworthy instrument, and one the use of which can readily be taught to any intelligent person of ordinary education.

If the polarimeter should be adopted as the measure of the value of sugar, a supply of these instruments should be obtained from Germany, and their use taught to the appraisers by a person thoroughly acquainted with the theory and practice of the instrument. The accuracy of the instruments themselves should also be tested, and the appraisers from time to time be examined as to their skill in the use of the instrument.

This is the opinion of a scientific man, the most eminent and trustworthy of our countrymen; and when he says that a layman, a man without special skill, can be taught to use this instrument accurately, and that it is "entirely trustworthy," I have not quite the courage to say it is not so.

But that is not all. I turn from the test of science to the test of practice. I have before me a memorial containing the resolutions adopted by the importers, refiners, and dealers in sugar in Boston, signed by 66 firms representing, I am told, every refiner in that city. They speak for themselves:

BOSTON, January 30, 1879.

At an adjourned meeting of the importers, refiners, and dealers in sugar, held this day, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the duties on sugar should be assessed by a graduated scale of specific rates, adjusted as nearly as possible to the ad valorem principle, and that this can be done by the use of the polariscope better than in any other way. Its general use in buying and selling in all civilized countries proves that it is less complicated and more reliable than any other method of determining the actual value of sugar.

Resolved, That duties ought to be so regulated and assessed as to encourage the largest possible supplies of sugar from all places of production, and not in any way made so as to favor one place more than another; and that the amount of revenue now derived from the lower grades of sugar cannot be increased without injustice and injury to the consumers, as it is now too high in proportion to high grades.

JOHN W. CANDLER, Chairman.
WM. H. GREELEY, Secretary.

We, the undersigned importers, refiners, and dealers in sugar, approve of the above resolutions.

(Signed by sixty-six firms.)

The testimony of these gentlemen is that the grading of sugars can be better effected by the polariscope than in any other way. Its general use in buying and selling sugar strongly attests its practicability.

A prominent gentleman from Boston, who is one of these signers of this memorial, stated to the Committee of Ways and Means that he bought twenty-six large cargoes of sugar during the last season from Cuba on telegraphic orders and by the polariscope test. It was done in this way: he cabled to the manufacturer in Cuba, "Send me so many hogsheads of sugar testing 92° or 94° polariscope test," and the sugars came.

The Cuban seller applied the polariscope test when he shipped them, and the Boston buyer applied the polariscope test when they were received. The record of those twenty-six cargoes shows that if the duty had been assessed by the test of the polariscope there would have been but $125 difference in half a million dollars duty between the Cuban test and the Boston test. There were variations in the tests of single cargoes, but the whole shipment showed if we had followed the Cuban test alone in levying the duties the account would have varied but $125 from the amount based on the Boston test, the parties having adverse interests—one the buyer, the other the seller. Stronger proof of the practicability of the polariscope test of sugar can hardly be conceived.

Mr. MILLS. I understand my friend from Ohio and the signers of that resolution to state that the polariscope is the full test of the value of sugar.

Mr. GARFIELD. Yes, of the crystallizable strength, and therefore of the value of sugar.

Mr. MILLS. Then why not lay the duty on the value of sugar and let that be reached by the polariscope or any other means the Secretary of the Treasury may adopt?

Mr. GARFIELD. The Boston dealers asked the committee to adopt precisely the measure which my friend suggests, and that will be offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. BANKS.] They proposed that the duties on sugar should be laid on the percentage of saccharine strength; for instance, 1 per cent. of saccharine strength should pay so much, and 2 per cent. twice as much, and so on through all the grades, to be tested by the polariscope.

Mr. MILLS. Then the polariscope tests the value of sugar?

Mr. GARFIELD. Yes; and theoretically they are right. But, as a matter of practice, I think, and this was the opinion of most of the Committee of Ways and Means, that the Boston plan would make the sugar tariff too complicated, for there would be one cargo having a small per cent. less strength than another, a different rate of duty. The rates would be too numerous and complicated. We therefore preferred to retain the existing seven grades and apply the polariscope to them.

Mr. TUCKER. The gentleman from Ohio has spoken of the character of the polariscope as a test, and says it is a test of the quantity of saccharine matter. Is it not rather a test of the crystallizable quality of the sugar?

Mr. GARFIELD. My colleague is right; I should have used the word crystallizable. That is the language of my amendment.

Mr. TUCKER. Is it not true that we were told in the committee, so far from its being a test of the quantity of saccharine matter, that the sugar not crystallizable had so much saccharine matter that it was used by all the refiners?

Mr. GARFIELD. I thank my colleague; for I was about to omit what, if left out, would have made my statement incomplete. The chief element of value in sugar is sugar crystals; but there is also another element, which is uncrystallizable, but still sweet, known as glucose, which will be found in the most perfect sugar of commerce. Glucose is not deleterious, is sweetening, and is found in all sugar. The chief element, and that with which we are mainly concerned, is of course the crystal, the crystallized sugar. Therefore in our bill we apply our test to the crystallizable strength of sugar, and that the polariscope detects. That is what we are legislating about; not about glucose and other elements that enter into sugar. The main product is crystallized sugar, and that is perfectly tested by the polariscope.

I do not say that the polariscope is a perfect test in every respect; but I say in the present stage of scientific knowledge it is the best test we know. It is approved by the highest science and by the practical experience of our foremost dealers.

Mr. BUTLER. I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. GARFIELD. Very well.

Mr. BUTLER. I ask the gentleman if the polariscope gives any correct test of melada, the lowest grade?

Mr. GARFIELD. It does—of its crystallizable strength.

Mr. BUTLER. But if it is not crystallized?

Mr. GARFIELD. The melada question is not important, for it pays a specific duty as the law now stands, but should crystallizable sugar be brought in mixed with melada it would be tested by the polariscope.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand that. That is not my question.

Mr. GARFIELD. I believe I have now gone over the main points in this discussion.

Mr. ROBBINS. I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. GARFIELD. Very well.

Mr. ROBBINS. There are no other means but the polariscope which can be applied as a percentage test, except chemical analysis, are there?

Mr. GARFIELD. Not that I know of. I ought to have added that we do not confine the Secretary to the polariscope alone. We authorize him to employ the polariscope or such other test as he may find necessary to determine the real crystallizable strength of sugar. No doubt he will use the polariscope ordinarily; but if there is any doubt of its accuracy in any important case he can employ a chemist and make a chemical analysis.

Mr. ROBBINS. One word more. The chemical analysis test is too costly for general use, is it not?

Mr. GARFIELD. Oh, yes; it would be too cumbersome and costly to be used ordinarily. But it can always be used to verify the polariscope test in any important case.

Mr. ROBBINS. But who is to know that any correction is needed?

Mr. GARFIELD. My friend in that question has taken up the conflict of ages. Who shall do anything except the men appointed to carry out the law? Who shall find out any blunder or correct any wrong unless you appoint somebody to do it? Congress, I take it, can hardly determine the sweetness or strength of sugar or the amount of glucose in it unless we appoint an agent. The Treasury cannot do it except by its agents. In any system there will be the trouble suggested by the gentleman from North Carolina.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I do not want Congress to tinker with the tariff at this time. That was attempted last year; and in the remarks I made on that occasion I denounced the sugar clause of the bill then introduced, because while there was a reduction of the rate in most northern interests, the rate on sugar was increased considerably, even up to 70 per cent. I say, therefore, let us not undertake to change the tariff rates in this closing week of the session. But when the Administration tells us that four or five millions of revenue are being lost, let us give them the means they want to protect the Government against undervaluation and loss.

Mr. BURCHARD. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts

[Mr. ROBINSON] to offer an amendment in behalf of his colleague, [Mr. BANKS,] who is now absent.

Mr. ROBINSON, of Massachusetts. In behalf of my colleague, [Mr. BANKS,] who is a member of the Committee of Ways and Means, I offer as a substitute for the bill the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk, and ask to have it read.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

That all tank-bottoms, concretes, sirups of sugar-cane juice, melado, concentrated melado, concentrated molasses, and on all sugars not above No. 13, Dutch standard in color, testing by the polariscope not above 75°, shall pay a duty of 1.75 cents per pound:

Testing above 75° and not above 76°, 1.80 cents per pound;
Testing above 76° and not above 77°, 1.85 cents per pound;
Testing above 77° and not above 78°, 1.90 cents per pound;
Testing above 78° and not above 79°, 1.95 cents per pound;
Testing above 79° and not above 80°, 2 cents per pound;
Testing above 80° and not above 81°, 2.50 cents per pound;
Testing above 81° and not above 82°, 2.10 cents per pound;
Testing above 82° and not above 83°, 2.15 cents per pound;
Testing above 83° and not above 84°, 2.20 cents per pound;
Testing above 84° and not above 85°, 2.25 cents per pound;
Testing above 85° and not above 86°, 2.30 cents per pound;
Testing above 86° and not above 87°, 2.35 cents per pound;
Testing above 87° and not above 88°, 2.40 cents per pound;
Testing above 88° and not above 89°, 2.45 cents per pound;
Testing above 89° and not above 90°, 2.50 cents per pound;
Testing above 90° and not above 91°, 2.55 cents per pound;
Testing above 91° and not above 92°, 2.60 cents per pound;
Testing above 92° and not above 93°, 2.65 cents per pound;
Testing above 93° and not above 94°, 2.70 cents per pound;
Testing above 94° and not above 95°, 2.75 cents per pound;
Testing above 95° and not above 96°, 2.80 cents per pound;
Testing above 96° and not above 97°, 2.85 cents per pound;
Testing above 97° and not above 98°, 2.90 cents per pound;
Testing above 98° and not above 99°, 2.95 cents per pound;

On all sugars above No. 13, Dutch standard in color, and not above No. 16, Dutch standard in color, 3½ cents per pound;

On all sugars above No. 16, Dutch standard in color, and not above No. 20, Dutch standard in color, 4 cents per pound;

On all sugars above No. 20, Dutch standard in color, and on all refined sugars, 4½ cents per pound;

On molasses testing not above 56°, 6 cents per gallon;

On molasses testing above 56°, 10 cents per gallon.

Mr. BURCHARD resumed the floor.

Mr. WOOD. If the gentleman from Illinois will yield to me, I will move that the House do now adjourn.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SPRINGER obtained the floor.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois rises to a question of the highest privilege, which the Chair understands, by agreement of the House, was to be determined after the disposition of the legislative, executive, and judicial bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask the House to pass the preliminary order which I send to the Clerk's desk, requiring Mr. Seward to show cause why he refused to answer questions propounded to him by a committee of this House.

Mr. CONGER. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois rises to a question of privilege.

Mr. CONGER. We are acting under a suspension of the rules.

Mr. BURCHARD. I understand that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] desires to present a report of a committee of conference, and I am willing to yield to him for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. He does not; the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] rose to a question of the highest privilege and there is no occasion for any conflict.

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not desire to come in conflict with any body, but I yielded to the desire of the House the other day, when I brought this matter up, to proceed with the appropriation bill.

RECORD OF A VOTE.

Mr. GARFIELD. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] be allowed to record his vote upon the votes taken yesterday, as the pair seems to have embarrassed him, and I ask unanimous consent that he be allowed to record his vote.

Mr. TUCKER. There were three votes. I vote "no" upon the motion to lay the legislative, executive, and judicial bill on the table, and upon the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina I vote "ay." I vote "ay" also upon the passage of the bill.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CONGER. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] on a question of privilege.

Mr. CONGER. The regular order is the consideration of the pending bill, and it is before the House under a suspension of the rules.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is entitled to recognize a member to be sworn in, or upon a question of privilege, or to make a report from a committee of conference at any time when there is a gap in the proceedings of the House.

Mr. CONGER. I ask the Chair if the regular order is not the bill upon which we are acting under a suspension of the rules?

The SPEAKER. The Chair decides that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] is entitled to be recognized.

Mr. BURCHARD. I know that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr.

TUCKER] can take me from the floor, but as to whether my colleague can do so I have doubts.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that the gentleman from Virginia desires to present a report of a committee of conference, which can be brought in even when a motion to adjourn is pending, and the Chair does not understand that the gentleman from Virginia now seeks to place himself in antagonism to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask the Clerk to read the order which I have sent to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. CONGER. Pending that, I move that the House adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan must remember that it is constantly the practice that questions of privilege interrupt the current proceedings of the House.

Mr. CONGER. I believe a member has a right to assert his parliamentary rights.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose?

Mr. CONGER. I have a parliamentary right to move to adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the gentleman exercises as many parliamentary rights as any other member of this House, and therefore he does not think it becoming in the gentleman to reflect upon the Chair by intimating even by inference that the Chair does not give him every parliamentary right to which he is entitled.

Mr. CONGER. Then I ask the Chair to put the question on my motion to adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain the motion of the gentleman, of course.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call for the reading of the order I have sent to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. TUCKER. I desire to make the conference report with which I am charged to-night, and I do hope that the gentleman from Michigan will not struggle to prevent me from doing so.

Mr. CONGER. I dislike very much to struggle to prevent anything which the gentleman from Virginia desires, but I have made a motion which the Chair has entertained.

The SPEAKER. The Chair entertains the motion of the gentleman from Michigan as against the motion of the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. SPRINGER.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I will not yield the floor for any motion until the order I have sent to the Clerk's desk is read.

Mr. TUCKER. I think it is rather hard that I should be prevented from making my report from the committee of conference in this way. My friend from Illinois on my right [Mr. BURCHARD] yielded the floor to me to make the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman did not require to have the floor yielded to him for that purpose. He could take it in his own right.

Mr. TUCKER. Yes; and when I proceeded to take it the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] came in with his question of privilege, and that, according to the ruling of the Chair, gave the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] the right to move that the House now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The rule will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A matter of privilege arising out of any question supersedes the consideration of the original question, and must be first disposed of.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now ask for the reading of the order which I have sent to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. CONGER. But this does not raise any question of privilege upon the pending matter; it is upon another question entirely.

The SPEAKER. The "original question" is the bill under consideration, and this question of privilege, by the terms of the rule, supersedes that original question.

Mr. CONGER. A privileged question supersedes the subject-matter out of which it arises.

Mr. TUCKER. I insist upon my right to submit a report from the committee of conference, and I now do so and call the previous question upon it.

Mr. SPRINGER. This question of privilege is of a higher privilege than even a conference report. It came up here on Saturday and again on Monday, when I yielded for other questions to be brought up, and stated that I would call it up immediately after the House had disposed of the legislative appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. And the Chair in consequence has recognized the gentleman to call it up now. The Chair understood that both sides of the House had assented to that arrangement; but in that the Chair may be wrong.

Mr. BURCHARD. The Chair does not mean that there is assent to the arrangement now. I have the floor on the pending bill. An amendment was offered to that bill, to which I yielded. Then the gentleman from Virginia took me off the floor by a conference report. Of course I could not prevent that.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BURCHARD] took the floor in his own right to speak upon the pending bill. The Chair understood that what the gentleman desired was to have the bill go over until to-morrow, at which time the gentleman will be entitled to the floor.

Mr. BURCHARD. Can any question of privilege come in?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BURCHARD] can go on now if he chooses.

Mr. BURCHARD. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] has a conference report to make.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] has any right, it is in his own right, in regard to the committee of conference. The Clerk will read the rule as to conference reports.

The Clerk read as follows:

The report of a committee of conference is, under the practice of the House, so highly privileged that it has been held to be in order even pending a motion for a call of the House.

[Under the practice, reports of conference committees are received at any time, (except when the rules are suspended,) even during the pendency of a motion to adjourn or to adjourn over, and, like the motion to go to the Speaker's table, may interrupt a member who is on the floor speaking.]

INTERNAL REVENUE LAWS.

The SPEAKER. Now the Chair decides that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] having again asserted his right to submit the conference report, which he a moment ago withheld to allow the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] in, it cuts off the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] for the reason that the practice of the House recognizes the right of a member to submit a motion to adjourn against the proposition of the gentleman from Illinois; while the rule compels the Chair to recognize the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] to submit a conference report even pending a motion to adjourn. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] will concede that.

Mr. CONGER. Certainly; I admit it. I would not make a motion to adjourn against the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER,] and I did not do so. My motion was made against the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. SPRINGER.]

The SPEAKER. And the Chair entertains the motion to adjourn as against the proposition of the gentleman from Illinois. [Cries of "Regular order!"] The regular order is the conference report submitted by the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER,] which will now be read.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to internal revenue, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from that portion of its amendment numbered 16 striking out all of line 1 and down to and including the words "and provided" in line 6 on page 10.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the remainder of said amendment 16, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 70, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 81, and agree to the same amended to read as follows:

SEC. 22. That whenever and after any bank has ceased to do business by reason of insolvency or bankruptcy, no tax shall be assessed or collected, or paid into the Treasury of the United States, on account of such bank, which shall diminish the assets thereof necessary for the full payment of all its depositors; and such tax shall be abated from such national banks as are found by the Comptroller of the Currency to be insolvent; and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, when the facts shall so appear to him, is authorized to remit so much of said tax against insolvent State and savings-banks as shall be found to affect the claims of their depositors.

That in making further collections of internal-revenue taxes on bank deposits, no savings-bank, recognized as such by the laws of its State, and having no capital stock, shall, on account of mercantile or business deposits heretofore received, upon which no interest has been allowed to the parties making such deposits, be denied the exemptions allowed to savings-banks having no capital stock, and doing no other business than receiving deposits to be loaned or invested for the sole benefit of the parties making such deposits, without profit or compensation to the banks, if such bank has paid the lawful tax upon the entire average amount of such business or mercantile deposits; but nothing in this section shall be construed to extend said exemptions to deposits hereafter made, or in any way to affect the liability of such deposits to taxation.

That section 3408 of the Revised Statutes be amended by striking out all after the thirtieth line, and inserting the following:

"Associations or companies known as provident institutions, savings-banks, savings funds, or savings institutions, doing no other business than receiving and loaning or investing savings deposits, shall be exempt from tax on so much of such deposits as they have invested in securities of the United States, and on $2,000 of savings deposits, and nothing in excess thereof, made in the name of and belonging to any one person.

"That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this section be, and the same are hereby, repealed."

And the Senate agree to the same.

J. R. TUCKER,
WM. M. ROBBINS,
HORATIO C. BURCHARD,
Managers on the part of the House.
T. F. BAYARD,
FRANCIS KERNAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, a few words will be necessary to explain to the House what has been done by the committee of conference. It will be remembered that the House the other day, upon the motion of my friend from Pennsylvania, [Mr. CLYMER,] restored to the bill the provision which the Senate had struck out, reducing from $200 to $100 the tax upon rectifiers making not more than five hundred barrels forty-gallon proof. The Senate has receded from the amendment striking out that provision of the House bill; and thus the discrimination in favor of rectifiers making five hundred barrels or less, forty-gallon proof, is restored.

The next question of difference between the two Houses was with reference to the tax on matches. The House in passing this bill last June provided for removing that tax. The Senate restored the tax; and the House the other day refused to concur. The committee of conference, upon full consideration of the question, decided to recommend concurrence in the action of the Senate, which proposes to continue the tax on matches at the present rate.

The third question of difference between the two Houses was upon the amendment in reference to the taxes on bank deposits. The amendment introduced in the Senate by the Senator from Kansas, Mr. PLUMB, and which was a part of the bill as returned from the Senate to this House, was to this effect:

The exemption provided for by this section shall equally apply to all savings deposits in any organized bank whatever.

The House will perceive that the amendment as adopted by the Senate extended to all savings deposits in all banks the exemption which was provided by the House in reference merely to deposits in savings institutions. The House refused to concur in that amendment, and the committee of conference sustains the House in this non-concurrence; so that the clause I have just read is struck out.

Mr. PRICE. I would like to ask what is meant by "savings in any bank." That is what troubles a good many members.

Mr. TUCKER. That is struck out.

Mr. PRICE. Let me ask another question. In the first part of the amendment it is provided that all insolvent banks shall be exempted from taxation under certain circumstances; and in a subsequent part of the same paragraph it speaks of "all State banks." Now a State bank is not a national bank, and a national bank is not a State bank. What do you mean by a State bank?

Mr. TUCKER. I think we mean just exactly what you say—that a State bank is not a national bank, and a national bank is not a State bank.

Mr. PRICE. Yet the first part of the amendment says "all banks."

Mr. TUCKER. I will come to that in a moment. I am speaking now of the amendment of Senator PLUMB, of Kansas.

Mr. BRIGHT. Allow me to ask in what respect does the amendment differ from the existing law?

Mr. TUCKER. I am coming to that in a moment. The committee of conference struck out entirely the three lines on the last page of the bill which were inserted in the Senate, upon the motion of Mr. PLUMB, of Kansas, and which extended the exemption in reference to savings deposits, so as to apply to national banks or any other kind of banks than savings-banks. The House view on this subject has been sustained by the committee of conference. We retain the first clause of the Senate amendment in reference to insolvent banks, which is as follows:

That whenever and after any bank has ceased to do business by reason of insolvency or bankruptcy, no tax shall be assessed or collected, or paid into the Treasury of the United States, on account of such bank, which shall diminish the assets thereof necessary for the full payment of all its depositors; and such tax shall be abated from such national banks as are found by the Comptroller of the Currency to be insolvent; and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, when the facts shall so appear to him, is authorized to remit so much of said tax against insolvent State and savings banks as shall be found to affect the claims of their depositors.

Now, in explaining this first branch of the amendment, I shall answer I think the questions that have been propounded to me. The first part refers to all banks; the latter part discriminates between national banks, State banks, and savings-banks, because these several banks are under the control of different branches of the Treasury Department. But the effect of the provision is the same as to all—that wherever a question arises between the claim of the Government for taxes and the claim of a depositor in an insolvent bank the Government, in behalf of the depositor, recedes from its claim. That is the whole of it.

Mr. PRICE. Let me ask what possible claim the Government can have upon a national bank?

Mr. TUCKER. If the gentleman will look into the Revised Statutes he will find that there are several such claims—a tax on deposits, a tax on capital, a tax on circulation.

Mr. PRICE. That is all true; but as security for all that the Government holds in bonds 10 per cent. more than the amount of notes furnished to the bank; and there is a provision in the law requiring a national bank at any time, under the direction of the Comptroller of the Currency, to make a further deposit of bonds with the Government.

Mr. TUCKER. I do not think it is necessary to go into that.

Mr. ROBBINS. When insolvent they have not got it.

Mr. PRICE. The bonds are with the Government.

Mr. TUCKER. Now let me proceed.

Mr. BURCHARD. Will my colleague on the committee yield to me for a moment?

Mr. TUCKER. Certainly.

Mr. BURCHARD. Whenever a bank, national, State, or savings, becomes insolvent the deposits necessarily remain either with the bank officers or the receiver or other officer having charge of the bank. These taxes are paid every six months. When a bank becomes actually insolvent it seems unjust while it is winding up its affairs, the bank having ceased to do business, that the Government should insist upon taxing the deposits remaining in the interest only of the depositors, and not for the benefit of the stockholders.

Mr. PRICE. As protecting the depositor as against the claim by the Government for taxes, that is all right. But the point I made was that they speak about insolvent "national banks" being exempt from taxation under certain circumstances, and in the latter part of the clause they call them "State banks."

Mr. TUCKER. I will proceed to the next provision, which is a long one, in reference to matters before the Committee of Ways and Means and this House for some time, the tax on savings-banks deposits. If the House will give me its attention for a moment I will explain it. In the year 1872 or 1873 the law operated thus in some of the States of New England: there were some deposits of a mercantile character as well as savings deposits in some of the savings-banks, and the question was whether they should be assessed on all the deposits because they did a business in mercantile deposits. The claim was made, but it was abandoned, and these institutions went on for years in this way until the claim was raised again, in 1876 I think it was. The only question is this: whether these banks shall be released from the claim which is now made upon them, a sort of ex post facto thing, abandoned by the law officers for three or four years. That was reported upon favorably, I think, by the Committee of Ways and Means of this House, and the provision inserted in this bill simply releases those savings institutions from taxes of the past without changing the law as to the future, exempting them only from the tax in the past. We had a limitation that it should not apply to the future at all, but only in respect to those things, as in good faith they had gone on with their business upon the idea the Government had no claim upon them for such taxes.

Mr. BRIGHT. Do I understand the gentleman to say the release is only in reference to taxes in the past, or that for the future the law is left as it is in reference to deposits in these savings institutions?

Mr. TUCKER. The gentleman need not be under any uneasiness. I will go through the whole of them. The next provision is one in reference to the tax on the deposits in savings and provident institutions. On this provision the amendment of the Senator from Kansas was ingrafted. We struck out that amendment, and the only thing which remains is the exemption of deposits in savings institutions from tax to the extent of $2,000 and to the extent of investments made in United States securities. We have in conference looked over this amendment with a great deal of care, and have modified it, I think, in such a way as there can be no objection to it. We have provided it shall only apply to savings deposits of poor people—savings deposits in savings institutions, which savings institutions on the face of our amendment are to do no other thing than to receive savings deposits and invest them for the sole benefit of the depositors.

A MEMBER. For the capital stock.

Mr. TUCKER. But you will note the amendment is so drawn that if they have capital stock they will get rid of it soon, as they can do nothing in it, because they can do no other business than receive savings and invest them for the sole benefit of the depositors. Where a man has $2,000 on deposit it is provided he shall be exempt from taxation, but all above $2,000, no matter who he is, it is provided shall be subject to taxation.

The whole purpose of this, Mr. Speaker, may be expressed in a very few words. When poor people put their deposits in these savings institutions day by day, the question is whether, in the language of another which I choose to quote, the economy of industrial property shall be taxed by this Government? That is the whole question, and I say without hesitation that it is fair to the honest, hard-working man, where, from the savings of his monthly and weekly labor he puts by a little for a rainy day, the Government shall say that is exempt from taxation. And I call upon the friends of the poor man in this House to vote for the amendment, and not vote it down.

A MEMBER. You are looking to this side of the House.

Mr. TUCKER. I am looking on all sides. There are a great many of the friends of the poor, except when they want a friend.

Mr. BRIGHT. I desire to ask the gentleman a question. I ask if the rich man cannot deposit $2,000, and if any number of them by so uniting cannot do a banking business without paying tax to the Government?

Mr. TUCKER. That is provided for. It is provided that this applies only to a deposit in the name of and belonging to any one person; and if any one tries by a subterfuge to put in, in his own name, what does not belong to him, the bank is taxed for it.

Now I believe I have made a candid confession, which, it is said, is good for the soul, and I move the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. TUCKER. We have heard enough about this internal-revenue bill. I must insist on the motion for the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. I merely desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. TUCKER. Very well.

Mr. CONGER. What effort was made in the committee to sustain the thrice-repeated action of this House in repealing the duty on matches, thus saving the poor men of the United States from unnecessary taxation?

Mr. TUCKER. I will answer the gentleman's question and not his speech. If he has finished his question and will sit down I will give him his answer.

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman need not be so very much affrighted by my standing.

Mr. TUCKER. Not in the least. I have seen much more dangerous persons than the gentleman from Michigan without being affrighted.

Mr. CONGER. If the gentleman will spare his courtesy and answer a plain question, I will be obliged to him.

Mr. TUCKER. I have always some courtesy to spare for the gentleman, for he needs it very much.

I will answer the question. In my judgment it would be a matter of impertinence on my part to answer a question as to what occurred in the committee of conference. I will not say whether it is a matter of impertinence on the part of any gentleman of this House to ask it. But I stated in opening that the members of the committee on the part of the House, as well as those on the part of the Senate entered into a full and free conference on all these matters and determined as I have reported. I do not feel that I am at liberty to detail the conversations and discussions that occurred before the committee of conference. As regards the matter referred to by the gentleman from Michigan, we have reported what at least I believe to be right, that the tax on matches should be retained in the present condition of the finances. I now move the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. I ask the gentleman, before he moves the previous question, to yield me two minutes.

Mr. TUCKER. No, sir; if I yield to the gentleman from Michigan, somebody else will want time.

Mr. CONGER. Then I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. TUCKER. How long does the gentleman want?

Mr. CONGER. Five minutes now; I only asked for two at first.

Mr. TUCKER. As the gentleman's principal has been growing so rapidly by the addition of interest, I decline.

Mr. CONGER. I move that the House do now adjourn. If a whisky bill cannot be talked about in this House, I think we had better adjourn.

Many members called for the regular order.

The question being taken on the motion to adjourn, there were—ayes 80, noes 120.

Mr. CONGER. I ask for tellers on the motion to adjourn.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. CONGER and Mr. TUCKER were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 55, noes 112.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. CONGER. I now move to lay the conference report on the table, and on that motion I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to a question of order. It has been uniformly ruled that the motion to lay a conference report on the table cannot be entertained. I remember in a former Congress Mr. HOAR, of Massachusetts, made that point of order while I was in the chair. I did not know at that time that any previous decision had been made; but he produced the decision of Speaker BLAINE.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks many such decisions have been made.

Mr. SPRINGER. Upon the point of order made by Mr. HOAR, following the previous decision by Speaker BLAINE, I sustained the point of order as against the motion to lay a conference report on the table; and I believe that has been the uniform ruling, that a motion to lay a conference report on the table cannot be entertained.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recollects the two cases which have been referred to by the gentleman from Illinois. The Chair will cause to be read what appears in the Digest in regard to the decisions alluded to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The report may be laid on the table.—Journal, 1, 31, page 1590. But it has since been decided otherwise. (See Journals passim.) [And its effect will be to lay the bill also on the table.—Barclay.]

[This opinion of Mr. Barclay was never sustained by the House. Speakers COLFAX and BLAINE decided against it, and subsequent Speakers and Speakers pro tempore have coincided therewith. Speaker BLAINE, desiring the opinion of the House on this point, requested Mr. GEORGE F. HOAR to take an appeal; which was done, and the decision was, on division, sustained—yeas 98, nays 25.—Journal, 2, 42, page 1129.]

The later decisions are now recognized as the correct practice.

The SPEAKER. The Chair remembers, during his own occupancy of the chair, when a motion was made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] to lay the report of a conference committee on the river and harbor bill on the table, that his decision conformed to the rulings of Speaker BLAINE and Speaker COLFAX.

Mr. GARFIELD. Does the Chair rule that the motion is in order?

The SPEAKER. The Chair rules that it is not in order. It would take the whole bill with it.

Mr. GARFIELD. I want to say a word upon the point of order. It seems to me a reasonable rule that while a proposition before the House is unfinished, the House ought to have a right to kill it.

Now, I had not intended in any way to delay action upon this bill. It was my purpose, and I expressed it to several gentlemen upon both sides of the House, while I did not intend to delay action, to propose such action as would defeat the bill, and that action would be a motion to lay it upon the table, and it seems to me that motion is in order.

The SPEAKER. Reports of committees of conference are regulated by the joint rules and action of the two Houses.

Mr. GARFIELD. But suppose the House refuses to concur in the report of the committee of conference?

The SPEAKER. The House can vote down the report of the committee of conference, and can refuse to appoint another committee of conference.

Mr. GARFIELD. It seems to me that the House has a right, and ought to have the right, to dispose of the bill finally upon the report of the committee of conference.

Mr. MILLS. The House can vote down this report and then refuse to concur in a request for a further conference.

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. GARFIELD. But the trouble is that it gives the Senate exclusive power over the House.

The SPEAKER. The whole theory of the rule goes to this extent, that where the two Houses differ, and the bill has been acted upon in each House, there may be a recess on the part of either House from the points of difference, and pass the bill, and that is a right the Chair thinks is in the direction of the conclusion of legislation.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONGER. I do not desire to argue the point of order, nor influence the Chair to make any other decision contrary to a former decision. If I have mistaken the motion which would have been proper for me to make, I do not wish to insist upon it.

The SPEAKER. The theory of the decision would seem to imply that a motion to lay the conference report on the table carries the bill with it.

Mr. GARFIELD. Would it now be in order to move to recommit the bill? Without the slightest willingness even to delay the House I really desire that this bill shall not become a law, and I want to know if there is any mode possible by which this House can prevent it from becoming a law.

Mr. CARLISLE. They can do it by refusing to agree to the report of the committee of conference, and the Senate would still have the right to recede from its amendments.

Mr. GARFIELD. That would not reach the case. The Senate would have us in its power, and I ask therefore if it is not in order to move to recommit the bill?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not; the demand for the previous question, if sustained, would cut off that proposition.

Mr. CONGER. Previous to that I move that the House do now adjourn; and, pending that motion, I move that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at ten o'clock to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The House has just voted on a motion to adjourn, and the Chair therefore will entertain the latter motion only.

Mr. CONGER. Business has intervened; the Chair has ruled upon the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that that is not business in the sense the gentleman desires to give it.

Mr. CONGER. Then I move that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at ten o'clock to-morrow, and on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] demands the previous question, and pending that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] moves that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at ten o'clock to-morrow. The Chair thinks, however, that that would be a recess.

Mr. CONGER. I move, then, that the House take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. TUCKER. I would ask the gentleman from Michigan if he feels at liberty to say that if I yield him five minutes he will then make no other dilatory motion?

Mr. CONGER. I have not desired to make any dilatory motion. I am something like Falstaff. I do not like to give a reason on compulsion. If reasons were as thick as blackberries I would not give the gentleman one. [Laughter.] I have desired to say a word or two upon this question.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Virginia yield to the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. TUCKER. I will yield to him for five minutes upon the condition that that will end the matter.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Virginia after the gentleman from Michigan shall have concluded.

Mr. COBB. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. CONGER. I believe I have the floor. [Cries of "Regular order."]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana will suspend his motion to receive a message from the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested, resolutions of the House to print extra copies of the memorial addresses upon the life and character of the late Gustave Schleicher of Texas, of Alpheus S. Williams of Michigan, and of Julian Hartridge of Georgia.

The message further announced that the Senate insisted on its amendments disagreed to by the House to the bill (H. R. No. 6145) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked by the House upon the disagreeing votes thereon, and had appointed as conferees on the part of the Senate Mr. BLAINE, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. WITHERS.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CONGER. Now, if I am recognized by the Chair—

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. CONGER. Then I will yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. COBB] to make his motion.

Mr. TUCKER. If the gentleman yields the floor—

Mr. CONGER. I do not yield the floor.

Mr. COBB. I understand that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] yields to me to make the motion that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. That is not unusual.

Mr. COBB. With the understanding of course that when this question comes up again to-morrow the gentleman from Michigan will be entitled to the floor.

Mr. CARLISLE. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] is speaking in the time of the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER.]

The SPEAKER. He is, although the previous question is not yet operating.

Mr. COBB. Then I move that the House now adjourn.

The question was taken; and upon a division there were—ayes 97, noes 92.

So the motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at five o'clock and thirty-five minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as stated:

By Mr. BLAIR: The petition of C. Logan and others, citizens of New York, for a commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, the petition of the Methodist Episcopal church of Vineland, New Jersey, of similar import—to the same committee.

Also, the petition of John C. Eastlack and others, citizens of Mantou, Missouri, of similar import—to the same committee.

Also, the petition of the First Baptist church of Watertown, Massachusetts, signed by the pastor, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. CLAFLIN: The petition of manufacturers, wholesale dealers, and others interested in the making of boots and shoes, to prevent the proposed extension of the McKay sewing-machine patent—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. CUTLER: The petition of the Fairmount Baptist church of Newark, New Jersey, signed by the pastor, for a commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FRYE: The petition of the Baptist church of North Reading, Massachusetts, signed by the pastor, of similar import—to the same committee.

Also, the petition of the First Reformed church of Orange, New Jersey, signed by the pastor, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. GARFIELD: The petition of Joel S. Wright and others, citizens of Leesburgh, Ohio, for a commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GLOVER: The petition of citizens of Knox County, Missouri, for legislation to prevent the adulteration of food—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. HARDENBERGH: The petition of citizens of Boston, Massachusetts, and vicinity, against the extension of the McKay and Mathies sewing-machine patent—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. HENDERSON: The petition of Mrs. H. McVay and 129 other women, of Granville, Putnam County, Illinois, for such legislation as will make more effective the anti-polygamy law of 1862—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HOOKER: The petition of citizens of Mississippi, for a post-route from Martin, via Utica, Raymond, and Clinton, to Jackson, Mississippi—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. MCKINLEY: The petition of Dr. A. M. Weidner, of McDonaldsville, Stark County, Ohio, for Congress to consider his great medical discovery for the saving of human life—to the committee on the origin, introduction, and prevention of epidemic diseases in the United States.

By Mr. MONROE: The petition of Aaron B. Nordyke and others, citizens of New Vienna, Ohio, for a commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PHILLIPS: Concurrent resolution of the Kansas Legislature, praying that the copyright of decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States vest with the secretary of state of each State, and that the publication be let to the lowest bidder—to the same committee.

By Mr. RICE, of Ohio: Papers relating to the pension claim of John J. Purcell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SINICKSON: The petition of 700 citizens of Vineland, New Jersey, for a commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. THOMPSON: The petition of citizens of Butler County, Pennsylvania, for such legislation as will make more effective the anti-polygamy law of 1862—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TOWNSHEND, of Illinois: The petition of Mary C. Swan and 106 other women, of Enfield, Illinois, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. WADDELL: The petition of citizens of North Carolina, for an appropriation to open Bogue Sound, Newport River, and White Oak River—to the Committee on Commerce.

IN SENATE.

THURSDAY, February 27, 1879.

The Senate met at eleven o'clock a. m.
Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. BYRON SUNDERLAND, D. D.

THE JOURNAL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will delay the reading of the Journal a few minutes until Senators come in.

Mr. WADLEIGH, (at eleven o'clock and five minutes a. m.) Mr. President, is it in order for me to make a report from a committee?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is not. The Journal has not yet been read. No quorum is present.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask for a call of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll of the Senate.

The Secretary called the roll, and forty Senators answered to their names.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is a quorum present. The Secretary will read the Journal of the proceedings of yesterday.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, the Journal is a very fine composition and somewhat delightful. I do not know that there is but a single objection that I have to it at all, and it is that somebody sticks into the Journal and sticks into our report the word "who" where the word "which" ought to appear in regard to a committee, which is such a gross grammatical error that I think it ought long since to have been corrected. However, it is not my object to correct that error now, but to say that fine as is the composition, and novel as it will be to our ear this morning, I think the Senate will forego half an hour in reading it; and therefore I move that the reading be dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maine moves that the further reading of the Journal be dispensed with. It requires unanimous consent.

Mr. HAMLIN. I ask that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to ask the correction of the Journal. The Secretary read that the Committee on Claims on my motion were discharged from the further consideration of the petition of William H. Sneed. The order of the Senate was that the petition be indefinitely postponed. I made precisely the same report as in the preceding case but the report was oral and not in writing. I move that the Journal be corrected in that manner.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be corrected in that respect.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. CONOVER presented the petition of Robert Jones and 335 others, colored citizens of Columbia County, Florida, setting forth the great wrongs done to the colored people in that State, and praying that Congress will take some action in the premises; which was referred to the select committee to inquire into alleged frauds in the late elections.

Mr. GARLAND presented a memorial of the Legislature of Arkansas, in favor of an appropriation of $20,000 by Congress for the improvement of the main channel of the Arkansas River at Pine Bluffs, in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. HILL presented the petition of John F. Wheaton, mayor of Savannah, Georgia, and many others, citizens of that city, praying for the passage of a law authorizing the improvement of the route known as the inland route between Savannah, Georgia, and Jacksonville, Florida; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented the petition of Edward Hopkins and many others, citizens of Jacksonville, Florida, praying for the passage of a law authorizing the improvement of the route known as the inland route between Savannah, Georgia, and Jacksonville, Florida; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. WHYTE presented the memorial of Charles Dressel, of Baltimore, Maryland, praying for an allowance of a sum of money to compensate him for services rendered as second lieutenant of Company I, First Regiment Kansas Volunteers, during the late war; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. ROLLINS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 942) to authorize the Secretary of War to construct a bridge across the Potomac River at or near the Three Sisters Islands, reported it with amendments.

Mr. CONOVER, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 246) for the relief John R. Nichols, late postmaster at Athens, Georgia, reported it without amendment.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4009) for the relief of John N. Bonesteel and James T. Conklin, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. WADLEIGH, from the Committee on Patents, to whom was referred the claim of David Huestis, for the payment of the amount due him for the use of his patent for an improved method of obtaining a perfect shell or shot, submitted a report thereon accompanied by a bill (S. No. 1862) for the relief of David Huestis.

The bill was read twice by its title, and the report was ordered to be printed.

Mr. HOAR. I am directed by the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. No. 1668) for the relief of John M. Dorsey and William F. Shepard, to make a favorable report and request that the bill be placed on the Calendar. I desire to say that the Committee on Claims of the Senate has twice in former years reported unanimously in favor of this bill. At the present session some of the members of the committee were unable to give the bill full examination, and the report is made with the understanding that it is not to be called up at this session of the Senate.

Mr. VOORHEES, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 6250) granting a pension to Morris Dwight, reported it without amendment.

Mr. CONKLING, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1443) for the relief of vessels of the United States officered by aliens, reported it without amendment.

Mr. HOWE, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1642) to amend section 5356 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. R. No. 191) releasing the reversionary claim and interest of the United States in and to certain lands in the State of Michigan, reported it with an amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1669) for the relief of Austin G. Day, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. ANTHONY, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill submitted by Mr. PADDOCK on the subject of forestry, asked to be discharged from its further consideration and that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to whom was referred the memorial of Professor Edward Fontaine, of Louisiana, with a resolution for printing certain maps, drawings, and explanations of the same, have instructed me to ask to be discharged from their further consideration. The matter is provided for in a joint resolution which was passed yesterday.

The report was agreed to.

CAPTAIN S. S. BLACKFORD.

Mr. ROLLINS. I am directed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to report favorably the resolution referred to that committee a few days ago to pay Captain Blackford for injuries received in the discharge of his duty, and I ask that it be acted upon now.

The Senate proceeded to consider the following resolution submitted by Mr. MITCHELL on the 21st instant:

Whereas S. S. Blackford, in the proper discharge of his duties as captain of the Capitol police, while making an arrest in the Capitol on the 26th day of December, 1878, was seriously injured, having the top bone of his right and only arm fractured and his arm otherwise disabled, so as to render him almost entirely helpless for a period of more than six weeks, and from the results of which injuries he may never recover: Therefore,

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the said S. S. Blackford, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, the sum of $500, to enable him to pay for medical and other expenses incurred and which may hereafter be incurred on account of said injuries.

Mr. KERNAN. Is there a written report upon that resolution?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is no written report.

Mr. ROLLINS. I will state the facts in the case.

Mr. KERNAN. I should be glad to hear some explanation of it.

Mr. ROLLINS. Captain Blackford is the chief of the Capitol police force. In the discharge of his duty not long since he undertook to arrest an intoxicated man. As this police officer has but one arm, the other having been lost in the service of his country, he could not properly defend himself. He was assaulted violently by an intoxicated man and injured very seriously. The party making the assault is now in jail awaiting trial. I believe his other arm was broken; so that having lost one arm in the service of the country he is now almost, for the time being at any rate, deprived of the use of the other arm.

Mr. KERNAN. It seems to be ungracious to object to such a measure. Of course for the arm lost in the service he gets a pension, and if we begin to pay men for casualties that occur in official duties of this kind there will never be an end to the practice. No city compensates its policemen by paying their bills when they get hurt while in its service. They seek that service and get paid for it. What I object to is that it is beginning a line of expenditure to which there could scarcely be too much objection. I have no doubt this man was a good soldier, but we should not for that reason pay him for injuries sustained in acting as a policeman.

Mr. ROLLINS. There are several precedents for this action.

Mr. INGALLS. This is not, as the Senator from New York would seem to intimate, an innovation. There are many precedents for the action that is now invoked on the part of the Senate. A memorandum has been handed me from the journals of the House and Senate, showing that on the 14th of December, 1874, the House paid the expenses of a member of the Capitol police force who was injured, to the extent of $350. The Senator will also doubtless remember the case of Mr. Cutler, one of our own employes, who was injured by an explosion of gas in the basement of the Capitol, being seriously injured by fire. The Senate voted him the sum of $3,000 out of the contingent fund of the Senate. On the 1st of June, 1878, Mr. Lemon, another member of the Capitol police, was paid, for injuries received while he was in the discharge of his duties, the sum of $3,000.

Captain Blackford is the captain of the police force and a man of singular ability, and, as the Senator from New Hampshire has stated, a one-armed man. Being assaulted in the discharge of his duties he was thrown violently to the ground, and in the course of the struggle was injured by the fracture of his remaining arm. All that he asks is a small sum sufficient to compensate him for the actual expense incurred in medical attendance while he was so injured and unable to attend to his duties.

Mr. KERNAN. I did not say that this was an innovation; I said it would be a precedent. I ought to have said that it would be another precedent. The case of the gentleman who was injured by the explosion of gas I suppose was put on a ground that would enable him to recover against any private employer, because if an employer furnishes an employe defective apparatus he is liable for any injury resulting therefrom. But my objection is to assuming that when men are in our service as messengers or policemen or otherwise, if they get into a difficulty in doing their duty, and may be beaten or hurt, we are to make it up to them. Now I am frank to say that I do not think that is what the legislature should do.

I have said all that I desire to say. I have as much sympathy as any one can have for this person, but we let these things run on and there will be no end of them.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. President—

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from Rhode Island permit me to have the Secretary read the physician's certificate, so that the Senate can have the exact case before them?

Mr. ANTHONY. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I ask the Secretary to read the physician's certificate which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The paper will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 14, 1879.

This is to certify that I was called to attend S. S. Blackford, captain of the Capitol police, on the 26th day of December, 1878. I found him suffering from an injury to the forearm, including a fracture of the neck of the radial bone of his right and only arm, rupture of the ligament attached thereto, and attended with inflammation of the sheaths of the tendons and interosseous tissue. The lower third of the ulnar bone was also injured, as also the bones and cartilages of the wrist. This injury has caused Mr. Blackford much suffering, and disabled him for duty for five or six weeks, and still will require medical treatment for months to come, and is a disability which will in all probability affect him more or less during life.

E. C. MERRIAM, M. D.

Mr. HOAR. I want to correct a word read in the letter. The Clerk read it "the radial bone." [Laughter.] It is the "radial bone." If he had a "radical bone" in his arm, I could account for the opposition of the Senator from New York. [Laughter.]

Mr. INGALLS. All his bones are radical.

Mr. KERNAN. I want to say that I assume that the captain drew his pay while disabled, so that there is nothing in that except the suffering and doctoring.

Mr. ANTHONY. This is in the exact line of precedents established by the Senate.

Mr. KERNAN. I am afraid it is, and therefore we ought to stop it.

Mr. ANTHONY. I think it is within the fair limits of the contingent fund. I also think that my friend from New York is mistaken in saying that municipal corporations do not compensate policemen for injuries suffered while in the discharge of their duty. I do not know how it is in the wicked city of New York, but I know in the good city of Providence we always compensate policemen for injuries sustained by them in the discharge of their duty.

Mr. KERNAN. I have no doubt that in my good friend's State they will take care of every fisherman who is injured; but why should we pay a policeman his salary when he is disabled by injuries and then compensate him in addition for arresting a man? I have never heard of its being done.

Mr. HOAR. This is the case of a man in the personal service of the Senate, if I may use that phrase properly, and almost in its presence. It is not the case of duties performed by officers all over the country, but it is a case of one of the force which is necessary for the preservation of the order of the Senate. Now, in defending the Senate Chamber—the Capitol itself—against the invasion of an intoxicated person this injury was done. There is no citizen or employer of labor who would not compensate a person under the same circumstances.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senate agree to the resolution? The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 20, noes 14; no quorum voting.

Mr. MITCHELL. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. ANTHONY. There is a quorum in the Senate if Senators will vote. I think we had better divide again.

Mr. HAMLIN. Divide once more.

The question being again put, there were on a division—ayes 21, noes 13; no quorum voting.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. We had better have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. EATON. Mr. President, I am ordinarily as much in favor as any Senator on this floor can be of paying the little claims that are made by officers of the Senate, but I have understood in regard to this very transaction a certain fact which would take this out of the ordinary cases. I understand it to be true that a man was arrested by two of the police officers connected with the force, when this captain came up and assaulted the man—not the man the captain. The captain would better have attended to his own business. When the man was being taken to the lockup by those who had arrested him, as I understand the case, this captain, forgetting his own position as the chief of the police, assaulted the man, and the man when he was down upon the floor got the officer by the legs and threw him down, and in the fall his arm was injured. Such I understand to be the case; and if it be so, this officer ought not to receive one dollar. He was in the discharge of his duty, but he forgot what was due to his position as the chief of the police and assaulted a man who was in charge of officers who had arrested him.

Mr. ROLLINS. I am led to believe that the Senator from Connecticut is laboring under a misapprehension.

Mr. EATON. Somebody is; that is certain.

Mr. ROLLINS. Certainly, if the Committee on Contingent Expenses had understood the facts to be as represented by the Senator from Connecticut there would have been no favorable report upon this preamble and resolution. The Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate reports that Captain Blackford was in the discharge of his official duties, and there has been no representation whatever made to the committee such as the Senator from Connecticut now states.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from New Hampshire yield to me a moment?

Mr. ROLLINS. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I know this officer personally very well. I believe him, and I think I may say I know him to be a man of truth and character. He tells me that the account which has been given to the Senator from Connecticut is wholly incorrect, and that somebody has wholly misstated the facts to the Senator from Connecticut; that there was no other officer present when the arrest was made; that he arrested the man alone, took him to the lockup alone, and there was no other officer present until he sent for some other assistant; and that no such transaction as has been related by the Senator from Connecticut happened.

Of course I do not know what the fact is. I know that the Senator from Connecticut would not state anything which he did not thoroughly believe; and I think I know that the captain of the police could make no assertion which was not true. That is what he tells me.

Mr. ROLLINS. I have the report before me of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate.

Mr. EATON. I should be glad to hear it.

Mr. ROLLINS. This matter was referred to the Sergeant-at-Arms before any action was taken by the committee. This report consists of only three or four lines.

Mr. EATON. I think this resolution had better go over and let us ascertain the facts. I want this man to be paid if it be right to pay him, but my information came from such a source as I believe to be reliable.

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the Senator allow me one word before the resolution goes over?

Mr. EATON. I hope it will go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will only go over upon motion. It has been entertained by the Senate for half an hour.

Mr. ROLLINS. In justice to Captain Blackford I desire to have the report of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate read. The case was submitted to the Sergeant-at-Arms before any action was taken by the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

WASHINGTON, February 25, 1879.

To the Senate Committee on Contingent Expenses:

Captain Blackford, a faithful officer, was severely and cruelly disabled while in the discharge of his duty, and certainly simple justice, as well as numerous precedents, suggests the propriety of Government aid and recompense.

JOHN R. FRENCH,
Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. ROLLINS. That is upon the back of the sheet containing the statement of the captain of the case. The Sergeant-at-Arms indorses the facts as stated by Captain Blackford, which are entirely contrary to the representations which have been made to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. EATON. The Sergeant-at-Arms has no knowledge of this matter. I have just conversed with him. He certifies to what? To what the man desiring $500 tells him. My friend from Massachusetts [Mr. Hoar] has certified to that already, and it did not need the certificate of the Sergeant-at-Arms. I move that this resolution be laid on the table for the present. I desire to vote for it, and I will take occasion to see the officer myself.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut moves that the further consideration of the resolution be postponed.

Mr. MITCHELL. I hope not.

Mr. EATON. I will call it up as soon as possible. I want to see into it.

The motion was agreed to.

EXERCISE OF ELECTIVE FRANCHISE.

Mr. TELLER. I am instructed by the special committee appointed to investigate the late election frauds to report upon the examination in Louisiana and South Carolina. I will say that the minority of the committee reserve the right at some subsequent period to file their views.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be received and printed.

Mr. TELLER. I submit the following resolution, and ask for its present consideration:

Resolved, That the select committee appointed under the resolutions adopted on the 17th of December, 1878, to inquire into certain alleged violations of the constitutional rights of American citizens in recent elections in any of the States of the Union be continued, with power to report at the next session of the Senate; and said committee shall have authority to sit during the recess of the Senate, and shall possess, during said recess and until its report shall have been made, all the power and authority heretofore conferred on it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. BAYARD. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. TELLER. I will state that it is the unanimous desire of the committee to have this action. The committee were together this morning, and all agreed to it. I think the objection will be withdrawn when this fact is understood.

Mr. BAYARD. I think the Senator scarcely comprehends the difficulty of understanding a resolution read rapidly from the desk. It is not my desire to avoid any question the Senator thinks proper to bring up, but I merely like to understand it so that I may vote on it intelligently. If it is printed and lies over until to-morrow, it can then be brought up.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution lies over.

JOSEPHINE C. OWEN.

Mr. HAMLIN. The Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to which was referred the bill (H. R. No. 1243) for the relief of Josephine C. Owen, postmaster at Randolph, New York, have directed me to report the bill without amendment and recommend its passage.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. President, I want to say to the Senate that this is a little bill, which has passed the House, in favor of a widowed lady with a large family of children. She has paid this money to the Post-Office Department like an honest woman. It comes within the rules that the Senate have laid down in the past in hundreds of such bills, and I ask that the Senate will allow it to pass now.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Josephine C. Owen, postmaster at Randolph, New York, $815, to reimburse her for the loss of postage-stamps and money belonging to the post-office, which were stolen from the vault of the bank in Randolph, where they had been deposited for safe-keeping, without negligence on the part of the postmaster.

EDUCATIONAL REPORT.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to which was referred a resolution to print the report of the Commissioner of Education, have instructed me to report the same without amendment and recommend its passage. I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to; as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring.) That of the report of the Commissioner of Education for 1877 there be printed 5,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 10,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 10,000 copies for distribution by the Commissioner.

PARIS MONETARY CONFERENCE.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to which was recommitted a resolution to print additional copies of the proceedings of the international monetary conference, have instructed me to report it with an amendment. This resolution was passed by the Senate with an amendment, and an amendment was adopted to include the proceedings; and then it was reconsidered and recommitted to the committee to ascertain the expense. It will cost $1,800. The committee recommend its passage.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendment reported from the Committee on Printing was, in line 3, after the word "printed," to insert the words "and bound in cloth;" so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring.) That 10,000 extra copies of the report and the proceedings of the Paris monetary conference, held last year, be printed and bound in cloth; 6,000 for the use of the House, 3,000 for the use of the Senate, and 1,000 for the State Department.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

AGRICULTURAL REPORT.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to which was referred a resolution to print 300,000 copies of the Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1878, have instructed me to report it back with amendments. The amendments reduce the number to 200,000.

By unanimous consent, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendments reported by the committee were, in line 2, to strike out "three" and insert "two;" in line 3, to strike out "two hundred and twenty-four" and insert "one hundred and fifty;" in line 5, to strike out "fifty-six" and insert "thirty-five;" in line 7, to strike out "twenty" and insert "fifteen," and at the end of the resolution to insert:

Provided, however, That the number of pages of said report shall not exceed six hundred.

So as to make the resolution read:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring.) That there be printed 200,000 copies of the Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1878; 150,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, 35,000 copies for the use of the Senate, and 15,000 copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture: Provided, however, That the number of pages of said report shall not exceed six hundred.

Mr. INGALLS. How many copies were printed last year?

Mr. PADDOCK. Three hundred thousand copies. I cannot see upon what theory the Printing Committee report an amendment to cut the number down one-third below the usual number, which is 300,000. The report is the most useful report that has ever yet been offered by the Government. It embraces the subject of hog cholera, which has been very carefully and thoroughly investigated. It certainly seems to me that there is no printing Congress can order which is so useful to the country at the present time as this.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendments reported by the Committee on Printing.

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope the amendments will not be concurred in, and that the resolution will be adopted exactly as it was introduced and as it was drawn by the Commissioner himself and presented for the consideration of the Senate.

Mr. ANTHONY. If we pass resolutions to print the reports of the heads of bureaus as they are drawn by the heads of bureaus themselves, our printing will absorb a much larger part of the revenues of the country than it does now. The Senator from Nebraska is not aware of the reason which induced the committee to propose this amendment. The reason is in the direction of economy. This book, if printed according to the original resolution, will cost $125,000, and as amended by the committee the edition will cost $90,000. That is a very large proportion of the whole cost of the public printing. It seems to me if this report is so very valuable, which I do not doubt, as there is no copyright upon it it can be reprinted and sold to those who wish to purchase it.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I commend the economy of the Senator from Rhode Island in trying to save the expenses of the public printing. I have witnessed, I think, the expenditure of a large amount of money unnecessarily in the public printing ordered by this body. I wish to say, however, that there is no book printed by the Senate that is so generally desired as the Agricultural Report. While I believe that that report contains many things that are of no practical value, yet it is a book that is sought by the agricultural communities of this country. I reside in an agricultural community, and there is scarcely a farmer in all that section of country that I know of who does not gladly receive the Agricultural Report. I think we had better print those books which the people appreciate, and omit printing those which they do not appreciate. I have standing now to my credit in the document room a large number of volumes of the President's message and accompanying documents. That is a valuable document; that is a document which in the hands of certain persons is very desirable; but the great mass of the people do not desire it, and so with many other publications. This Agricultural Report, however, is one which the people do desire. While I myself believe that it is not nearly so valuable as it is estimated, I think we ought to gratify those people who are engaged in agriculture who may want the book. I therefore think that I shall not vote for the amendment of the Committee on Printing. While I am in favor of economy in the printing of documents for distribution, I think we ought to print those which are more generally desired, and omit those which are of no practical utility.

Mr. ANTHONY. I did not expect to be deserted by my friend from Delaware on a question of economy in printing. When he was a member of the Committee on Printing he was in favor of the most economical administration, and I regret to see that he has changed his policy. This book is undoubtedly very much desired by the agriculturists. Any book is desired that is given away; but how many people would pay forty cents a copy for the work? If we distribute three hundred thousand copies, what proportion of the farmers of the country can we reach with them? We should leave the great number ungratified, at any rate.

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator from Rhode Island is very much mistaken when he says that any book is desired that is given away. I have a very large number of books ready to be distributed to any person who will take them, and I cannot find any person applying for them. But in regard to this particular publication which is now before the Senate, I concur with the Senators from Nebraska and from Delaware in saying that it is exceedingly desired by my constituents, and the economy that would spare $35,000 in printing the ordinary edition would be of that kind which saves at the spigot and wastes at the bung. I therefore hope the resolution will pass as originally introduced by the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I desire to add to what I did say on this subject that in my opinion it is a question of very doubtful propriety whether we should continue the Agricultural Department at all. It costs a vast amount of money, and for one I do not believe that the good resulting from it is an equivalent for the money expended in its support. But as we do continue it, while we have an agricultural report made, while we go to the expense of printing a certain number of copies of the reports, I think we ought at least to make something of a fair and liberal allowance to the agriculturists of the country who desire this work.

I concur in what the Senator from Rhode Island has said in reference to my own course upon the Printing Committee. I sought to limit the amount of the expenditures in that branch, but was unable to do so to the full extent to which I desired. My object and purpose, however, was to limit them by omitting the publication of works that are of no practical utility to the country. I desire the larger number of this report, because I believe the farming community want it, and it is appreciated by them perhaps more than any book that is published by the order of Congress.

Mr. MAXEY. Mr. President, even were it of advantage to the country to abolish the Agricultural Department, this is not the proper measure on which to accomplish that object. I concur in what was said by the Senator from Kansas, [Mr. INGALLS.] The State which I represent is an agricultural State, and I suppose I have twenty applications for the Agricultural Report to one for any other public document. I do not believe, as was intimated by the Senator from Rhode Island, that the people take it simply because they will take any book that is given to them. They want the book because it is of real value to the agricultural interests. Hence in my judgment if we have to print books there can be no book printed of greater service and that will effect greater general good than the printing of the Agricultural Report.

I hope, therefore, that the resolution as presented by the Senator from Nebraska and providing for the same number ordered by the House will be adopted.

Mr. MERRIMON. I beg to say, also, that there is no publication by Congress which is more sought after in my State than the Agricultural Report. I distribute carefully the whole number allowed to myself. I am not able by the entire number to supply a large portion of the farmers of the State which I represent. I trust that the number of 300,000 will be printed and distributed.

Mr. COKE. Mr. President, I concur fully with my colleague and with the honorable Senator from North Carolina, that the Agricultural Report is a most valuable one. I regard it as the most valuable book published by the Government. The number I receive for distribution is largely insufficient to meet the demand upon me. I hope the Senate will agree to the increased number proposed by the original resolution and agreed to by the House of Representatives.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Committee on Printing.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs on agreeing to the original resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

PARIS EXPOSITION REPORTS.

Mr. ANTHONY submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring,) That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, authorized to have the reports of the commissioners of the United States to the Paris exposition of 1878, or such of them as may be accepted by him for publication, printed and bound at the Congressional Printing Office, and that in addition to the usual number there shall be 3,000 extra copies for the use of the Senate, 6,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 4,000 for the use of the Department of State.

CEMETERY LOT AT MONTGOMERY.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask the Senate to take up the bill (H. R. No. 3434) releasing title to a certain cemetery lot to the city of Montgomery, Alabama.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HOAR. Does it come from any committee?

Mr. MORGAN. From the Committee on Military Affairs.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill is on the Calendar reported favorably from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MORGAN. The bill itself recites the facts.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 3434) releasing title to a certain cemetery lot to the city of Montgomery, Alabama.

As by deed dated July 14, 1866, the city of Montgomery, Alabama, voluntarily granted to the United States a certain lot of land in the cemetery of that city to be used for the burial of United States soldiers, and for no other purpose, and as the United States, having removed the bodies of soldiers buried therein to Atlanta, have no longer need of the same, and as the said lot of land is now needed by the city of Montgomery for burial purposes, the bill releases all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the cemetery lot to the city of Montgomery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DONATION OF CONDEMNED CANNON.

Mr. HOAR. I ask leave to take up the bill (H. R. No. 6179) donating four condemned cannon to the town of Sutton, in the State of Massachusetts. Nearly all of the similar bills on the Calendar were passed last night, and this is also from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask the Senator from Massachusetts to yield to allow a bill of public importance, that I do not think will take five minutes, to be considered.

Mr. HOAR. This I have called up now, and it will not take one minute. I will then yield.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, in line 4, after the word "Massachusetts," to insert "if the same can be done without detriment to the public service;" so as to read:

That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, authorized to deliver to the town of Sutton, in the State of Massachusetts, if the same can be done without detriment to the public service, four condemned cannon, to be used in the erection of a soldiers' monument in said town.

Mr. MORRILL. I have no more objection to this than I should have to any other for the same purpose. I regard it as a great piece of deception to say that these condemned cannon are of no service to the Government, for whenever we are called upon to make new cannon of course we have to purchase the raw material at an expense of about thirty cents a pound, while these condemned cannon could be used for the purpose of making new cannon as the Government may require. Therefore I think that this indiscriminate and universal appropriation of condemned cannon is made not advisedly.

Mr. HOAR. We passed nearly all the similar bills reported from the Committee on Military Affairs, last night.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported from the Committee on Military Affairs.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

COURTS IN KANSAS.

Mr. McDONALD. I ask for the present consideration of House bill No. 5300, being a bill to provide for the holding of terms of the district and circuit courts of the United States at Fort Scott, Kansas.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning hour has expired.

Mr. McDONALD. This bill is reported favorably from the Committee on the Judiciary.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion can only be entertained by unanimous consent. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 5300) to provide for the holding of terms of the district and circuit courts of the United States at Fort Scott, Kansas.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 5, after the word "year," to insert the words "the terms of said courts to be held on the second Monday of January in each year."

Mr. McDONALD. I move to amend the amendment by striking out the words "in each year" as the same words occur in the text, and this is a repetition.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The next amendment of the committee was, in line 7, after the word "act," to strike out:

The time and length of the term to be fixed by the judges of said courts respectively.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I merely wish to say that I find myself unable to concur with the committee in recommending the passage of this bill, and therefore I do not wish to be held responsible for any perfection or imperfection in the language of it. I do not think the public interests require the location of a court at that place, but rather in some western part of the State. But, of course, I do not intend to interpose any other opposition than that of having it go on the record that I do not agree to it.

The Secretary read the next amendment of the Committee on the Judiciary, which was, at the end of section 3, to add:

If no suitable building is provided without expense to the United States, then, and in that case, no court shall be held at said place.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

SUBSIDIARY SILVER COIN.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to call up Senate bill No. 1561 for the redemption of subsidiary silver coin. I will not press its consideration if it leads to any consumption of time.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. No. 1561) for the interchange of subsidiary silver coins and United States notes.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Finance with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 4, after the word "dollar," to insert "and not reduced in weight except by natural abrasion."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. THURMAN. I should like to ask the Senator from Vermont whether or not the effect of this bill would be to lessen the amount of change that is in circulation.

Mr. MORRILL. Not at all. It will be merely redeemed in one place and issued in another, redeemed where there is a surplus and put in circulation in other places where there is not.

Mr. THURMAN. There has been some complaint of the want of change, and if this bill would have the effect of lessening the amount in circulation it would be of very doubtful propriety.

Mr. MORRILL. That will not be the effect of it.

Mr. KERNAN. Allow me to make one suggestion. I have known that the banks in my city complained that they had a surplus of small silver. They tried last year to exchange it for silver dollars, but there was no authority to do so. I understand the bill is only to allow those who want to exchange the subsidiary silver coins to do so, so that those who wish them can get them.

Mr. HOWE. I wish the Senator from Vermont would allow the bill to lie over until to-morrow morning. I should like to look at it myself.

Mr. MORRILL. I will do so, of course, if the Senator desires.

THE CALENDAR.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. President, I call for the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded, which is the consideration of the Calendar of general order, under the special order of the Senate, commencing at the point reached yesterday.

Mr. THURMAN. I wish to make an appeal to the Senate to give unanimous consent to take up House bill No. 6170, to divide the State of Louisiana into two judicial districts; a bill that will give rise to not a word of discussion, I imagine, and that ought to be passed at once. I ask unanimous consent to take up that bill.

Mr. ANTHONY. That will take all the morning hour, and will not be disposed of at the close of the hour.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made. The Secretary will call the Calendar, commencing at the point reached yesterday.

The bill (H. R. No. 2284) for the relief of David W. Stockstill, of Sidney, Ohio, was announced as the first bill in order on the Calendar.

Mr. WALLACE. I gave notice several days ago that I would move to suspend the rule known as the Anthony rule to take up House joint resolution No. 176, to provide for the enforcement of the eight-hour law. I make that motion now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania, in pursuance of notice given to that effect, moves to suspend the pending order for the purpose indicated by him.

Mr. WALLACE. It is the resolution in regard to the eight-hour law which I move to take up.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is the Senate ready for the question?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not understand precisely what the motion is.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion is to suspend the pending order, in pursuance of prior notice given.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to know for what purpose?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. For the purpose of proceeding to the consideration of the joint resolution (H. R. No. 176) to provide for the enforcement of the eight-hour law.

The question being put, it was declared that the yeas appeared to prevail.

Mr. WALLACE called for the yeas and nays; and they were ordered.

Mr. HAMLIN. Now, Mr. President, let me ask, is there a joint resolution or a bill before this body for the practical purpose of doing what the Senator suggests?

Mr. WALLACE. The joint resolution can be read, and the Senator will understand it.

Mr. HAMLIN. What is it; a simple resolution declaring the opinion of the body?

Mr. WALLACE. There is a joint resolution, known as House resolution No. 176, which came here last year, was taken up by the Senate, partly considered, and then postponed. I simply now, in accordance with the demand of a large number of people in my own State, ask that the Senate vote upon the question.

Mr. HAMLIN. To take up that identical resolution? I have no objection.

Mr. MORRILL. Of course this cannot pass without a considerable amount of debate, and I hope, therefore, it will not be taken up.

Mr. WALLACE. I simply ask the yeas and nays on suspending the order and proceeding to the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. ANTHONY. I ask if the Senator's notice is good?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The notice appears to be good.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let the notice be read. It was, I think, a notice for last Monday without any continuando.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The notice will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Mr. WALLACE renews notice given yesterday that he will on Monday, immediately after the morning business is over, move to suspend business under the Anthony rule and all other orders to proceed to the consideration of House joint resolution No. 176, order of business No. 544, to provide for the enforcement of the eight-hour law.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The notice is not good for this day if objection be made.

Mr. McMILLAN. Regular order!

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will proceed with the call of the Calendar.

Mr. WALLACE. What is the decision of the Chair?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair decides that the notice having been given for Monday last has expired and is not good for this day.

Mr. WALLACE. I have made every effort since that time to catch the eye of the Chair, but appropriation bills were pending and I could not get the notice of the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is sorry for that.

Mr. WALLACE. Does the Chair rule that the notice is not good?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that the notice is not good for this day, it having been given for a particular day and with no continuando.

NOTICE OF BUSINESS.

Mr. EATON. I desire to give the following notice, which I ask may be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Mr. EATON gives notice that at or before the expiration of the morning hour on Friday, February 28, he will move the suspension of the Anthony and all other rules and the postponement of the pending and all other orders that the consideration of Senate bill No. 1629, to allow the Commissioner of Patents to extend the patent numbered 6535 of reissues, may be proceeded with.

DAVID W. STOCKSTILL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the Calendar, commencing at the point reached on yesterday.

The Secretary read the bill (H. R. No. 2284) for the relief of David W. Stockstill, of Sidney, Ohio.

Mr. McDONALD. From what committee is that reported?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. McDONALD. On what ground is the party entitled to have that money refunded?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair does not understand the Senator.

Mr. McDONALD. Is there a written report accompanying the bill?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is no written report.

Mr. McDONALD. Then I object to its consideration.

Mr. THURMAN. I hope my friend will not object to the consideration of the bill. I think there is a written report in the case. If not, the facts are recited in the preamble, which sufficiently explains the case.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is no written report.

Mr. THURMAN. The facts of the case are correctly stated in the preamble. The man was drafted; he got a substitute, and instead of discharging him they made him serve to the end of the war, and his substitute, too.

Mr. McDONALD. And he now wants paid back to him what he paid the substitute?

Mr. THURMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. McDONALD. Why can he not recover it from the substitute?

Mr. THURMAN. How can he recover it from the substitute? The substitute was mustered into the service and served to the end of the war, and so was this man. The Government got the services of both. I hope every Senator will see the equity of the bill.

Mr. McDONALD. I suppose probably a large bounty was paid.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us hear that bill again, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I must object to that bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made, and the bill goes over.

LEONARD L. LANCASTER.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 2394) for the relief of Leonard L. Lancaster, late sergeant Second Regiment Cavalry, Wisconsin Volunteers; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to Leonard L. Lancaster the full pay and allowances that would have been due him, provided the charge of mutiny had not been preferred, he having been honorably discharged on the 23d of February, 1866, at Detroit, Michigan.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us hear the report.

The Secretary read the following report, made by Mr. SPENCER on the 28th of January:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred H. R. No. 2394, "Act for the relief of Leonard L. Lancaster, late sergeant Second Regiment Wisconsin Cavalry," have had the same under consideration, and submit the following report:

This is an act which provides that said Lancaster shall be paid certain pay and allowances claimed to be due him as a sergeant of Company L, Second Regiment Wisconsin Cavalry. The record sustains the report of the House Committee on Military Affairs, which is as follows:

[House Report No. 261, Forty-fifth Congress, second session.]

"Mr. STRAIT, from the Committee on Military Affairs, submitted the following report, to accompany bill H. R. No. 2394:

"The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2394,) for the relief of Leonard L. Lancaster, late sergeant Second Regiment Cavalry, Wisconsin Volunteers, would respectfully report:

"This is a bill to provide pay and allowances for L. L. Lancaster as a sergeant in Company L, Second Regiment Cavalry, Wisconsin Volunteers, that might have been due him provided he had not been tried on the charge of mutiny, and convicted thereof, by a general court-martial, in the month of July, 1865, and sentenced to be shot. This sentence was commuted to imprisonment at hard labor at Dry Tortugas for three years.

"On the 16th January, 1866, the President directed that the unexecuted portion of his soldier's sentence be remitted and he be released from confinement. This order of the President could not be executed, as Special Order No. 640, of December, 1865, Adjutant-General's Office, War Department, directed that said Sergeant Lancaster be released from confinement and sent to the chief mustering officer of Wisconsin, who was ordered to discharge him with loss of all pay, allowances, and bounty."

"It thus appears from evidence that he was confined or imprisoned but a short period, some two or three months; and it further appears that said Lancaster was 'honorably discharged' the service of the United States at Detroit, Michigan, on the 9th day of February, 1870, by C. S. Lesley, first lieutenant, United States Army, commissary of musters, with 'loss of all pay,' &c., the 'honorable discharge' to date February 23, 1866; and it also appears in evidence that he has never received any portion of the pay due him."

"It further appears by the sworn affidavit of Anson L. Austin that said affiant was the principal witness against said Lancaster in his said trial for mutiny in July, 1865; that he was well acquainted with said Lancaster, and that said Lancaster was in all respects a brave and faithful soldier from the organization of said regiment up to said July, 1865, and that he had done his duty in all respects faithfully and bravely, and had been engaged in all the battles of the regiment, and that in his testimony before the court which tried said Lancaster he swore that he had heard said Lancaster and another say that they had concluded to notify Colonel Dale that they would leave, and that if he denied or refused their leaving they would put Colonel Dale on a slab and send him down the Red River, and that when said Lancaster made that statement he was under the influence of intoxicating liquors to such an extent as to be no longer responsible for his acts or remarks, and that he so stated to the court, and that there was no intention on the part of said Lancaster to carry out said threat; that it was made while he was under the influence of whisky, and was not in the enjoyment of his sober mental faculties. Yet the court, upon this evidence, found said Lancaster guilty of mutiny, and sentenced him as aforesaid."

"It appears from the letter of the Adjutant-General of the United States Army, dated June 20, 1868, that Lancaster's case was laid before the Secretary of War, and he decided that as the records of the proceedings of said court-martial could not be found they could not be set aside, and the sentence having been fully executed and the pay stopped, it is conceived that it cannot be drawn from the Treasury without a special act of Congress covering the case, 'and an honorable discharge could not be given, as it would carry the allowance with it.' An honorable discharge was, however, granted, as before shown, on the 9th of February, 1870."

"By the letter from the Inspector General United States Army, War Department, dated January 3, 1870, 'the forfeited pay and allowances would have been restored to him had it not been beyond the legal power of the Department to restore them.' 'Your committee believe from the above facts that Sergeant Lancaster is justly entitled to his back pay and allowances, he having been granted an honorable discharge by the War Department, after the proceedings in his case had been reviewed. They therefore recommend the passage of the bill.'"

"Inasmuch as the proper officials of the War Department state 'that the forfeited pay and allowances would have been restored to him (Lancaster) had it not been beyond the legal power of the Department to restore them,' your committee recommend concurrence of the Senate in the House act."

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PHILIP W. STANHOPE.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 1901) for the relief of Philip W. Stanhope; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was read.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to hear the report in that case.

The Secretary proceeded to read the report submitted by Mr. SPENCER on the 28th of January, 1879, but before concluding,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The time within which the Calendar of general orders is to be considered, under the special order, has expired.

GENEVA AWARD—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HAMLIN. I wish, Mr. President, to make one more effort to bring before the Senate what is called the Geneva award bill. I have struggled very industriously for several days to find an opportunity to present it. I do not want to take up the time of the Senate, for I am as sensible as any Senator can be that time is valuable and words should be golden. I move to postpone all prior orders for the purpose of proceeding to the consideration of that bill in order to test the sense of the Senate and to know whether they will allow it to come up. I ask for the yeas and nays on that motion.

Mr. BLAINE. I desire to say that my colleague, several days since, and myself following him, gave notice that he would urge this motion whenever it could be done without antagonizing an appropriation bill. There is no appropriation bill now before the Senate, and there cannot be for many hours.

Mr. INGALLS. May I interrupt the Senator one moment? House bill No. 6462 "making appropriations for the payment of the arrears of pensions, granted by act of Congress, approved January 25, 1879, and for other purposes," was reported on the 24th of February, and is now on the Calendar of general orders. It involves the expenditure of about $25,000,000, is one of the largest appropriation bills reported to the Senate; and if the Committee on Appropriations propose to ignore it and make the arrears bill a nullity, I shall feel called upon, as chairman of the Committee on Pensions, to ask the attention of the Senate to that bill.

Mr. BLAINE. The Committee on Appropriations do not propose to ignore it in the least. They propose to give it as much precedence, and probably a little more than it would have in a separate bill. I can assure the Senator from Kansas that. When I spoke of an appropriation bill, I was speaking of the regular annual appropriation bills. My friend from Kansas knows very well that the bill to which he alludes is not included in them. That is a bill for an exigency, that will take but very little time to dispose of. It is a bill to merely appropriate the money for what the Senate, by an almost unanimous vote, said should be done.

Mr. INGALLS. Then, if it will take but little time, let us do it now.

Mr. BLAINE. Let us first vote on this. The Senator from Kansas is no more anxious to pass that bill than I am, or probably no more anxious than are fifty Senators here. There is no possibility of that bill being overlooked or overslaughed, swallowed, or lost.

Mr. INGALLS. It has been studiously ignored up to this time.

Mr. BLAINE. I do not know what the Senator means by its being "studiously ignored." Has there been a vote not to take it up?

Mr. INGALLS. I have called the attention of the Senate to it on all proper occasions, and I went this morning to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations in his own room and called his attention to it, and after some little hesitation on his part he assented to my calling it up.

Mr. DAWES. The Senator from Kansas may be assured that the Committee on Finance have given that matter some consideration and are prepared to press the bill in conjunction with him at the earliest possible moment, with some provisions attached to it that will secure the means.

Mr. INGALLS. This is the earliest possible moment.

Mr. BLAINE. I think the Senator from Kansas had better do that in co-operation with two other large committees that have some relation to the bill, the Finance Committee in regard to providing the means and the Appropriations Committee in regard to appropriating the money. It would be just as well to take it up in time as out of time.

Mr. INGALLS. The Committee on Appropriations seem to be in the relation of mother-in-law to this bill. They do not seem to be very attentive to their offspring.

Mr. DAWES. I want to suggest to the Senator from Kansas that passing that bill without having it accompanied with the means of paying the money will not attain the object the Senator has at heart. There must go along with the appropriation the means to furnish the money.

Mr. INGALLS. There are plenty of means to pay this appropriation if it is made, and I shall feel called upon to ask the Senate to vote down the motion of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HAMLIN] for the purpose of allowing the consideration of this appropriation bill that has been on the Calendar for three days.

Mr. BLAINE. That is a tremendous time! There is no bill before the Senate that has been here for three days, I suppose!

Mr. INGALLS. There has been no other appropriation bill reported that has not been taken up instantaneously.

Mr. BLAINE. A Senator who urges a bill out of time is just about as formidable an enemy to that bill as one who is opposed to it on its merits. The Senator from Massachusetts, [Mr. DAWES,] if not myself, has given very good reasons for not taking up the pension-arrears appropriation bill at this time; and if the Senator from Kansas will just restrain his zeal a little while, he will find some of us just as anxious to pass that bill, and to pass it in a shape that will make it effective and that will provide the means for carrying it out, as he can be.

Mr. INGALLS. The means are already provided. I have seen a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury in which the statement is made that there is already on hand from the estimated surplus revenue a very considerable portion of the amount that will be required to pay the appropriation in this bill.

Mr. BLAINE. Why! Do you not want all? Why say a "considerable portion?"

Mr. INGALLS. I do not want to have the promise held to the ear of these pensioners and broken to their hope. I want action on this bill.

Mr. BLAINE. Why does the Senator say there is on hand enough to pay a considerable portion? Does he want to pass an appropriation bill here that will pay only a portion of the arrears? Why not restrain his zeal for a few hours until we can pass an appropriation bill that will pay the whole? He admits that this will only pay a portion. The position of the Senator from Massachusetts is that the bill shall be so amended and so adjusted as to pay all.

Mr. INGALLS. Is it customary in appropriation bills to have them accompanied by methods directing the Secretary of the Treasury to provide the funds for paying them? Why is that exception to be made in this case? Why is this bill, of all the appropriation bills, to be accompanied by a bill from the Secretary of the Treasury to provide the means for paying the money appropriated?

Mr. DAWES. I will state to the Senator why. This is an exceptional case; this is an exceptional appropriation; and the letter the Senator has seen, certainly I have seen one, from the Secretary, says it is utterly impossible for him to meet this bill without provision; and he is anxious, and the Committee on Finance are anxious, to devise the best possible way of meeting this. A deficiency of $18,000,000 results the moment the bill is passed without a proposition for furnishing the means to raise this money.

Mr. INGALLS. Nobody knows how much of a deficiency there will be. That is merely an estimate. It depends entirely upon the amount of revenue derived during the course of the fiscal year.

Mr. DAWES. Of course no one knows exactly; but the Secretary of the Treasury knows better than I do certainly, based upon the present estimates. The estimates of the last year and the estimates submitted to this Congress for the coming year make no provision at all for the sinking fund; and it is absolutely necessary, in order to meet the bill referred to, that there should be some provision; and in order that we may keep the promise to the ear and not break it to the hope it is proposed—

Mr. HEREFORD. I rise to a point of order. Is the question debatable?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is debatable within certain limits. The Chair thinks the limits are being greatly exceeded.

Mr. HEREFORD. The matter before the Senate is a motion to take up the Geneva award bill. That has nothing to do with pensions or anything of that kind.

Mr. INGALLS. I certainly have a right to introduce arguments here to show why that bill should not be taken up. That is what I am trying to do at this present time.

Mr. BLAINE. But the Senator from Kansas has no right to intimate, or convey the intimation, that those who want the Geneva award bill taken up now have in mind the remotest fear that the pension bill will not be fully and duly attended to. There is no good management, I will say to the Senator from Kansas, in antagonizing a bill prematurely.

Mr. McDONALD. Mr. President—

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator from Maine will allow me to judge of my own management.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will say to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. McDONALD] that two Senators are already occupying the floor, and its occupation by a third would lead to confusion. [Laughter.]

Mr. INGALLS. Who has the floor, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. INGALLS. I made no intimation as to the motives of those who desire to take up the Geneva award bill, but I called the attention of the Senate to what appeared to me to be a very singular condition of affairs, and that was the statement of the Senator from Maine [Mr. BLAINE] that there was no appropriation bill that now required the attention of the Senate; and when I read the title of this bill and showed that it had been on the Calendar for the past three days, I am met with the statement that there will probably be a deficiency in the revenues of the coming year and that this bill must be accompanied by some measure from the Finance Committee to render it effective.

Mr. BLAINE. Certainly you are.

Mr. INGALLS. I submit that that is not the way appropriation bills are passed. If it shall appear that there is a deficiency in the revenue, and that further provision is necessary, the customary plan is to submit estimates in a deficiency bill for that purpose. It does not affect the question of the right of this bill to pass, whether there is to be a deficiency or not. It is a bill regularly reported and on the Calendar, and it ought to be acted upon, and I ask, as that is the case and the uniform custom, that it shall have the right of way at this time and receive the action of the Senate.

Mr. BLAINE. Then I understand the Senator from Kansas to mean that he would like to have the pension bill shoved through regardless of any provision whatever for paying the pensioners under it.

Mr. INGALLS. Just like any other bill.

Mr. BLAINE. I am in favor of making due and careful provision, so that when that bill goes on the statute-book as a law and gives a pensioner a check the dollar will be in the Treasury to pay it. If the Senator thinks he gains anything by pushing the bill through in advance of providing the proper means of paying it, of course he is welcome to his opinion.

Mr. INGALLS. And the Senator from Maine proposes to push a bill to take ten or twelve millions more out of the Treasury.

Mr. BLAINE. No; he proposes to divide money between persons who have a right to it, to which the Treasury of the United States has no right.

Mr. INGALLS. That is to be decided.

Mr. BLAINE. Very well, that is precisely what I am proposing.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I am always sorry to antagonize any motion made by my friend from Maine, [Mr. HAMLIN,] but in my judgment the report from the Judiciary Committee on the Geneva award ought not now to be taken up. It would occupy, in the interval between the appropriation bills, the whole time of this session of Congress; it would be largely debated as I know; and the discussion would fall upon wearied men who have to sit here night and day. It is not the proper time to consider it. There is a vast variety of bills upon the Calendar that will take but little time, that it seems to me ought to have the preference in the business of the Senate. They can be disposed of usually in half an hour at most, even where there is discussion. In that way a good deal of work can be gotten off the Calendar that ought to be gotten off. Great preparation has been made, a great deal of work has been done, many reports have been made from various committees, on Claims, on Military Affairs, &c., and their work goes for nothing unless there is action taken upon it by the Senate before the end of the present session.

I have no objection to discussing the principles of the bill reported by the Judiciary Committee. I am ready to discuss them now; I would rather do it now than next session; but I know perfectly that if we get into that discussion we can do nothing else, and I do not think it is fair to the vast number of cases upon the Calendar to do it and then probably fail in the interval between now and the adjournment of the session.

Mr. THURMAN. I can hardly say anything that will not be a mere repetition of what has been so well said by the Senator from Illinois who has just taken his seat. This Geneva award question is no new question with some of the Senators here. It has been before the Senate again and again, and it has ever given rise to a very extended discussion; but a number of members have come into the Senate since the last discussion, and it will be necessary that that bill shall be discussed, and discussed very fully. The Senate know that there has always been heretofore, and there possibly is now, a very great diversity of opinion between the two branches of Congress, if it is proper for me to say that, on this subject. I am earnestly for the bill reported by the Judiciary Committee, and if the bill shall be taken up I shall feel it a duty I owe to myself and to those who think with me to give the reasons why that bill ought to pass. There are others who feel the same way, and I am very sure that the question will give rise to such discussions and so lengthy a debate that to go into it would in effect put aside everything else.

I for one am not willing to do that. If there were time to discuss the bill and to act finally and definitely upon it at this session, no one would be more ready than I to take it up, for I think there has been a grievous wrong done that this fund has not been distributed long ago. That is my opinion, and always has been. Therefore I worked very hard always to take up bills for the distribution of the fund and to have the fund disposed of. On every occasion that there was the least chance of having a bill passed on the subject, I have favored taking the bill up and having the subject acted upon, and I have tried again and again to get it taken up when I could not succeed in getting it taken up. But now I do know that if it be taken up at this time all the debate upon it and all the time that will be consumed by that debate will be just so much time lost. Under these circumstances I hope the bill will not be taken up.

One word more. I think the Senator from Kansas is perfectly right in insisting upon giving precedence to the bill that he has named over all other bills until some other appropriation bill shall come in.

Mr. BLAINE. Why except another appropriation bill?

Mr. THURMAN. I will not except any, except a bill to carry on the Government.

Mr. BLAINE. I thought the Senator would not except any.

Mr. THURMAN. No; I did not say that; I would not say that a bill to carry on the Government should not have precedence even over this; but there is time enough to pass all the appropriation bills if we go to work at them; and we ought to go to work in my judgment on the bill mentioned by the Senator from Kansas.

I very much fear, Mr. President, that, without certainly any design on the part of any Senator, for I do not impute motives to anybody—I am not accustomed to do that—there is danger of the bill which we passed called the arrears of pension bill being, in practical effect, postponed for one year; that is, so far as the receipts of the benefits of the bill are concerned. I do not think that ought to be so. If it was right to pass that bill, it is right to have that bill executed; and if further legislation is necessary, that legislation ought to take place before we adjourn.

I hope, therefore, Mr. President, without multiplying words, that the proposition to postpone all other orders and take up the Geneva award bill will not be adopted.

Mr. BLAINE. I hold in my hand the pension bill. It appropriates between twenty-five and thirty million dollars. If we pass that bill without some additional legislation to provide the means, the Senator from Ohio knows as well as any man in this Chamber that either the pensioners will go without their pay or some other department of the Government will be crippled and maimed. Now the Senator from Ohio says that this ought to be gone right on with; it should not wait for anything else; we should pass it through. His argument is regardless of any provision being made for the payment. He is in such haste to appropriate for the pensioner that he will not stop to provide the money to pay him. I want to provide the money to pay him and make the appropriation bill not an empty and hollow sounding promise but something that carries the cash with it.

Mr. THURMAN. Neither do I wish to make it an empty sounding, and the very fact, if it be so, stated by the Senator from Maine, shows the necessity of going on with this bill at once so as to give time to provide the means if the means are not already provided. Here we have two things to do: provide the means, and also make the appropriation. The sooner we get to work the better. If the means are already provided, then we have nothing to do but pass the appropriation bill; but if we must, in addition to making the appropriation, also provide the means to pay, then the sooner we get at it the better and the greater is the necessity for going to work on it at once.

Mr. BLAINE. But the Senator will observe that the Senator from Massachusetts, speaking for the Committee on Finance, stated that they were now maturing and having under consideration a measure providing the very means we want.

Mr. THURMAN. Very well; then let us get this bill out of the way so that we may have time to consider their bill when it comes.

Mr. BLAINE. But it is to go on this bill and be part of it.

Mr. INGALLS. I should like to know, if the Senator from Maine will be good enough to tell me, what necessity there is for making any special provision for the payment of this sum any more than the payment of sums provided in any appropriation bill? Let me read the first clause:

Be it enacted, &c. That there be, and hereby is, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the following sums, namely:

It is exactly the same clause that is in every appropriation bill; and if this bill passes, the sum appropriated is to be paid out of the general revenue of the Government. It does not require any specific method for the purpose of providing the funds for the payment of this any more than for the support of the Army or the Navy or the Indian department.

Mr. BLAINE. But if the honorable Senator from Kansas will permit me to ask him a question, suppose you pass appropriation bills that call for more money than there is in the Treasury?

Mr. INGALLS. It is very evident that if this bill passes, up to this time there is a great plenty of revenue to pay all the appropriation bills we have passed. It is the last appropriation bill if any, that will involve a deficiency; and if we pass this now, you can tack your measure on to the legislative bill or the sundry civil bill.

Mr. BLAINE. It would not be courteous for me to say that the honorable Senator speaks without knowledge—

Mr. INGALLS. No, sir; it would not.

Mr. BLAINE. But he speaks without observation, because the Secretary of the Treasury has advised the House, as he of course was compelled to do, that the $136,000,000 in the Treasury for redemption purposes is not to be counted money not otherwise appropriated; it is money appropriated. Now, the passage of this bill, without some provision made for its payment, creates a deficiency. Who shall come out behind, whether it be the Army, whether it be the Navy, whether it be the salary of the honorable Senator from Kansas and my own, or whether it be the pensioner, I do not know; but somebody has got to be deficient. What I propose is that such due and careful legislation shall be had as will provide means for having all that we appropriate paid. The honorable Senator from Kansas knows very well that this twenty-five or thirty or forty millions, I do not know what it may be, that is required to pay the arrears of pension, is an extra appropriation, not contemplated within the estimates of the Government; and it is this extra appropriation that creates the deficiency; and I say let there go hand in hand with this extra appropriation the provision of the means for its payment; but do not let us have any such great haste to show our love for the pensioner by voting an empty and hollow enactment at that table, and not putting a dollar in the Treasury to answer it.

Mr. KERNAN. Nobody proposes to do that. The Senator says there is a bill in the course of preparation to provide the means. We can pass this bill making the appropriation, and the other will follow.

Mr. HOWE. Mr. President, standing where I do between these two Senators from Maine, I naturally hesitate a good deal in saying what, after all, I feel compelled to say, and that is that, in the first place, I see no possible objection to considering the bill moved by the Senator from Kansas now. They say it is a bill appropriating several million dollars, and that if you pass it there may not be revenues in the Treasury to meet it. That is a remark which can be made touching every appropriation bill which has been moved or which may be moved hereafter.

Mr. BLAINE. Not at all.

Mr. HOWE. I beg to differ with my honorable friend. It may be made just as well touching one appropriation bill as another.

Mr. BLAINE. It may be made, of course, but not with any propriety.

Mr. HOWE. With strict propriety and absolute truth, as absolute as in this case. Appropriate your $25,000,000 called for by this bill; then do not pass your legislative appropriation bill, and are you sure the revenues will not meet your appropriations for this year? Or pass the legislative appropriation bill and refuse to pass the bill making appropriations for sundry civil expenses, and are you sure the revenues will not meet the appropriations? It does not follow that there will be a deficiency if you pass this bill and do not accompany it by a bill making loans or increasing revenue. Can you not tack your revenue measures on any other appropriation bill just as well as on this? And if the wants of the Treasury require it, I think it fair to presume that before all your appropriation bills have been enacted into laws, this new revenue measure which it is said is now lurking in the chamber of the Finance Committee will find its way on some of them.

So, Mr. President, I repeat what I said in the outset, that I see no reason in the world why we should not pass the bill moved by the Senator from Kansas this morning just as well as at any time; but I think I see grave reasons why we should not pass the bill moved by the Senator from Maine [Mr. HAMLIN] this morning, why we should not take it up this morning, why we should not proceed to consider it now.

In the first place, it is not a bill that is calculated to adapt the Treasury Department to the calls of your appropriation bills. It is not calculated to strengthen the Treasury. Its tendency is, if it gets into the shape of a law, to deplete rather than complete the Treasury.

Mr. DAWES. Is it not a bill to pay debts?

Mr. HOWE. A bill to meet the Geneva award is calculated to take money out of the Treasury rather than to put it in, which, says my honorable friend [Mr. HAMLIN] in an aside, is an argument against paying a debt. No; it is not a good argument against paying a debt. It is an objection against paying what is not a debt; and in my judgment a large part of the money which will be disbursed from the Treasury under this bill, if it pass, has not the similitude of an obligation, legal or equitable. That is my judgment. I will not argue that now. But as to the balance which will be disbursed, though I myself am compelled to say that I think it does assume the form of a legal obligation springing from the terms in which the award was made at Geneva, and therefore I cannot resist it, I am obliged to acquiesce in it, and if called upon to vote I shall vote for paying that class of claims; yet those claimants in my judgment take—if they take at all and when they take at all—under the stern enactments of an award which I think does anything but justice to the claims of the United States. That is not for us to consider here. I am agreed to abide by that award; but when they come here to bid against other creditors of the Government, those whose claims rest upon blood shed, upon limbs shattered, asking but the pittance which your laws promised years ago, I am compelled to say that I think this last class of creditors should be heard first; and for this reason, among others: that when they recover they will recover without any compensation for delay; they will get no interest; but when these creditors take they will take with interest. If anybody must be deferred I think it should be those creditors to whom you pay interest, and not those to whom you will pay none, even if their credits were of the same high rank and order, which I think they are not. For this, among a great many other reasons which I think I might suggest, I shall be compelled to vote against proceeding to the consideration of this bill from the Judiciary Committee at this time. If nothing more pressing is urged I shall vote to proceed to the consideration of the bill suggested by the Senator from Kansas. But there are, I will say in conclusion, surrounding this Chamber this moment, and have been for long days and weeks, an unnumbered host of American citizens awaiting the tardy justice of the Government; many individuals having, in my judgment, rights which, put alone in the scale against all those who snatch at the millions granted under the award of the Geneva tribunal, would outweigh their claims, and while they stand here with their appeals unanswered I do not feel very strongly moved to vote for the consideration of this bill.

Mr. DAWES. A single word. The Senator from Wisconsin is anxious to have it appear, and in that I think the Senator from Kansas joins, that on the part of those who desire action upon the Geneva award, or on the part of somebody in the Senate, there is a disposition to postpone action upon the bill appropriating money for the arrears of pensions. There is not the slightest desire on the part of anybody to postpone that for a moment. It may be true in theory that if you make this appropriation and stop making appropriations for carrying on the Government, there will be money enough in the Treasury to meet this appropriation for the arrears of pensions. Probably the construction of the Treasury Department is that the acts take precedence according to their date, that money is considered as appropriated according to the date of the laws; but ordinarily, and in the ordinary practice of the Government and according to the usages of the Government from time out of mind, the ordinary receipts of the Government are set apart for the ordinary and current expenses of the Government, and when any extraordinary expenditure is needed like this, (in which all of us have participated with great heart and zeal,) if there should be a failure of receipts to meet the ordinary expenses and this extraordinary one, the common-sense way, the usual way, is to make special provision for the extraordinary appropriation, and let the ordinary receipts meet the ordinary appropriations. That is the desire on the part of those who are desirous of making a provision that will go along with the appropriation for these pension arrears, so that no contingency of other appropriations will deprive them of it, so that there shall appear upon the face of it that we set apart for this special purpose a special provision, so that the pensioner who looks to it, who has shed his blood or has lost his limb, and has all the claim upon us that the Senator from Wisconsin can urge, will see that we mean it, that we are in earnest, and that we have provided that the dollar shall be on hand in the Treasury when he goes there for that dollar.

The Senator from Wisconsin has begun to talk about the Geneva award as money in the Treasury already to meet the current expenses. I had supposed it would come to that sooner or later. The longer the distribution of that award among those for whom it was rendered was put off, the sooner would begin to be the talk that that was money in the Treasury like the common receipts of the Government. Sir, seventy-five or so years ago the Government purchased Louisiana and undertook in the arrangements for that purchase to pay $5,000,000 to those who had suffered in the loss of their property at the hands of a foreign government. The United States have postponed it from year to year, now seventy-five or eighty years, and the men who suffered those losses are dead and gone; their children are dead and gone; the papers have passed away; the worms have eaten up the evidence; and that money is in the Treasury yet. So I fear this Geneva award is likely to follow in the course of the French spoliation claims and remain in the Treasury, unless we can meet the question and dispose of it according to the intention of those who rendered the award and according to the purposes of the arbitration itself.

Now, sir, I shall vote for the pending motion, with no desire to postpone for an hour the proper appropriation for the arrears of pension, but only with a desire to meet this question which the Senator from Illinois says it will take so much time to dispose of, and he thinks the discussion will be lost, as we can take up other matters and discuss them. Let me ask how much time in this Congress and in the last Congress has been spent in this House and in the other upon the consideration of this question that will be lost and must be begun de novo, and be all gone over again, if we do not act now? There is scarcely any measure now before Congress that has taken so much time in its consideration, all of which will be lost now unless action be taken upon this House bill that has gone through the other branch. Whatever may be the decision of the Senate, it will remain the basis of a conference report, so that there may be a final determination of the question, and save us the reproach which is beginning to come upon us of considering this fund as part of the money in the Treasury to be spent for current expenditures.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HAMLIN] that the pending orders be postponed and that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the Geneva award bill. Upon this question the yeas and nays are demanded.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HAMLIN. I have been requested to say that the Senator from New York [Mr. CONKLING] is now detained on the duties of a committee. That is the reason he is not here.

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 25, nays 40; as follows:

YEAS—25.
Anthony,	Chandler,	Jones of Nevada,	Rollins,
Barnum,	Dawes,	Lamar,	Sargent,
Blaine,	Dorsey,	Matthews,	Spencer,
Booth,	Eaton,	Mitchell,	Wadleigh.
Burnside,	Grover,	Morrill,
Cameron of Pa.,	Hamlin,	Patterson,
Chaffee,	Hoar,	Plumb,
NAYS—40.
Allison,	Dennis,	Kernan,	Ransom,
Bailey,	Edmunds,	Kirkwood,	Saulsbury,
Bayard,	Eustis,	McCree,	Shields,
Beck,	Ferry,	McDonald,	Teller,
Bruce,	Gordon,	McPherson,	Thurman,
Butler,	Harris,	Maxey,	Voorhees,
Cameron of Wis.,	Hereford,	Merrimon,	Wallace,
Coke,	Howe,	Morgan,	Whyte,
Davis of Illinois,	Ingalls,	Oglesby,	Windom,
Davis of W. Va.,	Jones of Florida,	Paddock,	Withers.
ABSENT—11.
Cockrell,	Garland,	Kellogg,	Sannders,
Conkling,	Hill,	McMillan,	Sharon.
Conover,	Johnston,	Randolph,

So the motion was not agreed to.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask unanimous consent to make a personal explanation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I wish to state that not being well last night I was not here at the evening session. On reading the RECORD just now, I see that the Senator from Alabama who sits nearest me [Mr. SPENCER] stated in reference to a bill for an additional judge in Dakota thus:

This bill has been petitioned for by the General Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, by a memorial sent here, and the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary has examined the bill and is satisfied with it.

I merely wish to say that the Senator from Alabama was mistaken. I stated to him in a conversation about it that I had not examined the bill, and he misunderstood me. I could not, therefore, have been satisfied or dissatisfied with the bill. It may be perfectly right or otherwise. I merely wished to say this, Mr. President, because I did not know what the necessity for the bill was.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR PENSION ARREARS.

Mr. INGALLS. I move that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of House bill 6462.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas moves that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the bill, which will be reported by its title.

The Secretary read the title of the bill (H. R. No. 6462) making appropriations for the payment of the arrears of pensions granted by act of Congress approved January 25, 1879, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. INGALLS. Now I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

PROPOSED EVENING SESSION.

Mr. VOORHEES. In accordance with the suggestion and request of many Senators, as well as in accordance with my own sense of public duty, I desire to submit to the Senate a proposition: that when we cease business this afternoon it be to take a recess until half past seven o'clock, to proceed with the Calendar to-night, commencing where we left off last evening in the general call, taking up unobjected cases.

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator should say "this morning," because we have proceeded since last evening with the general call of the Calendar.

Mr. VOORHEES. I had forgotten that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from Indiana please state his proposition again?

Mr. VOORHEES. It is that this afternoon when the Senate rises it take a recess until half past seven o'clock for the purpose of taking up this evening the Calendar and considering unobjected cases, commencing at the point where we left off this morning.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. HAMLIN. If the Senator from Indiana will qualify his motion or suggestion by confining it to taking up unobjected cases from the House, I will not object; but I regard it as the sheerest folly to come here and spend the night in passing Senate bills expecting that they are going to get favorable action in the House. There is good sense in coming here and completing such legislation as we may. Now, if the Senator will confine his motion to action upon bills from the House, I shall interpose no objection; but if he does not, I interpose an objection and I will not come here for any legislation so foolish, in my judgment.

Mr. WITHERS. With reference to the proposition made by the Senator from Indiana, I would simply recall the fact that yesterday morning I gave notice that I would ask the Senate some time to-day to take up for consideration and action the resolutions passed by the House of Representatives on the occasion of the death of B. B. Douglas, of Virginia.

Mr. VOORHEES. I beg the Senator's pardon. I did not hear that announcement. Had I heard it I would have taken it into consideration. I will now modify the proposition by making it for to-morrow evening instead of this evening.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to inquire if that proposition now adopted will not have the effect of depriving the Senate of the right to devote those hours to an appropriation bill, unless they shall unanimously rescind this order?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will suggest to the Senator from Indiana that he renew his proposition to-morrow.

Mr. VOORHEES. I give notice then that I will renew this proposition at the proper time to-morrow for to-morrow evening.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. No. 4414) to amend the laws relating to internal revenue.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. No. 1685) to provide for taking the tenth and subsequent censuses, with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. No. 19) for the relief of Captain James M. Beeber;

A bill (S. No. 333) for the relief of Thomas J. Choate, Erastus Foster, Milton Ladd, Clarence E. Haney, William A. Hill, Kneeland F. Huckaby, and William Blackburn, late privates in Company F, Third Regiment Arkansas Cavalry Volunteers;

A bill (S. No. 401) for the relief of Charles H. Mosely;

A bill (S. No. 713) for the relief of Martin Clark;

A bill (S. No. 793) for the relief of Edwin R. Clarke;

A bill (S. No. 837) for the relief of the officers and privates of the New Mexico Mounted Volunteers;

A bill (S. No. 1268) to authorize the Secretary of War to convey to Jacob A. T. Wendell, Henry Van Allen, and John R. Bailey a part of the military reservation of Fort Mackinac;

A bill (S. No. 1365) to place Lewis Leffman, ordnance-sergeant United States Army, on the retired list; and

A bill (S. No. 1475) for the relief of the sureties, &c., of Samuel M. Reynolds, late additional paymaster of United States volunteers.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had this day approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. No. 61) for the relief of the Richmond Female Institute, of Richmond, Virginia; and

An act (S. No. 217) for the relief of John A. Shaw.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is a bill before the Senate, House bill No. 6462, which will be read.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Before the Secretary reads the bill I think it desirable for the public interests that there should be a short executive session, and I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After three hours and forty minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

TENTH CENSUS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. No. 1685) to provide for taking the tenth and subsequent censuses; and they were referred to the special committee on the tenth census.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Finance, submitted an amendment to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also, from the Committee on Finance, reported an amendment to the bill (H. R. No. 6462) making appropriations for the payment of the arrears of pensions granted by act of Congress approved January 25, 1879, and for other purposes; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. HOWE, from the Committee on the Library, reported an amendment to the bill (H. R. No. 6240) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PLUMB, Mr. RANSOM, and Mr. BRUCE submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 6463) making appropriations for the construction, repair, preservation, and completion of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. EUSTIS, Mr. THURMAN, Mr. McPHERSON, Mr. INGALLS, (by request,) and Mr. MITCHELL submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. McDONALD, Mr. HOWE, and Mr. PLUMB submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 6240) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BECK and Mr. BUTLER submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 5218) to establish post-routes in the several States therein named; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. ROLLINS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. No. 4810) to provide for the settlement of all outstanding claims against the District of Columbia, and conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear the same, and for other purposes; which was ordered to be printed.

S. W. FERGUSON.

On motion of Mr. LAMAR, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. No. 1844) to remove the political disabilities of S. W. Ferguson, of Mississippi.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed by a two-third vote.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. VOORHEES. I made an appeal last night just as we were adjourning in behalf of a real and genuine charity. There is a bill here, in the order of business No. 1057, for the relief of Mark Walker, which is recommended by the Secretary of War in a letter to the Military Committee. That committee made a unanimous report upon the bill, it being for the relief of a man who is perhaps on his death-bed and who is eating the bread of charity. I hope that there will be no objection to giving the two minutes it will take to pass the bill, so that it may go over to the other end of the Capitol and become a law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. HARRIS in the chair.) Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. INGALLS. When the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business several hours ago it was with the understanding that besides the executive session merely formal business should be transacted, and the Senate should then resume the consideration of the bill making appropriations for the arrears of pension. Several hours have been consumed in executive business; and I feel, in view of the fact that the Committee on Appropriations will soon have another bill to report, that I must call for the regular order and resist all appeals made to me by Senators upon either side of the Chamber. If there is any case that calls for sympathy it is that of those who are the beneficiaries of this bill.

Mr. VOORHEES. Of course if the Senator from Kansas desires to object he can do so; but the bill could have been passed and this man relieved while the Senator was talking about it.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask for the reading of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the bill.

Mr. VOORHEES. I beg the Senator's pardon; I thought he was insisting on his objection. The bill is order of business 1057, Senate bill No. 1791, for the relief of Mark Walker.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas withdraw his objection to the present consideration of the bill named by the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. INGALLS. I call for the reading of the arrears of pensions appropriation bill, which is the regular order. I say to the Senator from Indiana there will be no trouble about getting time to pass his bill after this bill is disposed of.

APPROPRIATION FOR PENSION ARREARS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 6462) making appropriations for the payment of the arrears of pensions granted by act of Congress approved January 25, 1879, and for other purposes.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments of the Committee on Appropriations will be acted upon as they are reached in the reading of the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 25, to insert:

The pension agents shall receive for their services and expenses in paying the arrears upon pensions allowed previous to January 25, 1879, including postage on the vouchers and checks sent to the pensioner, thirty cents for each payment; and the sum of $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated for the payment of the same.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after the word "pensions," in line 41, to strike out "granted by special act of Congress, unless the special act fixes the rate and duration of the pension, and pensions;" so as to read:

That section 1 of the act of January 25, 1879, granting arrears of pensions, shall be construed to extend to and include pensions on account of soldiers who were enlisted or drafted for the service in the war of the rebellion," &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SECRETARY. The next amendment is, in line 46, after the word "hostilities," to insert:

Mr. DAWES. I am instructed by the Committee on Finance to offer an amendment to that amendment by adding after the last words of the amendment the following—

Mr. INGALLS. Will the Senator allow the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations to be first acted upon?

Mr. DAWES. I thought this could be added to that, but it makes no difference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Massachusetts that the amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations has not yet been reported to the Senate. The Secretary will report the last amendment of the committee.

The SECRETARY. The Committee on Appropriations propose to add after the word "hostilities," in line 46, the words, "and before being mustered out;" so as to read:

Account of soldiers who were enlisted or drafted for the service in the war of the rebellion, but died or incurred disability from a cause originating after the cessation of hostilities, and before being mustered out.

Mr. DAWES. I do not know but that it would be just as well to let that amendment be acted on first.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DAWES. Now, Mr. President, I offer the following amendment from the Committee on Finance:

After the word "out," in line 47, at the end of the bill, insert: Provided, That in no case shall arrears of pensions be allowed and paid from a time prior to the date of actual disability.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. That is right.

Mr. DAWES. That is to meet the uncertainty of the phraseology of the law, whether it would not go back to the date of the discharge, whether the disability occurred before or no.

Mr. INGALLS. When that amendment is acted upon I desire to submit an amendment from the Committee on Pensions.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. INGALLS. I offer, from the Committee on Pensions, an amendment to the bill, which I ask to be reported.

Mr. MORRILL. Will the Senator from Kansas allow me to offer an amendment that comes in here appropriately?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. INGALLS. Not now, please.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas, [Mr. INGALLS.]

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add to the bill the following:

That as soon as practicable after June 30, 1879, the Commissioner of Pensions shall divide the United States and the Territories into districts, the number of which may afterward be increased or diminished, as the exigencies of the service shall seem to require, provided that the number shall at no time exceed sixty, and designate convenient posts in each of said districts where the commission provided for by this act shall attend to make medical and surgical examinations, and to take testimony in pension cases. The commission shall attend at each of said posts at least once in each year, and, wherever exigencies of the service demand, a more frequent attendance shall be provided for. The designation of posts for each district, with the time of attendance of the commission at each, shall be embodied in an order or orders of the Commissioner of Pensions, and published in a newspaper having a general circulation in the district. Whenever any change in the posts or the time of attendance thereat by the commission is made, it shall be published in the same manner.

SEC. —. The Commissioner of Pensions shall detail one of the pension surgeons and one of the pension clerks provided for by section 3 of this act to duty in each of said districts to make medical and surgical examinations authorized by the pension laws, and to take the testimony in pension cases, under the direction of the Commissioner of Pensions. The pension surgeons and pension clerks who shall be detailed upon any such commission shall be authorized to administer oaths to claimants, their witnesses, and the pensioners who shall appear before them, or either of them, and they may proceed together or separately in the performance of their duties, as the Commissioner of Pensions shall direct. The testimony taken by the commission in the cases shall be reduced to writing, as near as may be in the language of the witnesses, and shall be subscribed and sworn to by them in presence of the commission, or some member thereof. When the claimant shall have produced all the testimony he desires to furnish, the same shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Pensions for the settlement and adjustment of the claim. If it shall appear to the Commissioner of Pensions in any case or class of cases that the attendance of a claimant or his witnesses before the commission is impossible, or would be an extreme hardship, or that such attendance is unnecessary to a proper adjustment of the claim, the testimony may be taken or medical examination made in such other manner as the Commissioner of Pensions shall prescribe, but no additional expense to the Government shall thereby be incurred. And when, in his opinion, the interests of the Government require it, or justice will be better subserved thereby, the Commissioner of Pensions may require not exceeding three of said pension surgeons to meet together for the purpose of making medical and surgical examinations of pensioners and claimants.

SEC. — That the Secretary of the Interior shall appoint to the Pension Office as many pension surgeons who have had not less than ten years' active experience in the practice of medicine and surgery, as shall be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act; and, when practicable and not inconsistent with the interests of the service, surgeons who have had experience as Army or Navy surgeons shall be appointed. The Secretary of the Interior shall also appoint to the Pension Office a sufficient number of pension clerks to meet the requirements of this act, who shall be persons learned in the law, and who shall have had experience in the practice of their profession. Such pension surgeons and pension clerks shall hold their commissions at the pleasure of the Secretary of the Interior; and when any vacancy shall occur, by removal, death, resignation, or otherwise, the same may be filled as a new appointment.

SEC. — The Commissioner of Pensions shall cause to be examined by a surgeon, as often as once in two years, all invalid pensioners whose disabilities are liable to become of less degree than that for which the pension was allowed; and he may cause any invalid pensioner to be examined by a surgeon at such times and as often as he shall deem it for the interests of the Government. If, upon the medical examination of any invalid pensioner, it shall appear that the disability on account of which his pension was allowed is less than the degree pensioned, the Commissioner shall readjust and re-rate the pension as justice may require.

SEC. — If, after a pension has been allowed, the Commissioner of Pensions shall have good cause to suspect that the same has been procured through fraud or misrepresentation, or for any other reason is of opinion that it ought not to continue, after first giving reasonable notice to the pensioner of such intended investigation, he shall cause the case to be investigated by the members of the commission for the district.

SEC. — The pension surgeons and pension clerks provided for by this act shall each receive a salary at the rate of $2,500 per annum, and in addition thereto shall be allowed their actual and necessary transportation expenses, upon bills to be approved by the Commissioner of Pensions.

SEC. — Declarations in pension claims may be made before any member of a pension commission provided for by this act, as well as before the officers named in section 4714 of the Revised Statutes.

SEC. — Section 4776 of the Revised Statutes is hereby amended so as to read as follows: "The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to appoint a duly qualified surgeon as medical referee, who shall have been in the active practice of medicine and surgery, who shall perform such duties in the adjustment of pension claims as shall be prescribed by the Commissioner of Pensions. His salary shall be $2,500 per annum."

SEC. — All pensions which have been, or which may hereafter be, granted in consequence of death occurring from a cause which originated in the service since the 4th day of March, 1861, or in consequence of wounds or injuries received or disease contracted since that date, shall commence from the death or discharge of the person on whose account the claim has been or is hereafter granted, or from the termination of the right of party having prior title to such pension: Provided, The application for such pension has been or is hereafter filed with the Commissioner of Pensions prior to the 1st day of January, 1890, otherwise the pension shall commence from the date of filing the application; but the limitation herein prescribed shall not apply to claims by or in behalf of insane persons, and children under sixteen years of age.

SEC. — Sections 4709, 4744, 4771, 4772, 4773, 4774, 4775, and 4777 of the Revised Statutes are hereby repealed, to take effect June 30, 1879.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. HOAR in the chair.) The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kansas, [Mr. INGALLS.]

Mr. ANTHONY. I think this is a pretty long rider to an appropriation bill. I should like to have the chairman of the Committee on Pensions explain what is the meaning and effect of this amendment. Nobody can understand it from merely hearing it read.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, I make the point of order that it is legislation on a general appropriation bill.

Mr. INGALLS. I respond to the point of order that this is not a general appropriation bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I think it is.

Mr. INGALLS. And further that this amendment is reported by a standing committee of the body.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That does not help it any. It is legislation, and I make the point of order that it is not germane either. I insist upon all the points in Rule 29, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will examine the rule.

Mr. MITCHELL. While the Chair is doing that, I ask permission to offer an amendment to an appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be received.

Mr. ANTHONY. I hope we shall have some explanation of this amendment, for it changes the whole pension law.

Mr. INGALLS. I do not understand whether the Chair has yet decided upon the point of order.

Mr. ANTHONY. I understood the Chair to say that the amendment would be received.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question of order of the Senator from Vermont embraces some five or six points, and the Chair is examining the rules and the bill before he gives his opinion. [A pause.] The Chair is of opinion that this is not a general appropriation bill. The term "general appropriation bill" derives its meaning from the usages of the two branches of Congress. In the House of Representatives the bills treated as general appropriation bills are specially mentioned and described in their rules, and obliged by the rules to be reported within a particular time. The Chair is of opinion that the phrase "general appropriation bill," according to the rules of the Senate, applies to the regular annual appropriation bills, and to no others. The Chair will, if desired, submit the question whether the amendment is germane to the bill to the Senate.

Mr. EDMUNDS. If the Chair has decided that this is not a general appropriation bill, then the point of objection that the amendment is not germane falls within the same condemnation. I hope the Chair will be consistent with itself and overrule the whole thing.

Mr. TELLER. I desire to offer an amendment to the sixth line of section 1 of the amendment of the Senator from Kansas. I move to strike out the word "sixty" and insert "seventy-six." It seems to me the number of districts should be greater than sixty; and seventy-six would be an average of two to each State.

Mr. INGALLS. I have no objection to that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado moves to amend the amendment.

Mr. INGALLS. The Committee on Pensions offer no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment is accepted by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That does not help it. The Senator from Kansas cannot accept this amendment.

Mr. INGALLS. I stated that the Committee on Pensions interpose no objection to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I was only addressing myself to the Chair, that he ought to put the question on the amendment to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent the Senator from Kansas can modify the amendment as proposed by him. Is there objection?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I object to any unanimous consent about the matter.

Mr. VOORHEES. For what is unanimous consent asked?

Mr. INGALLS. To the modification of the first section of the amendment submitted by me, by providing that the districts into which the United States shall be divided under these provisions shall not exceed seventy-six, which would allow, I suppose, as the Senator from Colorado intends to convey, two of these districts to each State in the Union. It is entirely discretionary under the proposed measure with the Secretary of the Interior as to what number of districts the Government shall be divided into, not to exceed seventy-six, if the amendment of the Senator from Colorado is adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be reported.

The SECRETARY. In section 1 of the amendment, line 6, it is proposed to strike out "sixty" and insert "seventy-six;" so as to read: Provided, That the number shall at no time exceed seventy-six.

The PRESIDING OFFICER put the question on the amendment to the amendment, and declared that the ayes appeared to prevail.

Mr. EATON. I ask for a division, unless there can be some explanation given why the number of districts should be increased to seventy-six.

Mr. INGALLS. It is wholly discretionary with the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. EATON. I do not know that I care to give him that discretion. I want to know why sixty districts are not enough. In my judgment a good many less than sixty would be enough.

Mr. TELLER. I desire to say that the number of districts, by the amendment of the Senator from Kansas, cannot exceed sixty. In the West, for instance, if we take the Territories, there is a large extent of country. In the East the districts could be divided according to the States, such a State as New York perhaps having two, and some of the smaller States one district; yet when you get away out into the western country, where the State may be twice as large as New York, and the Territories are immense, it should be discretionary with the Secretary of the Interior to make as many posts as are necessary in order to enable the applicants to readily arrive at the post. He may have less than sixty, but he is not to exceed the number that I propose, seventy-six.

Mr. EATON. I am not satisfied with giving the power of making seventy-six districts to the Secretary of the Interior. It adds to the expense very much indeed. If I have read the amendment aright, and I have had but a moment to read it, I certainly am averse to increasing the expenditures which may be absolutely necessary under this bill. We ought to have, as my friend from Kansas would say, as narrow a limit as possible.

Mr. INGALLS. Will the Senator from Connecticut allow me to say a word?

Mr. EATON. Certainly.

Mr. INGALLS. It is the belief of the Secretary of the Interior, of the Commissioner of Pensions, and of the Committee on Pensions that the adoption of this amendment will very materially diminish the expenses of the administration of this branch of the public service. Under the present system the number of employes is about three hundred and eighty, and the annual working expenses of the bureau are $697,630. It is believed that after this experiment has been tried for a single year the working force of the home office, as it may be called, in this city will be diminished at least one-half. If the provisions of the amendment to the bill should be carried out as reported by the Committee on Pensions the expense would be as follows, namely: One hundred and twenty surgeons and clerks, at $2,500 each, $300,000; the actual expense of transportation as provided by the bill, at $300 each, $36,000; which would leave from the present sum necessary to carry on the office the sum of $367,630 to be distributed and expended here.

I may say that this is no novelty. It is an intended experiment, for the purpose of carrying out several reforms that have long been contemplated. Substantially this measure has been reported to the Senate at least during the last two Congresses, but the Senate has hitherto refused to act upon it. The attention of the committee, and of the Senate, and of the country, has been called to the fact that there are under the present system very great frauds perpetrated upon the Government, amounting, as the Commissioner of Pensions says, to not less than 10 per cent. of the entire pension-roll, or about $3,000,000; or as the Committee on Pensions believe, to not less than from 15 to 20 per cent. of the entire amount expended for pensions, which would be somewhere about five or six million dollars. Under the present method of determining as to the validity of claims against the Government it is impossible, without great additional expense, to detect these frauds and save the expense that the Government is subjected to on account of them; but if this system of examining surgeons can be adopted, by which the country shall be divided into districts, where the testimony shall be taken by the surgeons and clerks, the witnesses themselves being present and the applicants being present, it is believed that not less than from three to five million dollars can be saved annually when the experiment has once been put successfully into operation.

I shall be glad to explain the details of the measure if any Senator desires to hear them; but for the present I have only to say that this is an experiment honestly intended in the direction of the reform of abuses that are admitted to exist in the administration of the Pension Bureau. I hope, therefore, that the Senate will see fit to adopt it, so that at least it may go to the committee of conference if the House should disagree, for the purpose of ascertaining whether something can be done to cure these admitted evils.

Mr. EDMUNDS. One reason that I should have for voting against this amendment would be, what the Senator from Kansas has just stated, that he wishes this ridden on to this appropriation bill in order that it may go to a committee of conference.

Mr. INGALLS. I said if the House should not agree to it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Yes; but I do not wish to delegate any more powers to a conference committee than are absolutely indispensable, because we know the embarrassment under which we labor when a conference committee reports.

I am very sorry that this bill to appropriate the money necessary to pay the arrears of pensions, which has nothing to do with the subjects mentioned in the amendment at all, should be used as a means of carrying this amendment. The bill is to pay arrears of pensions to people whose claims have already been decided upon and established. Their names are found in the pension-rolls, and it is a mere question of computation under the law to find out how much each pensioner is entitled to. Therefore, it appears to me that this amendment has no proper relation whatever to this appropriation bill, which is merely to authorize the Treasury to pay out the money necessary to carry into effect the act of Congress which authorizes these persons to be paid the arrears of their pensions that the statute of limitations prevented their being paid before. That is the state of the case.

Now, Mr. President, for the Senator from Kansas to propose to carry this measure, be it good or bad, on to this appropriation bill is, as it appears to me, an unwise thing, without reference to what might be thought to be the merits of it if it stood by itself. The Senator says that it has been often presented to the Senate, and the Senate would not act upon it. So much the worse in respect of our being asked to act upon it now perforce by an amendment moved on an appropriation bill it appears to me. If this had been a measure reported, and that had merely failed at some period for want of time at the last moment, that everybody was for, there might be some argument adduced to put it on the appropriation bill; but the trouble has been whenever it has been presented before, on examination and discussion the Senate has been unwilling to try what the Senator from Kansas calls an experiment. He calls it truly an experiment, an experiment that I believe will turn out to be very expensive to the Government of the United States, and that will not have the effect to diminish frauds or to reduce expenditures, but quite the reverse as to the amount it will cost when you get it into operation. It builds up an entirely new system when we ought to have gone through in a very large degree with the administration and disposition of pension claims. Of course there are a great many that are behind, but twelve, or thirteen, or fourteen years after the end of the rebellion there ought not to be a very large mass of cases still to be acted upon that have any merit in them.

Mr. INGALLS. There are about one hundred and forty thousand unacted upon.

Mr. EDMUNDS. There are about one hundred and forty thousand unacted upon, and probably one hundred and thirty thousand of that number are the cases of those who cannot furnish the proof that the law required, as liberal as the law has been to enable parties to establish their claims. The Pension Office is not like a court of law that dismisses a case upon trial and it goes off the calendar, but a case that the Commissioner of Pensions refuses to allow goes into the files and there it is a rejected or suspended case, and anybody who can get a member of Congress or Senator to stir it up or can get an additional affidavit filed can start that case up again; and so you can see for the next one hundred years there will be one hundred and forty thousand cases in the Pension Office that have not been proved. They will be there one hundred years hence.

That does not help it, Mr. President, and I appeal to the Senator from Kansas whether in his judgment it is quite wise to undertake to carry this proposition upon a simple appropriation bill, the law having been passed, and what these people are entitled to being a mere matter of computation in each individual case. Is it wise to try to carry this new system on a bill to appropriate the money to carry out the law allowing the arrears? It has no relevance to it, and it appears to me that it is very unwise for the Senate to take this sudden step by way of an amendment.

Now, Mr. President, in order to test the sense of the Senate whether it is willing to go into the consideration of this scheme at this late day in the session, if I can do so without carrying the bill with it (which I do not wish to do) I move to lay this amendment on the table, which I believe the rule provides for.

Mr. INGALLS. If the Senator will withdraw that motion for a moment, as it is not debatable—

Mr. EDMUNDS. Certainly I withdraw it.

Mr. INGALLS. This not being a general appropriation bill, laying the amendment on the table would carry the bill, which I suppose the Senator from Vermont of course does not desire to do.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not.

Mr. INGALLS. Therefore I suggest to him that if he desires to test the sense of the Senate, he should make some motion which will dispose of the amendment without imperiling the fate of the bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I will take the ruling of the Chair upon the point.

Mr. INGALLS. I understood the Chair to decide that this was not a general appropriation bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I will make the motion and then if the Chair rules it will carry the whole bill, I shall withdraw it, for I do not wish to table the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the bill in the first instance came from the Committee on Appropriations, and the amendment which was offered by the Senator from Kansas was in the first place introduced and referred to the Committee on Appropriations, dealing with the bill as if it were a general appropriation bill. The attention of the Chair was not called especially to that subject before. Therefore, when the Chair held that unanimous consent was necessary for the Senator from Kansas to modify the amendment, the Chair supposed that it was an amendment which the rules required to have been first referred to the Committee on Appropriations; but the Chair, on his attention being called by the Senator from Vermont, is satisfied that this is not a general appropriation bill within the rules of the Senate. Therefore, it follows that the Senator from Kansas may accept of his own motion an amendment suggested to his amendment without the consent of the Senate; and it also follows that this motion to lay on the table could not be made without carrying the whole bill with it if it should succeed.

Mr. THURMAN. I understand the Chair to rule that this is not a general appropriation bill. I do not know where is the distinction between a general appropriation and a special or particular appropriation bill. It seems to me under our rules, but I say it with great submission, that upon any appropriation bill (and this is plainly an appropriation bill) it is competent to move to lay an amendment on the table.

Mr. INGALLS. I call the attention of the Chair to the last clause of Rule 29, which says:

And any amendment to a general appropriation bill may be laid on the table without prejudice to the bill.

The irresistible inference from that would be that if the bill be not a general appropriation bill, laying the amendment on the table would also make the same disposition of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has so stated.

Mr. THURMAN. Will the Senator from Kansas please tell me what is a general appropriation bill?

Mr. INGALLS. A general appropriation bill, as I understand, is one acted on by the Committee on Appropriations under what is known as the long-established custom of the Government as a general appropriation bill. I should call a special appropriation bill a river and harbor bill, for instance, or a bill making appropriations to pay particular claims.

Mr. THURMAN. Now the Senator has hit the nail on the head. An individual appropriation bill is one thing; but when a bill comprises a whole mass of individuals like the pensioners of the United States, to call that a special appropriation bill strikes me as very singular.

Mr. INGALLS. The rule does not apply to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has already ruled, when the Senator from Ohio was not in his seat, that the term "general appropriation bill," in the opinion of the Chair, includes the twelve annual appropriation bills which are reported year by year for the general expenses of the Government, and that it does not include bills like this which come up only on a special occasion and are not of annual recurrence and are not to carry on the general operations of the Government. The practice of the Senate, which has existed for some years, in regard to a somewhat similar bill to carry out the decisions of the southern claims commission, is to the same effect. That bill is never treated as a general appropriation bill, but is referred to the Committee on Claims, and not to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. EDMUNDS. If the Senator from Ohio will yield to me a moment I should like to call the attention of the Chair, on the question of what is a general appropriation bill, to the twenty-seventh rule of the Senate, which says:

All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, except bills making appropriations for rivers and harbors, which shall be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Now I submit to the Chair with some confidence that that is the express recognition of the fact that a river and harbor bill is a general appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Undoubtedly.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That is a bill that the laws of the United States do not require to be passed, as they do the legislative bill, for instance to pay the obligations of the Government for salaries that are fixed by law, or any other of that class of bills; but it is a bill that rests every year in the discretion of Congress.

Now, here is a bill to carry into effect and furnish the money to carry out a general law of Congress which has provided that the whole class of the people of the United States who fall within certain descriptions shall be entitled to certain sums of money, just as the legislative bill provides that a whole class of certain of the people of the United States who fall within certain descriptions, that is those who hold office, shall be paid their salaries. I wish the Chair would submit—because I do not desire to appeal; it is too late for that—I wish the Chair would submit the question to the Senate whether this falls within the principle of a general appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will do so cheerfully. The Chair will submit to the Senate the question as requested by the Senator from Vermont. Is the pending bill a general appropriation bill within the meaning of Rule 29?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I do not know anything about the question of order, and I do not know whether I have the right to say anything in regard to the matter now.

Mr. EDMUNDS. You cannot debate the merits.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. If I have not the right to allude to the merits of the measure, I have nothing to say, but I should like to say a few words touching it if it be in order.

Mr. INGALLS. I think we had better decide the question of order first.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is this a general appropriation bill within the meaning of the twenty-ninth rule? Those of that opinion will say "ay;" those of the contrary opinion will say "no," [putting the question.]

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 13, noes 25; no quorum voting.

Mr. WITHERS. There are several Senators in the Chamber who have not voted either way. I ask that there be another division on the question to secure the expression of the opinion of a quorum of the body.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will again put the question.

The question being again put, there were on a division—ayes 14, noes 30.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is overruled by the Senate.

Mr. INGALLS. What is the question now, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the Senator from Kansas to accept the amendment of the Senator from Colorado. Then the question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas as modified.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That strikes out "sixty" and inserts "seventy-six," I believe?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the modification.

Mr. VOORHEES. I feel it due to myself to say a few words in regard to the amendment proposed by the chairman of the Committee on Pensions. There is no question that the business of the Pension Office is in a deplorable condition, and there is no question that something ought to be done. What that something is has given my mind a great deal of trouble. The amendment offered by the chairman of the Committee on Pensions comes as a proposition from the committee it is true; yet it was never considered while I was present; and, while I do not mean to oppose a measure emanating from the committee, I desire to express my dissent from the pending measure. I do not believe that it will accomplish what ought to be accomplished in the settlement of pension cases. It is a thorough and radical change of the manner of doing business. Instead of organizing an outside traveling corps of special officers, I believe it would be best to reorganize the inside of the Pension Office and make it more fit to do the business there. This amendment contemplates the appointment of some two or three hundred additional Federal officers. They are to travel in pairs. It provides for the appointment of a doctor and a lawyer in pairs to travel together, each being paid the handsome salary of $2,500 a year. Look at section 3:

That the Secretary of the Interior shall appoint to the Pension Office as many pension surgeons, who have had not less than ten years' active experience in the practice of medicine and surgery, as shall be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act—

That is a very broad and sweeping power—and, when practicable and not inconsistent with the interests of the service, surgeons who have had experience as Army and Navy surgeons shall be appointed.

There can be no objection to that.

The Secretary of the Interior shall also appoint to the Pension Office a sufficient number of pension clerks to meet the requirements of this act, who shall be persons learned in the law, and who shall have had experience in the practice of their profession. Such pension surgeons and pension clerks—

One learned in medicine and the other in law—a disciple of Esculapian and one of Blackstone—shall hold their commissions at the pleasure of the Secretary of the Interior; and when any vacancy shall occur, by removal, death, resignation, or otherwise, the same may be filled as a new appointment.

Mr. WINDOM. Will the Senator from Indiana yield to enable me to report an appropriation bill?

Mr. VOORHEES. Certainly.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WINDOM. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to report back the bill (H. R. No. 6471) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes, with sundry amendments, and I ask unanimous consent that the committee may be permitted to readjust the amendments before they are printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. SPENCER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 6463) making appropriations for the construction, repair, preservation, and completion of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE B. B. DOUGLAS.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am under obligations to my friend from Virginia [Mr. WITHERS] for reminding me, as he has just done, that at this time he desires the Senate to take notice of the death of Mr. Douglas, late a member of the House, and I yield at once for that purpose.

Mr. WITHERS. I ask that the resolutions sent from the House of Representatives relative to the death of the late B. B. Douglas be now reported to the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What disposition is proposed to be made of the pending bill in regard to appropriations for pensions?

Mr. WITHERS. Let it be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask the Senator from Virginia if it is his intention to move an adjournment after the conclusion of these services, or to ask for a recess until the evening?

Mr. WITHERS. I propose to move an adjournment, but I will conform to the wishes of the Senate. It is customary to move an adjournment.

Mr. VOORHEES. I presume an adjournment follows an observance of this character as a matter of course. ["Certainly."]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to laying aside the pending bill temporarily for the purpose indicated? The Chair hears none. The resolutions of the House of Representatives will be reported.

The Secretary read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
January 23, 1879.

Resolved, That this House has heard with deep regret of the death of Hon. BEVERLY B. DOUGLAS, a Representative from the State of Virginia.

Resolved, That the House do now suspend the consideration of all other business in order to pay appropriate respect to the memory of the lamented deceased.

Resolved, That in token of regret the members of this House do wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That the Clerk of this House do communicate these resolutions to the Senate of the United States.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased the House do now adjourn.

Mr. WITHERS. Mr. President, I offer the resolutions which I send to the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolutions will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate receives with sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. BEVERLY B. DOUGLAS, late a member of the House of Representatives from the State of Virginia, and tenders to the family and kindred of the deceased the assurance of sympathy under their sad bereavement.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect for the memory of the deceased the members and officers of the Senate will wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be directed to transmit to the family of Mr. DOUGLAS a certified copy of these resolutions.

Mr. WITHERS. Mr. President, the continued and protracted indisposition of my colleague, the senior Senator from Virginia, has prevented earlier action on the House resolutions just reported, commemorative of the death of BEVERLY B. DOUGLAS, late Representative of the first congressional district of Virginia. This delay, not more to be regretted than its cause, will necessitate a briefer tribute to the memory of Mr. DOUGLAS than would otherwise be accorded his distinguished merit and many virtues.

The suddenly fatal attack which on the morning of the 22d of December last closed the mortal career of one so highly appreciated and honored by his fellow-citizens shocked the sensibilities of the pub-lie and added another to the list of departed statesmen, since so sadly increased by successive fatalities until the mortality among the members of the Forty-fifth Congress has become so unprecedented as to have excited universal comment, not indeed unmingled with a degree of suspicion which if unfounded was certainly not unnatural.

Stricken down in the full vigor of matured manhood, by the unseen enemy which ever dogs our steps, prompt to seize on any unguarded avenue of approach, to sap or storm the citadel of life, he passed away, unconscious of the presence of sorrowing friends or the devoted ministrations of an affectionate and idolized daughter, and was borne to his last earthly resting place in the sacred bosom of his native State, where the dark and somber pine forests, in never ending cadence, sigh their mournful requiem.

BEVERLY B. DOUGLAS was born in New Kent County, Virginia, on the 21st day of December, 1822, and was called away on the 22d of December, 1878, having but just completed his fifty-sixth year. His career in life was neither uneventful nor unsuccessful. Descended in direct line from the historic family of the same name in Scotland, he was in many respects a worthy scion of that noble stock. His educational advantages were ample. His record in academy, college, and university, both in America and in Europe, gave assurance of a life of usefulness and distinction. A proficient in the technical lore of the two learned professions of medicine and law, he might have pursued either with every prospect of success. Influenced, doubtless, by his natural tastes and inclinations, he selected the latter, and with his characteristic energy and industry devoted himself assiduously to his practice, first in his native county of New Kent, and subsequently in King William. He speedily established his reputation as an accurate reasoner, a skilled debater, and a master of the science of law. His practice rapidly extended through the counties adjacent, and few members of the profession were more generally known or more highly esteemed.

Many years had not passed ere his own inclination and the partiality of his fellow-citizens, who correctly appreciated his capacity for more valuable service in the public councils, called him into the political arena, and from that time to the day of his death he was a prominent figure in the forefront of Virginia politicians.

His first public service, I believe, was as a member of the constitutional convention of Virginia in 1850, and here though confronted with many of the first men of Virginia he was speedily recognized as a debater of more than ordinary power, and the close of the session found him the recognized leader of the democratic party in his section of the State. In 1852 he was elected a member of the senate of Virginia and was successively re-elected by an admiring and confiding constituency for twelve consecutive years. In this arena his powers as a debater shone conspicuously and he was universally regarded by his political opponents as one of the most formidable antagonists to be encountered in the arena of debate.

His services on the hustings were more than usually arduous, conspicuous, and effective. As congressional and State canvasser, and as presidential elector, he constantly confronted, not only within his own district but throughout the State, the chosen champions of the old whig party, who, neither deficient in ability nor unknown to fame, found in DOUGLAS "a foe man worthy of their steel," and the brightest lance among them all won few trophies from the hard-hitting and thoroughly-panoplied champion of the "unterrified democracy." When Virginia was called on to furnish her quota of troops to assist in the subjugation of the seceding States, Mr. DOUGLAS, true to those doctrines of State sovereignty which he had ever advocated and sustained, felt no hesitation in dedicating his sword to the maintenance in the field of the principles he had ever inculcated in the council, and though exempt from military service by virtue of his legislative position, he at once entered the army, and, with a courage which never failed and a faith which never faltered, did his devoir as became a "Douglas bold," on many a well-fought field.

Returning at the close of hostilities to his country home he was at once recalled to public position at a time when the future of Virginia was shadowed by clouds and darkness and her most vital interests were threatened with destruction. In the extraordinary canvass of 1868, and the equally active contest of the succeeding year, Major DOUGLAS figured conspicuously and contributed not a little to the final triumph of conservatism over radicalism. These services were recognized and rewarded, and in 1869 he was nominated and elected a member of the Forty-fourth Congress from the first district of Virginia, and with quiet assiduity at once devoted himself to the efficient discharge of the novel duties of his high position. The business capacity and discriminating intelligence with which, as chairman of the special committee, he conducted a most laborious and difficult investigation into the management and affairs of the Freedman's Bank, marked him at once as the possessor of energy, industry, and capacity. His report on the subject will ever stand a monument of patient research and fearless declaration.

He was re-elected without opposition to the Forty-fifth Congress, a conclusive evidence of his efficiency as a Representative and the appreciative confidence of his constituents. To this brief biographical sketch I shall add but little. The rapidly closing hours of the present Congress admonish us that extended eulogy, however consonant with our feelings and appropriate to his character, may not now be indulged.

BEVERLY DOUGLAS was not without his foibles and his faults.

Not often can the world look upon a character free from imperfections, nor will the generous and noble delight to dwell on these imperfections and neglect to do homage to those high and lofty virtues which, as in the character before us, illuminate with ennobling light the memories which yet linger with us.

A personal acquaintance extending through many years enables me truthfully to characterize Major DOUGLAS as a gentleman possessed of many of the highest attributes of manhood. Generous to a fault, brave, kind-hearted, hospitable, and, above all, truthful, he scorned a mean action, but was ever ready to minister to the wants of the friendless, and with ready charity to apologize for the weak and erring, where weakness and error was stained with no taint of dishonor. He was no fair-weather friend. Once his confidence was won, nothing but dishonor could break the ties which bound him to his fellow-man, and misfortune or adversity only intensified his feelings and stimulated his affections. With such an array of virtues, who will refuse to throw the mantle of charity over his one great weakness, and remember him through all time as the kind, liberal, brave, and noble gentleman, who was "tender and true," as became one of his noble lineage.

Mr. THURMAN. Mr. President, it is with unfeigned embarrassment that I speak on this occasion. My embarrassment is caused by the fact that I not only had no personal acquaintance with the deceased, but I am not aware that I ever saw him; and I have learned, Mr. President, in the long years that I have lived, that there is nothing more dangerous and often unjust than the opinion we form of men we have never known. I am not a man of prejudices, and yet I confess that ten years ago I came into this Senate with very strong prejudices against men whom I afterward learned to esteem, if not to love; and I have come to the conclusion that no man is certain to form a correct opinion of another unless he has known him.

In the oldest church existing in Christendom it is the custom not to canonize any one until a hundred years have passed away, so that, without prejudice, without passion, a correct opinion of his character may be formed. And yet, Mr. President, I doubt whether there is any opinion of a man's character so well founded as that which is formed by the men who know him intimately and well. Therefore it is that I speak with diffidence about our departed friend; and yet, although I never knew him personally, I knew him, as we all did, by reputation. Those who knew him well and who were his personal friends and his political associates have said to me that he was a man of singular ability and great acquirements—not only in one profession, but in two of the greatest professions in the world. Mr. President, he came of that race, the Scottish race, of whom it has been said that logic is their inheritance; and from what I have heard of him, he not only inherited the logic that belongs to that race, but also the eloquence that belongs to another race and by which such wonderful power is acquired over the human heart.

Mr. President, I am well satisfied that a man so loved by those who knew him, so honored by the intelligent constituency among whom he lived, so distinguished in every public station he ever held, so much respected in every private circle, was a man whose memory it becomes us to cherish.

Mr. HEREFORD. Mr. President, again has the pale horse, mounted by his rider, Death, passed through the Halls and corridors of this Capitol of the nation and carried captive one of our brethren. Again and again of late has his terrible tramp resounded through these Halls, causing the thoughtful to stop for a while and ask themselves the question, Who next?

Neither rider nor horse ever tire. Night and day, over land and sea, ever since man became mortal, all through the lapse of countless ages have they been on their heartless errand.

We have for a while ceased from our labors for the living to commune with the dead, to pay the last sad tribute of respect to the late BEVERLY B. DOUGLAS, one of the Representatives of the State of Virginia.

Of his life and character you have heard from the lips of one of his colleagues in this body, [Senator WITHERS.] It was meet and proper that he should have done so, and well has the task been performed.

I had the pleasure of serving in the House of Representatives with him and knew him quite well. It was not difficult to know him well. He had no concealments. He was open, frank, and bold, in all of his dealings, both in public and private.

There was nothing mysterious about him. He could truthfully have said,

My outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart.

Mr. DOUGLAS was a fine scholar, a good lawyer, an eloquent advocate, and a powerful debater, handling all the weapons with peculiar facility and power, whether of wit, humor, sarcasm, ridicule, logic, or the most brilliant flights of oratory. He was brave and chivalrous. He had a great big heart, throbbing with noble and generous impulses, which sometimes carried him too far for his own good. There are some men to whom we are involuntarily drawn the first time we meet them. Such a man was Mr. DOUGLAS.

He was often honored by his State, and as often acquitted himself with distinction. Mr. DOUGLAS was a man of strongly marked characteristics. When dealing with an adversary his resistless will was as impetuous as the torrent; but with his friends the hurricane of those passions was hushed as in peace, and breathed calmly and gently as a summer zephyr. A more devoted father I never knew—kind, considerate, and tender; the home is now cheerless, fatherless, and motherless. But to him who believes in the Christian religion there is one consolation in the midst of these afflictions, that there is a time coming when "Old Time, the father of centuries and the tomb-builder of generations, will drop his broken scythe and break his glass, career and fall, a giant in ruins."

Then such believer can stand over the fallen giant and exultantly exclaim, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" But we must close. Our friend—

Serenely to his final rest has passed,
While the soft memory of his virtues yet
Lingers, like twilight hues when the bright sun has set.

Mr. WITHERS. Mr. President, the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM] was expected to deliver some remarks on this occasion, but he has been taken sick too severely to enable him to perform his part in the allotted task. I ask that the remarks which he may have prepared to submit may be printed in the RECORD with those that have been delivered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. COCKRELL in the chair.) Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Virginia? The Chair hears none. [See Appendix.]

Mr. WITHERS. Now, sir, I ask the adoption of the resolutions which I submitted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia moves that the resolutions submitted by him be adopted.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Mr. WITHERS. As a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at six o'clock and twenty-two minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 27, 1879.

The House met at eleven o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday was read and approved.

The SPEAKER called Mr. CARLISLE to the chair, as Speaker pro tempore.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. RANDALL, (the Speaker.) Mr. Speaker, I rise to a personal explanation. I ask the Clerk to read that which I send to the desk. The Clerk read as follows:

[Correspondence of the Public Ledger.]

NEW YORK, February 25.

The Commercial Bulletin, in its Washington dispatches to-morrow, will publish an extraordinary statement (dated September 2, 1876) from Special Treasury Agent Williams, which, as it is likely to excite the attention of Congress, deserves notice as a matter of news. The substance of it is as follows:

"The evidence is in the Treasury building to show that two appropriation warrants were illegal, signed to get money to continue operations of the Engraving and Printing department, which was directly in the interest of SAMUEL J. RANDALL, who is a large stockholder in the paper-mill which is alone authorized to supply the Bureau of Engraving and Printing with paper for bonds, bank-notes, &c., and was accomplished through the influence of RANDALL, William Hemphill Jones, and George B. McCartee. I understand that Comptroller Robert W. Taylor signed the warrant through the influence and misrepresentations of Jones, and it is said, Conant signed as Acting Secretary in Bristow's absence, and with a full knowledge of the illegality of them. Of this latter I am not prepared to say, but think it true; but that there was two such warrants issued, amounting, together, to about $270,000, ($263,000 is the real amount,) there is no doubt, and the warrants can be produced.

"H. L. WILLIAMS,
"Special Agent."

"To Major WILLIAM B. MOORE,
"Supervising Special Agent, United States Treasury."

Your correspondent invited the attention of Ex-Secretary Bristow (now in this city) to these extraordinary charges, and he had no hesitation in pronouncing them utterly without foundation, so far as his knowledge extends. "No one who knows Mr. RANDALL," he says, "will for one moment believe what Williams says, and as to the other parties alluded to, they are men of tried integrity." That Mr. RANDALL will at once take the proper notice of the statement Mr. Bristow has no doubt, seeing that Williams is still retained as an officer of the Government in the Treasury Department.

Mr. RANDALL, (the Speaker.) Immediately upon reading that communication last evening, I sent to the editor of the Philadelphia Ledger the telegram which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., February 26, 1879.

WILLIAM V. MCKEAN, Esq.,
Editor Ledger, Philadelphia:

There is not one syllable of truth in Williams's statement as to Engraving and Printing Bureau published in New York correspondence of to-day's Ledger, nor a semblance of justification for such infamous slander as far as I am concerned or know.

Publish full and unequivocal contradiction to-morrow.

SAM. J. RANDALL.

Mr. RANDALL, (the Speaker.) I think it due to the House to say at this time that never in my life have I had one dollar of interest as a stockholder, or in any other way, directly or indirectly, in any paper-mill in the United States or elsewhere; nor has any one, either nearly or remotely connected with me, ever had any such interest. I have never had, directly or indirectly, as a stockholder or in any other way, any interest in any bank-note company in the United States or elsewhere.

And I want to add, further, that I never in my life spoke to Mr. Bristow, Mr. Conant, Mr. Jones, Mr. Taylor, or any other person in reference to an appropriation warrant for any purpose whatever; and of course I never spoke to any one in regard to, nor did I know of, the two appropriations mentioned in the article which has been read by the Clerk, until I came to read that article. I now submit the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That a select committee of five members of this House be appointed by the present occupant of the chair, whose duty it shall be to make immediate inquiry into the statements made in the letter dated September 2, 1876, addressed to William B. Moore, supervising special agent of the United States, and signed by H. L. Williams, special agent, which said letter has been heretofore read to this House, and which contains a statement as to alleged fraudulent appropriation warrants said to have been issued at the instance of a member of this House in favor of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing; that said committee have power to send for persons and papers, administer oaths, and report at any time to this House the result of said inquiry.

Mr. HALE. If the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the Speaker of this House, feels that any investigation is needed for his own vindication and to set any question that has been raised by anybody as to his personal integrity in a clear light before the country and at rest forever, then I am in favor of the passage of this resolution upon the ground that he desires it. But I want to say here for myself, and I think I can speak for many, that I do not believe that the Speaker needs it. I do not believe that any duty is imposed upon the Speaker of this House, because of unauthorized and unfounded and unjustifiable and slanderous newspaper declarations, to put himself upon a formal vindication.

His record has been long and well known to the country upon all matters relating to appropriations, jobs, and schemes to deplete the Treasury. I am glad to say that for ten years, though he and I have had hot political battles, it has been one of the pleasures of my experience to act hand in hand with him in opposing raids upon the Treasury from the beginning. I do not think he needs this committee for his vindication, but I am willing to take his suggestion in regard to it.

Mr. RANDALL, (the Speaker.) I am very much indebted to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] for the kind manner in which he has spoken of me, and I want to say to him that I deeply appreciate his words. But upon this subject my mind is made up. I believe that this is necessary and due to me as a Representative of the people upon this floor; it is due to you, members of this House; it is due to the House of which I am the Presiding Officer; it is due to the country, that my vindication in these respects should be made of public record, for I have no fear in the face of God or man of the result.

Mr. MILLS. Might I suggest to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that this Congress will expire in a few days?

Mr. RANDALL, (the Speaker.) For that reason I have inserted the word "immediate" in the resolution, so that the committee may proceed at once.

Mr. HALE. I hope the gentleman from Pennsylvania did not understand me as opposing his wishes in this matter.

Mr. RANDALL, (the Speaker.) No, sir; I did not. I understand the gentleman to be my friend.

Mr. KELLEY and Mr. THOMPSON rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] yield the floor to any one?

Mr. KELLEY. I desire to say a few words.

Mr. RANDALL, (the Speaker.) I do not wish to take up too much of the public time with this matter.

Mr. KELLEY. I will not consume much time. Mr. Speaker, I am the immediate colleague of the Speaker of this House. We have served together here sixteen years, and I know the esteem in which he is held in Philadelphia. We have at intervals of two years during those sixteen opposed each other politically before the people, as we had done for long years before. I desire to say to him and this House that I fear the measure he proposes will if granted do nothing but dignify a scoundrel by bringing his name before Congress and the public. My colleague has done well in denouncing the infamous lie and demanding this investigation; but I agree with the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] that it is entirely unnecessary for the vindication of the reputation of the Speaker. I am able to assure this House that whatever political asperity may be felt toward my colleague in Philadelphia, I do not believe there is among the nearly one million inhabitants of that city one man who may read it who will not throw this infamous slander from him with the remark, "RANDALL may be a bitter partisan, but he who charges him with want of personal integrity is a liar." [Applause.]

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. Speaker, my apology for the intrusion at this time is not alone that my colleague and I are Pennsylvanians; not only that we have known each other for more than twenty years—there is another reason. Eighteen years ago, when we were both young men, when life was just opening to us, so to speak, when the whole future was spread before us, it was our lot to meet as republican and democrat in the Legislative Assembly of the State of Pennsylvania, and it was our fortune to be engaged in the deliberations of that body for two sessions—he a democrat, as he is now: I a republican, as I have always been. While we disagreed widely upon political questions, and while sometimes doubtless feelings of unpleasantness were the result of political controversy and disagreement, there has not lived in that time in the State of Pennsylvania, nor does there live now, any man, whether republican or democrat, whether politician or otherwise, who has for a single moment entertained a suspicion that the honesty of my colleague was not as clear as a sunbeam.

I read this article this morning with pain, not because it did or could injure my colleague, but because an aspersion, unfounded, false, and slanderous, was made upon a political opponent, yet a personal friend. I concur in the expressions which have been made that personally and politically my colleague needs no vindication from a charge of this kind by the examination or report of a committee, and he has dignified it in a manner which I think he might have omitted with justice to himself and with entire safety to his reputation wherever he is known and wherever he may in the future be known.

If, however, my colleague thinks this is a personal matter in regard to which he should have justification at the hands of a committee—while I believe that the report of fifty committees unanimous in his favor, unanimous in denouncing the slander in terms as strong as the English language can command, would be useless as regards removing suspicion which no charge of this kind ever has created or ever can create against my colleague—yet if he asks as a personal favor the adoption of this resolution, I for one will cordially urge my friends on this side to join in adopting it, not with the view of vindicating his reputation, which is entirely unnecessary, nor with the view of investigating the truth or falsity of this accusation, which no one believes, but for the purpose of putting upon the records of this House our detestation of an offense without excuse, without palliation, and almost without a parallel.

Mr. RANDALL, (the Speaker.) Mr. Speaker, I now ask a vote. I hope the House will unanimously agree to the resolution. I do not ask this action with reference to to-day, because the people who live with me and about me know my character; but I desire that an impartial official report upon the truth or falsity of this statement shall go into history. I will only add that I am very much obliged to the gentlemen who have spoken of me so kindly.

The resolution was adopted unanimously.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair will take occasion at as early an hour as possible during the day to announce the committee provided for by the resolution.

Subsequently, the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. CARLISLE] announced as the committee Mr. CANDLER of Georgia, Mr. LYNDE of Wisconsin, Mr. THROCKMORTON of Texas, Mr. FRYE of Maine, and Mr. MONROE of Ohio.

The SPEAKER then resumed the chair.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TUCKER. I rise to call up the unfinished business of last evening, the report of the committee of conference on the internal-revenue bill.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I rise to make a privileged report.

The SPEAKER. There is a privileged report already under consideration—the report of the conference committee—a matter of the highest privilege.

Mr. TUCKER. I yield for a moment to my friend from Pennsylvania, [Mr. BRIDGES.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. YOUNG] rose to make a privileged report and the Chair declined to recognize him on the ground that there was one privileged report already pending.

Mr. TUCKER. I think, then, the gentleman from Pennsylvania will have to excuse me.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Virginia does not wish to proceed at once, the gentleman from Pennsylvania and the gentleman from Tennessee might be recognized by unanimous consent.

Mr. CONGER. I have the floor, and the gentleman from Virginia has no right to consent or object as the floor cannot be taken away from me.

The SPEAKER. That is in the nature of an objection.

Mr. CONGER. I wish to be recognized.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Michigan as soon as the consideration of the conference report is resumed.

Mr. CONGER. Then I do not insist.

Mr. TUCKER. I do not propose to shut out my friend from Michigan at all.

VENTILATION OF THE HALL.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I am instructed, Mr. Speaker, by a select committee to submit the following report:

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CASEY YOUNG, from the Select Committee on Ventilation of the Hall, submitted the following report:

The select committee charged with the duty of inquiring into the present method of heating, lighting, and ventilating the Hall of the House of Representatives, and whether or not its acoustic properties can be improved, have given the subject a most patient and careful investigation, aided by all the information attainable from any source within their reach, as well as by the assistance and advice of the most experienced and competent scientists with whom they have been able to confer.

The defects in the structure of the Hall of Representatives, in respect to heat, light, ventilation, and acoustics, have been the subject of grave and serious complaint ever since its completion, and the difficulties in overcoming them have never yet been solved in a manner entirely satisfactory to those who have undertaken it, with anything of a correct apprehension of the character and magnitude of the task. Many efforts have been made in the past fifteen years to accomplish this result, and at a considerable cost, and while those who have conducted some of them were of opinion that no improvements in the particulars mentioned were either necessary or practical, and while others of them believed that they had succeeded in effecting all that was desired, your committee have concluded that both classes were mistaken, and that the most radical changes and improvements are urgently demanded for the comfort and health of members, and that but few, if any, have been made since the original completion of the Hall until within a very recent period.

The committee do not believe that the Hall with its present architectural structure can ever be ventilated so as to be entirely healthy or free from many objections and inconveniences, but they are of opinion that it may be so greatly improved that the health of those who occupy it will not be subjected to any serious danger. The same, too, is true, but in a less degree, as to light and its acoustic capacity, though they think that these latter may be so remedied that little inconvenience will result from them in the future.

The committee have availed themselves as far as possible of the labor of those who preceded them in the same line of duty, and especially of that performed by a subcommittee from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds during the second session of the Forty-fourth Congress, to whom the matter was referred by resolution of the House, (No. 389.) The following report of this subcommittee gives in a succinct form the result of their labors up to that time, and together with the recommendation upon which the same was based, is submitted for the information of the House.

[House Report No. 462, Forty-fourth Congress, second session.]

Mr. YOUNG, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, submitted the following report:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., May 4, 1876.

Sir: The subcommittee charged with the duty of devising the necessary means for the proper ventilation of the Hall of the House of Representatives, under House resolution 389, beg leave to report that, after having carefully examined a great number of plans and propositions submitted to them upon that subject, they arrived at the conclusion that it was advisable to refer the entire matter to a board composed of scientific Government officers, and they therefore requested Professor Joseph Henry, of the Smithsonian Institution; Lieutenant Colonel Thomas L. Casey, of the Army Engineer Corps; Professor Billings, of the Medical Department of the Army; Mr. F. Schumann, Assistant Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department, and Mr. Edward Clark, Architect of the Capitol, to act as members of said board, and to advise the subcommittee of the most practical and economical method of attaining the object in view.

The committee would further report that from the investigations which they have made, and the concurrent testimony of many scientific gentlemen, they are of the opinion that the present ventilation afforded the Hall of the House of Representatives is so imperfect and defective as to be dangerous to the health of those who occupy it for any considerable length of time.

The board of Government officers above referred to have made a preliminary report to the subcommittee, setting out the defects in the present system of ventilation, and recommending the application of certain remedies for immediate temporary relief, which will, according to their estimate, require an expenditure of $4,600. This report is accompanied by a letter from Professor Henry, president of the board, both of which are hereto attached, and marked, respectively, Exhibits A and B.

The subcommittee would respectfully recommend that the suggestions set forth in these papers be adopted, and that Congress be asked to appropriate the amount of money asked for, in order that the work may be commenced at once. All of which is respectfully submitted.

CASEY YOUNG, Chairman,
CARTER H. HARRISON,
H. M. PLAISTED.

Subcommittee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Hon. WILLIAM A. HOLMAN,
Chairman House Committee Public Buildings and Grounds.

A.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 20, 1876.

Report of a board of United States officers convened by request of the Subcommittee on Public Buildings and Grounds to advise with regard to the ventilation of the House of Representatives.

The board find, as the result of examination of the various reports submitted to them, and of personal inquiry and observation, that the principal cause of trouble at present in the main Hall is the insufficient supply of air. The impurities now existing in the air which is supplied through the main duct from the exterior opening are considered to be of small importance in comparison with the defect in quantity.

This insufficient supply the board finds to be due to the want of sufficient openings and register-surface in the floor of the House, owing to the closure of a part of the original openings. The result of this is that not more than about twelve thousand feet of air per minute can be forced in without producing draughts and currents, to the discomfort of many of the members.

The board is of the opinion that for the use of those upon the floor of the House alone not less than fifty cubic feet of air per minute per man should be furnished, and that this supply should be calculated for not less than four hundred persons, making the supply required, excluding the galleries, twenty thousand cubic feet of air per minute.

In the opinion of the board the remedy is to increase the number of openings in the floor of the House by cutting holes in the back risers of the platform of the outer tier of seats, and by placing registers in all parts of the House except that immediately occupied by the seats and desks; such registers to be of sufficient number and size to, if possible, triple or even quadruple the present area of opening. This can be done at once, without in any way interfering with the session of the House.

The board find further that, as the exhaust-fans are taking more air out of the Hall than enters it by the floor fresh-air supply, the deficiency is practically made up by a passage of air from the corridors and lobbies, which air is rendered impure from several sources. A part of these impurities comes from the basement and cellar, from the kitchen restaurant, water-closets, and perhaps, at times, from the main sewer beneath the building.

The board recommend that immediate steps be taken to ventilate this sewer into the main furnace-shaft, that ventilation be applied in the basement, that the water-closets in the cellar be entirely removed, and other provisions made for the accommodation of those employed in the cellar; and that the whole of the two stories beneath the main floor, and the space beneath the floor, if possible, be subjected to a thorough cleansing and disinfection.

The board also find that at times the doors between the fan-room and engine-room, and between the engine-room and kitchen, are left open, the result of which is that the air from these rooms is then drawn directly into the fresh-air supply of the House; and the board therefore recommend that bulkheads be built cutting off all communication between the engine-room and the kitchen, and that the engineer be instructed to keep the door of the fan-room constantly locked, except at those times when he is himself present in the fan-room.

The total expense of the changes and alterations recommended above is estimated at $4,650; and by making them, it is believed that the discomfort of the House, arising from defective ventilation, will be greatly relieved for the remainder of the present session. To put the heating and ventilation of the House into proper and satisfactory condition, so that it shall be efficient in both winter and summer, will require other means, with regard to which the board will report hereafter.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH HENRY,
Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, President of the Board.
THOS. L. CASEY,
Lieutenant-Colonel Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., Member of the Board.
EDWARD CLARK,
Architect United States Capitol, Member of the Board.
F. SCHUMANN,
Civil Engineer Treasury Department, Member of the Board.
JOHN S. BILLINGS,
Assistant Surgeon, United States Army, Secretary of the Board.

B.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 20, 1876.

SIR: Herewith inclosed I have the honor to transmit the preliminary report of the board of United States officers, convened in accordance with the request of your committee, to consider the best means to improve the ventilation of the House of Representatives. This report is a preliminary one, and is intended to recommend measures which can be at once applied, and will afford relief for the remainder of the session, without much expense and without causing much inconvenience to Congress.

In connection with this report I am requested by the board to state that it is desirable that certain instruments shall be constructed for the purpose of registering accurately the work done by the ventilating machinery of the House. They also desire to employ an expert machinist to examine in detail the steam-heating apparatus and pipes, and to determine what, if any, part of this is available for future use. For these purposes the board requests that the sum of $1,000 be allowed, to be expended under their direction for the purposes above indicated.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOSEPH HENRY,
Secretary of Smithsonian Institution, President of the Board.
Hon. CASEY YOUNG, M. C.,
Chairman Subcommittee on the Ventilation of the House of Representatives.

From causes which your committee do not deem it necessary to mention, the recommendations referred to in this report were not fully carried out, but such as were had the effect of greatly improving the ventilation of the Hall. When the matter was placed in charge of the present committee they found the inquiry submitted to them to be one that involved so much of scientific research and requiring so intimate a knowledge of many chemical and atmospheric conditions with which it was almost impossible to acquaint themselves in the limited time they could devote to it in the interval between their other public duties that they deemed it advisable to retain the services of the board organized by the previous committee, and accordingly requested the gentlemen who composed it to continue to serve, which they very cheerfully consented to do. Professor Henry having died in the mean time, Professor Spencer F. Baird, his successor at the Smithsonian Institution, was elected to succeed him as chairman of the board.

After a further investigation of the whole subject by these gentlemen they submitted a report to your committee, containing the following recommendations:

First. That the openings in the floor of the Hall, for the admission of fresh air, be so increased in number and extent as to admit a much larger quantity than it is at present possible to introduce.

Second. The construction of open fire-places at intervals on the inside of the interior walls of the Hall, both as a means of producing radiant heat and aiding in purifying the atmosphere.

Third. That the Hall in the rear of the Speaker's seat be closed at each end, and that larger openings be made into it through the wall intervening between that and the Hall of the House of Representatives, as also through the second wall into the reception-room, Speaker's room, and reporters' room, the partitions between all those rooms to be removed, and the whole, together with the hall in the rear of the Speaker's seat, to be converted into an open lobby for the use of members alone, in order that they may have access to the outer air and sunlight from the south.

Fourth. That the duct by which fresh air is supplied to the Hall of Representatives be changed so as to carry it in a direct line to the west wall of the building, to connect with a tower twenty feet high, to be built at the foot of the second terrace, through which fresh air may be drawn in the Hall.

Fifth. The removal of the desks from the Hall, and the substitution of chairs with a small drawer and wings attached, for the purpose of writing, by which the outer seats will be brought thirteen feet nearer the Speaker's seat, thus giving more space for fresh-air openings in the floor, and making practicable the building of open fire-places along the interior wall without giving inconvenience to members occupying the rear circle of seats. A drawing showing the arrangement of the seats after this proposed change is herewith submitted.

The board is also of the opinion that the substitution of hot water for steam would greatly improve the heating of the hall, in view of the health and comfort of members, but they do not deem it so important as to render proper the additional expense of $25,000 which it would involve, at least until it is ascertained whether or not the other proposed changes and alterations will effect the desired object.

The supplemental report of the board, containing the recommendations referred to, is herewith submitted, together with all former reports made on the subject.

Your committee are of the opinion that all the recommendations made by the board, and above set out, except that referring to a change in the heating appliances, are important, and should be made as early as possible, as their investigations have satisfied them that the health of the members and others occupying the Hall renders this imperatively necessary.

The whole cost of such changes as the committee deem it proper to make now, according to the estimate made by the Architect of the Capitol, is $25,000, and it can be done during the approaching recess of Congress.

The committee, therefore, respectfully submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That Prof. Spencer F. Baird, of the Smithsonian Institution; Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas L. Casey, of the Corps of Army Engineers; Mr. Edward Clark, Architect of the Capitol; Mr. F. Schumann, civil engineer, Treasury Department, and Prof. John S. Billings, surgeon, United States Army, be, and they are hereby, constituted an advisory board, without additional pay or compensation, with power and authority to make and carry out, through the Architect of the Capitol Extension, during the approaching recess of Congress, all the changes and alterations in the heating, lighting, and ventilating the Hall of the House of Representatives that are set out and recommended in the report submitted by them and adopted by the select committee appointed by resolution of the House to inquire into the present method of heating, lighting, and ventilating the Hall of the House of Representatives; and the said board may employ a clerk during the time they are engaged in the performance of such work.

And be it further resolved, That for the purpose of paying the cost of said changes and alterations the sum of $30,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of the contingent fund of the House, to be expended under the direction of said board.

[House Report No. 119, Forty-fifth Congress, second session.]

Mr. YOUNG, from the select committee on ventilation of the Hall, submitted the following report:

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION,
Washington, D. C., January 26, 1875.

SIR: I have the honor, in behalf of the advisory commission on the heating and ventilation of the Hall of the House of Representatives, appointed by your honorable committee, to transmit to you herewith the final report of the commission, accompanied by sundry papers received from your committee, and also a report on the heating and ventilation of the British houses of Parliament, and a report on the original plan of heating and ventilating the Capitol. The report of the commission herewith transmitted has involved much original investigation and the examination of the most reliable authorities on the subject. The members of the commission have inspected the buildings in this country most celebrated for effective ventilation, and have availed themselves of a visit to Europe, on other business, made by Dr. Billings, one of the members of the commission, to obtain the latest information on the same subject from that country.

It is hoped, therefore, that this report, with its appendices, will be deemed of sufficient importance to warrant its publication in full, with proper illustrations, for the use of the public. The subject is one of great difficulty, and in regard to which much general misconception prevails, as well as a want of a knowledge of the established principles upon which the art of heating and ventilation depends.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOSEPH HENRY, Chairman.

Hon. CASEY YOUNG,
Chairman Committee on Ventilation of the House of Representatives.

Final report of a board of United States officers, convened by request of a special committee of the House of Representatives of the Forty-fourth Congress, to advise with regard to the ventilation of the main Hall of the House.

I.—PREFATORY REMARKS.

In this, their final report, the members of the board think it proper to state as briefly as possible the condition of the ventilation of the House at the time they were requested to advise upon the subject, the action which has been taken in accordance with their recommendations, and the results obtained, as recently shown by a series of experiments and trials made under their direction.

As they have reason to think, from an examination of the various plans for the improvement of the ventilation of the House which have been submitted to them, that the principles which should govern all attempts to secure satisfactory ventilation in large and at times crowded assembly halls like that of the House are either unknown to or forgotten by many of those who undertake to advise in such matters, they believe that a brief preliminary sketch of these principles will be useful in this place.

Ventilation consists in the removal of foul air and the introduction of pure air, meaning by pure air the mass of the atmosphere surrounding a given locality, without reference to a fixed chemical standard.

The principal impurities in large assembly halls are derived mainly from respiration and cutaneous excretions, and consist of organic matter suspended in the air in the form of a fine dust, or in that of vapors probably of complex constitution, but with regard to the exact nature of which very little is known.

Carbonic-acid gas, which is given off by an adult at the rate of about six-tenths of a cubic foot per hour, has no importance as an impurity in the present case, for it is odorless and harmless unless present in much greater proportion than it ever exists in such halls as that of the House of Representatives. This carbonic-acid gas, like all other gaseous impurities derived from respiration, is present in about the same proportions at all heights in the room, the percentage being nearly the same in samples of air taken from the top and from the bottom in ordinary apartments. In the Hall the carbonic acid is slightly in excess at the top. It is a gross error to suppose that this gas falls to the floor of the House, for although when pure it is heavier than atmospheric air of the same temperature, yet air expired from the lungs is lighter than the surrounding air at ordinary temperatures, and the law of the diffusion of gases effectually prevents any separation.

With reference to the laws of the movements of gases, we need refer to but three in addition to that of their diffusion just mentioned:

1. Currents of air are in most cases due to heat: warm air, expanding, becomes lighter than cold air, which flows in beneath and pushes it upward.

2. As a rule, a current of air having a velocity of less than two feet per second is imperceptible and does not give a sensation of draught.

3. Air in motion has a strong tendency to adhere to and follow the outlines or surfaces along or over which it passes. If a current of air enter a room horizontally, near the bottom, it will adhere to and flow over the floor almost like water, for a considerable distance.

The standard of purity of air in an audience hall which is recommended by the board is that fixed by the late Dr. Parkes, namely, that the ratio of carbonic acid (which is selected simply because it can be conveniently measured) shall not exceed 6 parts in 10,000, and to secure this it has been shown that about fifty cubic feet of fresh air per man per minute must be introduced and thoroughly distributed.

The problem of ventilation of the Hall might therefore be stated as follows: How to introduce and distribute from thirty thousand to sixty thousand cubic feet of fresh air per minute—corresponding to from six hundred to twelve hundred occupants—and to do this in such a way that the occupants shall not be annoyed by heat, cold, or currents of air.

Even were this done, perfect ventilation would not be obtained, for this would only provide for dilution of the impure air, while in perfect ventilation the impurities are not so diluted, but completely removed as fast as formed, so that no man can inspire any air which has shortly before been in his own lungs or in those of his neighbor.

To secure such ventilation as this, horizontal currents must be avoided and all the air in the room should be made to move directly upward or directly downward. It is utterly impossible to thoroughly ventilate such a hall as that of the House, if fully occupied, by any so-called natural ventilation by means of doors and windows.

The majority of such halls now in existence are heated and ventilated by currents of air passing from below upward; but the Chamber of Deputies at Versailles is arranged for downward ventilation, and to judge from the documents laid before the board, this method would seem to be preferred by many theorists on the subject. As the ventilation of the English Houses of Parliament has been the subject of many experiments, the board thought it well to ascertain the methods now in use and approved there. At the request of the board, and through the courtesy of Dr. John Percy, F. R. S., who has charge of the heating and ventilation of these buildings, a report was prepared upon the present apparatus by Mr. J. H. E. Waters, E. M., a copy of which is furnished as an appendix to this report.

The relative merits of the upward versus the downward system of ventilation in large halls in which the center of the room is occupied by a number of people may be estimated from the following considerations:

1. The direction of the currents of air from the human body is, under ordinary circumstances, upward, owing to the heat of the body. The velocity of these currents is small, but it may be estimated as being certainly not less than one inch per second. This current is an assistance to upward and an obstacle to downward ventilation.

2. The heat from all gas-flames used for lighting tends to assist upward ventilation, but elaborate arrangements must be made to prevent contamination of the air by the lights if the downward method be adopted.

3. In large rooms an enormous quantity of air must be introduced in the downward method, if the occupants are to breathe pure and fresh air. The whole body of air in the room must be made to move uniformly downward; for if at any point this be not the case, the products of respiration will rise at those points, and diffusing, contaminate the air which is coming down to be breathed. The uniform rate of descent should certainly be not less than three inches per second, in order to overcome the ascensional tendency of the currents from respiration, the heat of the body, &c., which implies that for every one hundred square feet of floor area at least nine hundred cubic feet of fresh air are to be brought in per minute. As the floor of the Hall and galleries of the House contain 12,927 square feet, it follows that the amount of fresh air required would be 193,500 cubic feet per minute, or about three times the amount which is found to give satisfactory results with the upward method.

4. In halls arranged with galleries the difficulty of so arranging downward currents that, on the one hand, the air rendered impure in the galleries shall not contaminate that which is descending to supply the main floor below, and, on the other hand, the supply for the floor shall not be drawn aside to the galleries, is so great that it is almost an impossibility to effect it.

For these and other reasons the board are of the opinion that the upward method should be preferred. In the upward method there are two special difficulties to be met in halls of this kind. The first is dust, derived mainly from the shoes of the occupants. This, becoming dry, is ground into fine powder, some of which is kept floating in the air by the upward currents. By careful supervision, and by the use of carpets which can be easily detached and frequently shaken, as is done in the English House of Parliament, this evil can be so much mitigated as not to be noticed.

The second difficulty is due to the discomfort produced by perceptible currents of air. The cause of this is insufficient area and improper position of the openings for the admission of fresh air. If the area of openings be too small, the air must pass through them with too great velocity in order to obtain the required quantity. In a hall liable to be so fully occupied as this, there are few points at which fresh-air openings can be placed the current from which will not impinge on some part of the body of some occupant, and if it does so impinge the velocity should not exceed two feet per second, in order to avoid sensations of draught. The supply of air for the House should be, as we have seen, from six hundred to twelve hundred cubic feet per second, whence it follows that the total area of openings should be nearly five hundred square feet. It is desirable to diminish the effect of these openings as much as possible by placing at least a part of them at points where the currents will not reach a person for several feet, or until they have become somewhat diffused. In attempting to effect this, it is very important to remember the law of the adhesion of gases to surfaces, to which we have alluded, and it is from omission to do this that a large part of the discomfort of members of the House has arisen. It should be distinctly understood that the board states these general principles only as applicable to large assembly halls where a number of people are gathered in the center of the room, for under other circumstances some of them do not hold good.

II.—CONDITION OF THE VENTILATION OF THE HOUSE AT THE TIME THE BOARD WAS CALLED TOGETHER.

The condition of the ventilation of the House at the time of the organization of the board was stated in the following report, forwarded April 20, 1876:

"The board find, as the result of examination of the various reports submitted to them and of personal inquiry and observation, that the principal cause of trouble at present in the main Hall is the insufficient supply of air. The impurities now existing in the air which is supplied through the main duct from the exterior opening are considered to be of small importance in comparison with the defect in quantity.

"This insufficient supply the board finds to be due to the want of sufficient openings and register surface in the floor of the House. The result of this is that not more than about twelve thousand cubic feet of air per minute can be forced in without producing draughts and currents, to the discomfort of many of the members. The board is of the opinion that for the use of those upon the floor of the House alone, not less than fifty cubic feet of air per minute per man should be furnished, and that this supply should be calculated for not less than four hundred persons, making the supply required, excluding the galleries, twenty thousand cubic feet of air per minute. In the opinion of the board, the remedy is to increase the number of openings in the floor of the House by cutting holes in the back rise of the platform of the outer tier of seats, and by placing registers in all parts of the House except that immediately occupied by the seats and desks: such registers to be of sufficient number and size to, if possible, triple or even quadruple the present area of opening.

"This can be done at once without in any way interfering with the sessions of the House. The board find further that, as the exhaust-fans are taking more air out of the Hall than enters it by the floor, fresh air to supply the deficiency is practically made up by a passage of air from the corridors and lobbies, which air is rendered impure from several sources. A part of these impurities comes from the basement and cellar, from the kitchen, restaurant, water-closets, and perhaps, at times, from the main sewer beneath the building.

"The board recommend that immediate steps be taken to ventilate this sewer into the main furnace-shaft, that ventilation be applied in the water-closets in the basement, that the water-closets in the cellar be entirely removed and other provisions made for the accommodation of those employed in the cellar, and that the whole of the two stories beneath the main floor, and the space beneath the main floor if possible, be subjected to a thorough cleansing and disinfection.

"The board also find that at times the doors between the fan-room and engine-room, and between the engine-room and kitchen, are left open, the result of which is that the air from these rooms is then drawn directly into the fresh-air supply of the House; and the board therefore recommend that bulkheads be built cutting off all communication between the engine-room and the kitchen, and that the engineer be instructed to keep the door of the fan-room constantly locked, except at those times when he is himself present in the fan-room.

"The board further recommend that no person be admitted to the galleries who is not cleanly in person and clothing.

"The total expense of the changes and alterations recommended is estimated at $3,650; and by making them it is believed that the discomfort of the House arising from defective ventilation will be greatly relieved for the remainder of the present session.

"To put the heating and ventilation of the House into proper and satisfactory condition, so that it shall be efficient in both winter and summer, will require other means, with regard to which the board will report hereafter."

Further details will be found in a report prepared by Mr. Robert Briggs, at the request of the board, which report is herewith submitted as an appendix to this paper.

The apparatus for heating and ventilation of the House was constructed and arranged by Mr. Briggs, under the direction of Captain (now General) M. C. Meigs, United States Army, and his report sets forth clearly the plan adopted, and renders unnecessary any detailed description of it in this paper.

The recommendations of the board were duly carried out under the direction of the Architect of the Capitol, and the results are shown in a letter of which the following is a copy:

"WASHINGTON, D. C., June 3, 1876.

"Sir: I have the honor to state that the measures which have been taken for the temporary improvement of the ventilation of the Hall of the House of Representatives, in accordance with the recommendations made in the report of the board dated April 20, 1876, have produced the good effects which were expected.

"The area of openings for the admission of fresh air to the floor of the Hall having been largely increased, it is now possible to introduce sufficient air for the use of the members without causing unpleasant draughts, at least during warm weather.

"The main sewer has been ventilated and is now being trapped; satisfactory ventilation has been provided for the kitchen, and other changes have been effected which make it certain that no dangerous degree of impurity exists in the air supply of the main hall. This has been done without exceeding the estimate of cost submitted.

"The board is informed that it is desirable that an estimate should be submitted at once for work which should be done during the present summer.

"Taking into consideration the facts that the instruments for testing the air supply, which have been ordered, will not be ready for several weeks; that the board desires to make certain experiments and obtain further information before submitting its final report or making recommendations which might involve extensive changes in the present arrangements of the heating and ventilating apparatus; and, lastly, that such changes could hardly be made in the short time before the meeting of the next session of Congress, and would require the long interval coming after a short session, i. e., from March to December, to have the work done as it should be, it is therefore recommended:

"I. That the present heating apparatus be put in sufficiently good repair to serve for the coming winter session.

"II. That flues be constructed to furnish a much larger supply of air to the galleries than is now given, and that the distribution of air to this part of the House be greatly extended; authority should also be given for the making additional openings in the floor of the House, if it should be found desirable.

"III. That the lobby in rear of the Speaker's chair be ventilated by large flues passing from the ceiling of the lobby to the loft.

"The total cost of these repairs and improvements is estimated at $8,000.

"The board has under consideration the details with regard to the flues, &c., above recommended, and plans are now in course of preparation in the office of the Architect of the Capitol, which plans are sufficiently advanced to enable the board to make the above recommendations, without deeming it necessary to go into details. It is, however, proper to mention that these changes will be required as a part of whatever system of ventilation may be adopted.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

"JOSEPH HENRY,

"Secretary Smithsonian Institution, President of the Board.

"Hon. CASEY YOUNG, M. C.,

"Chairman of the Subcommittee on Public Buildings and Grounds, having in charge the ventilation, &c., of the House of Representatives."

Owing to want of funds, very little was done toward carrying out the recommendations of the board during the summer of 1876. In the autumn of that year one of the members of the board, (Dr. Billings,) visiting Europe on other business, embraced the occasion to examine the methods of heating and ventilation in hospitals and in large halls of assembly.

Upon his return the results of his observations were communicated to the board, and may be briefly summed up in the statement that he found the most satisfactory results obtained in the English houses of Parliament and in the grand opera-house of Vienna.

In both these a system of direct upward ventilation is employed, and in both there is a careful and constant scientific supervision of the working of the apparatus. The means of moving the air in the houses of Parliament are mainly large aspirating chimneys, which at times are supplemented by a large impelling air-pump. In the opera-house a fan is the impelling power.

The results obtained by the downward system in the Chamber of Deputies at Versailles were not found to be satisfactory, since the room becomes uncomfortably warm and oppressive after about two hours' session of the chamber.

The conclusions of the board were presented to the committee in the following report:

"WASHINGTON, D. C., February 2, 1877.

"* * * The board find that the measures which have been taken to give an increased supply of fresh air to the Hall of the House of Representatives, in accordance with its recommendation in its previous report, have been followed by good results, and that the test of actual experience, during both cold and warm weather, has shown that the Hall can be satisfactorily heated and ventilated with the system now employed, namely, that of upward currents, and that this can be done without causing discomfort to the occupants.

"The recommendations of the board heretofore presented were intended to meet the great want existing, viz, that of an increased supply of air without the production of unpleasant draughts, and also to remove or mitigate certain sources of impurity which were found to exist in the basement of the building. These recommendations have been only in part carried out, owing to want of funds; for although the sum estimated for by the board, viz, $8,000, was duly appropriated from the contingent fund of the House at the close of the last session, yet it appears that this appropriation was only partially available, since the contingent fund was exhausted.

"For this reason it has been found impossible by the Architect to provide the means for that increased supply of fresh air to the galleries which the board considers necessary.

"The board has collected information as to the practical results obtained in large halls of assembly in this country and in Europe by the systems of heating and ventilation adopted, and from these as well as from the observations and experience of its members it has arrived at certain conclusions as to what should be done looking to the permanent arrangement for heating and ventilating the south wing of the Capitol, which may be stated as follows:

"I. That it is not desirable to change the present or upward system of ventilation of the Hall of the House of Representatives for any system of so-called downward ventilation, and it is not possible to apply any so-called natural system of ventilation by means of windows and openings in the ceiling and walls only to a large assembly hall like this.

"II. That while the quantity of fresh air which can now be supplied to members on the floor without causing unpleasant draughts is probably sufficient under ordinary circumstances, it is desirable that there should be means to increase it when needed.

"III. That the supply of air to the galleries should be largely increased, and that there should be means provided for furnishing cooler air to the galleries than is supplied to the floor of the Hall.

"IV. That the system of brick flues beneath the floor of the House should be removed and galvanized iron flues substituted, so far as necessary.

"V. That a duct should be constructed to bring the fresh air required for the use of the House to the injecting fans from a point on the lower terrace and through an ornamental shaft about thirty feet high.

"VI. That an attempt should be made to regulate the amount of moisture in the air supplied, and to cool the air in warm weather.

"VII. That for this purpose, as well as for other reasons, the course of the present fresh-air duct should be changed and the heating coils removed from their inaccessible and inconvenient position, and that the point for admission of fresh air beneath the floor shall be central instead of in one corner, as at present.

"VIII. That additional means of ventilation should be supplied for the upper lobbies.

"IX. That an attempt should be made to so arrange a system of outlets for foul air in the roof that the wind can only produce an increased flow of air. If this can be done successfully, the exhaust-fans now in use will become available for ventilation of the basement and lobbies.

"X. That means of communication by a system of electric signals be provided between the floor of the House and the engine-room.

"XI. That the whole matter of heating and ventilation of the south wing of the Capitol should be placed under the control of one person, who is to be held responsible for their proper working. Under the present system, or rather want of system, the board do not believe that any apparatus can be made to work satisfactorily.

If it is desired that the board shall continue to interest itself in the heating and ventilation of the House and in the devising of the best means of carrying out its recommendations, it is extremely desirable that the person who is to have charge of the apparatus when completed should be in some way associated with the board, not only to carry out the experiments and observations which it may deem necessary, but to become familiar with what is to be done, and with the apparatus and machinery decided to be best adapted for doing it.

XII. Plans have been prepared by the Architect of the Capitol for the alterations recommended, and these are herewith submitted. The total cost of making these changes and of putting the heating apparatus in good order, including the purchase of twenty thousand feet of new steam pipe, is estimated at $33,000.

The conclusions of this report were accepted, and the sum estimated for was appropriated, as appears from the following extract from the act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses, approved March 3, 1877, (Stat. at L., vol. 19, 1877, p. 348.)

"For improving the Capitol grounds, and for paving roadway and foot walks in the Capitol grounds, $100,000: Provided, however, That a sum not exceeding $33,000 of this appropriation may be used for the improvement of the heating and ventilating of the House of Representatives, to be expended by the Architect of the Capitol, in accordance with the report of the board of United States officers, convened by request of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; and that said board of officers be requested to advise the Architect in the premises; and that hereafter the subject of ventilation and heating the House of Representatives be placed under the direction of the Architect of the Capitol."

An account of changes and improvements made under this authority will be found in the annual report of the Architect of the Capitol for the year 1877. The work was not entirely completed at the time of the meeting of the extra session of the Forty-fifth Congress, and the board could not conveniently test the working of the new system until after the Christmas holidays, and felt the less necessity for doing so immediately on account of the assurance received from members that the results were fairly satisfactory. January 7, 1878, at twelve m., the board met in the Hall, and carefully investigated the actual working of the heating and ventilating apparatus. With the fan running at 80 revolutions per minute, the velocity of entrance of air at the several registers varied from two to six feet per second. The total area of fresh-air openings in the floor of the Hall, including gratings and nettings, is about 350 square feet, and of this it is estimated that 157 square feet is clear opening. Taking the average velocity of incoming air at 4 feet per second, this would give 37,680 cubic feet of air per minute. The supplies to the galleries, calculated in like manner for 72 square feet of clear opening, would be 17,280 cubic feet per minute. The total air supply therefore was sufficient for about 1,100 persons, allowing 30 cubic feet of air per minute per man. That this is about the average work of the apparatus is shown by the appended table of observations made by the engineer. The observed velocity of the air in the main duct may be averaged at 750 feet per minute, and as the area of this duct may be taken at 75 square feet, it will be found, on calculation, that this nearly corresponds with the observations of the board.

Upon this the board would remark that the quantity supplied is ample for all ordinary conditions of the House, and that it is evident that were the fan run at one hundred and twenty revolutions per minute, which can readily be done, the supply, so far as quantity is concerned, would be sufficient for the largest number which can be contained in the Hall and galleries. The velocity of the air at the point of entrance is, however, too great. By means of fumes of muriate of ammonia, smoke, burning frankincense, &c., it was shown that the currents of air after diffusion rose almost perpendicularly, traversing the height to the ceiling, thirty-six feet, in from seven to fifteen seconds.

The external temperature was 16° F.; the average temperature of the floor of the Hall 68° F.; of the north galleries 68°; of the south galleries 69°. In the air-duct, after passing the heating coils, the temperature was 78°, and of the wet-bulb 57°. In explanation of this latter fact it should be stated that the air immediately after leaving the heating coils passes over a surface of hot water to be moistened. Additional means of furnishing moisture and removal of dust have been provided in the shape of a spray apparatus. The use of this for five minutes raised the wet-bulb thermometer to 59° F., and lowered the dry-bulb to 76°. Considering that the air as it entered the heating apparatus was almost absolutely dry, the above results of the apparatus for furnishing moisture may be considered as very satisfactory.

The area of openings for the escape of foul air in the ceiling of the Hall is 672 square feet, and the area of openings in the roof, fitted with louvers, is 160 square feet on each side.

The area for the outflow of air is therefore in excess of that for influx. The amount of air which passes out of the Hall through the ceiling is decidedly in excess of that which enters it through the fresh-air registers on the floor, and this excess is supplied through the doors leading into the lobbies and galleries, where a very marked inward current was found. Experiments made by the engineer show that the average velocity of the air through the openings in the ceiling, when the exhaust-fans are not in operation and the louvers are open, is about 145 feet per minute, or that about 90,000 cubic feet of air per minute pass out in this way. With the exhaust-fans running, the velocity is about 162 feet per minute, giving over 108,000 cubic feet per minute.

The cause of this is the aspirating power exerted by the column of warm and comparatively light air which fills the House. The Hall of the House of Representatives is like a huge chimney with a contracted top, which is, however, not sufficiently contracted to correspond to the area of special openings below for fresh-air supply, and which must therefore exercise a strong suction upon all openings connected with it, and in this way becomes, to a certain extent, the ventilating-shaft for the external lobbies, halls, and stairways, including those of the basement.

Even when the louvers are closed and the exhaust-fans are not running the shaft into which these fans discharge exercises a strong aspirating influence upon the Hall after a current is once established, the effect being that of an inverted siphon.

This is shown by the following tests, made January 15, 1878: All the fans were at rest and the louvers in roof closed. The temperature of the external air was 40°; in the Hall, 70°; in the exhaust-chimney, 68°.

The velocity of air in the main supply-duct was 250 feet per minute, giving a supply of 18,750 feet per minute. The average velocity of air, in the fresh-air registers, was about 80 feet per minute. The average velocity of the air escaping from ceiling openings was 60 feet per minute, giving about 40,000 cubic feet per minute. The velocity of the upward current in the exhaust chimney near the top, was 355 feet per minute, the area of the chimney being 33.5, giving nearly 12,000 cubic feet per minute. A part of the supply of air to this chimney comes from a ventilating-pipe connected with the restaurant kitchen in the cellar. This pipe has an area of 50,265 square inches; the velocity in it was 570 feet per minute, and the temperature 94°.

It is evident that the closure of the louvers could have been by no means complete, but it is also evident that the exhaust-chimney exercises a force in the Hall which is too considerable to be neglected.

As the result of their observations, and from an examination of the data as to temperature, velocity of currents, &c., furnished by the engineer, the members of the board conclude as follows:

I. That the present system of heating and ventilation of the House of Representatives is based upon correct principles, and should not be changed for any of the so-called systems of natural or downward or lateral ventilation.

The air now delivered to the Hall is pure, and can be furnished in such quantity, of such temperature, and of such degree of humidity as is desirable for the comfort and health of a great majority of the inmates of the Hall. We say the great majority, because, in a large assembly of men of various ages, constitutions, and habits, it is impossible to please every one and yet keep the room at a uniform temperature.

The special defect which yet remains to be remedied is in the mode of delivery of the fresh air upon the floor. The area of fresh-air openings is insufficient, and ought to be at least doubled if the position of the registers in the risers is to be unmodified. As it now is, horizontal currents from the openings in the risers are sweeping from the circumference toward the central area, adhering to the floor, and moving with a velocity of over two feet per second if the requisite amount of air-supply is furnished.

Under the direction of the Architect a trial has been made of three different methods to prevent this inconvenience. The first is to place a perpendicular strip of metal a few inches in front of the openings in the risers. This strip acts as a deflector, and throws the currents upward. The second is to place a series of register openings just in front of the risers. The ascending current from these openings meeting with the horizontal stream forms a resultant current which rises from the floor at an angle of about 45°.

The third method is to place a series of register openings just above the risers and in front of each desk, and, after examining the results, it is this method which is recommended by the board as giving the best results. The results of the first method are also good, but it gives no increase in area of fresh-air openings. The second method gives unsatisfactory results, as the current of air produced strikes the back of a person seated in the chair in front.

It is therefore recommended that, on the front edge of each platform, and extending entirely around the semicircle just in front of each row of desks, be placed a strip of register openings of about six inches in width. This will add, sixty-five square feet area of fresh-air opening to the floor of the Hall. In addition to this, the board advise that additional register openings be placed in those parts of the floor of the Hall not usually occupied by members, which, in all, shall amount to about eighty square feet of clear opening in the floor. This will make the total area of clear opening in the floor about three hundred square feet. The amount of clear opening in the galleries should be in like manner increased by about fifty-three square feet, thus giving one hundred and twenty-five square feet of opening in this position, or four hundred and twenty-five square feet in all.

When this is done, the board is confident that the full amount of air required can be introduced without causing currents of so great velocity as to be uncomfortable to any occupant.

The velocity of the currents of foul air escaping at the ceiling of the Hall and from the louvered openings not only may but ought to be at least double the velocity of the entering currents.

It follows that the area openings in the ceiling and in the louvers ought to be about half that of the fresh-air openings; i. e., not more than two hundred and twelve square feet. In fact, the lower openings upon one side of the roof only, having an area of one hundred and sixty square feet, are probably ample for this position, where a velocity of seven or eight feet per second is desirable. The area of openings in the ceilings should be somewhat greater than this, but the present area of six hundred and seventy-two square feet is certainly at least double that which is required, and the board, therefore, recommend that this area be reduced gradually until the quantity of air passing out be found to be not more than equivalent to that entering from the fans. By doing this the tendency to entrance of air from the surrounding lobbies and halls will be done away with, and the air from the basements must find some other outlet.

II. It is the opinion of the board that the exhaust-fans should not usually be employed to increase the aspiration from above the Hall, although in certain conditions of the wind, requiring the partial or even entire closure of the louvers, they may be used as at present. But during much the greater portion of the time these exhaust-fans can be most usefully employed in drawing air from the basement and thus securing its satisfactory ventilation, and preventing air-currents from it from passing into the House.

III. The board recommend that the gallery-seats on the south side shall be made to correspond with those on the north side, by having perforated wood substituted for the upholstery which now covers them.

IV. It is the opinion of the board that the carpet on the floor of the House should not be, as at present, a fixture, but that it should be so arranged as to be frequently taken up and cleaned, and that the necessary means should be provided for this purpose.

V. It should be made possible and easy, by means of a system of rods, levers, &c., to move the louvers in front of the heating coils, and thus regulate the temperature of the air without entering the air-duct, as is necessary at present.

VI. Means of communication should be provided between the engineer and some one on the floor of the House by means of a telephone or some equivalent mechanism.

VII. The board would call special attention to their recommendation No. XI, in their report dated February 2, 1877. Skilled supervision is an absolutely essential feature of the system of heating and ventilation provided for the House.

The members of the board take pleasure in saying that they have found the present chief engineer, Mr. Lannan, uniformly courteous and attentive, that all the apparatus under his charge is in excellent order, and that in making the various tests, experiments, and observations requested he has shown marked intelligence and accuracy.

Finally, it is proper to remark that the amount of work executed by the Architect to complete the system of heating and ventilation exhausted the appropriation made for that purpose, and therefore it was impossible to carry out the views of the board to their full extent. The work that was done was that which was the most essential, and at the same time the most costly, but much of the benefit and comfort which were to be expected from this expenditure will be lost if the work be not completed. Fortunately what remains to be done involves comparatively small expense, and it is to be hoped that the necessary means will be granted for its prompt completion.

The amount estimated as necessary to complete the work in accordance with the above recommendations is $3,000.

The board transmit herewith the reports and plans which have been placed in their hands, with the exception of certain reports withdrawn at the request of the authors and returned to them.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH HENRY,
Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, President of the Board.
THOMAS LINCOLN CASEY,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Corps of Engineers, Member of the Board.
EDWARD CLARK,
Member of the Board.
F. SCHUMANN,
Chief Engineer, Member of the Board.
J. S. BILLINGS,
Surgeon, United States Army, Secretary of the Board.

APPENDIX A.

Account of the heating and ventilation of the houses of Parliament, prepared under the direction of Dr. John Percy, F. R. S.

The present system of ventilation in the houses of Parliament is a modification by Dr. Reid, Sir G. Gurney, and Dr. Percy, F. R. S., of the system adopted by the committee of 1830, appointed to inquire into the causes of the frequent complaints from members of bad ventilation and defective communication of sound. For this purpose the whole of the spaces beneath the floors of both houses (Lords and Commons) and above the ceilings were planned and prepared by the architect, Sir C. Barry.

J. H. ERNEST WATERS, E. M.

The problem was the adequate renewal of the air in a manner not to prove disagreeable or injurious to the assembled members. It was, however, some years before a satisfactory arrangement of the system was arrived at, and even now complaints are occasionally heard which, though in rare cases may be well founded, result, it is certain, more generally from special constitutional conditions of individuals.

The difficulty of affording general satisfaction is increased by the fact that the same external temperature does not equally affect the same individuals at all times, without considering the great diversity of temperament that must necessarily exist in a large assembly.

To maintain a healthy condition of the atmosphere where men are aggregated, a quantity of air equal to 20-30 cubic feet per minute to each individual is now generally considered necessary, (Tomlinson,) although the amount required by each person will vary according to circumstances.

Dr. Reid regarded ten cubic feet as usually sufficient, but occasionally admitted as much as sixty cubic feet per minute.

An estimation of the supply of fresh air needed, in order to prevent the amount of carbonic acid present from exceeding its usual limit ($=0.008-0.005$ by volume) is easily made, this proves nothing with regard to the volume of air required to remove the organic matter and watery vapor given off from the surface of the body.

It is upon the assumption by some people that this matter is heavier than air that systems of "downward" ventilation have been held preferable, but this has not been confirmed by the results obtained.

There is one fact which admits of no doubt, namely, that, provided the temperature and moisture be suitable, the amount of air admitted (without draughts) cannot be too great. Dr. Parks, in his work on Practical Hygiene, observes:

"Wherever practicable, we should be content with nothing short of an unlimited supply."

The velocity desirable in the air current varies with the temperature. In hot weather air even at 75° may be made pleasant to the feelings by increasing the velocity. The exact ratio, however, between velocity and temperature is difficult to determine.

Experience has shown that, in warming a large chamber, the chief point is that the whole of the air supply be admitted at the temperature required, and not (as is usually done) warm the larger volume of cold by admitting to it a smaller quantity of hotter air.

In proportion to the number of openings by which a given amount of air is supplied to a chamber can the velocity be increased without draughts.

The amount of moisture present is a point of very great importance. In hot weather, if the air be heavily charged with moisture, a sensation of languor and lassitude is induced; on the other hand, when an insufficient quantity of water is present, a sensation of dryness in the throat and bronchial irritation is experienced, as during the prevalence of the dry east winds of this country.

The commission appointed by the House of Commons in 1856 stated that it was absolutely necessary that water be present in the air to the amount of a little less than three grains per cubic foot with a temperature of 59°; nearly four grains per cubic foot with a temperature of 60°, and to more than five grains per cubic foot with a temperature of 70°.

An excess of this amount has the important effect stated above. Much controversy has taken place on the merits and demerits of ventilation by mechanical propulsion of the air, and by exhaustion by heat. The latter is now generally considered to be the best, wherever practicable, and has been adopted in the houses of Parliament exclusively, (except during the hottest weather, when efficient ventilation by the furnaces is difficult.)

The principle is identical with that employed so largely in collieries, namely, the heating of the column of air in a shaft placed in communication with the exhaust-air channels and flues.

The advantages of the system are absence of machinery and mechanical appliances, no skilled labor is required, and, if judiciously and well arranged, it is not affected by external gusts and currents of air, and also that by availing ourselves of natural forces at our command expenditure is proportionately lessened.

A noticeable and important defect in most systems of mechanical ventilation is the pulsatory movement induced in the air current and the noise consequent on the least neglect on the part of the machine attendant.

In the case of a large assembly, as in the houses of Parliament, whatever system of ventilation be employed, it is only by constant supervision on the part of the attendants to atmospheric changes and the varying number of members present that an equable temperature with good ventilation can be maintained and the demands of the assembly satisfied.

The improvements adopted consisted in the addition of chambers immediately below the floors of the houses and above those in which the heating apparatus are placed, with the view of preventing local currents and eddies, and the possibility of a perceptible movement in the air in any one part. General diffusion of the fresh air being the desideratum, the floors of the houses are formed of cast-iron gratings, which are overlaid with (in the House of Lords) hair carpet or coarse hemp netting, (in the House of Commons.) These gratings, forming the ceilings of the equalizing chambers, allow of the free admission of a large quantity of air with a perfect absence of draught.

Below the equalizing chambers, and communicating with them by grated openings, is another chamber, containing the heating arrangement or other apparatus for such treatment of the air as the state of the atmosphere may necessitate. The whole of the space occupied by the heaters is surrounded by a gauze screen, which acts as a filter to arrest any coarse particles of dust, &c., that would otherwise pass into the house. In summer the air is more or less freed from dust, &c., by passing through fine water-spray.

The velocity (i. e., the quantity) of the air passing is regulated by a sliding door or valve, placed in the foul air exit, above the ceiling of the house. This is actuated by hydraulic arrangement, and is under the control of the attendant stationed in the air chamber under the house.

The panels of the ceilings are raised, leaving spaces around their edges, through which the foul air from the house is drawn off up to the upcast shafts.

In the Commons, each set of gas-burners is connected by a vertical tube with a main flue, (running the length of the ceiling,) in connection with the upcast shaft, into which the products of combustion pass.

The position of the air-supply channels is a point for careful consideration. It was formerly considered that by drawing the air from the top of one of the towers a purer supply would be obtained than if taken from the ground level. This has, (in London,) however, proved to be a fallacy; the air thus obtained was the most contaminated with smoke and other impurities.

In the House of Commons the air inlets are situated in the "star" and "commons" courts, and are of limited area as compared with those of the House of Lords, thus making it more difficult to insure uniformity of the air current in its passage upward. Special attention is given to the cleanliness of these courts, especially during hot weather. The surface is laid in asphalt and is sluiced with water several times daily, and any horse manure, &c., immediately removed. During the hottest weather the air has been cooled by passing it over blocks of ice placed on wooden racks in the air-ways.

The surface of the ice exposed, however, being small in proportion to the volume of air passing, the temperature was but slightly reduced, usually not more than one degree, (1°,) yet the air thus treated, it is thought, produced a sensation of freshness, (which possibly might be due to the condensation by the ice of the excess of moisture present.) This was particularly noticed on one occasion, when the temperature of the air was nearly the same before and after passing the ice.

The accompanying table of extracts from the official journal of 1875 shows the equable temperature maintained in both houses through a considerable range externally:

Table of temperature in the House of Commons.

Date.	Time.	Speaker's chair.	Members' gallery.	Bar.	Retiring-rooms.	Division lobbies.	Commons lobby.	Out of doors.	Dew-point.
February 9, 1875.....	10.00 a. m.	61	61	60	61	57	57	33	61-53
	5.00 p. m.	61	61	61	65	63-64	59	35
February 12, 1875.....	10.00 p. m.	64	66	64	68	65-66	62	36	60-52
	10.00 a. m.	62	62	62	62	58	58	44	61-53
March 2, 1875.....	5.00 p. m.	62	63	62	63	62	61	45
	7.00 p. m.	64	65	64	63	65	64	46
April 5, 1875.....	10.00 a. m.	59	58	58	54	54	54	33	61-52
	5.00 p. m.	61	60	62	61	60	61	36
May 3, 1875.....	11.50 p. m.	65	64	65	61	63	65	36	61-53
	10.00 a. m.	58	58	58	56	56	56	50
June 1, 1875.....	5.00 p. m.	61	62	62	63	62-63	61	46
	11.50 p. m.	63	65	63	63	62-63	61	46
July 6, 1875.....	10.00 a. m.	61	61	61	62	59	62	62
	5.00 p. m.	62	63	62	62	62-63	63	63	63-58
August 14, 1876.....	11.50 p. m.	62	66	64	65	63-64	64	57
	10.00 a. m.	63	64	63	65	65	63	64	65-59
	5.00 p. m.	66	66	66	66	64-66	66	68
	11.50 p. m.	64	67	65	68	64-66	65	58
	10.00 a. m.	60	66	66	66	66	66	65	65-52
	5.00 p. m.	68	69	68	70	68	67	72
	10.00 p. m.	68	70	69	70	68	68	66
	10.00 a. m.	71	72	71	74	71	74	76	70-65
	5.00 p. m.	73	74	74	76	73	75	81

Table of temperature in the House of Lords.

Date.	Time.	Lobby.	Bar.	Table.	Throne.	Princes' chamber.	East corridor.	West corridor.	New corridor.	Out of doors.
February 9, 1875.....	10.00 a. m.	58	60	60	60	58	56	55	52	33
	2.00 p. m.	60	63	63	63	61	60	56	54	33
February 12, 1875.....	6.00 p. m.	61	64	62	64	64	64	58	57
	10.00 a. m.	60	62	62	62	60	61	58	56	44
March 2, 1875.....	2.00 p. m.	60	63	63	63	63	63	60	58
	7.00 p. m.	62	64	64	65	65	63	62	61
May 3, 1875.....	10.00 a. m.	58	60	60	60	57	58	56	54	33
	2.00 p. m.	60	61	61	62	62	62	60	60	62
June 1, 1875.....	6.00 p. m.	61	63	63	64	65	63	60	58
	10.00 a. m.	60	62	62	62	62	62	60	60	62
July 6, 1875.....	2.00 p. m.	62	64	64	63	62	62	62	62
	10.00 a. m.	60	62	62	62	61	63	60	59	64
	6.30 p. m.	61	64	63	63	63	62	62	61
	10.00 a. m.	64	65	65	65	65	65	64	63	65
	2.00 p. m.	65	67	67	67	66	65	64	64
	7.30 p. m.	66	69	69	67	67	66	66	65

DESCRIPTION OF THE DRAWINGS.

[The red tint denotes fresh air, the blue foul.]

No. 1.—Sectional elevation of the House of Lords, showing ventilating and warming arrangements.

The fresh air is admitted by the lower openings AA (from the court-yards on both sides of the house) to the warming chamber, on the floor of which the heating batteries BB are arranged in four equidistant and parallel rows. These are surrounded by a gauze filtering-screen, as indicated by the dotted line, (in No. 22.) The spray jets issued in summer for cooling and purifying the air are placed in the arcades outside immediately in front of each set of louvers. The heated (or cooled) air ascends through gratings CC in the openings to the equalizing chamber D, from whence it is distributed to the house (through the grated floor) and to the galleries, (by the openings and flues EE.)

The vitiated air is drawn off through the open work in the ceiling to the foul-air space, in communication with the upcast shafts, and also through openings behind the bar F to the Victoria tower by the down-pull H, as clearly shown on the drawing.

No. 2.—Horizontal section through equalizing chamber of House of Lords.

The lettering is the same as in No. 1.

The batteries K are for heating that part of the house immediately beneath the throne; M are steam-pipes for heating the air-supply to the division-lobbies. The "steam-cockles" N formerly constituted the chief means of heating the air-supply to the House of Lords, but they are now rarely used, and are, moreover, difficult to clean and keep in repair.

No. 3.—Sectional elevation of House of Commons.

The heating batteries are placed in the chambers AA and in the air passages leading thereto. (In the former they are arranged in a single line around the chamber; in the latter they are placed one above another in rows, in the manner shown in drawing No. 6.)

The fresh air passes upward through the grating shown, to the equalizing chamber BB, from whence it is distributed to the house through the perforated floor and the grated openings CC in the steps at the end of the members' seats.

The foul air passes off through the open work in the ceilings and by the flues EE to the channels in communication with the upcast shafts.

The inclosed space G (colored purple) is, during the sitting of the house, used as a fresh-air inlet (as the rest of the floor of the house) by opening the doors III and closing the panels II.

When, however, a quick clearance of the foul air is desirable, (as during the short evening adjournment,) the doors III are shut and the panels II opened, when exhaustion will take place to the upcast shaft through the channel K.

No. 4.—Cross-section through the House of Commons.

No. 5.—Horizontal section through the equalizing chamber.

The lettering is the same as in No. 3.

No. 6.—Improved arrangement of the "Gurney" steam "battery."

The battery is of simple construction and consists of a number of zinc plates soldered on a central steam-pipe, leaving the space of an inch between each.

The plates being heated by conduction from the central pipe, offer a large heating surface to the air.

The batteries of plates are adjusted, three or four deep, in iron frames, and the whole suspended on a girder running the length of the chamber. The rollers A A allow of full expansion of the metal on heating.

The air is sufficiently charged with moisture by allowing water to drop from the small pipe B on to the copper steam-pipe C, the steam thus generated passing in with the air-current.

This method (which answers perfectly) was introduced by Dr. Percy, after many experiments had been made, as a difficulty was experienced in producing steam quite free from odor.

The condensed water from the batteries, after passing a steam-trap, is returned to the boilers. A valuable feature in these batteries is the quick and easy manner in which the heat may be "shut off," thus giving the attendant immediate and complete control over the temperature of the air supply. This is effected by placing a light cloth over the battery, covering the top and sides, and thus preventing the passage of air between the plates.

Before the introduction of these machines, a complicated system of hot-water coils and pipes was employed, but the time required to heat (and cool) the immense quantity of water always circulating in these, and the difficulty of keeping down or quickly modifying the temperature when in action, was a constant source of trouble, and led to an entire change in the system, and the exclusive adoption of the "batteries" above mentioned.

The small space occupied by a battery, as compared with a hot-water coil of equal heating power, admits of the utilization of spaces (recesses beneath windows and the like) for warming which would, in the case of coils, be inapplicable. In both houses steam-pipes (1" bore) are carried along the sills of the windows inside, in order that in winter the cooling effects of the large surface of glass may not cause cold currents to descend.

In the House of Commons, during the hottest weather, a difficulty was experienced in passing a sufficient quantity of air by means of the furnaces, (or only by keeping up inordinately large fires therein.) This is in part due, doubtless, to the limited number and area of the air inlets and the extent of the channels the air is required to pass before and after supplying the house.

To remedy this defect an air-machine was placed in the lower chamber to act instead of or to assist the furnaces.

The machine is double-acting. The blowing chambers are rectangular in section, (8' x 6' 6"), and are placed side by side, the two occupying the width of the vault in which they are placed. The pistons are supported on double piston-rods running through stuffing-boxes at both ends.

The machine is driven by noiseless friction gearing from a small vertical engine of four horse-power, and is capable, at sixteen strokes per minute, of renewing the air in the house in nine minutes; or, in round numbers, six times every hour. The valves are of simple construction, of thin sheet India rubber, bending on wire seatings.

The boilers are of the type known as "Lancashire," twenty-five feet long and seven feet diameter, double flues, two feet nine inches throughout.

In winter three of these are kept going to supply the heating and other apparatus throughout the building.

H. ERNEST WATERS, M. E.

APPENDIX C.

Table of observations on temperature and movements of air in the House of Representatives made by William Lannan, chief engineer.

Date.	Revolutions of fan.	Velocity of air in main duct per minute.	Velocity of air through openings in ceiling into attic per minute.	Outdoor temperature.	Temperature of air in main duct.	Temperature of air in shaft ascend to floor.	Temperature of air in Hall of Representatives.				Temperature of air in attic.
							Speaker's desk.	North side.	West side.	East side
November 17, eleven o'clock	84	830	175	56	56.5	63	65	65.5	64.5	65.5	68.5
November 17, one o'clock	78	776	210	61	60.5	68	69.75	70.5	69	70	75
(At eleven o'clock the Hall contained 150 people; at one o'clock tolerably filled.)
November 19, eleven o'clock	76	760	205	41	43.25	72.75	66	64	66	64	68
November 20, eleven o'clock	76	794	240	42	49	66	68	68.5	68	67.5	73
November 20, one o'clock	76	776	205	42		68	65	65	64	65	65
(At eleven o'clock about 100 people in Hall; at one o'clock moderately filled.)	76	770	235	46		65	67	68	67	67	69.5
November 21, eleven o'clock	76	800	230	38		79.5	69	66.5	69	66.5	64.75
November 21, two o'clock	76	810	230	42		79.25	71	71.09	71	70	70
(At eleven o'clock 150 people in Hall; at two o'clock moderately filled.)
November 22, eleven o'clock	76	822	230	47		74	67	67	68	68	65
November 22, two o'clock	76	778	230	48		78	71	71	71	72	70
November 23, eleven o'clock	76	790	205	52		75.5	69.5	69.75	69.5	69.5	69
November 23, two o'clock	74	791	225	55		76	72.66	73.5	72	72	72
November 27, eleven o'clock	54	590	200	48		71.5	68	68	67.5	68	72
	55	619	210	50		79	72.5	71	72	71.5	72
November 30, eleven o'clock	58	582	230	30		88.5	72	72	72	73	66
December 1, eleven o'clock	58	607	190	34		73	68	68	70	69	66
December 1, two o'clock	74	750	212	37		78	74	72	74	73	72
December 3, eleven o'clock	52	570	210	38		78.5	68.5	69	68.5	64	65
December 3, two o'clock	60	620	220	41		71	72	72	72	73	71
December 4, eleven o'clock	66	600	210	38		72	69	69	68	68	66
December 4, two o'clock	56	543	220	44		71	72	73	73	72.5	70
December 5, eleven o'clock	56	653	190	49		64	69.5	69	69	69	68
December 5, two o'clock	76	750	205	57		68	72.5	73	73	72	72
December 6, eleven o'clock	62	703	218	41		69.5	68	67.5	68	67	65
December 6, two o'clock	48	648	205	44		73	70	70	69.5	71	69.5
December 7, eleven o'clock	54	620	180	39		71	69	68.5	67.5	68	65
December 7, two o'clock	46	560	160	42		74.5	72.5	73	72	72	71
December 10, eleven o'clock	60	681	180	38		73	68	67.5	68.5	67.5	64
December 10, two o'clock	58	601	190	44		73.5	70	71	71.5	71	70
December 11, eleven o'clock	60	405	160	40.5		72.5	68.66	68.5	68.5	68.5	68
December 11, two o'clock	76	733	190	53		73	72	72.5	72	72.5	72
December 12, eleven o'clock	58	589	160	50		67.5	70	69.5	69	69.5	68
December 12, two o'clock	60	638	175	54		71	72.5	72	72	72	72
December 13, eleven o'clock	56	636	170	49		69	68	67.5	68	67.5	66
December 13, two o'clock	60	654	170	52		70.5	71	71	71	71	70
December 14, eleven o'clock	63	739	198	43		70	69	69	69	69	67
December 14, two o'clock	64	820	214	46		69	72	72	71.5	71.5	70
December 15, eleven o'clock	76	807	250	42		71.5					67
December 15, two o'clock	76	888	210	51		73					71
January 3, eleven o'clock	75	795		26		60	64	62	64	63

Exhaust-fans in operation.	182	N. E. cor.	150	Exhaust-fans not in operation.
	202	S. E. cor.	171
	162	S. W. cor.	140
	182	N. W. cor.	165
	140	N.	120
	140	E.	135
	150	S.	112
	143	W.	120

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I will endeavor to explain as briefly as possible the alterations in the present system of ventilating, heating, and lighting the Hall of Representatives suggested in the report just read at the Clerk's desk. At the first session of the Forty-fourth Congress this subject was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, of which I was a member. That committee appointed a subcommittee which investigated the whole subject, and at the outset of their inquiries they discovered two prominent and important facts. One was that the condition of the atmosphere in the Hall when occupied by any considerable number of individuals was exceedingly dangerous to the health of members and other persons occupying the floor and galleries. A competent chemist was employed to analyze the air which we were compelled to breathe, and by his report we learned that the greatest danger existed to the health of every man who breathed it for any considerable length of time. Another fact which was very soon disclosed to the gentlemen investigating this subject was that the lighting, heating, and ventilating of any building, particularly one constructed like this, was a problem requiring so much of scientific learning and so careful an investigation that it was almost impossible for any committee of this body to arrive at an intelligent conclusion.

Hence it was that it was deemed proper by the committee to call to their assistance the aid of gentlemen who from their scientific attainments were better qualified to determine the various questions presented to their consideration than they were themselves. Accordingly a board of five scientific Government officers, of which Professor Henry of the Smithsonian Institution was chairman, was organized by this committee and requested to suggest such changes and alterations in the architecture of the Hall as would perfect its lighting, acoustic, and heating properties. These gentlemen, after an investigation extending over a period of more than twelve months, submitted the result of their investigations, which are set out mainly in the report which has just been read.

Among the most important changes which have been recommended, in my judgment, by the board of scientists is the removal of part of the second wall back of the Speaker's stand, intervening between it and the reception, Speaker's, and official reporters' room, throwing the whole space into an open lobby, so that the light and sunshine from the south may be reached through the outer wall. The drawings I have before me show the condition of the lobby and rooms back of the Speaker's chair as they at present appear, and how they will be when the proposed change is made.

The second suggestion made is the removal of the desks from the Hall, in order that the space for air-openings in the floor may be enlarged, so that a larger quantity of fresh air may be admitted. The greatest difficulty we have had to contend with in adjusting this nice and delicate problem of ventilation is getting into the Hall enough of fresh air under any condition, and we found it impossible with the openings now in the floor to obtain as great a quantity as is required for healthful ventilation; and hence for that purpose, among other arrangements, the removal of the desks is urged both by the board of scientists and the committee.

It is deemed proper and important by these gentlemen also to build open fire-places around the inner wall of the House, for two purposes: one to produce radiant heat, and the other to provide a means of ventilation, carrying off the poisonous and noxious gases that circulate in the Hall whenever occupied by any number of persons. But without the removal of the desks, thus bringing the outer circle of seats thirteen feet nearer the Speaker's stand, these fire-places cannot be built except in the corners of the Hall, as they would give too much heat for the comfort of the members who under the present arrangement would be compelled to sit near them. So this suggestion cannot be carried out without their removal. These are the more important suggestions made by this board of scientists; and after a careful examination we think all of them are important and should be adopted by the House and carried into execution as quickly as possible.

If there is nothing more to be said by any one else, I will call the previous question on the resolution.

Mr. WOOD addressed the Chair.*

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to have order. There is scarcely any subject that is more important to the comfort, almost the lives, of members than this very subject. The Chair thinks there ought to be order to hear the remarks of gentlemen upon it.

Mr. WOOD. I concur entirely in the remarks of the Speaker with reference to the importance of this question. There is in this report, as I am advised by gentlemen who are familiar with the scientific part of the question, a great deal of good. But there is one suggestion as to which I doubt whether it can be practically executed. Scientific men are very well in theory, but in the practical affairs of life they very frequently fail.

I doubt very much whether it is practicable to conduct the business of this House without the desks we are in the habit of occupying. In the English House of Commons the debates and business of the house are conducted on an entirely different principle from what has grown up to be a practice and usage, and which is positive law with reference to our deliberations, if we have any deliberations in the House here. Now members conduct a great deal of their correspondence and a great deal of their examination of important papers, and to a large extent prepare their speeches, during the running debates in the House upon ordinary business, and they do it at their desks. We certainly do not want to adopt a practice which would be constantly compelling us to have a call of the House to bring members in for the purpose of voting, which would inevitably result from the abolition of the desks in this Hall.

Now, sir, I am old enough to recollect the old Hall before this wing of the Capitol was built. When I first came to Congress we had not this Hall. What is now the round room known as the Hall of Statuary, between this and the main Rotunda, was then the Hall of the House of Representatives. We had access to the fresh air from without constantly by having no rooms in the outer wall of the Hall in which we assembled, and we had all the ventilation we could possibly require simply by the absence of the obstructions which stand between this Hall and the outer wall of this end of the Capitol.

So far, therefore, as carrying out the report of the committee would remove these obstructions and give us the fresh air from without, with the addition of a wind-sail which would bring in the fresh air from over our heads and remove this malaria which we are constantly breathing, and so far as we could get pure air from below by any process of ventilation that can be recommended by the committee, I favor it; but I cannot favor any plan for the removal of the desks, which in my opinion are so necessary for the business of the House.

Mr. CLYMER. Will the gentleman from Tennessee yield to me that I may offer an amendment?

Mr. COOK. I rise to a question of order. There is so much noise in the Hall that it is impossible to hear a word that is said.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has repeatedly requested gentlemen to be silent, but seems to be powerless. The gentleman from Georgia raises the question of order that gentlemen speaking cannot be heard. The Chair requests the House to come to order.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I entertain the opinion that has been expressed by the gentleman from New York, [Mr. WOOD.] When I first commenced the investigation of this subject, I believed, as he does now, that it would be exceedingly inconvenient for the members of this House to remove the desks, but a more careful and extended examination of the subject has satisfied me that they ought to be removed, not only for the purpose of securing a more perfect system of ventilation, but in order to promote the public interest and the dispatch of public business.

In the first place, one of the most important advantages that would result from it would be the bringing of the rear circle of seats thirteen feet nearer the Speaker's stand, and every gentleman who has had the misfortune I have had for the last four years, to sit in one of the outer seats, will readily appreciate the convenience that will result in that respect. It is known to every gentleman on this floor that during the discussion and consideration of the greatest and most important questions that are submitted for our action two-thirds of the members of this House are busily engaged in writing at their desks, and scarcely know what subject is under consideration. I know this is the case with myself, and I believe the observation and practice of other gentlemen coincide with my own. Now, it is proposed, in order to meet the temporary inconvenience which members would feel by the removal of desks as regards writing purposes, to have placed immediately inside of the iron railing fifteen tables four feet long and two and one-half feet wide, provided with writing materials, where members can go and write for any length of time they may choose.

Then, for such writing as it is desirable to do at their seats we propose to substitute for the chairs we now have chairs with a wing on one side and a drawer on the other where writing materials may be kept, and at which anything which it is necessary to write hurriedly at the seat may be written. If gentlemen who doubt the convenience of this arrangement will be kind enough to step to the seat of my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. LORING,] and examine his chair they will be convinced that the introduction of such chairs into the Hall will be a very great improvement upon those we now have with the desks in front.

Mr. STEELE. I desire to hear my friend from Tennessee, [Mr. YOUNG.]

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I would be very happy to have you do so, as I think you would be interested by what I am saying.

The SPEAKER. It has come to this, that the request of the Chair must be regarded.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I am not at all disturbed.

Mr. STEELE. I am not quite through.

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen must be quiet, and the Sergeant-at-

Arms will go through the Hall and request those whom he may see conversing to cease conversation.

Mr. STEELE. I was going to say if the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. YOUNG] would change his position and take a place in another part of the Hall, then there would be an opportunity for all to hear him. I do not like to have him turn his back to me when he is engaged in so important an enterprise.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I know of no one to whom I would sooner turn my face than the gentleman from North Carolina, [Mr. STEELE.] It is not my habit to turn my back to gentlemen like him, and if I have done so now it is only from the force of circumstances, among which is the fact that I can only face one way at a time.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, informed the House that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

A bill (H. R. No. 6436) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and for prior years, and for those heretofore treated as permanent, and for other purposes.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask unanimous consent that the deficiency appropriation bill, returned from the Senate with amendments, be taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed with the amendments numbered in their order.

There being no objection, it was ordered accordingly.

VENTILATION OF THE HALL.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. Ever since I have been here I have had my full share of the difficulty which my friend from North Carolina [Mr. STEELE] points out as the one under which he is laboring at this time by reason of the location of his seat; for I have not occupied a position where I could be heard distinctly the few times I felt myself called upon to speak, nor indeed where I could hear anybody else. That is one reason why I desire to have these desks removed, so that gentlemen who like myself have seats on the outer circle can get near enough to the desk to understand what is said upon questions of legislation. I now yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. CLYMER.]

Mr. CLYMER. It will be remembered that when this important subject was under consideration in the former Congress there was a member of the House who at that time took an active and intelligent interest in the question. I allude to Mr. HEWITT, of New York. In his remarks upon the subject he showed an intimate acquaintance with it, and the feeling seemed to be general in that Congress that it would be beneficial if he could carry his views into effect. I ask the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. YOUNG] to add his name to the list of commissioners.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I have no objection.

Mr. CLYMER. I make the suggestion without his knowledge, and it may be that he will be unwilling to serve. But he is about to close a useful and honorable career in this body, and I conceive that it would be his pleasure, if he did not feel it to be his duty, to render his country the important service of aiding to make this Hall agreeable and healthful for the Representatives, which it is not now. I therefore move to add the name of ABRAM S. HEWITT, of New York.

Mr. O'NEILL. From the statements made by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. YOUNG] I have no doubt as to how I shall vote upon the proposition when submitted to the House. I look upon it, however, as a merely temporary arrangement, an effort to get proper ventilation in this Hall. I have lived in the Hall with its present ventilation for a great many years and I have enjoyed good health; and I hope to live in it many years yet by the will of my constituents.

I look upon all these propositions as temporary expedients. We never will have a Hall fit for the House of Representatives to sit in until some rearrangement of this Capitol building is made. I think there is pending now in the Senate a bill proposing to extend the central portion of the Capitol east and west, by which means there will be provided a hall for the House of Representatives and one for the Senate in those extensions, and in that way we can have the fresh air of heaven coming into the Halls of the two Houses. Besides, we would have the Senate and House nearer to each other, and then members and Senators would save themselves the frequent walks we now have to take when we desire to see each other.

It seems to me that it would be well for us to expend some millions of dollars to perfect the arrangement of the Capitol building. There need not be any waste of the space which we now occupy in this Hall. By removing the galleries and taking away the lobbies, extending the Hall so that it will reach the open air of the south, we would have a magnificent room for the Congressional Library. And altering the Senate Chamber in the same way would provide a most commodious room for the Supreme Court of the United States.

Now, as regards the Halls of the two Houses of Congress, from my experience of all the changes and experiments that have been made for proper ventilation, I think we will never have any success until the building is extended and rearranged, not only for the purpose of producing the proper architectural effect, but for the purpose of bringing the air of heaven into the Halls of the two Houses, where members and Senators are sitting. I therefore look upon this as a mere temporary expedient. I shall vote for the proposition submitted, but at the same time I trust that the generosity and liberality of Congress, not at this session perhaps but at some coming session, will be such that the Representatives of the people will be willing to expend some millions of dollars to perfect this great building of which the country is so proud, and of which it will be prouder when it is altered and so arranged as to produce the proper architectural effect and comfort for those using it.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I cannot consent to any arrangement by which these desks are to be removed. I happened to be here in the Thirty-sixth Congress when the same feeling that seems to be now prevailing in regard to removing the desks took possession of the House. At the first session of that Congress the order was made for the removal of the desks; and when we returned for the short session the desks had been removed and chairs and circular benches had been put in their places. How did the change operate? No member had any place on which to put a book or a paper. When a gentleman rose to speak, if he had manuscript in his hand, a page ran around with a small desk and put it down before him; and when he had finished, the page ran and placed it before the member next speaking. The arrangement became so manifestly inconvenient that before the session expired an order was made for the restoration of the old desks. My friend from Tennessee just now illustrated himself the use of these desks. He had two papers before him, and read first from one and then from the other, laying each paper on the desk while not reading. Now, if the gentleman had had no desk before him, what would he have done with those extra papers? He would have been obliged to call a page to hold the papers or put them on the floor. Gentlemen can hardly realize the convenience of these desks until they have made the experiment of doing without them. I hope we shall adopt no plan under which the desks will be removed.

Mr. REAGAN. I do not propose to discuss the whole plan proposed by this committee; I wish merely to express my concurrence with the remarks of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HARRIS] in reference to the removal of the desks. In the Thirty-fifth or the Thirty-sixth Congress the House reached the conclusion that it would facilitate business and enable members to give more careful attention to current legislation if the desks were removed and members thus prevented from writing at their seats. We did remove the desks and had benches provided for members. But we submitted to that arrangement for a few weeks only, when we became satisfied that we could better attend to our duties, better perform our obligations to our constituents by having desks before us than by being deprived of them. I feel, sir, that the attempt to deprive ourselves of the use of desks would be a mistake which we would soon be obliged to rectify.

Mr. HAYES. I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee whether the chair which stands over in the corner is a sample of the chairs which the committee propose to put in this hall.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. Yes, sir.

Mr. HAYES. Well, if that chair is a sample, it seems to me it is only necessary for any member to examine it and sit in it a few moments, to become entirely satisfied that such a chair will not be suitable for this House. We want a chair with a back which we can lean upon comfortably, and in which we can turn. We sit here generally from four to six hours daily, sometimes longer; and we want to turn about in our seats. In such a chair as the sample over in the corner, we would be obliged to sit in one position with no possibility of resting ourselves by a change of posture.

I agree also with what has been said in regard to the desks. It does seem to me that we must have before us here something upon which we can place our papers and in which we can keep them. It strikes me that what the gentleman from New York [Mr. WOOD] has said is true: that if we remove these desks, it will not be six weeks before we shall pass a resolution to replace them. I believe we must have something of this kind for our convenience.

Mr. WOOD. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. YOUNG] asked me a few moments ago to look at the chair which is in one of the corners of the Hall, and which is a sample of the chairs the committee propose to substitute for these desks. I have examined it; and my opinion is, that by introducing such chairs we shall gain nothing in point of room, while we would suffer very serious inconvenience, and that we would not retain them three days after we had adopted them.

Mr. LORING. Mr. Speaker, I am glad that thus far in this discussion no objection has been made to the plan of the committee with regard to ventilation. It is encouraging to know that this House agrees that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. O'NEILL] is the only member who enjoys good health under existing circumstances. [Laughter.]

Mr. O'NEILL. I want to say that during fourteen years I have never been one-half hour out of this House on account of sickness.

Mr. LORING. I congratulate the gentleman upon his constitution.

Mr. HAYES. And on his correct habits.

Mr. LORING. I undertake to say that members of the House have had their health so much impaired by the influence of the bad air here that they have ultimately died from the effects; and many others have had their lives shortened by the injury to their constitutions, caused by the vitiated atmosphere they breathe here. Those of us who come here a little late in life cannot endure what some of the younger members do. I myself have been deprived of more than six weeks' service in this House during the present Congress on account of the evil influences of the air of the House.

The scientific men who appeared before the committee—(and through your courtesy, sir, I was put in immediate communication with the committee, who kindly elected me an honorary member and listened to the suggestions that I made very earnestly)—these scientific men have agreed that this House can be successfully ventilated. Experiment after experiment has been made, each experiment being an improvement on the preceding one. It has been concluded, as the chairman of the committee has stated, that by increasing the influx of air in order that it may correspond with the escape of air, these currents which now blow about us like gales of wind, these draughts which in connection with the bad air are injuring our health so much, can be prevented. Those of the Capitol commissioners who are experts in ventilation have agreed with an opinion I expressed strongly to the committee, that the foundation of good ventilation is a fire-place. The committee have determined that we shall have fire-places, large open fire-places, in the corner of this Hall. They have agreed, moreover, that the members of this House are entitled to a convenient, pleasant, well-arranged room to which they can retire for fresh air, and in which they can receive such of their friends as they desire to meet, without being compelled to undergo the pressure of the crowd in the corridors and lobbies of this House.

In providing this ample and convenient apartment for the convenience of the House it is found that the introduction of fresh outer air through the south windows of this wing of the Capitol into the body of the House is made possible, and that the ill-effects of the air of the lobby now in existence can be prevented. Air and light are thus provided for all who desire them.

The Architect of the House has ascertained that the construction of open windows in the galleries in the places now occupied by the vacant niches in front of the House is entirely practicable, and that the fine cornices of this room now hidden in darkness by the defect in the arrangements for lighting it—an architectural defect which ought to be remedied at once—may be brought into view and their beauty, which is hardly surpassed by any similar structure in the world, may be revealed. In this way also can the galleries themselves be supplied with fresh air by lateral ventilation.

These are the suggestions in regard to ventilation which I am satisfied, sir, upon careful examination myself and with the assistance of Dr. Billings and Professor Baird, the two special scientists of the commission, will accomplish the object we all have in view.

In regard to the seating of the House I ask any man here if he looks upon the plan now in use as perfect. Is it perfect while we have a desk here which is just large enough to be in our way and not large enough to be a convenience to us? Not only is it difficult for a member of this House who is not fortunate enough to occupy a seat upon some one of the passage-ways to gain access to his seat, but when he has gained it he finds it still more difficult to address the House until he has secured the favor of a seat next a passage-way where he may perchance display those powers of eloquence which God has bestowed upon all of us who have gathered here. [Laughter.] There is not room enough, sir, for the orators of this House if, while they address this assembly, they are compelled to stand behind the desks assigned them. [Laughter.] I had no idea, in any suggestion I made to the committee or to this House, to deprive gentlemen of all opportunity to write, or to deposit their papers and documents in a safe and convenient receptacle.

Now, sir, in order to satisfy myself that this convenience can be secured without the desks we now have, I ordered a chair in the place of the desk I have occupied since I entered this Hall, and I have found it perfectly convenient both for writing and stowage. It was somewhat too large, it is true, for the space allowed it in the present arrangement of desks and chairs, and was not convenient for those on either hand of me; but for myself I found it satisfactory as a writing-desk. I found the drawers in it convenient for my papers; I found it an easy chair to sit in; I found I could sit up erect and not be compelled to cramp myself behind my desk. There may be four feet allowed in front of this chair if arranged as proposed, in which every gentleman will find ample room for his physical comfort, a thing which is impossible with the present seating of the House. There is an opportunity for the occupant of the chair to rise conveniently without being hampered by his desk; and even if this chair which has been exhibited to the House is not entirely satisfactory, if it does not seem adapted to the wants of those who are to use it, it may be so modified as to suit the convenience of any member upon the floor.

Now am I asked what is to be gained, sir, by this arrangement? Those of us who sit in the rear of the House will be brought thirteen feet nearer to the Speaker's desk than we are now. We shall have more space than we now have, and we shall have an opportunity to move about without disturbing our associates on this floor. For myself I find neither comfort nor convenience in the present arrangement. It adds greatly to the difficulty of ventilation; it increases the heat of the Hall; it creates a crowd when no crowding is necessary. Substitute for this a chair which is easily approached, which has before it an open and airy space, and which is so compact as not to occupy too much room, and we shall have at once an agreeable and cheerful Hall, and all the conveniences we desire.

Now, with regard to the effect of this proposed arrangement upon the ventilation of the House, the chairman of the committee has stated that experts agree that it will be beneficial. The difficulty now is that the House is crowded with furniture and members. The floor should be relieved of this pressure, and will be relieved by adopting the recommendation of the committee. We shall have, as I have said, abundance of room to write and ample convenience for documents and papers; and in addition to this, if the proposition of the committee is fully carried out, we shall have the additional convenience of tables inside the bar of the House, which can be used for writing and the consultation of books, should it be necessary to occupy more space than the chairs or even the existing desks can give.

But, sir, I am not strenuous about the rearrangement of seats at this time at all. If we can have fresh air, good light, fire-places, ventilation, and an ample reception-room, I shall be content for the present, if I can get no more. If, however, we can have the suggestions of the commission and the committee still further carried out in the seating of the House we shall have still more comfort, still more convenience, and still better air. I trust, sir, therefore, that the suggestions of the committee will be adopted by the House.

Mr. ITTNER obtained the floor.

Mr. WOOD. I desire to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. ITTNER] is recognized.

Mr. ITTNER. This is a practical question about which I do not know but what I am possibly as competent to speak as any man on this floor. If I am not I ought to be at least.

Now, with reference to the removal of the desks in this Hall, I consider that an impracticable proposition. I do not conceive that it would need any discussion to impress upon any member of this body that fact, and I am satisfied that if any other proposition is entertained, or any other mode of arranging the seats and desks is resolved upon, it will of necessity prove a failure. I do not presume that there is a single man, if all the talent of the United States were concentrated in the arrangement of these desks, who could improve upon the present arrangement.

I concur in the views of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HARRIS] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] that if any mode outside of the present mode is adopted it will be abandoned in a very short time thereafter and the present arrangement be again resorted to; but when we come to the question of ventilation, this is a question that deserves serious consideration at the hands of every member upon this floor.

I claim, and the pending proposition proves, that the modes of ventilation that have been resorted to in the past, have utterly failed, and that any artificial modes of ventilating which may be resorted to in the future must perforce likewise prove a failure. The very design and construction of this Hall is an abortion, and you cannot make anything out of it. So far as the ventilation is concerned I claim that the talent does not exist that can benefit or improve upon the present system. You might as well try to put common sense and intelligence into the skull of an idiot as try to improve the ventilation of this Hall.

We are here boxed up in a box within a box. We have here between us and daylight and fresh air three or four walls, partition walls. We have two roofs, or more properly speaking a ceiling and a roof; and I would like to know what mode of ventilation you can adopt that will overcome these insurmountable barriers. Fire-places have been spoken of as a means of ventilation. I am in favor of open fire-places, and wherever I go to rent rooms I always give the preference to those having open fire-places. I would have open fire-places and also open windows, so that we can raise the lower sash and lower the upper sash and get in the sunlight and fresh air of heaven. You can never secure that in this concern unless you tear down these partition walls and change the plan and construction of the roof, and get your air directly from the outside. This is the only practicable way in which the present room can be utilized and made a success.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LORING] in the few remarks he made demonstrated the truth of what I say. He says that you want a good and commodious room where you can retire and get fresh air and ventilation. We want the Hall so constructed that we can get fresh air, healthy ventilation, while we are sitting in our seats. I say that, so far as I am concerned, I appreciate the value of the health of the members of this body. I have no personal interest in the question, but I speak to those who are members of the next Congress, and I think it is the duty of those members, in consideration of their own health and that of their compeers, to adopt some means of constructing a new Hall. If possible, get some practical and sensible man as an architect; and if you cannot remodel this Hall for the purposes you desire, then I say add a wing to it that can be so arranged as to be practical. If it were not that you cannot dispense with your committee and reception rooms, you might tear out these walls to which I have referred, dispense with these corridors and committee-rooms, and by that means you can get the fresh air and bright sunlight of heaven. Leave the desks, but have sufficient space between them so that you will not be compelled to reach your seat by way of the back door, as was remarked by the gentleman from Massachusetts. By that means you will not only get good ventilation and natural light, but you will have the necessary room required for members to deliberate in this Hall.

That is all I have to say upon the subject. I shall oppose any movement to change the arrangement of the desks, because the present arrangement cannot be improved upon, and I shall oppose any movement toward ventilating the Hall, because I say that the experience of the science of ventilation has been exhausted upon this concern, and it cannot be improved upon. That is a practical impossibility.

I now yield to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. TOWNSEND.]

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I rise simply for the purpose of entering my protest against a continuance of the system under which I have suffered for four long years. I have suffered here as a martyr to science. [Laughter.] I have suffered here because science was ventilating this Hall without one particle of common sense. [Laughter.] Science has been engaged in lifting the foul atmosphere out of this Hall, but science has not asked common sense if it were not true that foul air is heavy and would not be lifted.

We sit here in this Hall ordinarily in the presence of from two to three thousand people. At other times there are perhaps four thousand in the Hall altogether. On occasions of excitement fully four hundred are on this floor, with from fifteen hundred to twenty-five hundred in the galleries, and every breath that comes from those people creates an atmosphere that falls down and settles here in the body of the Hall. To obviate this difficulty scientists are at work at the corners lifting and lifting and lifting, [laughter,] and we are suffering from the heavy and foul air that will not be lifted, but is lurking in the Hall.

The foul air remains, and if common-sense men were to come in here without any science—without any experience in ventilating—common sense would open the way to the outside of the building horizontally and cut passages through to the outer windows and let in the air from the bottom of the windows and let it blow over the Hall, but common sense cannot be considered. We shall have high-priced science and an utter want of common sense. I do not care how many scientific men you put upon your commission if you join with it common sense and let God's atmosphere into the Hall. If not, you will suffer as I have suffered and as my predecessors did. I am going out of this Hall. The ventilation of this Hall is not one of those things that I shall remember with pleasure. [Laughter.]

God gave me a good constitution. I would say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. O'NEILL] that I like him have not lost my health here. I am going out and shall cease to suffer. You who are to remain will cease to suffer in this way if somebody will tear down the separating walls and let the winds of heaven blow under the seats and above them. We want a purifying atmosphere that shall sweep along the floor, and if we cannot have that you will have to suffer as we have suffered in times past.

I want to say one word further to the gentlemen who are to continue in the service of their country in this Hall, about the engine of torture that is proposed to be substituted for your chairs and desks. I have had it by my seat for one day. I find, whatever it may do fore and aft, that three of these chairs cannot stand where four of the other kind have stood. I protest against the wicked and I would say almost felonious folly of not opening the Hall to the outer windows—a work that may be done for $5,000.

Mr. BUTLER. The ventilation or something else in this Hall has left me without the power of making myself heard. I do not know that I ought to say anything about this subject. I certainly shall not antagonize the report of the committee, because with that I do not mean to have anything to do. I am in no sense responsible for it.

In November, 1877, after waiting for some weeks for the majority party in the Hall to move some improvement in ventilation, and having given considerable attention to that matter in the Forty-third Congress, I introduced a resolution to have measures taken to have the Hall ventilated. I had the advantage of plans and specifications and scientific knowledge, so far as scientific knowledge is of any advantage, that had been obtained in a former Congress. I always supposed that my plan was defeated in a former Congress by the unwillingness of the Speaker of that day to give up the Speaker's room and the reporters to give up the reporters' room and the unwillingness of the members not to have a convenient place to see ladies in the corners. [Laughter.]

A MEMBER. Or somewhere else.

Mr. BUTLER. But that resolution passed unanimously, and I supposed under parliamentary usage I should have been put at the head of the committee proposed to bestow labor upon it, but my resolution incautiously provided for a clerk. That was a little crumb of patronage that could not be allowed. [Laughter.] And so I found, contrary to parliamentary rules, a much abler, better, and more experienced man; better in politics, because he had just got up where I left off. [Laughter.] So he was put at the head of the committee, and I was put fourth or fifth. I very seldom, or never, attended the meetings of that committee.

Now, there seems to me no justice in this. I do not know what the report contains, as I have carefully abstained from listening to it, so that I might not appear to criticize it, but I have a few words to say about the ventilation of this Hall. I am certain that members never will dispense with their desks. That has been tried under the most favorable circumstances, and the experiment did not last sixty days. Therefore, we must have the desks in some form.

I agree it would be better for us to legislate without them; but that good we will not take. There are too many conveniences, and most of our troubles come from choosing ease rather than good. Therefore that must be laid out of the way.

Now, in ordinary times, in any other place under heaven but this, I can make from three thousand to five thousand people hear me. Why is it that I cannot make three hundred people hear me here. Why, sir, in Indiana I have spoken in the oak groves amid the breezes of heaven to five thousand and ten thousand people, and there are men in this Hall who know I made myself heard. Why is it that we rival in a different manner the Areopagus who sat at night, in the darkness, lest they might be influenced by the gestures and magnetism of the speaker. We do better; we sit here and have nothing but the magnetism and the gestures. We never hear anything that the speaker says. This is in consequence of the construction of the Hall; that is, it is broken overhead for the sake of some very ill-looking paintings in the squares, every one of which throws back the voice to the ear of the man who utters it. If you will look, watching as I watch now, you can hear the echo right back to your own ear; and the sound is all broken up. Not only that, but this performance of squares and indentations overhead increases the general tumult, because echoes and re-echoes verberate and reverberate until a small sound becomes like the roar of the ocean.

There is, I am informed, one hall in this country, not made by a man of science, where fifteen thousand people can hear the ordinary voice of a speaker—Brigham Young's tabernacle. There are many of you who know about that. How is that made? Why it is substantially as if we cut an egg-shell longitudinally in halves and got under it and spoke from one of the foci. Now, if this Hall could be taken and made perfectly smooth its acoustics would be vastly improved. Get rid of this ginger-bread work which makes this Hall look like the saloon of a steamboat. Have something of use. That is my idea. Smooth your walls; give place for your galleries, not in the form they are now, but let these corners be rounded over the heads of the people there, and they will hear as well as we. Make everything smooth and clear and clean, so that the sound can take care of itself.

Now for ventilation. Everybody will agree that the ventilation of this Hall is fearful in its results. There is a larger percentage of dead members in this House than of any other number of men, and yet we are more than the average of men in physical strength, and as I want to say, passing away from this Hall, more than the average of men in knowledge of life and of habit, and more than the average of the same number of men in propriety of conduct and living which gives long life.

Now, then, what is the trouble? Why, what do we do? We dig a hole in the ground out into what was once a swamp, for every foot from this declivity to the Potomac was originally a swamp; and we have dug that hole out so as to get as near as we can to the middle of that swamp, and we put in powerful pumps and powerful steam-engines to pump that air coming from the swamp up here to breathe. And how many thousand dollars have been spent for that purpose I do not know; not by any science—I want to redeem science from the observation of my friend from New York, [Mr. TOWNSEND,]—I do not believe science did that. Something did it. And here we are pumping up from the lowest part of this city, where none of us would be willing to make our residence, where you cannot get a Congressman to live—we pump that air up by heavy machinery and a great expenditure of steam in here to breathe. We do not give it a chance to get up higher, so as to mix with pure air, before we catch and imprison it and bring it to our lungs. That is the first thing in ventilation. Where should the air come from? I say take the air which will come in from the heaven above us if you will let it. Send up air-ducts as high as the top of this Capitol; open them at the bottom, let cold air flow in, and it will press out the warm air if you give it a place to go out, without any pumping machinery or broiling engineers almost to death. Carry up air-ducts all around your walls. I am content you shall put fire-places below them. There will then be two currents of air, one up the chimney and the other down the air-duct. I speak haud incertus; I have tried it. I have ventilated my own house, in which I live, in the same way. When I was away the scientific men who were putting in heating apparatus came and put in an immense hole at the bottom to let cold air into my house. When I went home and saw it I told my carpenter to put a strong plank door over it, list it so that it should be perfectly tight, put a strong lock on it, and give me the key; and I have lost the key, and it never has been open since. [Laughter.]

His idea, as the idea of everybody else seems to be, was that you must take all your air from the bottom of the building. Not at all;

you should take it from the top; cold air will press down and drive the warm air out, and you need not have either fan or any other machinery to secure proper ventilation. Put your fire-places around the Hall, make up a little fire in them so as to produce a current that will carry out the warm air, then put your plain air-ducts in from the top of the building, and let your cold air press down so as to feed these fire-places, and you will have neither draught nor bad ventilation.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him one question?

Mr. BUTLER. Certainly.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. The gentleman and myself agree so nearly in this thing that I wish to call his attention to another matter. It is that foul air is not merely warm air, but it is also heavy air; it does not rise with the warm air.

Mr. BUTLER. I agree with that. The heavy foul air is carbonic acid gas more or less impregnated with hydrogen, so that it almost becomes carbureted hydrogen. But that will be pressed into the fire-places, and will go up the chimney.

I have spoken of your means of ventilation. Now, where do you want your Hall? Tear out all of these walls surrounding us here; it can be done. Go out to the corner of the building. Let the two sides of your Hall be the two sides of the building. Open the windows, and let the free air of heaven into your Hall. Redeem yourself from your present condition, from what every man of you knows to be the fact, that the water-closet of this building, out in the corner here, is the best ventilated and the sweetest part of it.

Now extend your Hall out into the corner of the building; go out there and live there all the time. Then you can have this inner room, which can be ventilated but cannot be lighted well and effectively, for reception-rooms and for any other purposes for which it may be needed. Let me say to you that there is another thing; no man ought to live for a large portion of his time in a room where the sunlight of heaven does not come in free and pure.

Mr. BRIDGES. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. BUTLER. Certainly.

Mr. BRIDGES. Is the gentleman not aware that by opening the windows on the south of the building the malaria rising from the low marshy grounds south of the Capitol would blow right in upon us here?

Mr. BUTLER. No, I am not, and I will tell you why. I have all my windows in my own house opening in that direction. I studied that question carefully. In the olden time the reason why the part of Capitol Hill where my house is situated was not built upon was because malaria came up from the low ground. The Tiber Creek was then open and flowing, and full of sewage. I would not have lived there at that time upon any account. But since the creek called the Tiber has been closed over and made a sewer it draws off from these low grounds almost all there is which will produce malaria, in the way of stagnant water and other matters producing malaria, and besides, in the summer time, different from what it is in Pennsylvania and different from what it is in Massachusetts, the cool air comes from the south up the Potomac, the draught is up river, and that carries the malaria by and over us, whatever comes up. Fifty years ago there were a great many cases of malarial fever around in this neighborhood. But there has not been one case of chills and fevers indigenous to the neighborhood for the last twenty years. I have gone over that subject with great care in connection with my own purposes, for I wanted to know what I was about, where I was going to live, and perhaps prepare a place for my children.

Now, I say that if you will go out to the corner of this building you will then get the sunlight and the free air of heaven, and from both directions, first from the top of the building and then from the side, when the condition of the atmosphere will permit an open window and open draught.

Mr. CONGER. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. BUTLER. Certainly.

Mr. CONGER. I wish to ask the gentleman this question: while air taken from the slope on the west side of the Capitol is so malarial and so impure, why may not some of it come in at the south windows with a proper current from the Potomac to force it in?

Mr. BUTLER. I hear the question, and am very glad of an opportunity to answer it. Some of it will come in, but the difference is between bringing in some of it and bringing in all of it. Now we get nothing else. I am willing to take a little rum in my water, but I want some water, to drink water part of the time. [Laughter.] That is the difference.

I have now said all that I care to say on this subject. I have given you the theory upon which I should proceed in this matter; and as I will soon go out of this Hall, in all probability never to return to it as a member, I have submitted these views for the benefit of those who may come after me, so that members of Congress may be enabled to retain here that full vigor of constitution, of mind, and of body which they bring with them when they come from their constituents.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee, resumed the floor.

Mr. WOOD. Before the gentleman from Tennessee demands the previous question I desire to call the gentleman's attention to an amendment which I have offered, and on which I desire a vote, to add the following:

Provided, That nothing herein shall authorize the removal of the desks as now existing.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, the comparison instituted by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BUTLER] as to our relative greatness, political or otherwise, is not a matter necessary to be discussed in connection with the proper method of ventilating this Hall; and I would pass it by unnoticed but for the reason that justice to the Speaker requires that I should reply to it very briefly, though in doing so I shall make no effort to controvert the conclusion evidently fixed in the gentleman's own mind that he is better fitted than all the rest of mankind for the duties of any position in which he might be placed.

At the time the gentleman from Massachusetts offered the resolution under which this committee was created I held in my hand a report in respect to the ventilation, heating, and lighting of this Hall, which I had prepared as chairman of a committee appointed for that purpose, after careful and thorough investigation of about two years. Now, I am willing to grant that the gentleman would have been better qualified for the discharge of this or any other duty than myself, for he is a very great man, and I "only a poor erring mortal;" but after an investigation of this particular question for so long a time, aided by the most learned gentlemen that I could call to my assistance, including Professor Henry of the Smithsonian Institution, Professor Baird, his successor, two or three Army officers, Professor Billings, of the Army Medical Corps, the latter of whom had visited almost all the houses of assembly in Europe for the express purpose of investigating this very question—after having had the assistance of all these gentlemen, probably it would not be altogether immodest on my part to claim that I was quite as well advised about the proper method of ventilating this Hall as the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts could have been without giving it any thought or attention at all—nor do I think the Speaker did him so very great a wrong in not naming him as chairman of the committee.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to ask the gentleman from Tennessee whether he did not do all that under the authority of the House?

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. Certainly; in pursuance of a resolution of this House adopted more than a year before. Further, if the gentleman had done us the honor to meet with the committee after its appointment by the Speaker, he should have been its chairman if the other members had chosen to select him, for the very first time we met I submitted that question to the members of the committee who were present, and declared that the gentleman from Massachusetts, if he did us the honor to attend, should, so far as I was concerned, be chairman. I believe my colleagues on the committee will bear me out in this statement.

Now, the gentleman's idea of ventilation is as faulty as his conception of parliamentary propriety. I will not undertake to enter into a discussion of all the nice distinctions connected with the question of ventilating this or any other hall, nor will I undertake to tell the House the dangers resulting from lateral ventilation, the imperfections in downward ventilation, or the advantages that flow from upward ventilation, for upon all these questions there is the widest divergence of opinion among scientists, and upon each one of them a volume might be written.

But I will say that one of the most learned scientists of this country—a gentleman who has devoted long years to the investigation of this very subject, who has visited Europe, examining the method of ventilation in the English House of Parliament, as well as that adopted in similar buildings at Berlin, Paris, and elsewhere in the Old World, gave us upon his return the result of his investigation. Our recommendations are in some measure based upon his conclusions. He declared to us, and the proposition will be apparent to any one who will reflect a moment, that in all houses where there are galleries occupied by large numbers of people the downward system of ventilation can never be safely adopted. Why? Because the air we breathe coming from the roof and being first breathed by a larger number of persons than those who occupy the floor, must necessarily be impure before it can reach us. In this building when there are three hundred persons who occupy the floor and two thousand in the galleries, it will require only a moment's reflection to demonstrate how dangerous must be that system of ventilation which brings the air we breathe through two thousand people who are also breathing it every moment.

Some gentlemen who have discussed the question this morning evidently do not (if they will allow me to say so) understand the matter sufficiently well to discuss it very intelligently. They neither understand the question of ventilation nor do they comprehend the architectural structure of this Hall. Gentlemen who talk about removing these interior walls in order that we may get the atmosphere from the outer world do not know that if this were done the building could not stand for a single hour. By reason of its peculiar architecture, it is impossible to remove these inner walls without destroying the whole building. When I first undertook the investigation of this question I was of the same opinion now expressed, as I understand them by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BUTLER] and the gentleman from Missouri, [Mr. ITTNER], that the only perfect system of ventilation which can be adopted for this Hall would be the removal of these inside walls so as to have access to the outside air and sunshine. But that cannot be accomplished if we can rely upon the judgment of every architect who has examined the question. They have all declared to us that if the inside walls are removed the whole building will be practically destroyed. The nearest we can come to meeting the conditions deemed necessary by these gentlemen is to enlarge the opening in the wall immediately in the rear of the Speaker's stand and also either remove the middle wall or enlarge the openings in it, making an open lobby so that on one side at least we will get the outside sunshine and fresh air.

There is no possible way, if we can rely on the statement of the architects who have examined this question, by which fresh air can be brought into the Hall, other than by the method in which it is now brought, except by the change we suggest back of the Speaker's stand.

One word in reference to the removal of the desks, and then I am perfectly willing the House should determine that question on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, [Mr. Wood.] I do not insist on it so far as I am personally concerned. My personal convenience, outside of that which attaches to a seat so far from the Speaker's chair, would make me desire the desks to remain; but a careful examination of the subject has satisfied me they are really an obstruction to the transaction of public business.

I have illustrated some of the inconveniences to which gentlemen are subjected who are so unfortunate as to have the bad location I have in the Hall since I have been addressing the House this morning, for I have occupied the seats of nearly a dozen members simply because I cannot speak from my own. Every time I have taken the floor in this discussion I have had to change my position and impose upon the good nature of some other member. To meet inconveniences of this kind, to accommodate gentlemen who occupy seats so remote from the Speaker's stand that they cannot be heard in different quarters of the House, or hear others, we provide that small tables may be disposed, six or eight in number, about the middle of the rows of seats, where gentlemen may stand who desire to address the House. This drawing I have in my hand shows where these tables will be located, about six or eight in different parts of the Hall, so that gentlemen who are now prevented by the location of their seats from being heard can go to one of these tables and stand while speaking.

There was something said by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Butler] and other gentlemen about the locality the atmosphere came from which we breathe.

That is one of the objections we propose to meet in these recommendations. It is proposed that a tower be built at the foot of the second terrace, twenty feet high, and that the air duct through which the fresh air comes into the Hall shall connect with the base of this tower, so that the atmosphere we breathe shall come from an altitude twenty feet above the second terrace west of the Hall.

I now yield to the gentleman from New York to call for a vote on his amendment.

Mr. WOOD. I will not protract the debate, but ask for a vote on my amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That nothing herein shall authorize the removal of the desks as now placed.

Mr. CLYMER. I have an amendment, to put in the name of Mr. ABRAM S. HEWITT.

The SPEAKER. The first vote will be taken on the amendment of the gentleman from New York.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 102, noes 53.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I do not ask for a further count. So the amendment was agreed to.

The question recurred on Mr. CLYMER's amendment, adding the name of ABRAM S. HEWITT.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I have a further amendment I desire to offer.

Mr. ROBBINS. Now let the resolutions be read as they have been amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Professor Spencer F. Baird, of the Smithsonian Institution; Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas L. Casey, of the Corps of Army Engineers; Mr. Edward Clark, Architect of the Capitol; Mr. F. Schumann, civil engineer, Treasury Department; Professor John S. Billings, surgeon United States Army, ABRAM S. HEWITT, BENJAMIN F. BUTLER, G. B. LORING, and FRANK JONES, be, and they are hereby constituted an advisory board, without additional pay or compensation, with power and authority to make and carry out, through the Architect of the Capitol Extension, during the approaching recess of Congress, all the changes and alterations in the heating, lighting, and ventilating the Hall of the House of Representatives, that are set out and recommended in the report submitted by them and adopted by the select committee appointed by resolution of the House to inquire into the present method of heating, lighting, and ventilating the Hall of the House of Representatives; and the said board may employ a clerk during the time they are engaged in the performance of such work: Provided, That nothing herein shall authorize the removal of the desks as now placed.

And be it further resolved, That the Architect of the Capitol extension and the Electrician of the House be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to purchase two dynamo-electric machines and their necessary attachments for lighting the Hall of the House of Representatives, providing they shall not cost a sum exceeding $2,500.

Mr. CONGER. I understood a name was to be added.

The SPEAKER. It was added.

Mr. CONGER. I do not know why it was inserted first.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not know either.

Mr. CLYMER. As I offered the amendment I had no desire to place Mr. HEWITT's name at the head of the commission.

Mr. CONGER. As there is a clerk to be appointed, and there must necessarily be a democrat at the head of it, I have no objection. [Laughter.]

Mr. CLYMER. It was not my intention as the mover of the amendment that Mr. HEWITT's name should be placed in that position.

Mr. CONGER. So I understood.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is unable to answer, as he took no interest in the matter.

Mr. CALKINS. I move the name of BENJAMIN F. BUTLER be added.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection. The Chair will say further, as allusion has been made this morning to the matter, that in appointing the committee under the resolution offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Butler] himself, the Chair selected the chairman of the committee after due reflection, not from any political consideration whatever. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Young] had given this subject, by the direction of the House, long and arduous attention, and he was appointed by the Chair with his eyes open, knowing what he was doing.

Mr. CONGER. In this case the appointment is by the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has nothing to do with this.

Mr. CONGER. By some means a member of this House is now appointed chairman.

Mr. FORT. Has the name of Mr. BUTLER been added?

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the name of BENJAMIN F. BUTLER will be added.

There was no objection.

Mr. CONGER. Following the other precedent, the name of Mr. BUTLER should be added at the top of the list. I move that, following the former precedent, his name be placed at the front end of the commission.

Mr. CLYMER. Probably the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Conger] would like to be put on the commission and have his name also put in advance of the others. I suggest that the name of the gentleman from Michigan be added.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. CONGER. I do not desire to be added to the commission. I am not so much of a partisan that I cannot recognize the eternal fitness of things.

Mr. FORT. I desire to ask the gentleman from Tennessee a question. Is he informed that the wall of this Chamber cannot be removed without endangering the building?

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I had reference to the wall just beyond that.

Mr. FORT. I have conversed with two or three architects, one of whom was Mr. J. B. Mullet, who was the architect of the new State Department, and I was informed distinctly by him that it could be removed without a particle of trouble and at a very small expense, and that the building would be as firm and the roof supported as well as it is now.

Mr. ITTNER. I desire to make this suggestion to the chairman of the committee, that if the gentleman who traveled all over this country and Europe investigating this question of the ventilation of public buildings is not in the lunatic asylum he had better be placed on this commission also.

Mr. COX, of New York. I move to add the name of Mr. JONES, of New Hampshire.

Mr. HALE. I suggest that the name of Dr. LORING, who has given great attention to this matter, be added to this commission.

The SPEAKER. It is moved that the name of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Loring] be added. The Chair hears no objection.

The gentleman from New York suggests that the name of the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. Jones] be added. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. ITTNER. In the remark I made a moment ago I do not desire to be considered as having reflected upon the gentleman whom I had in my mind's eye when I spoke. I wished to convey the idea that any man who had traveled all over this country and Europe investigating the proper modes of heating and ventilating halls of this description, if not now in a lunatic asylum ought to be there.

The SPEAKER. He is on the committee. [Great laughter.]

Mr. CONGER. I think that is a fair equivalent of the other place.

Mr. BACON. I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the words "desks as now placed" insert "or the substitution of others more convenient in their stead."

The amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. ATKINS. I suggest to my colleague, the chairman of the committee, that he introduce a joint resolution making the appropriation contemplated in his resolution.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I have an amendment here which I desire to offer. I am informed by the Architect of the Capitol and the Electrician that the recommendation made in this amendment will, if carried out, save the Government in four or five years ten or fifteen thousand dollars. It is for the purpose of providing two dynamo-electric machines for lighting the Hall.

The Clerk read the amendment.

Mr. ATKINS. I again call the attention of my colleague to my suggestion in regard to the modification of his resolution.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I have made arrangements in the Senate in regard to it.

Mr. ATKINS. Those arrangements do not amount to anything.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I have already arranged for the appropriation being made in the sundry civil bill.

Mr. ATKINS. I would ask my colleague to modify his resolution.

Mr. ITTNER. Mr. Speaker, I was unfortunate in my explanation, and I desire to correct myself. I do not desire to be understood as reflecting upon the honorable chairman of the committee having this bill in charge, and who has also given this subject much thought and study. What I meant to say was, that any man who had devoted two years to the close consideration of an impractical proposition and not be driven to insanity must be endowed with an unusual strong mental organization.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. From the discussion upon the subject this morning I should judge that the investigation of the subject has a strong tendency to lunacy.

I now call the previous question on the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to suggest to the gentleman from Tennessee that the first resolution is a House resolution, and the second resolution will be a joint resolution.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. Then I will strike out the second resolution, and I will get the Senate to insert the provision of it in the sundry civil bill.

Mr. CONGER. I should like to know what electric light the gentleman suggests.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I do not know; it is the suggestion of the Architect of the Capitol.

The SPEAKER. The Chair suggests to the gentleman from Tennessee that he allow his first resolution to be passed. He can then submit a joint resolution covering the second of these resolutions.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. That is what I propose to do.

The question was taken; and the resolutions, as modified, were agreed to.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee, moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolutions were adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, informed the House that the Senate had passed resolutions in which the concurrence of the House was requested, as follows:

A concurrent resolution for printing and binding in cloth 10,000 extra copies of the report and the proceedings of the Paris monetary conference held last year;

A concurrent resolution for printing 300,000 copies of the report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1878; 225,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, 55,000 copies for the use of the Senate, and 20,000 copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture; and

A concurrent resolution for printing the report of the Commissioner of Education for 1877; 5,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 10,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 10,000 copies for distribution by the Commissioner.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed, without amendment, bills of the House of the following titles:

An act (H. R. No. 247) to grant a pension to George D. Phillips, a soldier of the war of 1812;

An act (H. R. No. 541) for the relief of William H. Carmen;

An act (H. R. No. 697) restoring the name of Benjamin Hollingsworth to the pension-roll;

An act (H. R. No. 796) for the relief of Jenkins A. Fitzgerald, assistant surgeon United States Army;

An act (H. R. No. 1144) for the relief of Ann Annis, widow of Harvey Annis, late second lieutenant Company G, Fifty-first Regiment United States Colored Infantry;

An act (H. R. No. 1243) for the relief of Josephine C. Owen, postmaster at Randolph, New York;

An act (H. R. No. 1277) donating condemned cannon and cannonballs to the Colchester Monument Association, of Colchester, Connecticut, for monumental purposes;

An act (H. R. No. 1278) donating condemned cannon and cannonballs to Ledyard Monument Association, of Ledyard, Connecticut, for monumental purposes;

An act (H. R. No. 1286) granting relief to John T. Neale, an employé of the Provost-Marshal-General's department in 1861, for injuries sustained in the line of his duties;

An act (H. R. No. 1304) granting a pension to Anna M. Clippinger;

An act (H. R. No. 2394) for the relief of Leonard L. Lancaster, late sergeant Second Regiment Cavalry, Wisconsin Volunteers;

An act (H. R. No. 2961) for the relief of Jarvis Jackson, of Laurel County, Kentucky;

An act (H. R. No. 3434) releasing title to a certain cemetery lot to the city of Montgomery, Alabama;

An act (H. R. No. 3558) for the relief of Second Lieutenant Thomas T. Knox, regimental quartermaster First Cavalry;

An act (H. R. No. 3575) granting an increase of pension to Josephine Da C. Thomas;

An act (H. R. No. 3598) granting a pension to Alice B. Mouree;

An act (H. R. No. 3853) for the relief of William F. Wheeler;

An act (H. R. No. 3871) donating condemned cannon to the city of Boston for monumental purposes;

An act (H. R. No. 4002) donating a condemned cannon and cannonballs to Post No. 145, Grand Army of the Republic, district of Massachusetts;

An act (H. R. No. 4294) to increase the pension of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Roberts;

An act (H. R. No. 4385) granting an increase of pension to Caroline Hawley;

An act (H. R. No. 4392) for the relief of Lucinda C. Dillabenty, of Tennessee;

An act (H. R. No. 4393) granting a pension to Mrs. Sidney A. Harrison;

An act (H. R. No. 4407) for the relief of Andrew Ivory;

An act (H. R. No. 4795) granting a pension to Ann Cornelia Lanman;

An act (H. R. No. 6159) granting a bounty land warrant to Elisha Franklin, a survivor of the war of 1812; and

An act (H. R. No. 6272) donating condemned cannon to Bayard Post, for purposes therein mentioned.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested bills of the House of the following titles:

An act (H. R. No. 480) granting a pension to William W. Stephenson, captain of Company H, Twenty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteers;

An act (H. R. No. 491) granting a pension to Henry Brown, late a private in Company C, One hundred and twenty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteers;

An act (H. R. No. 529) granting a pension to Daniel Middough;

An act (H. R. No. 550) granting a pension to Mary A. Allen;

An act (H. R. No. 585) for the relief of Daniel C. Putnam;

An act (H. R. No. 608) granting a pension to Nathan Udell;

An act (H. R. No. 830) granting a pension to Elizabeth Teagarden;

An act (H. R. No. 846) for the relief of Thomas C. Young, late private Company F, Thirty-ninth Iowa Infantry;

An act (H. R. No. 989) granting a pension to Mrs. Eliza A. Semple;

An act (H. R. No. 1045) to place George W. Browning on the pension-roll;

An act (H. R. No. 1055) granting a pension to Samuel B. Robertson;

An act (H. R. No. 1147) granting a pension to Catharine Brennan, widow of John Brennan, late a private Company B, Fifty-eighth Illinois Volunteers;

An act (H. R. No. 1842) granting a pension to Henry Grossman, late a private in Company G, One hundred and fifty-fourth Regiment Illinois Infantry Volunteers;

An act (H. R. No. 1956) for the relief of Thomas Murphy, of Knox County, Missouri;

An act (H. R. No. 1959) granting a pension to John Haley;

An act (H. R. No. 2172) granting a pension to De Forest Doty, of Timmouth, Vermont, late a private in Company B, Ninth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry;

An act (H. R. No. 2289) granting a pension to Mrs. Maria L. Maxwell, widow of William C. Maxwell, Company D, Twelfth Ohio Volunteers;

An act (H. R. No. 2294) to authorize the Secretary of War to place upon the rolls of Company H, Ninth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, the name of William S. Massie;

An act (H. R. No. 2321) granting a pension to Andrew A. Gooding, of Fentress County, Tennessee;

An act (H. R. No. 2472) for the relief of Elias B. Bell, late private of Company E, Third Regiment West Virginia Cavalry;

An act (H. R. No. 2489) granting a pension to John Gavin, Sixteenth New York Cavalry;

An act (H. R. No. 2519) for the relief of Mrs. Julia H. Totten, widow of James Totten, late lieutenant-colonel and assistant inspector-general, United States Army;

An act (H. R. No. 2711) granting a pension to Thomas Burroughs, late a private in Company G, First Vermont Cavalry Regiment;

An act (H. R. No. 2927) to restore to the pension-roll the name of Michael S. Corl;

An act (H. R. No. 2769) granting an increase of pension to Catherine H. Gallagher, widow of Captain John Gallagher, late of United States Army;

An act (H. R. No. 2944) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Parrott, of Hardin County, Ohio;

An act (H. R. No. 2975) granting a pension to William Reynolds, late a private Company G, Thirteenth Regiment Indiana Volunteers;

An act (H. R. No. 3108) granting a pension to Hugh B. Makin, late a private of Company A, Eighth Regiment United States Volunteers;

An act (H. R. No. 3112) granting a pension to Henrietta Stringham, widow of Rear-Admiral Silas H. Stringham, deceased;

An act (H. R. No. 3150) granting a pension to Joseph Ward;

An act (H. R. No. 3196) granting a pension to William H. Garrett; late private Company B, Fifty-sixth Regiment Illinois Infantry Volunteers;

An act (H. R. No. 3362) granting a pension to Nathan A. Winters;
 An act (H. R. No. 3408) granting a pension to Samuel V. Adams;
 An act (H. R. No. 3676) for the relief of Benjamin Sanders;
 An act (H. R. No. 3816) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary G. Harris;
 An act (H. R. No. 4368) granting a pension to Joanna Kuhlman;
 An act (H. R. No. 4371) granting a pension to Ludwig Ueber;
 An act (H. R. No. 4379) granting a pension to Mary Brady Cross;
 An act (H. R. No. 4386) granting arrears of pension to Emilie R. Hooe, widow of the late Brevet Major Alexander S. Hooe, Fifty-first Infantry, United States Army;
 An act (H. R. No. 4391) granting a pension to Susan Humes;
 An act (H. R. No. 4494) granting a pension to John Grubbins;
 An act (H. R. No. 4574) concerning street railroads in the District of Columbia;

An act (H. R. No. 4687) granting a pension to Georgine Thomas, widow of General Charles Thomas, deceased;
 An act (H. R. No. 4691) granting a pension to Hannah Hallam;
 An act (H. R. No. 4694) granting a pension to James Riley, late private in Company D, Forty-first Regiment United States Infantry;
 An act (H. R. No. 4695) granting a pension to James Buchanan;
 An act (H. R. No. 4696) granting a pension to Cynthia Spradlin;
 An act (H. R. No. 4697) granting a pension to Philip Thon;
 An act (H. R. No. 4698) granting a pension to Helen Crabbe;
 An act (H. R. No. 4701) granting a pension to J. W. Staplin;
 An act (H. R. No. 4702) granting a pension to Catharine Gemmill and children;

An act (H. R. No. 4793) granting a pension to James Mahew, late private in the Twenty-third Battery of Indiana Volunteers;
 An act (H. R. No. 4794) granting a pension to Peter Yarnell, late a private in Company D, Twelfth West Virginia Volunteers;
 An act (H. R. No. 4983) granting a pension to Sarah H. Bradford;
 An act (H. R. No. 4987) granting a pension to James H. Cook;
 An act (H. R. No. 5300) to provide for the holding of terms of the district and circuit courts of the United States at Fort Scott, Kansas; and

An act (H. R. No. 6179) donating four condemned cannon to the town of Sutton, in the State of Massachusetts.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

An act (S. No. 174) for the relief of Thomas B. Hunn;
 An act (S. No. 1051) for the relief of Hardie Hogan Helper;
 An act (S. No. 1571) for the relief of William W. Ross;
 An act (S. No. 1644) for the relief of Samuel A. Chew;
 An act (S. No. 1672) for the relief of N. C. Blanton;
 An act (S. No. 1673) for the relief of James Trabue;
 An act (S. No. 1674) for the relief of Henry F. Lines;
 An act (S. No. 1719) for the relief of Thomas S. Ford;
 An act (S. No. 3399) granting a pension to Abigail S. Tilton;
 An act (S. No. 460) granting a pension to Mary Leggett;
 An act (S. No. 1359) granting a pension to the widow and minor children of Michael Mienan;

An act (S. No. 1400) granting a pension to Mrs. Louisa Bassett;
 An act (S. No. 1465) granting a pension to Theodore Halberstadt;
 An act (S. No. 1509) granting a pension to John Willams;
 An act (S. No. 1511) granting a pension to Detrick Black;
 An act (S. No. 1512) granting a pension to Peter Gettert;
 An act (S. No. 1513) granting a pension to Charles Reed;
 An act (S. No. 1514) granting a pension to Simeon Ingalls;
 An act (S. No. 1515) granting a pension to James H. Poland;
 An act (S. No. 1602) granting a pension to Louisa Bainbridge Hoff;
 An act (S. No. 1705) granting an increase of pension to James C. Daggett;

An act (S. No. 1848) granting an increase of pension to Charles C. Smith;

An act (S. No. 1852) granting an increase of pension to Ward B. Burnett;

An act (S. No. 1723) granting arrears of pension to Mrs. Jane Dulaney;

An act (S. No. 1728) granting a pension to John Smith;
 An act (S. No. 1739) granting a pension to Matthew O. Reagan;
 An act (S. No. 1740) granting a pension to Rebecca Williams;
 An act (S. No. 1741) granting a pension to Elizabeth McNeill Benham;

An act (S. No. 1742) granting a pension to Francis McNeill Potter;
 An act (S. No. 1759) granting a pension to Sarah E. Webb and minor children;

An act (S. No. 1841) granting a pension to John McNulta;
 An act (S. No. 1849) granting a pension to Mrs. L. E. McCauley;
 An act (S. No. 1854) granting a pension to Hannah McLaughlin;
 An act (S. No. 1855) granting a pension to Mary W. Jones;
 An act (S. No. 1733) granting to Mrs. Elizabeth Wirt Goldsborough, widow of the late Admiral Goldsborough, a pension of $50 per month, to be paid out of the Navy pension fund;

An act (S. No. 1554) relating to printing impressions from portraits and vignettes;

An act (S. No. 1582) providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of the Territory of Dakota;

An act (S. No. 1650) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to ascertain and report to Congress the amount of money expended and indebtedness assumed by the State of Kansas in repelling invasions and suppressing Indian hostilities;

An act (S. No. 1692) authorizing the President to nominate Herman Biggs to a second lieutenantcy in the Army; and

An act (S. No. 172) to enable the Secretary of War to purchase land to enlarge and protect the San Antonio arsenal.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. I desire to make another report from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. SPRINGER. I understand that there is a privileged question which can be called up by me, and if the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] does not desire to call up the matter in which he is interested I shall call up that privileged question.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES.

Mr. HUNTON. I rise to a privileged question. I submit the following resolution:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring.) That there be printed 12,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of Hon. Beverly B. Douglas, late a Representative of the State of Virginia, of which 9,000 shall be for the use of the House and 3,000 for the use of the Senate.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. HUNTON moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. COOK. I ask that the amendments of the Senate in reference to the printing of the memorial services of the late Julian Hartridge be concurred in. The amendments from the Senate reduce the number.

Mr. GIDDINGS. I ask that the same action be taken on the resolutions of the Senate in relation to Mr. Schleicher.

Mr. HUBBELL. I ask that the same action be taken in relation to the amendments of the Senate to the resolutions for printing the memorial addresses upon the late General Alpheus S. Williams.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. TUCKER. I yield the floor to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BRIDGES] to offer a resolution.

EVENING SESSION.

Mr. BRIDGES. I ask unanimous consent to offer the following resolution:

Resolved. That there be an evening session of the House to-morrow evening to commence at half past seven o'clock, the first hour and a half thereof to be set apart for the consideration of the bill relating to the Japanese indemnity fund and Senate resolution touching the fishery articles of the Washington treaty, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and the remainder of the evening for general debate.

Mr. WILSON. I desire to amend the resolution.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I object to the resolution.

Mr. TUCKER. Then I will call up the unfinished business.

Mr. BRIDGES. I move to suspend the rules and pass the resolution.

The SPEAKER. We are already acting under a suspension of the rules.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. ROBINSON, of Indiana, by unanimous consent, leave was granted for the withdrawal from the files of the House of the papers in the case of Frank B. Gross, there being no adverse report.

On motion of Mr. EVINS, of South Carolina, by unanimous consent, leave was granted for the withdrawal from the files of the House of the papers in the case of Lacon R. Fillmore and A. H. Von Leutwitz, there being no adverse report.

On motion of Mr. STEWART, by unanimous consent, leave was granted for the withdrawal from the files of the House of the papers accompanying House bill No. 1185, for the payment of certain Indian war bonds of the State of California, there being no adverse report.

On motion of Mr. COLE, by unanimous consent, leave was granted for the withdrawal from the files of the House of papers in the case of John Chapman, there being no adverse report.

On motion of Mr. KIDDER, by unanimous consent, leave was granted for the withdrawal from the files of the House of papers in the case of J. Carlsen, there being no adverse report.

On motion of Mr. MONEY, by unanimous consent, leave was granted to withdraw from the files of the House the papers accompanying the bill for the relief of the heirs of Brigadier-General William B. Thompson, of the revolutionary army, reported adversely by the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to Mr. CHALMERS to print in the RECORD certain remarks on the contested-election case of Richardson vs. Rainey. [See Appendix.]

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to Mr. BREWER to print in the RECORD remarks on the revision of the patent laws. [See Appendix.]

EXPENSES OF PUBLIC PRINTING.

Mr. HATCHER, from the Committee on Public Expenditures, by unanimous consent, submitted a report upon the Public Printing Office; which was ordered to be printed and recommitted.

Mr. BURDICK, from the same committee, on behalf of the minority, submitted a report, to be printed with the majority report.

Mr. HALE. Not to be brought back on a motion to reconsider.

The SPEAKER. That is the understanding.

PRINTING OF MEMORIAL ADDRESSES.

Mr. LOCKWOOD, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was read, considered, and adopted:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring.) That there be printed 12,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of the late Terrence J. Quinn, late a Representative from the State of New York, of which 9,000 shall be for the use of the House and 3,000 for the use of the Senate.

Mr. MAJORS, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was read, considered, and adopted:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring.) That there be printed 12,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of the late Frank Welch, late a Representative from the State of Nebraska, of which 9,000 shall be for the use of the House and 3,000 for the use of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. RAINEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

An act (S. No. 19) for the relief of Captain James M. Beeber;

An act (S. No. 333) for the relief of Thomas J. Choate, Erastus Foster, Milton Ladd, Clarence E. Haney, William A. Hill, Kneeland F. Huckaby, and William Blackburn, late privates in Company F, Third Regiment Arkansas Cavalry Volunteers;

An act (S. No. 401) for the relief of Charles H. Mosely;

An act (S. No. 713) for the relief of Martin Clark;

An act (S. No. 793) for the relief of Edwin R. Clarke;

An act (S. No. 837) for the relief of the officers and privates of the New Mexico Mounted Volunteers;

An act (S. No. 1268) to authorize the Secretary of War to convey to Jacob A. T. Wendell, Henry Van Allen, and John R. Bailey a part of the military reservation of Fort Mackinac;

An act (S. No. 1365) to place Lewis Leffman, ordnance-sergeant United States Army, on the retired list; and

An act (S. No. 1475) for the relief the sureties, &c., of Samuel M. Reynolds, late additional paymaster of United States Volunteers.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. COVERT. I rise to a privileged question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COVERT. I am instructed by the select committee on ventilation to present the report and resolutions which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] is recognized as entitled to the floor. A conference report is of higher privilege than the one referred to by the gentleman from New York, [Mr. COVERT.]

Mr. COVERT. I make the point that the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr. YOUNG,] the chairman of the Select Committee on Ventilation, had the floor and yielded it to me.

The SPEAKER. How long will it take?

Mr. COVERT. Only two or three minutes.

Mr. TUCKER. I cannot yield any further.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from New York later in the day.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

Mr. TUCKER. I now call up the conference report upon the internal-revenue bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] is entitled to the floor for five minutes upon the conference report.

Mr. CONGER. In my judgment, the people of the United States, from the poorest dweller in a hovel to the inhabitant of a palace, demand the repeal of the tax upon matches and have demanded it for years. [After a pause.] Mr. Speaker, I am losing time out of my five minutes, because gentlemen are occupied otherwise than in performing that highest duty of a legislator, listening to me. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. CONGER,] who is entitled to the floor, complains that he cannot be heard.

Mr. CONGER. I have struggled for two hours to obtain five minutes in which to speak, and almost half of that time has gone on account of the confusion here.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will suspend until order is restored. [After a pause.] The gentleman will now proceed.

Mr. CONGER. The demand for the repeal of the tax upon matches has been universal, and no man, I venture to say, in speaking to the people of the United States in any congressional district within this Union, has failed at one time or another to have the question propounded to him—What necessity remains that an absolutely necessary article like matches should still continue to be taxed? This House responded to the demand of the people; one hundred and seventy-nine of the Representatives of the people on this floor voted to repeal the tax on matches. In Committee of the Whole it was done by a large majority and in the House again on a yea-and-nay vote, when there was earnest feeling upon the subject, there was a majority of thirty-two for the repeal of the tax on matches. We appointed a committee of conference to go and tell the Senate that the House, composed of the immediate Representatives of the people, had three times demanded the repeal of the tax on matches, in the face of the refusal of the Senate to repeal the tax. Our committee went there. I pass by the personal remarks of the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER.] When that committee returned, recommending that the action of the Senate imposing and keeping this oppressive tax on the people should be concurred in, I ventured to ask that committee, as I might ask them, what efforts they had made in committee, if any, to enforce the thrice repeated wish of this House of Representatives. The gentleman answered me with the Virginia sneer; that is Virginia logic.

Sir, I am told—I know not whether it is true or false—that when this question came up in the committee of conference no vote was taken upon the disagreement of the two Houses on this question; that there was no expression on the part of our committee charged with our business, in favor of the position of the House. I am told that individual members of that committee from this House, who had voted against the will of the House—

Mr. CARLISLE. I rise to a point of order.

Mr. CONGER. I object to being interrupted for one moment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky rises to a point of order.

Mr. CONGER. Well, let it not come out of my time.

The SPEAKER. It will not.

Mr. CARLISLE. I submit that it is not in order for the gentleman to refer to proceedings of a committee in this House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. CONGER. I assert that I have the right to know what our committee did. I have no right to question what the Senate committee of conference did. Our committee must report to us what they did; and any rule that will prevent such an inquiry abridges the right of the whole House of Representatives, to say nothing of the right of a humble member on this floor.

I asked what our committee did. I knew the gentlemen composing our committee were individually in favor of keeping the tax on matches; their vote is so recorded. But they went into the conference not as individuals, but clothed with the power of this House as its representatives. They went into a free conference, it is true, but they were expected to represent the will of the majority of the House.

Now, I ask this House; I ask the one hundred and seventy-nine men who voted to repeal the tax on matches; I ask the vast majority who are recorded by yeas and nays in favor of satisfying the demand of the people throughout our land, rich and poor, in favor of removing this unnecessary tax—to vote against concurrence in this report of the committee, that it may go back to the Senate, and that we the originators of revenue laws and the repealers of revenue laws under the Constitution of the United States may be heard; that our committee may go into the conference free, uninstructed by resolution of the House, but bound by the usual obligation to maintain as far as they may consistently do so the opinions and wishes and recorded majorities of this House on this question.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. TUCKER. I now call for the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. I ask the gentleman to give further time for members to express their opinions on this subject.

The question being taken on seconding the demand for the previous question, there were—yeas 120, noes 46.

So the previous question was seconded and the main question ordered.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The question recurring on agreeing to the report of the committee of conference,

Mr. CONGER called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 147, nays 114, not voting 29; as follows:

YEAS—147.

Aiken,	Chalmers,	Finley, Jesse J.	House,
Aldrich,	Clark, Alvah A.	Fleming,	Huntton,
Atkins,	Clark of Missouri,	Forney,	Ittner,
Bacon,	Clarke of Kentucky,	Franklin,	Jones, Frank
Banning,	Clymer,	Garth,	Jones, James T.
Beale,	Cole,	Gibson,	Jorgensen,
Bell,	Collins,	Giddings,	Kenna,
Blackburn,	Cook,	Glover,	Kimmel,
Blount,	Cox, Jacob D.	Goode,	Knapp,
Boone,	Cox, Samuel S.	Gunter,	Landers,
Boyd,	Cravens,	Hamilton,	Lathrop,
Brentano,	Crittenden,	Hardenbergh,	Ligon,
Bridges,	Davis, Horace,	Harris, Henry R.	Luttrell,
Bright,	Davis, Joseph J.	Harris, John T.	Lynde,
Brogden,	Dean,	Harrison,	Mackey,
Buckner,	Dibrell,	Hart,	Maish,
Burchard,	Dickey,	Hatcher,	Manning,
Burdick,	Durham,	Hayes,	Martin,
Cabell,	Eickhoff,	Hazelton,	Mayham,
Cain,	Elam,	Henkle,	McKenzie,
Caldwell, John W.	Ellis,	Henry,	McMahon,
Candler,	Evins, John H.	Herbert,	Metcalfe,
Cannon,	Felton,	Hewitt, G. W.	Mills,
Carlisle,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Hooker,	Money,

Morgan,
Morrison,
Morse,
Muldrow,
Muller,
Page,
Patterson, G. W.
Patterson, T. M.
Peddie,
Phelps,
Pollard,
Pridemore,
Rainey,

Randolph,
Rea,
Reagan,
Reilly,
Robbins,
Roberts,
Robertson,
Robinson, G. D.
Ross,
Scales,
Shelley,
Siemons,
Smalls,

Smith, William E.
Southard,
Springer,
Steele,
Stenger,
Stephens,
Throckmorton,
Tucker,
Turner,
Turney,
Vance,
Waddell,
Walker,

Whitthorne,
Wigginton,
Williams, James
Williams, Jere N.
Willis, Albert S.
Willis, Benj. A.
Wilson,
Wood,
Wren,
Yeates,
Young, Casey
Young, John S.

NAYS—114.

Bagley,
Bailey,
Baker, John H.
Baker, William H.
Ballou,
Bayne,
Benedict,
Bicknell,
Blair,
Bonck,
Bragg,
Brewer,
Briggs,
Browne,
Bundy,
Butler,
Caldwell, W. P.
Camp,
Campbell,
Caswell,
Claffin,
Clark, Rush
Cobb,
Conger,
Covert,
Crapo,
Culbertson,
Cummings,
Cutler,

Danford,
Davidson,
Deering,
Denison,
Dunnell,
Dwight,
Eames,
Eden,
Ellsworth,
Errett,
Evans, I. Newton
Evans, James L.
Fort,
Foster,
Gardner,
Garfield,
Hale,
Hanna,
Harmer,
Harris, Benj. W.
Hartzell,
Hendee,
Henderson,
Hiscock,
Hubbell,
Humphrey,
Hungerford,
Hunter,
James,

Jones, John S.
Keifer,
Keightley,
Kelley,
Killinger,
Lapham,
Lindsey,
Lockwood,
Loring,
Majors,
Marsh,
McCook,
McGowan,
McKinley,
Mitchell,
Monroe,
Neal,
Norcross,
Oliver,
O'Neill,
Overton,
Phillips,
Pound,
Powers,
Price,
Pugh,
Reed,
Robinson, M. S.
Ryan,

Sampson,
Sapp,
Sexton,
Shallenberger,
Sinnickson,
Smith, A. Herr
Sparks,
Starin,
Stewart,
Stone, John W.
Stone, Joseph C.
Thompson,
Tipton,
Townsend, Amos
Townsend, M. I.
Townshend, R. W.
Van Vorhes,
Wait,
Ward,
Warner,
White, Harry
White, Michael D.
Williams, Andrew
Williams, C. G.
Williams, Richard
Willits,
Wright.

NOT VOTING.—29

Acklen,
Banks,
Beebe,
Bland,
Bliss,
Calkins,
Chittenden,
Ewing,

Freeman,
Frye,
Fuller,
Gause,
Haskell,
Hewitt, Abram S.
Joyce,
Ketcham,

Knott,
Potter,
Rice, Americus V.
Rice, William W.
Riddle,
Saylor,
Singleton,
Strait,

Swann,
Thornburgh,
Veeder,
Walsh,
Watson.

So the conference report was adopted.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. FRYE. I am paired with Mr. KNOTT, who is detained from the House by the business of his committee.

Mr. CALKINS. I am paired with Mr. ACKLEN, who is detained from the House by sickness.

Mr. O'NEILL. My colleague, Mr. FREEMAN, is paired with Mr. RIDDLE. If present, Mr. FREEMAN would vote "no."

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

RETURN OF SENATE BILL.

The SPEAKER. There has been lost or mislaid a Senate bill, and the following order is made necessary.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the Clerk of the House request the Secretary of the Senate to furnish this House with a duplicate enrolled copy of Senate bill No. 801, the original having been lost or mislaid.

Mr. CONGER. What is that bill?

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. It relates to the public lands.

The SPEAKER. It is an enrolled bill of the Senate, and ought to be here without regard to the subject of the bill. The bill should be here in some form.

Mr. CONGER. If it were a bill I thought ought not to pass, I should take advantage of this providential circumstance.

There was no objection, and the order was entered accordingly.

COINAGE, WEIGHTS, AND MEASURES.

The SPEAKER. Mr. STEPHENS, of Georgia, chairman of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, asks general consent for him to make a short statement and submit a request. The statement is that his committee have several reports to make, some favorable and some adverse to the subject-matters embraced.

As this committee cannot be called in regular order again this session, he asks that these reports be made to the Clerk of the House, laid on the table, and printed as if made in regular order, and that any member of the committee be allowed to have printed in the RECORD such remarks on any of said reports as he may think proper.

Mr. CONGER. I object to any proposition that confines the right to make remarks to the members of the committee.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Let it be extended to others.

The SPEAKER. That can be stricken out and the right can be extended to all members who may desire to submit remarks.

Mr. CONGER. If extended to all members I do not object.

The SPEAKER. I agree to that, that it shall be extended to all members on the subjects mentioned

The SPEAKER. With that modification the Chair hears no objection.

PUBLIC PRINTING.

The SPEAKER. This morning Mr. HATCHER, chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures, obtained permission to print and recommit a report from that committee. The minority of the committee, represented by Mr. BURDICK, now ask leave to submit the views of the minority of the Committee on Public Expenditures on the investigation into the public printing and binding, and that the same may be printed and recommitted with the report of the majority of the said committee.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state that in the original request there was a motion which was omitted, that the testimony also be printed.

Mr. CONGER. Was the report before this committee from the Committee on Printing?

The SPEAKER. No; from the Committee on Public Expenditures, but it is in relation to the Government printing and binding.

Mr. CONGER. In reference to the Government Printer?

Mr. FINLEY, of Ohio. It is for the printing of the minority as well as the majority.

The SPEAKER. Not to be brought back on a motion to reconsider. The request now is that the evidence accompanying the report may be printed.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. BURDICK. If the authority to print given does not include members of this committee, I ask permission that any member of the committee who may desire to print on this subject shall have leave to do so.

There was no objection.

Mr. LUTTRELL. What was the order entered just now?

The SPEAKER. The order entered has been for the printing and recommitment of the majority and minority reports of the Committee on Public Expenditures in reference to the Government printing and binding, together with the testimony accompanying the report.

SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS.

Mr. DURHAM, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice, submitted a report to accompany House bill No. 5996, to repeal all laws in regard to the appointment and pay of supervisors of elections and special marshals to aid them; which was ordered to be printed and recommitted, not to be brought back by a motion to reconsider, and that the minority of said committee also have leave to submit their views, and that they also be printed.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. SCALES. I ask that gentlemen be allowed to print remarks touching the revenue bill which has just been passed by the adoption of the report of the committee of conference.

There was no objection, and the leave to print was granted.

PERSONAL EXPLANATIONS.

Mr. FRYE. I desire to say that yesterday I inadvertently voted on the internal-revenue bill. I was paired with the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. KNOTT,] who is confined to his house on account of sickness. I desire to withdraw my vote.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I rise to a personal privilege. I ask to have read by the Clerk the short article which I have marked. It is editorial matter, and for it the correspondent here is not responsible.

The Clerk read as follows:

THE ANTI-CHINESE BILL.

WILLIS was unable to get the anti-Chinese bill before the House yesterday, and it is feared that no action will be taken until Monday, the 24th instant. This is to be regretted. Reports are very conflicting as to the intentions of the President, and should the Senate amendments not be concurred in until Monday, he could evade the issue by simply pocketing the bill, should he be so inclined. It might have been sent to the President last night but for the refusal of BLACKBURN, of Kentucky—a prominent democratic leader—to accord it precedence over some very insignificant business.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I simply desire to say that personal explanations are no more distasteful to any one than to myself, and I should have taken no notice of that statement except by the request of members of this House from the State of California, and I now simply desire to say that the charge made there is utterly without foundation. The RECORD shows that I was a supporter of the bill. The gentleman who reported that bill, my colleague, [Mr. WILLIS, of Kentucky,] will, I am sure, bear me out in this statement that I did all in my power to further its passage.

The committee were constantly endeavoring to secure its consideration and I as constantly laboring in the same direction. I never heard any opposition to it on this side of the Chamber. The statement as to myself is absolutely without foundation.

Mr. CONGER. I have no objection to these personal explanations, but I object to a member including in them personal reflections on members of this House when the courtesy is extended to him to make a personal explanation.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not intend to be subject to criticism on the matter of courtesy. I certainly meant no discourtesy, and I would be glad to have the gentleman from Michigan, if he can, controvert the statement which I have made.

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman closes his remarks by saying that this measure was not objected to on his side of the House.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Does the gentleman recognize in that statement of fact a personal reflection upon any one on the other side of the House?

Mr. CONGER. I consider it a political reflection; I do not know that it is personal.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I did not intend to inject any politics into the statement which I made.

Mr. CONGER. Then the gentleman was unfortunate in his remarks if he had no such intention.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I am very fortunate in securing the criticism of the gentleman from Michigan, who objects to everything.

CORRECTION OF RECORD AND JOURNAL.

Mr. CARLISLE. I endeavored yesterday to get an opportunity, without interrupting the public business, to have a correction made in the RECORD, but was unable to do so. I observe that in the proceedings of the day before yesterday my name is omitted from the vote on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, and is included in the list of those not voting. We all know how difficult it sometimes is for the clerks and reporters to hear the responses of members on account of the confusion prevailing on the floor during the roll-call, and I presume my vote was not heard in this instance. The fact is that I was present and voted in the affirmative on the passage of the bill, and I ask that the correction be made in the RECORD and Journal.

There was no objection, and it was ordered that the correction be made.

Mr. WATSON. I voted "no."

Mr. SINGLETON. I voted "ay."

The SPEAKER. Without objection the names of these gentlemen will be recorded.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to call up the resolution which I sent to the Clerk's desk yesterday.

Mr. BURCHARD. Is not the consideration of the sugar-tariff bill the regular order?

Mr. HALE. I raise the question of consideration upon the matter which the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] desires to bring up.

Mr. SPRINGER. The question is now pending, coming over from yesterday. The Chair recognized me, and I am entitled to the floor now.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognized the gentleman to call up the subject, but there seems to be at the same time the right of the majority to raise the question of consideration.

Mr. SPRINGER. I am entitled to the floor, and it may be the right of some gentleman when I have exhausted my hour to raise the question of consideration.

The SPEAKER. When could gentlemen raise the question of consideration, if not now?

Mr. SPRINGER. When I have exhausted the hour to which I am entitled under the rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is mistaken about that, because the subject being discussed would be before the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. I have the floor upon a question of privilege, and I do not yield the floor.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman's right to the floor, but he also recognizes the right of another member to raise the question of consideration and test the sense of the House upon the question whether they will consider this matter or not.

Mr. SPRINGER. Have I not the right to the floor under the rules for one hour?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman would have if the question were before the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. It is before the House as a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER. But gentlemen have the right to raise the question of consideration.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. Can I not raise the question of a morning hour?

The SPEAKER. The only way to raise the question of a morning hour is to vote in the negative against all other propositions. The Clerk will read the rule.

The Clerk read as follows:

When any motion or proposition is made, the question "Will the House now consider it?" shall not be put unless it is demanded by some member or is deemed necessary by the Speaker. And it is competent for a member to raise the question of consideration upon a report even though a question of privilege is involved in the report. But after a question has been stated and its discussion commenced, it is too late to raise the question of consideration.

The question of consideration is not precluded by an affirmative vote on a motion to adjourn. The "unfinished business" pending at the time of adjournment is still subject to the question of "consideration," the motion to adjourn precluding it on the previous day.

The SPEAKER. The rule is as plain as daylight.

Mr. SPRINGER. I had the floor yesterday, and only yielded to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] on a question of higher privilege, which took me from the floor.

The SPEAKER. Oh, no. There must be some point at which the majority can raise the question of consideration.

Mr. SPRINGER. And there must be some point at which a minority can state a question of privilege, and that has not been accorded to me.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] states that the question of consideration was raised yesterday. The Chair does not recollect that.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I hope the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] will not raise the question of consideration. I have been yearning for three days to hear the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] for an hour. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. And I will give to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TOWNSEND] the most of that time, if he desires it.

Mr. HALE. We want to go on with the consideration of the sugar-tariff bill; and I raise the question of consideration on this.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the question of consideration to the House.

Mr. WADDELL. Is it a question of consideration between the question of privilege raised by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] and the sugar-tariff bill?

The SPEAKER. That is the question.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to state what the question of privilege is.

The SPEAKER. That is the right of the gentleman.

Mr. SPRINGER. I merely desire to state what the question is.

The SPEAKER. With the understanding, however, that the other side forfeit no right as to raising the question of consideration.

Mr. SPRINGER. Certainly.

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] has a right no further than to state his motion or proposition.

Mr. BURCHARD. Let the Chair state it.

Mr. CONGER. Yes; the Chair should state it to the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the question to be upon a resolution submitted by the gentleman from Illinois which the Clerk will now read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the Speaker issue his warrant directing the Sergeant-at-Arms attending this House, or his deputy, commanding him to take into custody forthwith, wherever to be found, the body of George F. Seward, and bring him to the bar of the House, to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt, and in the mean time keep the said George F. Seward in his custody to abide the further order of the House.

Mr. BUNDY. I now ask to have read the resolutions submitted by the minority of the committee, and which I have moved as a substitute for the majority resolution.

The SPEAKER. The resolutions will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the reasons given by Hon. George F. Seward, through his counsel, to the committee are legally sufficient to excuse his failure to produce the books described in the subpoena duces tecum, and his standing mute when tendered the oaths required by the resolutions of the committee, adopted by a majority of this committee, and his conduct in the premises are not contemptuous, but are excusable by the Constitution and laws of the United States and the acts of Congress pertaining thereto.

Resolved, That the Speaker should not issue a warrant directing the Sergeant-at-Arms to take into custody the body of George F. Seward, to the end that he be brought to the bar of the House to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt.

Mr. BUNDY. I wish time to say, with the permission of the gentleman who has raised the question of consideration, that we offer these resolutions as a substitute for the resolutions reported by the majority of the committee. The previous question not having been called, can the gentleman from Illinois now call the previous question so as to cut out these resolutions?

The SPEAKER. Whenever the consideration of the subject shall be entered upon the floor will be under the control of the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. SPRINGER.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not desire to cut out the minority resolutions.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman desires to hold the floor.

Mr. SPRINGER. Certainly.

Mr. BUNDY. If there is debate upon this subject will not we of the minority hold the affirmative position upon our resolutions and be entitled to the first hour?

The SPEAKER. If the debate is entered upon at all, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] will control the first hour, and he will then have the right to demand the previous question. If the House shall desire to hear further discussion they can vote down the previous question.

Mr. BUNDY. I suggest that some time be fixed for discussing this subject.

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not desire to take any advantage in this matter. I want a full, fair, and free discussion of it, and I want the minority resolutions to be voted on.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BUNDY] makes the suggestion that some time be fixed by consent when this subject can be considered.

Mr. SPRINGER. I cannot consent to any postponement of a matter of this kind.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the question of consideration which has been raised upon the subject called up by the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. SPRINGER.]

Mr. SPRINGER. When an order of the House is violated I think it is the duty of the House to take action upon it.

Mr. WADDELL. Mr. Speaker, can the question of consideration be raised between a measure of ordinary legislation like the sugar bill and a question of privilege such as the gentleman from Illinois is bringing to the attention of the House?

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say in answer to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WADDELL] that the rule on this subject is very plain in favor of the right to raise the question of consideration under the present circumstances. The Chair suggests that this question had better be taken by tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. SPRINGER and Mr. HALE were appointed.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House proceed to the consideration of the question of privilege presented by the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. SPRINGER?]

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 104, noes 110.

Mr. SPRINGER called for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HALE. Oh, let us go on with our business.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BLOUNT. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. Is it not in order for the House at this time to consider the question whether it will take up the Post-Office appropriation bill?

The SPEAKER. It is not, because the gentleman from Illinois has risen to a question of privilege; the Chair has decided it to be such a question; and the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE] has been recognized to raise the question of consideration upon the subject. This is a question of priority of business, which under the rules must be decided without debate. After this subject is disposed of, then under the order of the House made upon a suspension of the rules, the consideration of the sugar bill will be resumed, subject to appropriation bills.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 132, nays 122, not voting 36; as follows:

YEAS—132.

Aiken,	Davis, Joseph J.	Hewitt, G. W.	Rice, Americus V.
Banning,	Dean,	Hooker,	Roberts,
Beale,	Dibrell,	House,	Ross,
Bell,	Dickey,	Hunton,	Scales,
Benedict,	Eden,	Ittner,	Shelley,
Bicknell,	Eickhoff,	Jones, Frank	Slemmons,
Blackburn,	Elam,	Jones, James T.	Smith, William E.
Blount,	Ellis,	Kenna,	Southard,
Boone,	Evins, John H.	Killinger,	Sparks,
Bouck,	Ewing,	Kimmel,	Springer,
Bragg,	Felton,	Knapp,	Steele,
Bridges,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Landers,	Stenger,
Brogden,	Finley, Jesse J.	Ligon,	Swann,
Buckner,	Fleming,	Lockwood,	Throckmorton,
Cabell,	Forney,	Luttrell,	Townsend, R. W.
Caldwell, John W.	Franklin,	Mackey,	Tucker,
Caldwell, W. P.	Fuller,	Maish,	Turner,
Candler,	Garth,	Manning,	Turney,
Carlisle,	Giddings,	Martin,	Vance,
Chalmers,	Glover,	Mayham,	Veeder,
Clark, Alvah A.	Goode,	McKenzie,	Waddell,
Clark of Kentucky,	Hamilton,	McMahon,	Walker,
Clark of Missouri,	Hardenbergh,	Money,	Warner,
Cobb,	Harris, Henry R.	Morrison,	Whitthorne,
Collins,	Harris, John T.	Morse,	Wigginton,
Cook,	Harrison,	Muldrow,	Williams, James
Covert,	Hart,	Muller,	Williams, Jere N.
Cox, Samuel S.	Hartzell,	Patterson, T. M.	Willis, Albert S.
Cravens,	Hatcher,	Phelps,	Wilson,
Crittenden,	Henkle,	Pridemore,	Wood,
Cutler,	Henry,	Rea,	Wright,
Davidson,	Herbert,	Reagan,	Yeates,
	Hewitt, Abram S.	Reilly,	Young, John S.

NAYS—122.

Aldrich,	Deering,	Keifer,	Robertson,
Bacon,	Penison,	Knightley,	Robinson, G. D.
Bagley,	Dunnell,	Ketcham,	Robinson, M. S.
Bailey,	Dwight,	Lathrop,	Ryan,
Baker, John H.	Eames,	Lindsey,	Sapp,
Ballou,	Ellsworth,	Loring,	Sexton,
Blair,	Errett,	Majors,	Shallenberger,
Boyd,	Evans, I. Newton	Marsh,	Sinickson,
Brentano,	Evans, James L.	McCook,	Smalls,
Brewer,	Fort,	McGowan,	Starin,
Briggs,	Foster,	McKinley,	Stewart,
Browne,	Frye,	Metcalfe,	Stone, John W.
Bundy,	Gardner,	Mitchell,	Stone, Joseph C.
Burchard,	Gibson,	Morgan,	Strait,
Burdick,	Hale,	Neal,	Thompson,
Calhoun,	Hanna,	Norcross,	Tipton,
Camp,	Harmer,	Oliver,	Townsend, Amos
Campbell,	Harris, Benj. W.	O'Neill,	Townsend, M. I.
Causton,	Haskell,	Overton,	Van Vorhes,
Caswell,	Hayes,	Page,	Wait,
Chittenden,	Hazelton,	Patterson, G. W.	Ward,
Clavin,	Hendee,	Phillips,	Watson,
Clark, Rush	Henderson,	Pollard,	White, Harry
Cole,	Hiscock,	Pound,	White, Michael D.
Conger,	Hutbell,	Powers,	Williams, Andrew
Cox, Jacob D.	Humphrey,	Price,	Williams, C. G.
Crapo,	Hungerford,	Pugh,	Williams, Richard
Culbertson,	Hunter,	Randolph,	Willits,
Cummings,	James,	Reed,	Wren,
Danford,	Jones, John S.	Rice, William W.
Davis, Horace	Jorgensen,	Robbins,

NOT VOTING—36.

Acklen,	Bland,	Freeman,	Knott,
Atkins,	Bright,	Garfield,	Lapham,
Baker, William H.	Butler,	Gause,	Lynde,
Banks,	Cain,	Gunter,	Mills,
Bayne,	Clymer,	Joyce,	Monroe,
Becke,	Durham,	Kelley,	Peddie,

Potter,
Rainey,
Riddle,

Sampson,
Saylor,
Singleton,

Smith, A. Herr
Stephens,
Thornburgh,

Walsh,
Willis, Benj. A.
Young, Casey.

Mr. SPRINGER's motion was agreed to.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. DEAN. In my pair with my colleague, General BANKS, all questions relating to this matter were especially reserved.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I am paired on all political questions with my colleague, Mr. BEEBE. If he were present I would vote "no."

Mr. DENISON. My colleague, Mr. JOYCE, is absent on account of sickness in his family.

On motion of Mr. CUTLER, the reading of the names was dispensed with.

PENSION BILLS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires, on behalf of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. RICE], chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to ask for an evening session on Saturday next, at half past seven o'clock, for the purpose of considering pension bills. It has been the practice of the present occupant of the chair to give every possible consideration at the end of the session to pension bills, and also for bills for the removal of political disabilities. He suggests, therefore, that there be an evening session, if there be no objection.

Mr. MCKENZIE. I object.

Mr. HALE. Let the gentleman from Ohio change the evening session from Saturday to Friday, which is private-bill day.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will again put the question to the House. Is there objection to an evening session to-morrow, which is private-bill day, to consider, first, House pension bills with Senate amendments now upon the Speaker's table; second, Senate pension bills; and, third, political-disabilities bills from every source?

Mr. HALE. That is for Friday, which is private-bill day.

The SPEAKER. That is the motion.

Mr. HALE. That will not interfere with the public business at all. Mr. BLOUNT. I shall certainly object if it interferes with the public business.

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. It will not interfere with the public business at all. This evening session is provided for to-morrow evening, Friday, which is private-bill day.

The SPEAKER. The Chair asks the attention of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MCKENZIE] to the pending proposition. Is there objection to an evening session to-morrow at half past seven o'clock for the consideration, first, of House pension bills with Senate amendments now upon the Speaker's table, (the reason of that is, it only requires the concurrence of the House in Senate amendments to secure the passage of these bills.) Second, Senate pension bills; and, third, political disabilities from every source, whether originally introduced or otherwise?

Mr. PRICE. Will that interfere with considering the Private Calendar as objection day?

The SPEAKER. Not during the morning.

Mr. PRICE. Or during the day?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that objection is withdrawn, and it is ordered accordingly.

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. I want to make some reports from my Committee on Pensions.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has to suggest to the gentleman from Ohio, chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, that the Senate committee have determined not to sit during the remainder of this session, and it would be useless to pass any more House bills. There is no use to pass House pension bills if they are not to be considered in the Senate, and it will only interfere with a great many bills on the Speaker's table with Senate amendments where a single vote secures the passage of the bill.

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. I withdraw my request.

The SPEAKER. There were ninety pension bills, or thereabouts, passed by the Senate yesterday. The Chair considers it his duty to advise the whole House so those bills shall not fail.

Mr. HALE. The discussion of the committee ought to settle that. They ought not to push any new bills.

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. I have withdrawn the suggestion I made.

Mr. FORT. I have had a House bill on the Calendar for over a year, a meritorious bill, and it ought to be considered, but it has never yet been reached on the Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Suppose that bill passed and the Senate refused to consider it?

Mr. FORT. But they would consider it under the circumstances.

The SPEAKER. Then the Chair will put in a further clause for reports from the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Mr. DURHAM. I object to that.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection to the proposition, and it is ordered accordingly.

Mr. HALE moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MARY E. PAULEY.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I wish unanimous consent as I will not be here to-morrow evening, being called away from the city, to report at this time from the Committee on Invalid Pensions two Senate bills in order that they may be put on their passage. I ask it as a personal favor.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. HALE. Are they general pension bills?

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. No; they are individual pension bills.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands they are pension bills in individual cases, and the gentleman from Alabama asks permission to report them now by reason of the fact that he is called home.

There was no objection.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably a bill (S. No. 852) granting a pension to Mary E. Pauley.

The bill, which was read, authorizes and directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary E. Pauley, widow of James Pauley, late private in ——— Regiment, New York State Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is under obligation to the gentleman from North Carolina, [Mr. VANCE,] chairman of the Committee on Patents, and to the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. RICE,] who has in his charge from the Committee on the Pacific Railroads a report on the Northern Pacific Railroad, to ask unanimous consent that they be allowed to report to-morrow morning on those subjects.

Mr. WHITE, of Pennsylvania. I object.

Mr. VANCE. I will make the motion that the Committee on Patents be authorized to report on Saturday morning after the reading of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. Objection has been made. The Chair will hereafter give the gentleman from North Carolina an opportunity to make his request and secure his right by a two-third vote.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I now ask unanimous consent to report from the Committee on Invalid Pensions the bill (S. No. 526) granting a pension to James McDonald.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to make the point of order that any gentleman has the right to move now to suspend the rules, unless the House is now acting under a suspension of the rules.

The SPEAKER. The House is now acting under a suspension of the rules, and the Chair has secured action by unanimous consent on the various matters which have been disposed of. The Chair cannot now recognize a motion to suspend the rules while the House is acting under a suspension of the rules, because one motion to suspend the rules cannot be piled upon another.

Mr. CONGER. Yes; but we are acting on a question of privilege, and I claim that it is the right of the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. RICE,] or any other gentleman whom the Chair will recognize, to move a suspension of the rules.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] as on the floor.

Mr. CONGER. It is very important we should know whether a motion to suspend the rules would take the gentleman off the floor.

The SPEAKER. Not during the consideration of a privileged question.

Mr. CONGER. Does the Chair decide that the motion to suspend the rules does not stop a privileged question?

The SPEAKER. The Chair decides this: the House has agreed to consider a question of the highest privilege, and the House having done so, the Chair cannot recognize another gentleman for a motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. HALE. I presume the Chair would not decide that at the end of the hour of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] a motion to suspend the rules would not be in order.

The SPEAKER. The House is now acting under a motion to suspend the rules; and whenever this question of privilege is disposed of, the Chair is bound, under an order made by a suspension of the rules, to recognize the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. BURCHARD.]

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BURCHARD] having the right to move a suspension of the rules, can he not make that motion as against any question of privilege?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BURCHARD] is already on the floor under a suspension of the rules, and the Chair could not recognize him if he wanted to make that motion; because it is not competent to put one motion to suspend the rules on the top of another.

Mr. CONGER. I do not understand that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] has this question of privilege before the House under a suspension of the rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] rose in his place to a question of privilege. The Chair recognized the gentleman from Maine in the only way he could recognize him to raise the question of consideration. The House voted to consider the question and therefore it is now before the House.

Mr. HALE. I suppose after the hour of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] has expired the House can change that order and go to something else.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now move the previous question.

Mr. HALE. Does the gentleman propose to cut off debate?

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to limit debate to one hour. I recognize the fact that the House has a great deal of business to do and time is short. I will move the previous question, and after it is seconded I will claim the hour the committee has and will give half of it to the other side.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I ask the action of the House on the bill (S. No. 526) which has been read at the Clerk's desk. It will only occupy one moment.

Mr. SPRINGER. I cannot yield the floor.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I merely want to submit it to a vote of the House. The bill was reported adversely, but from information I have received since making the report, I think it ought to pass.

Mr. SPRINGER. I have not given way for any bill to be put upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood that the House gave its consent.

Mr. SPRINGER. I have been standing here all the time and have given consent to nothing.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be laid over for the present.

GEORGE F. SEWARD.

The result of the vote on the question of considering the report from the Committee on Expenditures in the State Department was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. CONGER. I move to reconsider the vote by which the House determined to consider the motion of the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. SPRINGER,] and upon that I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not give way for any motion at all. I have the floor now by order of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] did not vote with the prevailing side on the question of consideration. Mr. CONGER. How is the Chair informed of that?

The SPEAKER. By the roll-call. There was a yea and nay vote.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman cannot move to reconsider because he voted on the wrong side. I now move the previous question. I shall take the hour after the previous question is seconded.

The question was taken upon seconding the previous question; and on a division there were—ayes 99, noes 83.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The yeas and nays are not allowable upon seconding the demand for the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. Then I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. SPRINGER and Mr. CONGER were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 113, noes 77.

So the previous question was seconded and the main question ordered.

Mr. SPRINGER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. SPRINGER. The question involved in this order is, whether an officer of the Government can be required by a subpoena duces tecum issued in due form to produce the records of the Government kept by such officer and which show the official transactions of business in the offices of the Government.

The Committee on Expenditures in the State Department have recommended the passage of an order requiring the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring to the bar of the House George F. Seward, that he may show cause why he should not be punished for contempt.

The contempt which is alleged by the majority of the committee is, that he has refused, after having been summoned before the committee to be sworn as a witness—he has refused to take a qualified oath as to where certain books may be found that were alleged to be in his custody; he has refused to take the general oath as to any matter submitted to the inquiry of the committee by a resolution of the House, and has refused to answer questions propounded to him as to whether he would produce the public records which he removed from the consulate at Shanghai to Peking when he was appointed minister plenipotentiary to China.

He has refused to obey the order of the committee requiring him to produce official records for the inspection of the committee, which records, it is proven, were unlawfully removed by him from the consulate-general at Shanghai.

The books or records called for by the subpoena duces tecum, which Mr. Seward has refused to obey, have not been seen by the committee; but it is clearly proven that an exactly similar set of books were kept by Mr. Myers, his successor in office. We had before us as witness to that fact Mr. B. R. Lewis, who was a clerk in the consular office from 1863 to 1871, and made all the original entries in the book called the blotter.

We have the testimony of Mr. G. Wiley Wells, who was a member of the Forty-fourth Congress, and was afterward appointed consul-general to Shanghai, as to the nature and contents of the missing books.

The books which Mr. Myers kept, as the successor of Mr. Seward, were before the committee, and are now on the desk before me. They were brought to Washington and deposited among the archives of the State Department at the request of the committee. The State Department evidently regards these books as public records, from the fact that they are not permitted to be taken out of the custody of an officer of the Department.

The books properly belong to the consulate at Shanghai, and will be returned to that consulate as soon as the investigation into the official conduct of Mr. Seward is concluded. These books [pointing to those lying on the desk before him] are precisely similar to the missing books, and consist of the blotter, called by merchants a day-book, and a journal, a cash-book, and a ledger. The subpoena duces tecum calls for the production of similar books, and which show all the money transactions of this office from 1863 to 1871. The evidence shows that there were six blotters, and two each of the journals, cash-books, and ledgers, which were kept at the consulate from 1863 to 1871, which are not now to be found in the consulate or at the State Department, and which we have called for by a subpoena duces tecum.

The minority of the committee have reported that the missing books are the private writings of Mr. Seward. The basis of that claim is this, that the consular regulations require certain books to be kept other than those ordinarily kept in banks and business houses, such, for instance, as an invoice-book, a free-book, a passport-book, a ship's daily journal, and several others; but there is nothing stated as to whether the books specially required by the regulations are to supersede the necessity of keeping such books as merchants always keep, namely, a blotter, a journal, a cash-book, and a ledger.

But it is in evidence that the "ship's daily journal," a book required by the regulations to be kept, was not kept at the consulate, and that the entries which the regulations required should be kept in that book are only to be found in the missing blotters.

The minority of the committee say in their report that the books called for by the subpoena duces tecum are the private writings of Mr. Seward. I will open one of these books at random and see what entries will be found.

I find, under date of Monday, January 15, 1877, a statement of the arrival of a ship, of the tonnage dues, and the report to customs, and various items on that subject. Turning over the leaves, I find the receipt of invoice fees from merchants and the amount received from each merchant; that is in the blotter or day-book. In the journal, turning to any place where the book will open, I find an entry of the daily receipts of the office, as merchants enter such transactions in their books. In the cash-book I find the accounts of the consular officer, of the interpreter, of the consular clerk, of the United States marshal of the consular court, which accounts are to be found nowhere else except in these books.

The books which I have here are the books which were kept by the successor of Mr. Seward, and all the evidence is that they are exactly similar to the books kept during Mr. Seward's time. If the missing books are the private writings of Mr. Seward, then these books are the private writings of Mr. Myers; and if these are the private writings of Mr. Myers, then every entry in the missing books concerning the business of that office from 1863 to 1871 is the private writings of the consul and not the public records of the Government.

It is also in evidence that the missing books called for by the subpoena duces tecum were purchased by the Government of the United States and paid for out of the Treasury of the United States. Vouchers were forwarded to the State Department and then laid before your committee showing that a set of books was purchased in 1868, at the time when, according to the testimony given, a new set of books was procured. These books, therefore, were purchased by the Government; every entry made in them was made by clerks in the employ of the Government.

The ground for the claim of Mr. Seward that these are private books is that they were not by name required to be kept at the consulate, and also that he caused to be entered in the same ledger and other books his own household expenses. For instance, there was a cash clerk in the consulate, and any bill against Mr. Seward which came in, after he approved it, was sent to the clerk, who paid it, and the receipt was entered in as cash and charged up against Mr. Seward's salary.

If it is alleged that the books in question are the private books of Mr. Seward for these reasons, then consuls and other officers of the Government may call any original entries of public business their private writings, and may copy from them just such entries as they may see fit to return to the Government, and close the original entries against any examination by the Representatives of the people.

The question now presented is this: Have the Representatives of the people, has this House, which under the Constitution has the sole power to impeach an officer, the right to examine the records of the Government when the conduct of an officer is under investigation? That is the only question involved. The decision of this House on the pending order will form an important precedent. Are office-holders above the law or subject to it? Are the servants of the people to be permitted to defy with impunity the law-making and money-voting power?

If by our action on this question we decide that a public officer may close his books or spirit them away when the Representatives of the people come to examine them, then the members of this House can never discharge their constitutional duties. This House alone under the Constitution has the power of impeachment. Can a judge of a court who holds a life office close the records of his court against any investigation by this House and thereby defy the exercise of that power committed to this House by the Constitution?

If the books in question were the private writings of Mr. Seward, this issue never would have arisen here. It is not pretended that the business matter recorded in these books is Mr. Seward's business. It is not denied that all of the transactions which were entered in these books were entered by Government clerks and kept in the public offices—books purchased by and with the money of the Government; books that were there for the sole purpose of facilitating the transaction of the public business during business hours. It is the testimony of the witnesses, Mr. Wells, Mr. Myers, and others, that these were records of the public business during the time Mr. Seward was consul-general.

I will not consume further time at present, but I will yield half of the hour to which I am entitled to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from New York, [Mr. BUNDY] to be disposed of in such way as he may see fit.

Mr. BUNDY. Mr. Speaker, I had the honor to present the report on the part of the minority touching the question briefly discussed by my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. SPRINGER.] During at least one hundred sessions wherein I had the pleasure and pride to sit with my friend, remembering as I do his extreme courtesy, extended not only to the members of the committee and to witnesses but also to the party accused, Mr. Seward, as well as to the counsel who were employed, I am pained to be forced to-day to disagree with him as to the facts adduced before that committee.

He has discussed this question—a most important one before this House regarding the party charged and proceeded against—as if he were a witness and a witness alone. Is he a witness? Does my friend forget that provision of the fifth article of the Constitution which provides that no person shall be required to give testimony in a criminal case tending to criminate himself? It becomes, then, important for us to consider whether Mr. Seward is proceeded against here as a witness or as a party charged.

More than one year ago, when this committee was called upon to sit and consider the charges brought against Mr. Seward, it was then and there agreed that the prosecution should formulate the charges upon which they proposed to rely in establishing what was alleged, crimes and misdemeanors, against Mr. George F. Seward, late consul-general at Shanghai.

Upon the eleventh and twelfth pages of the evidence taken before this committee will be found these charges, numbered from one to thirteen, which are formulated by the skill of no less a personage than M. H. Carpenter, Senator-elect; and I take it upon me to say that they are formulated with the precision appropriate to the drawing of an indictment for crime. Early in the sessions of this committee, when the question arose as to the form of proceeding, I suggested that there was no better rule to govern the committee in that respect than the rules pertaining to courts of criminal jurisdiction. In that suggestion Mr. Carpenter, the counsel for the prosecution, cordially acquiesced; and I may say that during the entire sittings of the committee the proceeding has been treated as one against a party charged with crime.

It may be alleged that an act of Congress adopted years ago provides that when any person gives evidence before a committee of investigation such evidence shall not be used to convict him in any criminal proceeding. But it will not be forgotten that this act of Congress has respect to a witness, not a party. During the entire sittings of the committee the admissibility of proposed evidence in respect to its materiality has been considered under the same forms and rules that would prevail upon a trial before a court of oyer and terminer. Now, I ask whether this is not a case coming under the provisions of that amendment of the Constitution which provides that in a criminal case no person shall be required to give evidence tending even to criminate himself?

It may be urged that the books sought to be produced may tend to enlighten the committee concerning its general duties. It is a committee charged with investigating expenditures in the State Department; but my friend from Illinois will not question the assertion that during the one hundred sessions of the committee no question has ever been reduced to writing, no evidence has ever been raised to the dignity of being competent, unless it touched these criminal charges against Minister Seward; and it is evident that the sole purpose of the production of these papers is to test the question whether George F. Seward was guilty of any one of the charges thus formulated in the same manner as charges are proceeded with in a criminal indictment.

Mr. HOUSE. Does Mr. Seward refuse to produce these books on the ground that the production will criminate himself?

Mr. BUNDY. I will answer the gentleman. It was alleged before the committee by counsel, after the evidence of witnesses whose names my friend from Illinois has mentioned, that these books did contain entries of moneys received by Mr. Seward belonging to the Government, and which had not been returned. It was claimed on the part of Mr. Seward before the committee that these books contained in the main private entries—mere memoranda of receipts of money which were either personal or unofficial fees. I will say right here (and I thank my friend for calling my attention indirectly to it) that it is claimed on the part of Mr. Seward and through his counsel that these books alleged to be missing, and which are not produced, do not contain an item belonging to the Government that has not been returned. It is in evidence by witnesses from the Treasury Department that at the end of every quarter the accounts of Mr. Seward have been rendered and settled in full. These books, it is admitted, contain entries made from day to day as upon a memorandum, as if made in his own private diary; but it is claimed that every dollar and every cent belonging to the Government was transferred either on the day of its receipt or at an early day thereafter to books that Mr. Seward has returned.

Now, this subpoena has been issued to this man not as a witness but as a party, commanding him to produce books alleged to be conclusive of his guilt. Mr. Seward does not allow himself to be convicted by the production of books which are alleged to contain evidence against himself. He stands upon his reserved constitutional rights. Now, I ask gentlemen who urge that this man shall be compelled to produce evidence, as they allege, tending to his own conviction, not only before this committee but conviction possibly at the other end of this Capitol upon articles of impeachment which it is proposed to present, where is their boasted advocacy of personal liberty and constitutional rights? I am proud to stand here in vindication of the principles of personal liberty as secured by the Constitution. While it is alleged on behalf of the prosecution that these books contain entries which will condemn Mr. Seward, the committee have received from the State Department evidence that every dollar passing into his hands that belonged to the Government has been returned and accounted for; that his accounts have been settled regularly every quarter.

Mr. ITTNER. I desire to inquire whether Mr. Seward has returned to the proper authorities a set of books said to be kept by him and which were public?

Mr. BUNDY. I answer the gentleman that, according to my recollection of the evidence produced before the committee, every book prescribed by the rules and regulations of the Department has been returned to the Department.

Mr. RYAN. I would like to inquire whether it is admitted by the minority of the committee that the books in controversy are public records belonging to the Government?

Mr. BUNDY. The evidence seems to be that the books which it is claimed should be produced by Mr. Seward are books called blotters, cash-books, journals, and ledgers, and that they were furnished to him by the Department. And I suppose, Mr. Speaker, that the Department furnished Mr. Seward his envelopes and his stationery, but I ask, is the committee going to require Mr. Seward to return every envelope and sheet of paper that he may have used in his own private and public correspondence. They were perquisites to his office, as we claim.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the question comes up whether under the fifth article of the amendment to the Constitution Mr. Seward as a party, not as a witness, shall be compelled by the subpoena of a committee appointed by this House to produce books not acknowledged by him to be evidence, but alleged on the part of the prosecution to contain evidence to convict him. And if it shall appear to this House that the case has not been brought within the right, the presumptive right even, of this House to require George F. Seward to appear at the bar of the House to show cause, is it not better that the matter be disposed of here and now rather than we should subject ourselves to the delay that must necessarily be required for his reply to show cause; that is to say, what I hold to be distinct and plain, that his is not a case coming within the Constitution and its provisions and amendments.

Mr. FRYE. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. BUNDY. Yes, sir.

Mr. FRYE. I understand the gentleman to make a distinction between these books as to whether they contain transactions of the Government of the United States or memoranda of Mr. Seward relating to his own personal matters. Now, what I wish to ask is this: Does the gentleman mean to be understood as admitting, if the books contained transactions touching the Government service, and at the same time those transactions might criminate the party, that he is then compelled to produce them on a subpoena duces tecum?

Mr. BUNDY. On the contrary, I claim that he is not bound to produce them.

Mr. FRYE. So I understood the gentleman; and it was for that reason I put the question to him that he might not be misunderstood by the House.

Mr. BUNDY. I desire to state, lest I should be misunderstood, that it is claimed on the part of Mr. Seward and his counsel that there is no entry of a fee on the alleged missing books which, as he claims and insists, belongs to the Government but has been returned to the Government upon books furnished by the Government and through accounts rendered by him which have been audited and adjusted by the Department.

Mr. SPRINGER. Allow me to state that that is just the question at issue. All the evidence goes to show that he has not returned all the fees which he should have returned, and we want these books to show it.

Mr. BUNDY. The gentleman says it is in evidence those books should show those things. I say it is claimed by Mr. Seward, and the evidence which we gain through the auditing of the accounts would show, that all the fees he received belonging to the Government have been accounted for to the Government, and his accounts thereon have been duly adjusted.

Mr. SPRINGER. That is claimed by him, but he would not be sworn. He is setting up his claim against the evidence in the case.

Mr. BUNDY. My friend from Illinois says he would not be sworn. We have been in session fourteen months, and but a day or two ago the committee adopted a resolution that without the evidence of George F. Seward in the production of these books the committee could not decide the question submitted to them. Now, if after fourteen months we, as a committee, have been unable to discover proofs of guilt of George F. Seward, with the whole power of the people at our command to bring from Shanghai witness after witness, some of them with remarkably sore heads, it is true—if we cannot prove anything against George F. Seward, how does it become us to ask him to come here to convict himself?

I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. BUTLER.]

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to state this case to the House as it stands in my mind. Proceedings were instituted against Mr. Seward as consul-general, alleging malfeasance in office; proceedings by a committee of this House looking to his impeachment. The House was then acting as a grand inquest of the nation. Mr. Seward then becomes a party to a proceeding in which he was charged with crime in a criminal case, and he can be before that committee in no way save as a party. No grand jury ever yet summoned an alleged criminal before them under our forms of law and put questions to him or required production of papers without his consent. And herein is contained the great distinction between the common law of England, which is our boast, and the civil law of the Continent. The civil law is inquisitorial, requires an accused to answer to his whole life, and in the olden time applied torture to enforce the confession.

Magna Charta abolished torture in England by these immortal words: Nemo se ipsum accusare debet—no one ought to be compelled to give testimony against himself; for if you can apply the torture of imprisonment to make an accused disclose what you desire him to disclose, why not apply the rack? Torture becomes only a question of discretion. This constitutional provision is all that stands between us and the rack, and it is the importance of maintaining here and now this great bulwark of personal liberty and personal right against a government which may become tyrannical and is growing in centralization rightly or wrongly in interference generally with the rights of the citizen, that causes many of us to doubt the future of our country as a free republic, that I speak at this hour.

Now, then, Mr. Seward being months before the committee as a defendant, is called upon by a subpoena duces tecum to produce certain books. Now, if these books be his private property, there can be no doubt in the mind of any lawyer that we have no power to require him to produce them; if they are public books, they are not then his books; they are books belonging to the State Department, and are only in his custody as a subordinate officer of that Department. In such case the subpoena should go to the head of that Department, as was decided by Chief-Justice Marshall to be proper in the case of Aaron Burr when the court sent a subpoena for the letters of Wilkinson, then in the State Department, to the President of the United States, requiring him to bring in that paper as belonging to the archives of the State.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to say one word, if the gentleman will allow me. It has not been the custom of our committee to send to the Department of State subpoenas when we desire papers, but we always send letters to the Secretary asking him to furnish us with books. We sent a letter to the Secretary asking him to furnish us with books, and he replied that he did not have them in his possession. They were not in the custody of the State Department.

Mr. BUTLER. Pardon me. I agree that it was settled as a matter of compromise, when the subpoena was ordered against President Thomas Jefferson that he might send the letter of Wilkinson to his attorney, but the power was decided by Chief-Justice Marshall to issue a subpoena duces tecum. I do not care whether the State Department have those books in question in the possession of the Department here or not, but if he will not produce them, then the Secretary of State is more in contempt than Mr. Seward, because the power of the Secretary of State extends over our legations and consulates of United States in China just as much as it does over books and documents in the stone building wherein the Secretary sits to-day.

Wherever the American flag flies there is American soil, and there the Chief Executive of the nation has custody over any one of his subordinates, and of all the books and papers of the legation or consulate.

Mr. WADDELL. I desire to have the opinion of the gentleman from Massachusetts upon this question. If Mr. Seward kept his private accounts in public books, would that protect him from a demand on him for those public books?

Mr. BUTLER. If you proceed against him qua his private entries, then the Constitution is his shield. If you proceed against him qua public records, then he is not the custodian of the books, being a subordinate, and the subpoena should not go to him. You cannot bring a clerk from the State Department here and require him to furnish books belonging to that Department.

Mr. WADDELL. In that case if he had public books in which he had made private entries could he not be called upon to produce them?

Mr. BUTLER. He must produce such books to his superiors. He cannot keep them from his superiors by putting private entries in them. Suppose my clerk makes private entries on my books and says I will not give you up your books because I have private entries in them, it is for me to deal with him on that matter. You cannot summon my clerk to bring my books; you must summon me to bring my own books.

My clerk may well say no, sir; you must summon General BUTLER if you want his letter-books, and so I say if you want the letter-books belonging to the State Department, summon Mr. Evarts, and make him use his power over Mr. Seward to return the public record books to him and hold Mr. Evarts in contempt as I would vote to hold any executive officer who would not produce any public books or records. The fact is that the committee mistake its remedy in regard to these books.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to say that the Secretary of State has called on Mr. Seward to produce these books, and he has failed to do so. We find in the report of the committee, on page 2, the following:

MAY 1, 1878.

STAHLE, Vice-Consul-General, Shanghai.

Inform Seward that subcommittee, on motion of his counsel, consent to reasonable time for his appearance here. Leave granted, and he is required to bring all books, vouchers, and papers relating to the business of consul-general at Shanghai during his incumbency of that office, including any that may have been taken to Peking. Telegraph answer.

Sent May 2.

EVARTS.

Mr. BUTLER. I hope this will not be taken out of my time. Let me reply now to all that the gentleman has said, that if Mr. Seward will not produce books that are public books to his superior, and if his superior will not turn him out of office for it, I will vote for the impeachment of that superior; but you need not impeach Mr. Seward. Let us begin at the beginning.

Just think of it. What would I do to my clerk when I told him to produce my books for my use or to produce my books before a committee of this House and he would not do it? How long do you suppose he would continue my clerk? And so Mr. Evarts would do or anybody else.

The difficulty is that if your subpoena had gone to Mr. Evarts and he has returned that the books in his custody are not public books and he could not produce them, then you would run against the other constitutional right that they were the private books of Mr. Seward, and you have no right to them. But if Mr. Evarts returned that they were public books, public property, then we would have had them here if we had to bring with them the whole of the stone building in which they were.

I am one of those who stand up for the privileges of the House. I have always done so and I always will. I will not have any ministerial officer put himself in opposition to our will. But having a giant's power, we must use it as a giant, with justice and according to honor and law. It is much more for the necessities of this Government, in my judgment, that this great principle of the Constitution should be maintained than that you should punish forty consuls and thirty secretaries of state. Take a man of your size, Mr. Speaker; take Mr. Secretary. [Laughter.] Do not take Seward because he does not produce public records over which he has no control or his private writings, which are sacred by the Constitution.

If there has been any wrong it is there, if these are public books; and if they are private books, then the chairman will not claim that private books can be produced upon a subpoena duces tecum against a man being examined without his consent before a grand jury. There is no power on earth that can do that, and there ought to be none. There used to be the power of the rack and of the thumb-screw; but, thank God, that power went out when Magna Charta came in, and never will be brought back into a republic.

Mr. BUNDY. I now yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. BAYNE,] a member of the committee. I would inquire how much time I have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore, (Mr. CARLISLE.) The gentleman from New York [Mr. BUNDY] has five minutes yet remaining.

Mr. BUNDY. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] is entitled to twenty minutes yet; and I desire that ten minutes may be allowed my colleague on the committee from Pennsylvania.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois consumed eleven minutes, and he has nineteen minutes of his half hour remaining.

Mr. BUNDY. I ask that ten minutes may be allowed to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I move to reconsider the vote by which the time for debate was fixed, in order that it may be extended for half an hour on each side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. BUNDY] yield for that motion?

Mr. BUNDY. I will ask the House to consent that the time be extended for ten minutes on each side. That would leave me then fifteen minutes, ten of which I will yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. BAYNE.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to that arrangement?

There was no objection, and the time was extended accordingly.

Mr. BAYNE. Mr. Speaker, this matter assumes wholly the shape of a legal question; and the question presented is whether or not Mr. Seward can be required to testify before a committee of this House in a case where he is a party charged with indictable and impeachable offenses. Early in the investigation of this subject certain charges were formulated by the counsel who were prosecuting the case on behalf of Mr. Myers, who appeared as the prosecutor. Those charges numbered some thirteen or fourteen, and each one of the series of charges embraces a crime or a misdemeanor. During the progress of the investigation, from its inception down to its recent conclusion, the evidence was admitted by the committee with regard to its relevancy or irrelevancy to these charges. The view entertained by the committee from the beginning to the end was that the result of the inquiry would be a determination on the part of the committee whether Mr. Seward should be impeached or whether he should not be impeached. The whole inquiry has been whether or not Mr. Seward has been guilty of such crimes and misdemeanors as would make him liable to impeachment.

While this very investigation was going on, while the prosecutor was represented by counsel, and while Mr. Seward himself was represented by counsel, the committee issued a subpoena duces tecum requiring Mr. Seward to appear before it and produce certain books. Whether those books were public documents or not, I do not know and I do not care. They may be the archives of the Government, or they may not be, so far as this aspect of my argument is concerned, for I contend that under the fifth article of amendments to the Constitution, whether they be the archives of the Government or not, Mr. Seward being charged before a committee of this House with crimes and misdemeanors in an investigation looking to his impeachment, he cannot be required to produce those books before such committee.

It appears, however, and I say this more to disarm those who are attempting to commit as I think a flagrant violation of the Constitution than for any other purpose, that these books are not archives of the Government, and are not archives for this reason: all the books that were required to be kept by the regulations, and which were nominated in the regulations prescribed by the Department of State, have been produced, so far as such books have been kept.

It has been decided that where books are named in the law they become public, and form a part of the archives of the Department or are open to public inspection, if need be, but that where books are not nominated in the law, they retain the character of private property, although they may contain information which would be useful to the public.

In Pennsylvania it has been decided by the supreme court of Pennsylvania that the docket of a magistrate or a justice of the peace is a public book, because the statute requires that he should keep such a book. In the State of New York it has been decided that the docket of a magistrate is not a public book, because the statute does not require him to keep such a book. This is the position taken in this case in behalf of Mr. Seward by his counsel; and I think it is a well-founded distinction. The books required by the regulations of the Department to be kept have been produced; the books which he retains are not such books as are prescribed by the regulations; and therefore, in no event, in no contingency is he bound to produce them before this committee.

Another question was raised—whether or not this was a criminal case, whether Mr. Seward stands charged with crime or misdemeanor in such away as to bring him within the exemption or guarantee provided in the fifth article of the amendments to the Constitution. It has been decided by the supreme court of the State of Alabama (and I can only refer to the decisions, not read them) that a proceeding for impeachment upon the ground of crimes and misdemeanors is a criminal case; and no judicial authority worthy the respect and confidence of this House has ever affirmed that an impeachment is not a criminal case. Gentlemen on the other side have not been able to produce a single such authority. The language of the Constitution which provides for impeachment and fixes the penalty plainly treats the proceeding as criminal; and the authorities, so far as the question has been decided, have affirmed clearly that a proceeding of this nature is a criminal case.

We have, then, this position of affairs: George F. Seward is arraigned before this investigating committee on certain specifications which look to his impeachment. He is summoned by a subpoena duces tecum and a subpoena ad testificandum to appear before that committee and produce certain books. He refuses to produce them. He refuses to be sworn—to take either a qualified oath or a general oath. Under these circumstances the proposition of the majority of the committee is to bring him to the bar of the House with the view of having the House commit him for contempt of its authority in not appearing before the committee and testifying in a matter which might or might not criminate himself.

There was another question raised: whether an investigating committee of a legislative body exercises its functions in the same manner as a court or a grand jury. It has been decided in a Massachusetts case (the case of Emery, 107 Massachusetts Reports) that a joint committee of the two houses of the Massachusetts Legislature could not require a witness to produce any kind of evidence that would have a tendency to criminate himself, although there was a statute of Massachusetts exempting witnesses from the effect of any evidence that they might give before an investigating committee, and although in that investigation there was no specific charge against this man as an individual, the inquiry being a general one as to whether or not certain men in Massachusetts had violated the law of the State, this person, when summoned before the committee, claimed the benefit of the exemption, and it was allowed because his examination as a witness might result in his crimination. Thus it appears that the same principles of law, the same rules of evidence which appertain to a strictly juridical proceeding, the same rights which are guaranteed under the fifth article of the amendments of the Constitution to a person accused of crime, apply in the case of one who is on examination by a committee of this House with a view to impeachment.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BUNDY. I now yield four minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. Speaker, I cannot properly discuss in the short time allotted me this question, which is one of transcendent importance. At the outset we must not forget that this House in deciding this question must, as much as a jury in every such case, give to the defendant or accused the benefit of every reasonable doubt. This rule has been held to apply in all cases coming before the courts. A judge upon the bench, wherever the case is conceded to be a criminal case, must in every instance give the benefit of every reasonable doubt to the accused. Even where questions of fraud have been raised in transactions between man and man in civil cases, it has been held that judges in their rulings are required to give the benefit of every reasonable doubt to the defendant.

I understand that the points raised here are these: in the first place it is maintained in the majority report that this is not a criminal case; secondly, the majority allege that the legal and constitutional objection raised in the minority report is a question which only arises as a matter of practice under the common law; and, thirdly, the majority cite a single case, decided by Judge Noah Davis, of New York, where in a civil action arising upon a writ of mandamus he compelled the clerk of the county court of New York County to produce certain books.

As I read the Constitution, this must be a criminal case. The Constitution says to us the trial of crimes, excepting in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury. This is an examination made temporarily for the purpose of founding the right this House would have to bring to the bar the defendant and put him on trial under impeachment. The high court of impeachment is as much the creature of the common law as any court of criminal jurisdiction. The only point we differ about to-day is this: this body is supreme in its power, and the reason it is supreme is a strong one why we should use our power leniently. And we should not forget in ruling on this question that the benefit of all reasonable doubts should be given to the defendant. What is a reasonable doubt? If there be in the mind of any member a doubt as to whether these books are public or private, that doubt should be ruled in favor of the defendant.

But time will not permit me to go into the question. It must stand on this principle. A criminal charge being preferred against the defendant, the order is now asked for his arrest before any order has been served upon him to show cause why he should not be arrested for contempt. In any civil or criminal cause a proceeding to bring the party before the court should not take place until order has been issued to show cause why he should not be arrested for contempt.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BUNDY. How much time have I left?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. One minute.

Mr. BUNDY. I will yield that to the general benefit of the House. But I now give notice that at the close of this debate, in consideration of the fact which seems to be established that there is underlying and pervading this entire question a very important question of law, I shall move to refer the whole question to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SPRINGER. That motion will not be in order, as the previous question is seconded and the main question ordered. I yield now for ten minutes to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. MAYHAM.]

Mr. MAYHAM. Mr. Speaker, this committee, before whom Mr. Seward has been summoned by the order of this House to produce books, is a committee organized under the rules of this House to investigate the expenditures of the State Department of the United States. In the performance of that duty the committee are invested with ample authority, and it is made their duty to thoroughly investigate that Department of the Government. It is true that this House did refer to that committee charges that had been made against George F. Seward and O. B. Bradford for conduct unbecoming their official positions as consul-general and vice-consul of the United States at Shanghai, China. The committee, in the discharge of those general duties, and particularly in the investigation of the charges that had been specifically made against this officer, proceeded to investigate them. In doing so they were clothed with authority to send for persons and papers, and that authority was not only conferred by the House, but it is backed up by the statutes of the United States. And for the information of every gentleman upon this floor who may not have read the statutes under which these proceedings were instituted and the statutes under which this subpoena duces tecum was issued, I ask the Clerk to read what I have marked.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Revised Statutes provide as follows:

"Sec. 102. Every person who, having been summoned as a witness by the authority of either House of Congress, to give testimony or to produce papers upon any matter under inquiry before either House, or any committee of either House of Congress, wilfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any question pertinent to the question under inquiry, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 nor less than $100 and imprisonment in a common jail for not less than one month nor more than twelve months.

"Sec. 103. No witness is privileged to refuse to testify to any fact or to produce any paper, respecting which he shall be examined by either House of Congress, or by any committee of either House, upon the ground that his testimony to such fact or his production of such paper may tend to disgrace him or otherwise render him infamous.

"Sec. 104. Whenever a witness summoned as mentioned in section 102 fails to testify, and the facts are reported to either House, the President of the Senate or the Speaker of the House, as the case may be, shall certify the fact under the seal of the Senate or House to the district attorney for the District of Columbia, whose duty it shall be to bring the matter before the grand jury for their action."

Section 559 of the Revised Statutes is as follows:

"No testimony given by a witness before either House, or before any committee of either House of Congress, shall be used as evidence in any criminal proceeding against him in any court, except in a prosecution for perjury committed in giving such testimony. But an official paper or record produced by him is not within the said privilege."

Mr. MAYHAM. Mr. Speaker, the provisions which have been read provide that in a case where a witness may be subpoenaed to testify and he shall not be permitted to claim his privilege, even then that provision of law is not unconstitutional. It only relates to the common-law privilege, to which the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BUTLER] referred, which exonerates any man from giving testimony to be used against him or where it will tend to convict him of crime. At common law he had the right to claim his privilege, but by the statutes that privilege is taken away; but compensation is given for the privilege which is taken away by providing that when the witness is compelled to testify, his testimony shall not be used against him in any criminal proceeding which may be instituted against him. Therefore the common law right to stand upon his privilege, if this witness had gone far enough to have availed himself of it, cannot apply to a witness called to testify before committees of the Congress of the United States. The case in 107 Massachusetts referred to by the gentleman from New York, the case in 34 New York, the case in 10 Page New York Reports, and a variety of cases, hold that where the statute gives immunity against the effect of the testimony the witness cannot under those circumstances claim his privilege.

Mr. BUNDY. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. MAYHAM. I have not the time.

If that be so, then Mr. Seward was bound to testify. And at all events, in any aspect of this case, he was bound to produce the books which by process of the House he was required to produce, unless those books were private books belonging to him as an individual. I have not time to discuss that point. My colleague on the committee has discussed it and has made profit of and read from the books, showing that they were books of record belonging to the Government.

Now, there is another objection made by the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. BUNDY] and all other gentlemen on that side, that the fifth article of amendments to the Constitution gives immunity to this man against his being called as a witness. I ask attention to the language of that article:

No person * * * shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself.

Now what is a "criminal case" in the purview of that constitutional prohibition or privilege? Webster defines a "case" to be a suit at law, an action prosecuted by one party and defended by another before a court or tribunal of law. That term, however, has had judicial determination. The term "case," as used in the Constitution, has been judicially determined in 9 Wheaton's Reports, 319, and 9 Peters Reports, 224. In those cases it was held—I will not undertake to read the decision, for I have not time—that a "case" within the meaning of the Constitution was an action either prosecuted by the people, as the prosecuting party, or by individuals against some individual in the Government. It was held that that was the fair interpretation of the word "case" in the Constitution.

There is another reason why that must be the interpretation. If this were a criminal case would anybody pretend that before a committee of Congress a man who has immunity under the Constitution of the United States and has a right to be tried by a jury of his peers, selected according to the forms of law, shall be arraigned and tried before a committee of this House in a criminal case? The Constitution defines that. It provides that no man shall be tried without indictment, nor shall he be tried except with the opportunity of confronting the witnesses against him and the jurors who are to be his peers. Is this a case, then, within that definition? It seems to me not. To hold that a committee of Congress is a court, or that proceedings before it is a criminal case, would be to invest such committee with the attributes of a court and to subject a party to a criminal trial without the constitutional right of trial by jury, and at the same time to subject him to two criminal trials, one by Congress and one in the courts, in violation of the Constitution. The Constitution provides that impeachment shall be no bar to indictment and punishment for some crime for which he is impeached.

Again, Mr. Speaker, to hold that an executive officer charged with the receipt and disbursement of public money, and required to keep accounts of the same, may by closing his books or suppressing them from a committee of Congress put it out of the power of a co-ordinate branch of the Government, would be to prevent all investigation into the acts of the officers of the Government. The bare mention of such a proposition is simply startling.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. DEAN.]

Mr. DEAN. Mr. Speaker, I think that if I can have the attention of the House I shall have no difficulty in satisfying the House that so far as the production of the books is concerned Mr. Seward is in contempt. With regard to the question of his testifying, notwithstanding the authorities that an investigation of this kind does not amount to a "case," as far as this hearing is concerned and the argument upon this question is concerned, I am entirely willing to agree with the other side. I claim the contempt to be in the non-production of the books, claiming the books to be public books, that is, books belonging to the United States Government. The only real objection to this that has been urged, as it seems to me, having any considerable merit in it, was the one urged by my colleague, [Mr. BUTLER,] that objection being that Mr. Seward was not the custodian of these books. I think, however, that a glance at the facts will show that he is the custodian of the books; at any rate so far the custodian of the books as to be a proper subject for the service of a subpoena duces tecum.

In the first place, ten months ago, on the 1st of May last, this committee asked the Secretary of State that Mr. Seward might have liberty to come here to testify. That was granted at the request of his counsel, and it was granted on condition that he should bring the books which he had taken from the consulate to Peking when he went to Peking as minister. Thereupon the Secretary of State telegraphed to him that he had liberty to come, but it was on condition that he should bring those books. He came, and he did not take the books to the State Department. He retained possession of them. We applied to the State Department and the State Department delivered up the books that were retained there, but could not give these because Mr. Seward had not delivered them.

Now, then, they were asked for, and he was permitted to come on condition that he should bring those books to this committee; so that, as far as that is concerned, there is the authority of the Government that Mr. Seward shall bring them here. Mr. Seward has got the actual possession of them, and the question is whether he is liable to produce them on a subpoena duces tecum.

I submit, therefore, so far as the objection of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BUTLER] is concerned, the answer is perfect: that Mr. Seward is the man and the only man on whom this subpoena can be served. The Government does not object and this objection was never raised.

We are here met by two considerations. On the one hand Mr. Seward thrusts in our faces the Constitution of the United States and he says no man can be compelled to be, in a criminal case, a witness against himself. On the other hand it is said, "Here are the Government books; cannot we have the Government books?"

In discharging the duties devolving upon the committee by the rules of the House as to expenditures of the consulate-general at Shanghai, China, as to whether they are justified by law, properly vouched; whether they have been paid out of the proper appropriations, and what legislation is necessary, &c., the committee was called upon to encounter with reference thereto certain charges of embezzlement and irregularities alleged to have been committed by George F. Seward, the present minister to China. There are also charges against O. B. Bradford, who held various offices at the consulate-general, of a like character.

In prosecuting this investigation the committee encountered one great difficulty, namely, the absence of the books of original entry kept at the consulate. Certain of the books required to be kept are produced from the State Department; but it being alleged and there being some evidence to show that the books produced and the accounts returned to the State Department do not show the actual condition of affairs at the consulate, said books not being otherwise to be got at, because they had been taken by Mr. Seward from the consulate and still retained by him, it is impossible for the committee to discharge its duties under the rules without the books of original entry thus taken away by him. A subpoena duces tecum was accordingly served upon him to compel the production of the books. He declines to produce the books, though ordered to do so by the committee. He gives as a reason for this refusal that the Constitution of the United States, article 5 of the amendments, provides that no person "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

He says, first, the proceeding is a criminal case; second, that he is subpoenaed to be a witness; and that, third, the testimony he is called upon to give is to be against himself.

He says, it is true the committee has general duties to perform, and if it sees fit to make general findings it can make them. It is also true that the committee has to investigate and pass upon charges against another person, O. B. Bradford. But he also says charges have been formulated against himself; that those charges have become the principal matter for investigation; that he is summoned with reference to them more particularly, and that therefore he cannot be even subpoenaed to testify; that the subpoena duces tecum is necessarily void in its origin, and he declines to obey it, either that part of it which requires the production of the books, or that part of it which requires him to testify. He simply appears before the committee and declines to further obey it.

On the other hand, it is claimed that the books of original entry kept at the consulate being decided to be books of the consulate—the property of the United States—there can be no possible excuse for their non-production. It is claimed that if there is no way of compelling their production for the purposes of the investigation, all manner of frauds may be committed. It is claimed that if this be the case, Government agents everywhere may embezzle the Government funds for years, and to escape with their ill-gotten plunder they have only to commit another crime—steal the books and defy pursuit, shielded by the Constitution of their country.

On the one hand the Constitution is held up as the great shield of the American citizen, and we are beseeched with great eloquence and earnestness to preserve inviolate that great palladium of the liberties of the subject. On the other we are told that the books are our own—the Government's; that we are entitled to them; that they are not Mr. Seward's for any purpose, and that the retention of what belongs to the Government and not to him on any pretense is an absurdity and a mockery.

Is it true that this strange conflict exists? Must we fail to get the books of the United States, to which Mr. Seward has no title? Must we abandon them and the right to them forever, or must we abandon and discard that beneficent provision of our Constitution "that no person shall be compelled in a criminal case to be a witness against himself." It is certain that we are in no such dilemma. Its absurdity is manifest upon its face. Nevertheless we have had very able and eloquent arguments on both sides of this question, made by as able lawyers as there are in the land, stimulated by the magnitude of the crisis, for since the trial of Warren Hastings there has been no such trial as this. But there is not time or profit in any talk upon this subject except such as has a direct and immediate effect upon the issues. It is claimed that the subpoena duces tecum is void, because Mr. Seward is subpoenaed in a criminal case to be a witness against himself. But this is certainly not on the face of the subpoena. Nor are the duties of the committee limited to the trial of the charges against Mr. Seward. The testimony of Mr. Seward might have been given against O. B. Bradford, and it would certainly be of value in passing upon the various questions submitted by the rules of the House.

Even the affidavit upon which the counsel for Mr. Seward rely for the foundation of their objection calls for the books under Rule 103. Without these books the accounts and expenditures cannot be examined and the committee cannot report as required. The affidavit also charges that O. B. Bradford received while vice-consul-general large sums of money belonging to the Government for which he failed to account.

Besides, there is no doubt that Mr. Seward, where the law permits parties defendant to be witnesses, might be subpoenaed as a witness in a criminal case in which he is a party defendant, provided he is not called to testify against himself. Suppose the law to provide that in cases where the Government calls a defendant as a witness against his codefendant, the defendant thus called shall thereafter be discharged and never again prosecuted for the same offense. He might certainly be subpoenaed and compelled to testify upon all the authorities, for he would not be testifying against himself. This provision of the Constitution, or the same provision when found in State constitutions, has been held not confined to being witnesses in criminal cases in which they were parties defendant.

The words "no person shall be compelled in a criminal case to be a witness against himself" have been held to mean that no person shall be compelled to give testimony that can be used in a criminal case against himself. It makes no difference in what kind of a case it may be sought for—whether in an action on a promissory note, an action of replevin, or a suit in equity—nowhere under any circumstances can a person be compelled to give evidence that may be used against him in a criminal case.

If such evidence can be so used, then it is given in a criminal case, and it is given against himself in a criminal case, because, though actually delivered and sealed in a civil case, it may be immediately proved in a criminal case to have been given. It may be carried from one case to the other, and is, therefore, treated for the benefit of the subject as given in a criminal case.

I remember a case where a man and woman lived together as husband and wife for a length of time. After a while, however, the husband became infatuated with another woman. He left his wife, and insisted that they had never been married. He persisted in this to such an extent that the two were indicted for lewd and lascivious cohabitation. He at first liked the idea, as he thought it would rid himself of the first woman, but when the trial came on he was glad enough to claim that they were married. The woman by a plea in abatement obtained a separate trial, and though the defense of each was that they were married, the jury which tried the man decided that they were not married and convicted him, and the other jury on the other side of the court-room, the jury which tried the woman, decided that they were married, and acquitted her.

Now, suppose they were indicted together, as they were indicted together in one indictment, would the Constitution forbid the issue of a subpoena duces tecum to the husband to compel him to produce the marriage certificate in his possession? And yet he would be a party defendant and a witness also in a criminal case. But he would still fail to come within the constitutional provision, for he would not be a witness against himself—he would be a witness in favor of himself and of his wife, and if he had persisted in the desire to be convicted he could have been compelled to answer, because a witness for himself.

The subpoena duces tecum was therefore rightfully issued. It was a lawful writ and Mr. Seward obeyed it—recognized it so far as to present himself before the committee at the appointed time. But the object of the writ was to obtain the books for the purposes of the hearing. The committee has found, as a fact, that the books belong to the United States, that they are official public records of the United States. The committee has also determined that the books contain all the original entries of all the business at the consulate, and that the investigation cannot be made complete without their production. The committee has also found that he has the books in his possession. Can they be obtained in any way whatever?

The counsel for the defendant says you may be entitled to the books; if you want them replevy them. But if the attempt is made to replevy the books, would not the answer be, "No, you want to make me produce evidence against myself—it is an inquisitorial proceeding. I must have judgment for a return, or resist the execution of the writ by some proceeding." Then would not the reply to this be, "No, they are the Government's books, and the Government has a right to them whether they criminate you or not?"

The counsel for Mr. Seward says, "If you want the books, get a mandamus from some court." Well, they admit that we might get them by mandamus though they do criminate.

The court in the recent New York case has also so decided. They are the books of the Government, and the Government is entitled to them whatever the result as to Mr. Seward or anybody or everybody else. To hold contrary to this would be absurd and lead to untold consequences.

If the books were private books and such as he would be entitled to hold on to and keep secret except when commanded to produce them for the purposes of justice, then the question whether he must produce them depends upon the question whether or not they will criminate him. In such a case he would not, in my judgment, be compelled to produce the books.

What is a subpoena duces tecum? It is a replevin writ for the purposes of the trial. It seeks possession of books for the purposes of justice. What is a subpoena duces tecum? It is a mandamus to produce the books for the purposes of a hearing. When the duces tecum is served, if the books and papers belong to the person required to produce them he need not do so if they will tend to criminate him. Why not? Because they are his own property; because he is entitled to the possession of them against the whole world; and because when he is asked to produce his own private papers to be used as evidence in favor of some party he replies, "No, for they may be used in evidence against me." He says, "My right is that my own property shall not be used against me, simply to do a favor to another."

But with regard to our own books—for we represent the Government and are entitled to the possession and use of this Government property—we command their production, we issue our command, our mandamus, in the duces tecum, to the person who has our books, and say bring our books to us, we want to see how you have managed our business. Now when we issue our command to him he says "Replevy them; go to a court for a mandamus; be decent about your commands; don't come at me so abruptly; I won't reply, because it is a duces tecum." The reply is this is our writ, as compulsory in its character and mandatory in its function as any replevin writ or mandamus known to the law. But they reply, "You ask him to come as a witness—as a witness in a criminal case—to testify, to testify against himself." To that we say we do nothing of the kind. We ask him to produce the books; we do not ask him to testify at all so far as the production of the books is concerned.

A subpoena duces tecum has two functions. One is a mandamus to produce the books, which is completely independent of the other, namely, to testify. This has been settled over and over again in this country and in England.

Before, however, considering the authorities which decide the peculiar province of the duces tecum clause in the subpoena I desire to call attention to the attempt of the learned counsel for Mr. Seward to show that the books are private books. He has cited two cases, which prove nothing of the kind.

The books were Government property. The books contained the Government business. I will not argue the question whether making entries of private business in Government books changes the title from the Government to that of the person who makes the entry. All the public records in the world might be made private by such means.

I call attention to this to show that the learned counsel themselves are aware of the fact that if they are Government books they can be reached by duces tecum. If he has private papers which tend to criminate him, and if the case is technically a criminal case, he cannot be made to produce them to be used in evidence against him either by mandamus or any process whatever; and so far as those papers are concerned, the same principles would govern as would apply to his testimony under oath. On the other hand, if the House is entitled to the papers by any process, can they be obtained by the duces tecum? They can if the duces tecum is absolutely or substantially a suit or command different from and independent of the testificandum clause. If it can be enforced without making him a witness under oath, then the duces tecum is nothing but a command—a mandamus to produce the books. It is a mandamus necessary for the purposes of the trial. Without such a writ justice could not be administered, for it cannot wait for the issue of separate proceedings to obtain them, and many times there is no right to them except for the purposes of evidence. Let us look at the law as to the distinction between a subpoena duces tecum and a subpoena ad testificandum. It will not be claimed that the putting of the two together in one suit changes the force and effect of the commands.

But for the authorities. I will now ask the clerk to read from that great book of the law of evidence the Beecher-Tilton trial.

The Clerk read as follows:

MRS. WOODHULL APPEARS WITH SOME LETTERS.

The court met at eleven o'clock, pursuant to adjournment. Shortly after the opening of court, Mr. Evans addressed the judge as follows:

If your honor please, I am expecting some papers in court in regard to which I may have to ask Mr. Tilton a question or two.

Judge NEILSON. Yes; you may do so when they arrive.

Mr. EVARTS. We would prefer not to have another witness put on the stand as I expect to bring them into court in a moment.

After the lapse of several moments, Mrs. Victoria C. Woodhull appeared in court.

Mr. SHEARMAN. If your honor please, we have subpoenaed Mrs. Victoria C. Woodhull to produce certain letters for the purpose of cross-examination of the plaintiff in this case. Mrs. Woodhull is in attendance, but declines to produce any letters without being instructed by the court that it is her duty to do so.

Mr. FULLERTON. Well, the court will not so instruct her, as a matter of course, because it is not her duty to produce them.

Judge NEILSON. No; you may recall Mr. Tilton afterward if you wish.

Mr. EVARTS. Well, we understand, if your honor please, that it is the right of the party under the process of subpoena duces tecum to bring letters into court, and that it is no part of that process that the witness having possession of the letters should be sworn as a witness.

Judge NEILSON. No; you can have the letters without; but yet I do not feel like giving any direction to her.

Mr. EVARTS. And that the right of the party is that a witness, as may be supposed in many cases, having no other interest or feeling in the matter except that it should not be a voluntary production of the papers, should have the direction of the court to produce them.

Now our subpoena is, as I understand, to produce certain letters.

Our subpoena, [to Mr. Shearman,] have you the subpoena?

Judge NEILSON. The party who has subpoenaed a witness duces tecum ought to get the papers or the witness bring them into court, whether the witness is sworn or not. But under all the circumstances I do not feel like giving that direction.

Mr. FULLERTON. I do not think that is the rule, if your honor please.

Judge NEILSON. What?

Mr. FULLERTON. I think that is not the rule, with all due respect.

Judge NEILSON. A rule that we have applied in this court very frequently.

Mr. FULLERTON. Well, sir, I have never seen it applied myself.

I think the practice generally has been, and so far as my experience goes universally, to put the witness upon the stand and have the papers produced under oath, and I think that is the only way that your honor gets the power to compel the production of the papers.

Judge NEILSON. The witness is not compelled to produce the papers.

Mr. FULLERTON. No, sir; if they want the papers they must produce the witness and put her on the stand and have her sworn, and have them produced under oath.

Judge NEILSON. Well, I could not give any direction to the witness about it at present.

Mr. EVARTS. Well, we understand the law, if your honor please, to be as your honor has stated it, that it is not necessary that any other process than the subpoena duces tecum should be applied for, and the possession of papers does not make a person a witness in the cause. Then the question is whether the subpoena is a proper exercise of the authority of the court, whether it is a proper exercise of the process of the court; that is, whether the papers sought for are properly papers which can come in evidence?

Now the subpoena is, [reading:] "All correspondence between Theodore Tilton and yourself; all books, papers, and documents in any way relating to any matter of difference between the said Tilton and the said Beecher."

Judge NEILSON. Well, the subpoena compels the witness to attend and bring the papers.

Mr. EVARTS. Yes, sir.

Judge NEILSON. That is the authority which the court exercises in reference to the subpoena.

Mr. FULLERTON. She is subpoenaed here as a witness.

Judge NEILSON. Oh, no.

Mr. FULLERTON. Not as an expressman. [Reading.]

"We command you that, all excuses and business being laid aside, you appear and attend before the city court, &c., to testify and give evidence in a certain action now pending and undetermined in the said court between the parties"—

Naming them.

She is subpoenaed to appear as a witness, and as a witness I suppose she is here.

Judge NEILSON. I cannot give any direction about it, gentlemen.

Mr. EVARTS. Now, if your honor please, my friend is quite right in saying that it is in the form of a subpoena duces tecum.

This is a common-law process by which the papers are brought into court, and the rule is familiar, as I think. I suppose your honor has had occasion often to practice it, as from your intimation it would appear that you had.

Taylor on Evidence says, at section 1286:

"And here it is clear that if the witness be called under a subpoena duces tecum, merely for the purpose of producing a document, which either requires no proof, or is to be identified by another witness, * * * he need not be sworn, and if unsworn he cannot be cross-examined."

"So if the witness be sworn under a mistake"—

Though that is not important.

In the case of Perry against Gibson, 1 Adolphus & Ellis, before the King's Bench, [reading:]

"On the trial of this case before Alderson, judge of the last assizes of Cumberland, a person was called upon under a subpoena duces tecum to produce a book belonging to certain trustees appointed under an act of Parliament, which was in his custody as their clerk, and produced the book, but plaintiff's counsel by whom he was called, having no other question to put to him, being prepared with other evidence to identify the book, did not propose to have him sworn."

Counsel for defendant insisted that this should be done in order that they might have an opportunity to cross-examine.

The learned judge refused to have the party sworn, and an application was made for a new trial on the ground of this being error in law.

Lord Denman, Chief Justice, says:

It is best not to disturb the question, which has been fully considered and decided.

BELL, Judge. I am of the same opinion; I always thought that the subpoena duces tecum had two distinct objects, and that one might be enforced without the other.

Judge NEILSON. Well, if the witness has obeyed the writ, has attended in court and brought the papers, that satisfies the writ.

I am quite aware that the witness need not be examined, and that it does not imply the right to cross-examine.

The only question is whether you could attach the witness for not delivering over the papers on your request, she being here.

Mr. FULLERTON. Your honor will perceive that there is a feature in this case entirely different from those which characterize the cases to which reference has been made.

The subpoena duces tecum does not describe any particular paper, so as to enable us to identify it by that description when it is produced.

There is an omnibus clause in it to produce all papers of a certain character, without specifying particularly any, and hence it does not bring this case within the rule as laid down in the elementary books, or within the rule as administered in those decisions, because in those cases a particular paper was described in a way so that it could be readily identified when it was produced.

I do not think any one ever heard before that a witness was compelled to come into court under a subpoena of this character, requiring them to produce all correspondence between A and B, and to hand them over at the will of the party sending the subpoena.

Judge NEILSON. You have no interest in this, Mr. Fullerton; you could not cross-examine the witness.

Mr. FULLERTON. How, sir?

Judge NEILSON. You have no interest in this; you could not cross-examine the witness.

Mr. FULLERTON. Unless she is put on the stand I could not, certainly; but if they put her on the stand, and she produces these papers and swears it is the correspondence between herself and the plaintiff in this case, then, if your honor please, I will have.

Judge NEILSON. You would have a right to cross-examine her on that subject.

Mr. FULLERTON. Yes, sir.

Judge NEILSON. But they may identify the papers by another witness.

Mr. FULLERTON. But the question is whether she is compelled to come here and hand over these papers under the general clause of the subpoena duces tecum.

Mr. EVARTS. How is that a question with which the plaintiff has anything to do?

Mr. FULLERTON. Well, I suppose the plaintiff has got something to do with almost anything that takes place during this trial.

We mean to have a hand in, at all events, on all proper occasions.

Mr. EVARTS. Well, on all proper occasions.

Mr. FULLERTON. Yes, sir; I think that is competent.

Mr. EVARTS. But the process of the court, as the King's Bench have very properly pointed out, and as your honor is familiar with the practice in this court as well as in other courts in the State, the rule is that the process brings papers within the control of the court.

The witness, under this process of the court, is in court with the papers in her possession. Now, it may be a question for a witness whether he or she has reasons for not wishing to produce letters or papers.

But that is not a question for the opposite parties, not in the least.

What we are now discussing is whether under this subpoena, we asking the witness for these letters of Mr. Tilton's, your honor will direct them to be produced.

If she receives the direction of the court to produce the letters, if that is the right of the party under a subpoena duces tecum, why then she is placed in the position of obeying the law. The question of swearing or not swearing has nothing to do with that question, nothing whatever.

Judge NEILSON. I do not feel like giving any direction at this stage of the case.

Mr. EVARTS. In the case of Sowers against Mosely, (4 Tyrwhitt, 168.) it is said, [reading:]

"There must have existed a common-law right in the Crown for the purposes of justice to compel by subpoena the attendance of every person cognizant of the subject-matter of the suit, and also to produce any document bearing on that matter though in the possession of a stranger to the suit. Such a stranger is only called to produce a paper as and for the required document, not to identify it, which would be done by extrinsic evidence."

In numberless cases as the party producing a paper is wholly ignorant of every circumstance of the case, it would be absurd to swear him as a witness.

When a party called on his subpoena duces tecum to produce the document required disobeys the writ by not producing it, I have no doubt that he is liable to attachment. Whether he could be required to be sworn, or to give general testimony in the cause, but to make true answers as to the custody of the document only, is another question.

We think that he has no right to require the party who calls him to have him sworn in that way, which would make him a witness in the case for all purposes, for he might be a mere stranger to the document though having the custody of it.

The witness in this case was properly called on to produce the warrant, and that production was properly enforced without swearing him.

Mr. DEAN. The two cases cited are the law of England and this country to-day. In an earlier case, in 1808, in 9 East, 473, Aunry vs. Long, which was an action for damages against a person subpoenaed duces tecum to produce a certain paper, for not obeying the writ, whereby the plaintiff lost his action, Lord Ellenborough delivered the opinion of the court that the writ was a compulsory writ, and that such a writ must always have existed as necessary to the administration of justice. The motion for a rule was overruled and judgment against the defendant stood. (4 Car. & Payne, 335.) It was decided that papers brought into court on a subpoena duces tecum may be put in evidence without swearing the witness.

In Martin vs. Williams, 18 Alabama, 190:

Where a witness is summoned as well to testify as to bring papers into court, the party at whose instance the subpoena issues may require the production of the papers without introducing the witness generally.

In 1 McMullan, South Carolina, 147:

A witness under a subpoena duces tecum is not required to testify, but merely to bring into court a paper which the party needs.

The ground of appeal was because his honor ruled that Mr. Jacob Cohen, a witness summoned with a subpoena duces tecum in behalf of the plaintiffs, should be compelled to produce the papers called for by the subpoena, without being sworn as a witness, although such papers were used to the prejudice of his rights.

In 3 Brevard, South Carolina; Treasurer vs. Moore; debt on sheriff's bond:

The party has a right to require that a witness served with a subpoena duces tecum should make a return to the subpoena before the cause is opened, otherwise he might have to submit to a nonsuit or verdict, if he commenced and the books were not produced.

In 37 New Hampshire, 134:

A witness subpoenaed duces tecum.—a witness will be ordered to produce papers if it appears from evidence alunde that he has the papers.

The statutes of the United States, sections 102, 103, and 104, were passed with a knowledge of the common law and only affirm the common law. They provide that a person may be summoned for two things: first, "as a witness by the authority of either House of Congress to give testimony;" and, second, "to produce papers." It has been argued that in either case he is called a witness. I think not, but that he is called a person. But I do not think that material. Calling a person a witness does not make him a witness. The person is not a witness till sworn, and the papers are to be produced though the person is never sworn.

Again, this law was in mind when section 859 was framed:

No testimony given by a witness before either House or before any committee of either House of Congress shall be used in evidence in any criminal proceeding, except in a prosecution for perjury committed in giving such testimony. But an official paper or record produced by him is not within said privilege.

Nothing could be clearer than that Congress in enacting these provisions had in mind the distinction, the real and true distinction, between public records which a party is obliged to produce in answer to a subpoena duces tecum whether they tend to criminate him or not, and the giving of testimony when sworn as a witness, and which he cannot be compelled to give against himself.

Now, I would give full force and effect to the fifth article of amendments to the Constitution. I would abate not one jot or tittle of its force or power. I would not require him to be sworn to testify to one word in this case. I would treat it as a criminal case, for upon such testimony articles of impeachment might be founded and he arrested to answer them. It is true there are other matters inquired of by the committee; but no matter for that. Mr. Seward's conduct is certainly before the committee. When he refuses to testify he must, by his refusal or standing mute, be held to refuse upon the only ground upon which his refusal can be based, namely, the tendency of this evidence to criminate himself. I signed the report that all the questions raised might be presented to the House. That I considered my duty, in order that the House should be possessed of the whole case. I did it with the distinct statement that I based the contumacy upon the non-production of the public records. It is true that the investigation of the committee may not technically be a criminal case, but I think it is sufficiently so to bring it within the meaning of the Constitution. It is the process of manufacturing a criminal case, and no man should be required by his testimony to aid in that manufacture. But be that as it may, if I am wrong in that conclusion I certainly am not wrong in the conclusion that Mr. Seward has no right to detain from the committee the books of the Government, whatever their effect upon him. I do not think he can be compelled to take the qualified oath regarding the custody of the books, for the taking of the books is itself a crime, and he cannot be compelled to convict himself of that crime. (Revised Statutes, section 5403 and section 5408.) The latter section reads as follows:

Every officer, having the custody of any record, document, paper, or proceeding specified in section 5403, who fraudulently takes away, or withdraws, or destroys any such record, document, paper, or proceeding filed in his office or deposited with him or in his custody, shall pay a fine of not more than $2,000 or suffer imprisonment at hard labor not more than three years or both; and shall, moreover, forfeit his office and be forever afterward disqualified from holding any office under the Government of the United States.

Now, what is this case? George F. Seward, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to the great nation of China, during a period of some twelve years kept a system of books in which were entered all the business of the consulate at China. These were the only books of original entry kept at the consulate. From these, at his leisure, entries were made upon other books, which were open to the Government he represented. It is alleged that the latter books were partial and fraudulent, containing not the full and true account of his stewardship. He took from the consulate to his residence as minister these books of original entry. He was notified by his Government to produce them ten months ago. He still has them, and declines to produce them. Is there any member of this House who says he shall not produce them?

Mr. SPRINGER. I shall occupy but a few moments of the time of the House, I shall then yield the residue of my time to the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. HOOKER.]

Mr. Speaker, it has been stated by the gentleman from New York, [Mr. BUNDY,] who is a member of the committee, that every account which Mr. Seward has rendered to the Government is on file at the State Department. I grant that that is true; but what the committee wants are the accounts that have not been sent to the Department. We want to know from the original entries what fees have been received by him and appropriated as his private property which in the judgment of the committee belong to the Government. He kept two sets of books. In the one he kept all the original entries; and in the other he kept what he chose to account for, and sent an abstract to the Government. He says in effect to the committee, "You cannot see the original entries, but go to the Treasury Department and you will find what amount of fees it has pleased me to return to the Government. It is my business how much I have kept back."

Mr. HAZELTON. How do you know he kept two sets of accounts?

Mr. SPRINGER. The evidence shows it, and Mr. Seward does not deny it. I cannot point to the page of the testimony, nor have I time to read it.

Mr. BUNDY. Can the gentleman refer to one such page?

Mr. SPRINGER. Here is the testimony; the gentleman can find the page and read it at his leisure.

I call the attention of members to the books which I have caused to be placed on the reporters' table. If any member of this House will look into them and say that they do not relate to the public business, I will move to lay this order upon the table and take no further steps in the matter. Mr. Seward withholds two sets of books similar to these books which Mr. Myers, his successor, kept.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. BUNDY] asks where is the boasted advocacy of and respect for constitutional rights on this side of the House if you compel a public officer to criminate himself? We only ask him to produce his books. Not his books even, but the books of the Government. Shall we say to our public officers you may go on and appropriate the fees and moneys of the Government to any amount and then lock up your books and refuse to produce them to the representatives of the people, and claim a constitutional privilege so to do?

If the Constitution of our country is the shield of fraud, speculation, and embezzlement of Government funds, the sooner we make a new constitution the better it will be for the country. I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. HOOKER.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has five minutes of his time remaining.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I desire to ask a question of the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. SPRINGER] if he will allow me.

Mr. SPRINGER. I have not the floor; I have yielded it.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of New York. I want to know if these are the same books that were spirited away up in Michigan some time last season? [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. No; those books were produced and are in court. We want Seward's books produced also. Will you let us have them?

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. RAINEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

An act (H. R. No. 247) to grant a pension to George D. Phillips, a soldier of the war of 1812;

An act (H. R. No. 697) restoring the name of Benjamin Hollingsworth to the pension-roll;

An act (H. R. No. 1144) for the relief of Ann Annis, widow of Harvey Annis, late second lieutenant Company G, Fifty-first Regiment United States Colored Infantry;

An act (H. R. No. 1243) for the relief of Josephine C. Owen, postmaster at Randolph, New York;

An act (H. R. No. 1278) donating condemned cannon and cannonballs to Ledyard Monument Association, of Ledyard, Connecticut, for monumental purposes;

An act (H. R. No. 2394) for the relief of Leonard L. Lancaster, late sergeant Second Regiment Cavalry, Wisconsin Volunteers;

An act (H. R. No. 2961) for the relief of Jarvis Jackson, of Laurel County, Kentucky;

An act (H. R. No. 3575) granting an increase of pension to Josephine Da C. Thomas;

An act (H. R. No. 3598) granting a pension to Alice B. Munroe;

An act (H. R. No. 4002) donating a condemned cannon and cannonballs to Post No. 145, Grand Army of the Republic, District of Massachusetts;

An act (H. R. No. 4385) granting an increase of pension to Caroline Hawley;

An act (H. R. No. 4393) granting a pension to Mrs. Sidney A. Harrison;

An act (H. R. No. 4407) for the relief of Andrew Ivory; and

An act (H. R. No. 6159) granting a bounty-land warrant to Elisha Franklin, a survivor of the war of 1812.

Mr. SAMPSON, from the same committee, also reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

An act (H. R. No. 541) for the relief of William H. Carmen;

An act (H. R. No. 796) for the relief of Jenkins A. Fitzgerald, assistant surgeon United States Army;

An act (H. R. No. 1277) donating condemned cannon and cannonballs to the Colchester Monument Association, of Colchester, Connecticut, for monumental purposes;

An act (H. R. No. 1286) granting relief to John T. Neale, an employé of the Provost-Marshal General's Department in 1861, for injuries sustained in the line of his duties;

An act (H. R. No. 1304) granting a pension to Anna M. Clippinger;

An act (H. R. No. 3434) releasing title to a certain cemetery lot to the city of Montgomery, Alabama;

An act (H. R. No. 3558) for the relief of Second Lieutenant Thomas T. Knox, regimental quartermaster First Cavalry;

An act (H. R. No. 3553) for the relief of William F. Wheeler;

An act (H. R. No. 3871) donating condemned cannon to the city of Boston for monumental purposes;

An act (H. R. No. 4294) to increase the pension of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Roberts;

An act (H. R. No. 4392) for the relief of Lucinda C. Dillahenty, of Tennessee;

An act (H. R. No. 4795) granting a pension to Ann Cornelia Lanman; and

An act (H. R. No. 6272) donating condemned cannon to Bayard Post for purposes therein mentioned.

GEORGE F. SEWARD.

The House resumed the subject of the alleged recusant witness, George F. Seward.

Mr. HOOKER. I will premise what I have to say upon this subject by remarking that I am not on the committee who have this matter under investigation, nor do I know the person who is now the recusant witness before this House, declining to produce the public books which are alleged to be in his custody.

Like every other member of this House, I must feel an interest in this question, because of the reputable character of the gentleman who is arraigned before us as a recusant witness—a gentleman who has served as ambassador of the United States in a foreign country, where more than anywhere else the conduct of a public officer should be open to the inspection and investigation of his countrymen. But it is not merely the high character of the recusant witness in this case, it is a still higher consideration that prompts me to speak on this question—because the power and authority of this House in pursuing its investigations are set at defiance by this witness.

It was said by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BUTLER] that the law as it exists in this country—the common law as we derive it from England—is very different from the French law; that under the common law no man can be a witness in his own case, while under the French law the accused has the right to speak from the dock in his own vindication. It is true, sir, that under the common law as it prevails in this country a man accused of crime cannot be compelled to testify against himself. The French code gave to the accused the power, as our statutory law does in many of the States, to make a voluntary statement to exculpate himself.

But, sir, I desire the House to understand the precise point presented now for consideration and determination. What does the subpoena addressed to this recusant witness require? Does it require him to produce private papers, private memoranda? Not at all. That subpoena is in this language:

To JOHN G. THOMSON, Esq.,

Sergeant-at-Arms, or his special messenger:

You are hereby commanded to summon George F. Seward to be and appear before the Expenditures in State Department Committee of the House of Representatives of the United States, of which the Hon. WILLIAM M. SPRINGER is chairman; and that you also diligently search for, examine, and inquire after, and bring with you and produce, at the time and place aforesaid all blotters, rough books, and all cash-books, journals, or ledgers kept and used in the office of the consul-general at Shanghai during the time you were consul-general at Shanghai, China, in their chamber, in the city of Washington, on Saturday, the 11th day of January, 1879, at the hour of ten o'clock a. m., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee; and he is not to depart without leave of said committee.

Herein fail not and make return of this summons.

Witness my hand and the seal of the House of Representatives of the United States at the city of Washington this 10th day of January, 1879.

[L. S.]

SAM. J. RANDALL,
Speaker.

Attest:

GEO. M. ADAMS,
Clerk.

By authority of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States of America.

It will be observed that the witness is required to produce nothing except the public records of his office; and where before has it ever been maintained that a public officer, representing his country at a foreign court or serving his Government at home, can shelter himself behind his personal privilege when called upon to produce the public records of his office and say "I cannot produce them, because they may criminate myself?"

Mr. BUNDY. Does not the gentleman understand that it is claimed on the part of Mr. Seward that he has complied with the subpoena duces tecum so far as relates to all books claimed to be Government books, and that he withholds only those claimed to be private?

Mr. TURNER. That is a mistake. He has refused to answer whether he had public books in his hands or not. He has made no answer to the subpoena.

Mr. HOOKER. I think the remark of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TURNER] is a sufficient answer to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. BUNDY.] I was remarking that a public officer has no right to retain in his custody public books, records of the proceedings of his office, and shelter himself behind the pretense that their production may inculpate him. His full legal right in respect to not being compelled to criminate himself will, I have no doubt, be respected by the committee and the House. Whenever this witness is asked a question, and it appears that his answer, independently of the public records or books in his possession, would tend to criminate or inculcate him, I have no doubt that the chairman of the committee will at once say to him, "We recognize the great general principle of law by which you can refuse to answer." But when a public officer, whether serving abroad or at home, undertakes to refuse the production of public records in his custody, and thus shelter himself against investigation, I say it is a defiance of all law and all authority, and if successful would completely nullify the powers of this House in pursuing the investigations with which it is charged.

I incorporate as part of my remarks the act of 1867 in reference to this subject:

An act more effectually to enforce the attendance of witnesses on the summons of either House of Congress, and to compel them to discover testimony.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That any person summoned as a witness by the authority of either House of Congress to give testimony or to produce papers upon any matter before either House, or any committee of either House of Congress, who shall willfully make default, or who, appearing, shall refuse to answer any question pertinent to the matter of inquiry in consideration before the House or committee by which he shall be examined, shall, in addition to the pains and penalties now existing, be liable to indictment as and for a misdemeanor in any court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof, and on conviction shall pay a fine not exceeding $1,000 and not less than $100, and suffer imprisonment in the common jail not less than one month nor more than twelve months.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That no person examined and testifying before either House of Congress or any committee of either House shall be held to answer criminally in any court of justice, or subject to any penalty or forfeiture for any fact or act touching which he shall be required to testify before either House of Congress or any committee of either House as to which he shall have testified, whether before or after the date of this act, and that no statement made or paper produced by any witness before either House of Congress or before any committee of either House shall be competent testimony in any criminal proceeding against such witness in any court of justice; and no witness shall hereafter be allowed to refuse to testify to any fact or to produce any paper touching which he shall be examined by either House of Congress or any committee of either House for the reason that his testimony touching such fact or the production of such paper may tend to disgrace him or otherwise render him infamous: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to exempt any witness from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed by him in testifying as aforesaid.

The following is the amendatory act of 1862:

An act amending the provisions of the second section of the act of January 24, 1857, enforcing the attendance of witnesses before committees of either House of Congress.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of the second section of the act entitled "An act more effectually to enforce the attendance of witnesses on the summons of either House of Congress, and to compel them to discover testimony," approved January 24, 1857, be amended, altered, and repealed, so as to read as follows: That the testimony of a witness examined and testifying before either House of Congress, or any committee of either House of Congress, shall not be used as evidence in any criminal proceeding against such witness in any court of justice: Provided, however, That no official paper or record produced by such witness on such examination shall be held or taken to be included within the privilege of said evidence, so as to protect such witness from any criminal proceeding as aforesaid; and no witness shall hereafter be allowed to refuse to testify to any fact, or to produce any paper, touching which he shall be examined by either House of Congress or any committee of either House for the reason that his testimony touching such fact or the production of such paper may tend to disgrace him or otherwise render him infamous: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to exempt any witness from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed by him in testifying as aforesaid.

I also call attention to two paragraphs from Cushing's Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies:

950. Witnesses that have been taken into or are in custody for disobeying the order of the House for their attendance or for keeping out of the way or absconding are usually committed to Newgate, by way of punishment for their offense, from whence, while thus undergoing their punishment, they are brought in custody to the house, or before a committee, to give their evidence, whenever their testimony is wanted, the speaker's warrant being ordered to be issued for that purpose.

1011. When a witness refuses to answer the questions which he is directed to answer, or to produce a paper or other document, the proceeding against him is intended not only as a punishment for his contempt, but also to compel him to obey the order. For these purposes a contumacious witness is usually committed, in the first instance, to the custody of the sergeant-at-arms. If this fails to induce him to submit himself to the order, he may then be committed to Newgate or some other public prison. Instances have occurred in which the confinement of a witness has been accompanied with circumstances of severity, intended to bring him to submission; as, for example, in the year 1742, in the case of Nicholas Paxton, who for refusing to answer the questions put to him by the secret committee to inquire into the conduct of the Earl of Oxford was in the first instance committed to the custody of the sergeant-at-arms and debarred the use of paper, pen, and ink, and persisting in his refusal, was then committed a close prisoner to Newgate, the house at the same time ordering that he be not allowed pen, ink, or paper; that no person be permitted to have access to him without leave of the house; that his wife have leave to remain with him during the time of his confinement, but that she be not allowed pen, ink, or paper; and that no person have access to her without leave of the house. In this case the severity with which Paxton was treated proved ineffectual, and the house, finding it impossible to compel him, with some others, to answer, resorted to the expedient of passing a bill of indemnity; but this being rejected by the House of Lords, the inquiry was of course defeated. Other instances of the same kind occur in the journals. In the year 1809, on the occasion of the inquiry with reference to the conduct of the Duke of York, it being proposed to commit one of the witnesses (Mrs. Clarke) to the custody of the sergeant-at-arms with orders to deny her access to any person whatever, the speaker said: "The house ought to pause before they come to a decision upon a point in which the liberty of the subject was so materially concerned." There seems to be no reason to doubt that the house may put a contumacious witness into close confinement, and this in fact was all that was done in Paxton's and other cases of the same kind, accompanied with such restraints from communication with other persons as it may deem necessary to prevent the ends of public justice from being frustrated; but whether this right should be exercised or not in any given case is a question deserving of very grave and careful consideration.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore, (Mr. CARLISLE.) The time allowed for discussion has expired.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call for a vote.

Mr. BAYNE. I would like to ask a question—whether the chairman of the committee [Mr. SPRINGER] and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] recognize Andrew Jackson as good authority on this question.

Mr. SPRINGER. I do; and if the gentleman wants the views of Andrew Jackson I can give them.

Mr. BAYNE. I ask to have read at the Clerk's desk some expressions of Andrew Jackson pertinent to this subject.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Several MEMBERS objected.

Mr. BAYNE. Then I ask consent to print in the RECORD this extract with my remarks explanatory of it.

There was no objection and leave was granted.

The statement of Mr. BAYNE is as follows:

Mr. BAYNE. Andrew Jackson, in his message to Congress of 1836, having spoken in terms of the heads of Departments of executive government, the House of Representatives passed a resolution of a broad and sweeping character, directing an investigation to be made into the affairs of those Departments and the official conduct of the gentlemen to whom their management had been committed. In reply to a communication from Henry A. Wise, informing General Jackson that the committee was ready to proceed with the investigation, and requesting that the heads of Departments would appear before it, with their books and ledgers, to render an account of their official conduct, Jackson said:

You request myself and the heads of the Departments to become our own accusers, and to furnish the evidence to convict ourselves; and this call purports to be founded on the authority of that body in which alone, by the Constitution, the power of impeachment is invested.

The heads of Departments may answer such request as they please, provided they do not withhold their own time, or that of the officers under their direction, from the public business to the injury thereof; to that business I shall direct them to devote themselves in preference to any illegal and unconstitutional calls for information, no matter from what source it may come, or however anxious they may be to meet it.

For myself, I shall repel all such attempts as an invasion of the principles of justice as well as of the Constitution, and I shall esteem it my sacred duty to the people of the United States to resist them as I would the establishment of a Spanish inquisition.

Further on in the communication to which I have referred, Jackson, replying still more emphatically, says:

I hope, sir, we shall at least have your charges, and that you will proceed to investigate them, not like an inquisition, but in the accustomed mode. If you either will not make specific accusation, or if, when made, you attempt to establish them by making freemen their own accusers, you will not expect me to countenance your proceedings.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask to have printed in the RECORD a part of a message of Andrew Jackson, with my remarks explanatory thereof.

There was no objection, and leave was granted.

The statement of Mr. SPRINGER is as follows:

Mr. SPRINGER. In the case cited by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. BAYNE] wherein General Jackson refused to comply with a resolution of the House of Representatives in 1837, the committee undertook to require the heads of Departments to state what officers had been appointed in violation of law and were drawing salaries without warrants of law, and many other such questions which, if answered, would have made the heads of the Departments their own accusers. General Jackson said that they could not be required to be their own accusers; that they could not be compelled to answer how many times, if at all, they had violated the law; and he added significantly and very appropriately, so far as the facts in this case are concerned, the following language:

If after all the severe accusations contained in the various speeches of yourself and your associates you are unwilling of your own accord to bring specific charges, then I request your committee to call yourself and your associates, and every other member of Congress who has made the general charge of corruption, to testify before God and our country whether you or they know of any specific corruption or abuse of trust in the Executive Departments; and, if so, what it is. If you are able to point to any case where there is the slightest reason to suspect corruption or abuse of trust, no obstacle which I can remove shall be interposed to prevent the fullest scrutiny by all legal means. The offices of all the Departments will be opened to you and every proper facility furnished for this purpose.

In the case of Mr. Seward specific charges have been formulated; witnesses have been called to sustain them; and this brings the case within the statement of General Jackson, wherein he said that under such circumstances "the offices of all the Departments will be opened to you, and every proper facility furnished for this purpose."

Mr. BUNDY. In pursuance of the notice I have before given, I now move that this question be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That motion is not in order, the main question having been ordered.

Mr. BUNDY. I had hoped the gentleman from Illinois would yield to allow this motion to be entertained.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The proposed order reported by the majority of the committee will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the Speaker issue his warrant directing the Sergeant-at-Arms attending this House, or his deputy, commanding him to take into custody forthwith, wherever to be found, the body of George F. Seward, and him bring to the bar of the House, to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt, and in the mean time keep the said George F. Seward in his custody to abide the further order of the House.

Mr. BUNDY. The first vote is on the resolution reported by the minority of the committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Are those resolutions pending?

Mr. BUNDY. Yes, I moved them myself, and I understand they are pending as an amendment to the resolutions of the majority.

The SPEAKER. The resolutions will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the reasons given by Hon. George F. Seward, through his counsel, to the committee are legally sufficient to excuse his failure to produce the books described in the subpoena duces tecum, and his standing mute when tendered the oaths required by the resolutions of the committee, adopted by a majority of this committee, and his conduct in the premises are not contumacious, but are excusable by the Constitution and laws of the United States and the acts of Congress pertaining thereto.

Resolved, That the Speaker should not issue a warrant directing the Sergeant-at-Arms to take into custody the body of George F. Seward, to the end that he be brought to the bar of the House to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt.

Mr. BUNDY. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 119, nays 142, not voting 29; as follows:

YEAS—119.

Aldrich,	Davis, Horace	Keifer,	Rice, William W.
Bacon,	Deering,	Keightley,	Robinson, G. D.
Bagley,	Denison,	Kelley,	Robinson, M. S.
Bailey,	Dunnell,	Ketcham,	Ryan,
Baker, John H.	Eames,	Lathrop,	Sampson,
Ballou,	Ellsworth,	Lindsey,	Sapp,
Bayne,	Errett,	Loring,	Sexton,
Blair,	Evans, I. Newton	Lynde,	Shallenberger,
Boyd,	Evans, James L.	Majors,	Sinnickson,
Brentano,	Fort,	McCook,	Smalls,
Brewer,	Frye,	McKinley,	Smith, A. Herr
Briggs,	Gardner,	Mills,	Starr,
Browne,	Garfield,	Mitchell,	Stewart,
Bundy,	Hale,	Neal,	Stone, Joseph C.
Burchard,	Hanna,	Norcross,	Strait,
Burdick,	Harner,	Oliver,	Thompson,
Butler,	Harris, Benj. W.	O'Neill,	Tipton,
Cain,	Haskell,	Overton,	Townsend, Amos
Calkins,	Hayes,	Page,	Townsend, M. I.
Camp,	Hazelton,	Patterson, G. W.	Van Vorhes,
Campbell,	Hendee,	Peddle,	Wait,
Cannon,	Henderson,	Phillips,	Ward,
Clafin,	Hiscock,	Pollard,	Watson,
Clark, Rush	Hubbell,	Pound,	White, Harry
Cole,	Humphrey,	Powers,	White, Michael D.
Conger,	Hungerford,	Price,	Williams, Andrew
Crapo,	Hunter,	Pugh,	Williams, C. G.
Culbertson,	James,	Rainey,	Willis, Benjamin A.
Cummings,	Jones, John S.	Randolph,	Willits.
Danford,	Jorgensen,	Reed,

NAYS—142.

Aiken,	Dibrell,	Huntton,	Ross,
Atkins,	Dickey,	Itner,	Saylor,
Banning,	Durham,	Jones, Frank	Scales,
Beale,	Eden,	Jones, James T.	Shelley,
Bell,	Eickhoff,	Kenna,	Singleton,
Benedict,	Elam,	Kimmel,	Slemmons,
Bicknell,	Ellis,	Knapp,	Smith, William E.
Blackburn,	Evins, John H.	Landers,	Southard,
Bliss,	Ewing,	Ligon,	Sparks,
Blount,	Felton,	Lockwood,	Springer,
Boone,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Luttrell,	Steele,
Bouck,	Finley, Jesse J.	Mackey,	Stenger,
Bragg,	Fleming,	Maish,	Swann,
Bridges,	Forney,	Manning,	Throckmorton,
Bright,	Franklin,	Marsh,	Townsend, R. W.
Brogden,	Fuller,	Martin,	Tucker,
Buckner,	Garth,	Mayham,	Turner,
Cabell,	Gause,	McKenzie,	Turney,
Caldwell, John W.	Gibson,	McMahon,	Vance,
Caldwell, W. P.	Giddings,	Money,	Veeder,
Candler,	Glover,	Morgan,	Waddell,
Carlisle,	Goode,	Morrison,	Walker,
Chalmers,	Hamilton,	Morse,	Warner,
Clark, Alvah A.	Hardenbergh,	Muldrow,	Whitthorne,
Clarke of Kentucky,	Harris, Henry R.	Muller,	Wigginton,
Clark of Missouri,	Harris, John T.	Patterson, T. M.	Williams, James
Clymer,	Harrison,	Phelps,	Williams, Jere N.
Cobb,	Hart,	Potter,	Willis, Albert S.
Collins,	Hartzell,	Pridemore,	Wilson,
Cook,	Hatcher,	Rea,	Wood,
Cravens,	Henry,	Reagan,	Wright,
Crittenden,	Herbert,	Reilly,	Yeates,
Cutler,	Hewitt, Abram S.	Rice, Americus V.	Young, Casey
Davidson,	Hewitt, G. W.	Robbins,	Young, John S.
Davis, Joseph J.	Hooker,	Roberts,
Dean,	House,	Robertson,

NOT VOTING—29.

Acklen,	Cox, Jacob D.	Killinger,	Stone, John W.
Baker, William H.	Cox, Samuel S.	Knott,	Thornburgh,
Banks,	Dwight,	Lapham,	Walsh,
Beebe,	Foster,	McGowan,	Williams, Richard
Bland,	Freeman,	Metcalfe,	Wren.
Caswell,	Gunter,	Monroe,
Chittenden,	Henkle,	Riddle,
Covert,	Joyce,	Stephens,

So the amendment to the majority report was disagreed to.

During the roll-call the following announcements were made:

Mr. COVERT. On this proposition I am paired with the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. STONE. If he were present, he would vote "ay" and I would vote "no."

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. BEEBE. If he were present, I would vote "no."

Mr. JAMES. My colleague, Mr. LAPHAM, is paired with Mr. KNOTT, and Mr. DWIGHT with Mr. EICKHOFF. I do not know how they would vote.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now recurs on the adoption of the resolution reported by the majority of the committee.

Mr. CONGER. I move the House adjourn.

Mr. SPRINGER. Does the gentleman mean to filibuster on this question? The House has ordered a recess until half past seven o'clock. The House has not adopted the resolutions reported by the committee. The vote just taken was on the minority resolutions. Does the gentleman from Michigan desire to prevent the passage of the resolutions?

Mr. CONGER. I have acted advisedly.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman, then, desires to prevent their passage?

Mr. CONGER. I will answer the gentleman after we take a recess.

Mr. WADDELL. What is the evening session for?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For reports from the Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. PAGE. And for no other business.

Mr. HOOKER. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. As I understand, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] has the floor. He has called the previous question upon the whole subject-matter pending before the House, which is, first, on the report of the minority, on which the House has voted, and, secondly, on the report of the majority, on which the House has not yet voted. Can any other question interpose until the order of the House is executed?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is in order to move to take a recess, and especially so when the House has already agreed to take a recess.

Mr. LUTTRELL. The whole object is to filibuster and defeat the investigations of the committee.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON] asks that when the House ceases its business to-morrow it shall take a recess until Saturday morning at ten o'clock for the consideration of reports from the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. In connection with that request I desire to say that any bill to which there shall be a single objection shall not be considered. It is simply for the consideration of such bills as commend themselves to the unanimous assent of the House.

Mr. HOOKER. I call for the regular order.

Mr. RYAN. I hope the request of the gentleman from Colorado will be granted.

Mr. SPRINGER. Does the gentleman from Michigan desire to filibuster to prevent the execution of this order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is in the nature of debate.

Mr. SPRINGER. We have had a test vote on the question, and now the resolution reported by the committee should be allowed to pass.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to granting the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

Mr. SPRINGER. I shall not agree to any request for unanimous consent until the House has disposed of this business.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. I withdraw the request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Michigan, that the House take a recess.

Mr. HALE. What is the business this evening?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The consideration of reports from the Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. HALE. And nothing else?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Nothing else.

Mr. LUTTRELL. If this goes over as unfinished business, when will it come up?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. To-morrow morning.

Mr. LUTTRELL. Let us refuse to take a recess until we dispose of it.

The question being taken on Mr. CONGER's motion, there were—yeas 76, nays 104.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, 41 members voting therefor.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 57, nays 130, not voting 73; as follows:

YEAS—57.

Aldrich,	Deering,	Jorgensen,	Robinson, G. D.
Bailey,	Denison,	Keifer,	Robinson, M. S.
Baker, John H.	Dunnell,	Keightley,	Ryan,
Bayne,	Dwight,	Ketcham,	Sampson,
Blair,	Eames,	Lathrop,	Shallenberger,
Briggs,	Ellsworth,	Lindsey,	Sinnickson,
Browne,	Errett,	Majors,	Smalls,
Bundy,	Evans, I. Newton	McKinley,	Starr,
Burdick,	Evans, James L.	Mitchell,	Stewart,
Butler,	Fort,	Norcross,	Strait,
Calkins,	Frye,	Oliver,	Thompson,
Camp,	Gardner,	O'Neill,	Tipton,
Campbell,	Garfield,	Overton,	Townsend, Amos
Cannon,	Hale,	Page,	Townsend, M. I.
Caswell,	Hanna,	Patterson, G. W.	Van Vorhes,
Clafin,	Haskell,	Phillips,	Wait,
Clark, Rush	Hazelton,	Pollard,	Ward,
Cole,	Henderson,	Powers,	White, Harry
Conger,	Humphrey,	Pridemore,	White, Michael D.
Cox, Jacob D.	Hungerford,	Rainey,	Williams, Andrew
Cummings,	James,	Reed,	Willits.
Davis, Horace	Jones, John S.	Rice, William W.

NAYS—130.

Aiken,	Dibrell,	Huntton,	Saylor,
Atkins,	Dickey,	Ittner,	Scales,
Banning,	Durham,	Jones, Frank,	Shelley,
Beale,	Elen,	Jones, James T.	Singleton,
Bell,	Ellam,	Kenna,	Slomons,
Benedict,	Ellis,	Kimmel,	Smith, A. Herr,
Blackburn,	Evins, John H.	Knapp,	Smith, William E.
Bliss,	Ewing,	Landers,	Sparks,
Boone,	Felton,	Ligon,	Springer,
Bragg,	Finley, Ebenezer B.	Lockwood,	Steele,
Bridges,	Finley, Jessie J.	Luttrell,	Stenger,
Bright,	Fleming,	Lynde,	Throckmorton,
Brogden,	Forney,	Mackey,	Townshend, R. W.
Cabell,	Franklin,	Maish,	Tucker,
Cain,	Gibson,	Manning,	Turner,
Caldwell, John W.	Giddings,	Martin,	Turney,
Caldwell, W. P.	Glover,	Mayham,	Vanco,
Candler,	Goode,	McKenzie,	Veeder,
Carlisle,	Gunter,	McMahon,	Waddell,
Chalmers,	Hamilton,	Mills,	Warner,
Clark, Alvah A.	Hardenbergh,	Morgan,	Wigginton,
Clark of Missouri,	Harris, Henry R.	Morrison,	Williams, James
Clarke of Kentucky,	Harris, John T.	Morse,	Williams, Jere N.
Clymer,	Harrison,	Muldrow,	Willis, Albert S.
Cobb,	Hartzell,	Muller,	Willis, Benj. A.
Collins,	Hatcher,	Potter,	Wilson,
Cook,	Henkle,	Rea,	Wood,
Craven,	Henry,	Reagan,	Wright,
Culberson,	Herbert,	Reilly,	Yeates,
Cutler,	Hewitt, Abram S.	Rice, Americus V.	Young, Casey
Davidson,	Hewitt, G. W.	Robbins,	Young, John S.
Davis, Joseph J.	Hooker,	Ross,
Dean,	House,

NOT VOTING—73.

Acklen,	Crapo,	Killinger,	Robertson,
Bacon,	Crittenden,	Knott,	Sapp,
Bagley,	Danford,	Lapham,	Sexton,
Baker, William H.	Eickhoff,	Loring,	Southard,
Ballou,	Foster,	Marsh,	Stephens,
Banks,	Freeman,	McCook,	Stone, John W.
Beebe,	Fuller,	McGowan,	Stone, Joseph C.
Bicknell,	Garth,	Metcalfe,	Swann,
Bland,	Gause,	Money,	Thornburgh,
Blount,	Harmer,	Monroe,	Walker,
Bouck,	Harris, Benj. W.	Neal,	Walsh,
Boyd,	Hart,	Patterson, T. M.	Watson,
Brentano,	Hayes,	Peddle,	Whithorne,
Brewer,	Hendee,	Phelps,	Williams, C. G.
Buckner,	Hiscock,	Pound,	Williams, Richard
Burchard,	Hubbell,	Price,	Wren.
Chittenden,	Hunter,	Pugh,
Covert,	Joyce,	Randolph,
Cox, Samuel S.	Kelley,	Riddle,

So the motion to take a recess was not agreed to.

During the call of the roll the following announcements were made:

Mr. COVERT. I am paired with Mr. STONE, of Michigan. I do not know how he would vote if present, but I should vote "no."

Mr. CRITTENDEN. I am paired with Mr. WILLIAMS, of Oregon. If he were here, he would vote "ay" and I would vote "no."

Mr. EDEN. Mr. SOUTHARD, of Ohio, is paired with Mr. WATSON, of Pennsylvania; and Mr. WHITTHORNE, of Tennessee, is paired with Mr. HARRIS, of Massachusetts.

Mr. COBB. My colleague, Mr. FULLER, is paired with my colleague, Mr. SEXTON. If they were here, Mr. FULLER would vote "no" and Mr. SEXTON "ay."

Mr. GAUSE. I am paired with Mr. SAPP, of Iowa. If he were here, I should vote "no."

Mr. HENDERSON. My colleague, Mr. BOYD, is paired with Mr. BICKNELL. I do not know how either would vote if here.

Mr. COLE. I desire to state that Mr. HISCOCK is paired with his colleague, Mr. HART; Mr. PUGH, of New Jersey, is paired with Mr. BUCKNER, of Missouri; and Mr. POLLARD, of Missouri, is paired with his colleague, Mr. CLARK.

Mr. LAPHAM. On this question I am paired with Mr. KNOTT, of Kentucky. If he were here, I would vote "ay."

Mr. FOSTER. On this vote I am paired with the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. BLOUNT. If he were here, I would vote "ay."

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

GEORGE F. SEWARD.

The question recurred upon agreeing to the resolution reported from the Committee on Expenditures in the State Department; and being taken, on a division, there were—ayes 115, no 1.

Mr. CONGER. No quorum has voted.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. CONGER and Mr. SPRINGER were appointed.

Mr. THOMPSON. Pending the vote by tellers and in order to prevent filibustering and delay, I move that the House now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That motion is not now in order; the House is dividing.

The question was taken upon agreeing to the resolution; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 110, noes 24.

Mr. TIPTON. No quorum has voted.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I move that there be a call of the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to state to gentlemen on the other side, that before I heard any question raised in this matter I had stated to the Sergeant-at-Arms that no notice or paper would be put into his hand until to-morrow; so that there can be no purpose on the part of this side of the House to do any injustice to Mr. Seward.

Mr. CONGER. Then what is the object of voting to-night?

Mr. SPRINGER. Does the gentleman presume to say that I am not pursuing this course in good faith?

Mr. THOMPSON. I move that the House now adjourn.

The motion to adjourn was not agreed to.

Mr. DUNNELL. I desire to suggest to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. Wood,] the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, that the session of this evening begin at eight o'clock instead of half past seven.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to have a call of the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask unanimous consent that the tellers resume their places and the vote be taken again upon agreeing to the report of the committee.

Mr. LUTTRELL. If a quorum will vote on that, then I will withdraw my motion for a call of the House. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is the motion for a call of the House.

The question was taken; and upon a division there were—ayes 74, noes 44.

So the motion for a call of the House was agreed to.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now move to reconsider the vote by which a call of the House was ordered, for the reason that I have the assurance of gentlemen on the other side of the House, after the statement I have made, that they will vote to make up a quorum on the adoption of the report of the committee.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to say a word. I did not know that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] had control of the execution of an order of this House, through the Speaker of the House and its Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. RICE, of Ohio. Is it possible?

Mr. CONGER. I think it is assuming a little more power than he has.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman does not doubt my word, when I tell him that the order will not be made until to-morrow.

Mr. CONGER. No; but I say the gentleman cannot control it.

Mr. LUTTRELL. This is an every-day occurrence; let us meet it now. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which a call of the House was ordered.

The question was taken; and upon a division there were—ayes 119, noes none.

Mr. CONGER. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is of the opinion that in proceedings relating to a call of the House less than a quorum can act. The order for a call of the House has been reconsidered; and the question recurs upon ordering a call of the House.

Mr. LUTTRELL. I withdraw that motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question then recurs upon agreeing to the report of the committee. When the vote was taken by tellers upon agreeing to the report of the committee no quorum voted.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. Let the question again be taken by a rising vote.

The question was taken; and upon a division there were—ayes 105, noes 47.

So the report was agreed to.

Mr. SPRINGER moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

BUSINESS FROM THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. PATTERSON, of Colorado. I now renew the request that when the House shall close its business to-morrow it will take a recess until ten o'clock on Saturday morning, for the purpose of giving one hour for the consideration of reports from the Committee on Public Lands, no report from that committee to which there shall be objection to be considered.

Mr. THOMPSON. I object to that.

Mr. RYAN. I think the gentleman ought not to object. There are bills before that committee to which no gentleman will object.

Mr. PAGE. There is no more important committee of this House.

Mr. THOMPSON. I withdraw the objection.

There being no further objection, the order was made.

CLAIMS OF OWNERS OF WHALING VESSELS.

Mr. ELLSWORTH, by unanimous consent, reported from the Committee of Claims a bill (H. R. No. 6513) for the relief of William T. Smith, of New Bedford, Massachusetts, agent and managing owner of the American whaling barks Midas and Progress, and the American whaling ship Daniel Webster; Jonathan Brown, Jr., of New Bedford, Massachusetts, agent and managing owner of the American whaling bark Lagoda; and Samuel Osborn, Jr., of Edgartown, Massachusetts, agent and managing owner of the American whaling ship Europa; which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed, and recommitted, not to be brought back on a motion to reconsider.

REBECCA STRAUGHAN.

Mr. EVANS, of Pennsylvania, by unanimous consent, reported from the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions a bill (H. R. No. 6514) granting a pension to Rebecca Straughan; which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed, and recommitted, not to be brought back on a motion to reconsider.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BURCHARD. Mr. Speaker, I now claim the floor upon the bill regulating the duties on sugar, if I am entitled to it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is entitled to the floor. Mr. BURCHARD. I insist upon my right to the floor, but will yield to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. Wood,] who desires to move that the House now take a recess.

Mr. WOOD. There is no necessity for the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BURCHARD] bringing up that question now, as it is entirely disconnected with the business of this evening. I move that the House now take a recess.

Mr. BAKER, of Indiana. Pending the motion for a recess I move that the House adjourn.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. BAKER, of Indiana, it was not agreed to, there being—ayes 38, noes 79.

The motion then recurred on the motion of Mr. WOOD for a recess.

Mr. WOOD. I ask unanimous consent that the hour of meeting this evening be changed from half past seven to eight o'clock. There being no objection, it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. McMAHON. What is the business for this evening?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Reports from the Committee of Ways and Means, and no other business.

Mr. McMAHON. Public or private?

Mr. WOOD. Both.

The motion of Mr. WOOD was agreed to; and accordingly, at six o'clock p. m., the House took a recess until eight o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House reassembled at eight o'clock p. m.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BALLOU. Mr. Speaker, I ask that such business on the Speaker's table as properly belongs to the Committee on Printing may be taken up and referred to that committee.

The SPEAKER. The understanding was that at this evening's session no business should be transacted except the consideration of reports from the Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. BALLOU. Cannot my request be agreed to by unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. Members who are not here at present asked the Chair to-day whether any other business than the consideration of reports from the Committee of Ways and Means would be in order at the session to-night; and it was stated distinctly that no other business would be in order. The Chair would prefer that the gentleman should delay his request till to-morrow morning.

Mr. KELLEY. I think it has frequently been held that where an evening is fixed for particular business, other business cannot be entertained even by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Rhode Island to-morrow morning for the purpose he indicates.

APPEALS FROM DECISIONS OF COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS, ETC.

Mr. WOOD, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported, as a substitute for House bills No. 4790, No. 5549, and No. 6378, a bill (H. R. No. 6515) respecting protests or appeals from decisions of collectors of customs, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time.

The bill provides in the first section that protests or appeals from decisions of collectors of customs as to the rate or amount of duties due on imports, heretofore filed at or before the liquidation of the entry, shall be regarded as of the same force and effect under section 14 of the act of 30th June, 1864, entitled "An act to increase duties on imports, and for other purposes," and under section 2931 of the Revised Statutes, as if filed within the time therein prescribed.

The second section provides that samples, sample books, and sample cards of goods or merchandise shall be exempt from entry and duty, and shall be delivered to the importer, consignee, or owner, or his order, immediately upon their arrival, under such regulations for the prevention of fraud and evasion as the Secretary of the Treasury may from time to time prescribe; provided each such sample is of such dimension, character, or quantity as to show that it is intended only as a sample of the article it represents, and is not adapted for use otherwise.

The third section provides that the indebtedness of the United States "to importers for excess of deposits for unascertained duties, or duties or other moneys paid under protest," when determined by the judgment of any court of the United States, shall be paid, regardless of the time of original payment thereof, with the interest and cost legally due thereon, under sections 959 and 966 of the Revised Statutes, from the permanent annual appropriation for that purpose in section 3659 of said statutes.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WOOD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

INTEREST ON SURRENDERED OR CALLED BONDS.

Mr. WOOD also, from the same committee, reported a bill (H. R. No.

6516) to amend section 3697 of the Revised Statutes, with respect to interest on surrendered or called bonds; which was read a first and second time.

The bill provides that section 3697 of the Revised Statutes be amended so that the interest on the bonds called under the provisions of said section or surrendered under the provisions of the "Act to facilitate the refunding the national debt," approved January 25, 1879, shall cease and determine after the expiration of thirty days from the date of the surrender or the date of the notice and advertisement required to be given by the Secretary of the Treasury; but nothing herein is to affect existing contracts made in pursuance of law.

Mr. WOOD. I will explain in a few words, Mr. Speaker, that this is in accordance with the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury in his last annual report to Congress. As the law now stands, that is under the act of 1870, 5-20 bonds redeemed are entitled to bear interest to the holder for three months, and the 4 per cent. bonds by which the others are redeemed also draw interest of 4 per cent. for three months, so that in the process of refunding, the parties who relinquish their bonds under the call of the Secretary are for the time being in the receipt of some 10 per cent. interest. This shortens the time to thirty days instead of three months, so that when bonds are relinquished by the holder or called by the Secretary it is provided they shall bear but thirty days, and the four percents shall bear interest only for the same time. It is a unanimous report from the Committee of Ways and Means. It saves existing contracts under the syndicate, and we think this law should be passed at the earliest practicable moment to be applied to any future refunding.

Mr. BUCKNER. Does this apply to ten-forties or any other bonds?

Mr. WOOD. All bonds, sir, yet unrefunded. Under the law they can be voluntarily relinquished.

Mr. BURCHARD. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. WOOD. Certainly.

Mr. BURCHARD. The Secretary of the Treasury in his last annual report, I think, recommended, as the gentleman has stated, that the time should be limited. The Committee of Ways and Means had under consideration a bill which was in accordance with that recommendation. There is an amendment which is incorporated in the bill, and I believe accompanies it as an original proposition, which applies this provision only to the 5 per cent. bonds. Do I understand correctly?

Mr. WOOD. I understand it applies to all bonds yet to be refunded.

Mr. BURCHARD. But excepts existing contracts.

Mr. WOOD. Yes, sir.

Mr. BURCHARD. The attention of the Secretary was called to the matter as it was being discussed by the Committee of Ways and Means, and he sent a letter, which I have not here or I would be glad to have it read, in which he objected to the terms of the bill as it then was framed, because since the 1st of January over $250,000,000 of bonds had been called under the provisions of the then existing law, and upon those called bonds the parties holding them would be entitled to interest at 6 per cent. for three months, and as subscription for new bonds is conditioned that old bonds may be exchanged for them, it would violate contracts under the arrangement already made as well as contracts made as to bonds to be surrendered and negotiated abroad, sixes to be surrendered and four percents to be exchanged therefor to the extent of some $40,000,000 or more. The act as now drawn is intended to except all existing contracts. The Secretary of the Treasury suggested that would not be objectionable, although the refunding is proceeding so fast it is questionable whether it is not better not to interfere with it at all. I believe, as stated by the gentleman from New York, after this modification no members of the committee objected to the bill as now drafted and reported.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I ask my colleague to yield to me for a moment.

Mr. WOOD. Certainly.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. While, Mr. Speaker, I altogether approve of this bill, I am compelled to add that it is very much like locking the stable-door after the horse is stolen. If this bill could have been reported on the first day of the session, or even on the day before the recess, when I called attention to the large amount of double interest which was being paid, the result would have been the saving of from a million to a million and a half of dollars. I know my colleague, the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, was extremely anxious to report this bill. In justice to him I wish to say to this House the delay which, by some inscrutable process, has been forced upon him, has, in my judgment, cost a million and a half of dollars.

But I also want to add that it is a hollow pretense on the part of the Secretary of the Treasury to allege that he was under any obligation at any time to pay double interest for a single hour. I am very well aware he has said that he followed the precedents set by his predecessors, and that the act requires him to pay double interest. But I desire to call the attention of this House and of the country to the fact that his predecessor, Mr. Bristow, when he came into office, finding that double interest was being paid, stopped it, and thereafter, so long as Mr. Bristow continued in office, double interest was not paid.

During the Forty-fourth Congress I offered at least three resolutions to ascertain whether double interest had been paid or not, and a clear and explicit answer could never be got from the Treasury. I find now that the reason why the answer could never be got was that the Secretary of the Treasury at that time, Mr. Bristow, who had very properly stopped the payment of double interest on the five percents then in negotiation, was unwilling by any act of his to cast reproach on his predecessor. But at all times pending this negotiation and the refunding of the national debt, which I regard as the most remarkable success that has ever occurred in the history of finance, it has been entirely possible within the law for the Secretary of the Treasury to have made such contracts and arrangements as would have saved to a large extent the payment of double interest which has been made.

The negotiation of the loan has largely fallen under the power and control of a single public depository, the First National Bank of the city of New York. They have conducted the business with wonderful boldness, skill, energy, and success. They have not, so far as I know, made a single dollar that the laws and the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury did not authorize them to make, and no reproach can be cast upon this bank or any other of the fiscal agents of the Government who have monopolized the sale of the bonds under the regulations of the Treasury Department.

If unnecessary and improvident commissions and allowances of interest have been made the responsibility rests upon the Treasury and not upon those who have availed themselves of the opportunity to make millions at the public expense. Wonderfully successful as the refunding operations have been, they might have been conducted upon more favorable terms if it had been understood that other national banks and private banks had the same assurance that the First National Bank appears to have had. By the terms of the Treasury circulars issued in 1878, notice was given to banks who might choose to become agents and public depositories that the money received for the 4 per cent. bonds might lie in the banks upon the proper security during the three months. Upon the 5th of October last, however, a written and not a printed notice was issued from the Treasury Department, a copy of which I have seen, notifying some of the agencies, if not all of them, that the money instead of lying upon deposit during three months would thereafter be subject to call.

Therefore, every bank that did not have or could not have some understanding with the Secretary of the Treasury that the money would not be called for were practically driven out of the loan market. What assurances the First National Bank received I do not know, but I do know that the balances in that bank on the 1st November last were over $28,000,000.

I do not say that any assurance was given to that bank that it would not be so called for, but the fact is that the money was allowed to lie there and that the bank, while it had this money under its control, entered into negotiations for refunding the 6 per cent. bonds into 4 per cent. bonds and the amount of profit and loss has been something enormous. I attribute to the bank no censure of any kind, but I say that the refunding of the loan was so managed as to throw immense profits mainly into the hands of a single concern and that the action of the Secretary of the Treasury excluded the great mass of the national banks and private bankers from the profit of refunding the national debt. Now I am ready to answer questions.

Mr. BREWER. The gentleman from New York stated that Mr. Bristow ceased to pay double interest. I desire to ask if he did not thereby cease to refund virtually.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. No; I think he did not. Under his administration all the 5 per cent. bonds were sold except \$50,000,000, and when the present Secretary undertook the negotiations these bonds were at a premium and the \$50,000,000 which he sold to a syndicate were placed at $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. below the market rate. The people would have taken the bonds readily enough, but he has never offered to the public at large as good terms as he has made to syndicates and national banks. When he did offer them to the public the First National Bank was always able, by having the benefit of the double interest, to sell the bonds on better terms than the Treasury sold them, and hence the bank monopolized the business.

Mr. CLAFLIN. I would ask who is to blame for the loss to the Treasury which the gentleman says occurred from the national banks. The banks were not to blame. Who was to blame?

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I say that the discretionary power was vested in the Secretary of the Treasury to make such terms as he might see fit. I bore willing testimony to the wonderful ability with which the transaction was conducted, but my point is that he could have conducted it on more favorable terms and that money has gone into the vaults of the First National Bank of New York which might have been saved to the Treasury.

Mr. CLAFLIN. If he conducted it with such remarkable ability what was at the bottom of the blame which he speaks of?

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. Because it could not have been done upon better terms.

Mr. CLAFLIN. That is a matter of opinion. I will ask the gentleman, as a business man, whether he thinks that this very fortunate refunding could have been placed upon the same terms as now; in other words, does he suppose, as a business man, that if the terms offered by this bill had been offered then the refunding could have been done?

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I have not the slightest doubt of it; that is my answer. The truth is, that while the Secretary has displayed great energy in pushing the refunding operations and is entitled to credit for it, it is not to be admitted for a moment that the success of the transaction is due to him. It is due to the extraordinary state of the money market and the great surplus of idle capital all over the world which has made a 4 per cent. bond a desirable investment. The Secretary did not create this favorable and unprecedented state of the market, but he took advantage of it; but I do not think that he has turned it to the best advantage.

Mr. BURCHARD. It may be unfortunate for the country that the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] is not the Secretary of the Treasury, instead of the present incumbent. Doubtless he would have accomplished this magnificent result much better and much more rapidly. But when he assails the action of the Secretary of the Treasury he does it in face of the law which requires the Secretary to sell these bonds and from the proceeds of the sale to redeem the 6 per cent. bonds. The law gives the right absolutely to the holder of the 6 per cent. bonds to interest for three months after the notice to present them for redemption.

Now, the Secretary of the Treasury tells us very frankly in his annual report, giving us half a page of his reasons, that this refunding could be done by making a call in anticipation of the subscriptions by guessing or supposing or running the chance that the subscriptions will be made for an amount equal to the call. He says that it may be done by making the call before he has the money in the Treasury; but he says he does not think that would be a safe thing to do, for something might check the anticipated subscription, and the Treasury would be without funds to redeem the bonds which it had called. He says that by the terms of the law he must have received the subscriptions, must have the assurance that the money will be forthcoming, or will be at his demand on call, before he makes the call for these 6 per cent. bonds. He asks Congress to shorten the period for which interest must be allowed after the call, and this as soon as the subscription is made will operate to shorten the time for which interest can be allowed on called bonds. Perhaps the gentleman might do better.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. Secretary Bristow found a better way of doing it.

Mr. BURCHARD. The gentleman says to us, "Oh, how much better I might have done it." I ask the House if it has not been done well? There are $250,000,000 of 6 per cent. bonds now in process of cancellation called since the 1st of January, and the whole amount of these 6 per cent. bonds—$360,000,000—outstanding at the commencement of the year will be called and refunded within thirty days of this time.

The gentleman, however, seems to desire an opportunity to attack the Secretary of the Treasury and his administration notwithstanding this magnificent result, and says it could have been done better in some other way. Perhaps it could and perhaps not. If there is any one to blame in this matter, it is our fault that we did not shorten the period, as the Secretary of the Treasury desired us to do.

It is not charged that the action of the Secretary is in any way illegal. The complaint is that it could have been done better in some other way and more advantageously.

Mr. CLAFLIN. Will the gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] tell us how Mr. Bristow found a way to do it?

Mr. BURCHARD. The gentleman seems to be familiar with syndicate operations. I have not heard that it was done better by Secretary Bristow. The present Secretary of the Treasury gave this opportunity to the whole people, and allowed everybody to bring themselves within the terms of the proposition.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. On the contrary, the Secretary has withdrawn the proposition to let the whole people in. He does not allow any commission on subscriptions for less than $100,000, thus throwing the whole business into the hands of the banks.

Mr. BURCHARD. No, sir, he has not withdrawn his proposition to let the whole people subscribe except as to the foreign holders of the bonds. All the people of the United States can now subscribe. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HEWITT] himself can take these 4 per cent. bonds if he desires to, although a larger commission is allowed for the heaviest subscription.

Mr. CLAFLIN. How much did Mr. Bristow refund under his principle? How successful was he?

Mr. WOOD. I call the previous question.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I can answer the gentleman.

Mr. CLAFLIN. Let us have the answer.

Mr. WOOD. I insist upon the previous question.

The previous question was seconded and the main question ordered; and under the operation thereof the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WOOD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

REMISSION OF DUTIES.

Mr. WOOD also, from the same committee, reported a joint resolution (H. R. No. 247) authorizing the remission of duty on two articles of bronze presented to R. C. McCormick by American exhibitors at the Paris exhibition; which was read a first and second time.

The joint resolution authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to remit or refund, as the case may be, the duties paid or accruing upon two articles of bronze presented to Commissioner-General R. C. McCormick by the American exhibitors at the Paris exposition of 1878.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WOOD moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. WOOD, from the Committee of Ways and Means, also reported as a substitute for House joint resolution No. 49 a joint resolution (H. R. No. 218) in regard to remission of duties; which was read a first and second time.

The joint resolution authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to remit the duties upon the collection of metals, minerals, ores, models, and samples of manufacture which have been imported by, or for, or have been presented by the importers to, the American Institute of Mining Engineers at Philadelphia, for the purpose of exhibition and study only, and not for sale.

Mr. WOOD. There is a report accompanying the joint resolution, which had better be read if any gentleman desires it.

Many MEMBERS. Oh, no! Vote! Vote!

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WOOD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

JAMES E. MONTELL.

Mr. KELLEY, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 2232) for the relief of James E. Montell, of Baltimore, Maryland.

The bill directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to James E. Montell, of Baltimore, Maryland, the sum of $12,000, or so much thereof as the said James E. Montell shall prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that he has expended in the purchase of revenue stamps used by him to stamp and repack manufactured snuff upon which a tax had been previously paid or declared paid, or tax free, under the revenue laws in force at the time of its manufacture and sale, but which was made liable to be stamped under the act of July 20, 1868; said payment to be made out of any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. THOMPSON. Is there a report accompanying this bill?

Mr. KELLEY. I am asked to explain this bill, and I will do so as briefly as possible.

Mr. DURHAM. Is not this bill subject to a point of order?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will look at it.

Mr. DURHAM. I think it contains an appropriation of money, and must go to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. KELLEY. It is certainly a meritorious measure.

The SPEAKER. It is subject to a point of order.

Mr. KELLEY. I hope gentlemen will not insist on the point of order until they hear a word or two of explanation.

Mr. DURHAM. All these claims should stand on the same footing. Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. I hope the gentleman from Kentucky will not make a point of order without understanding the case.

Mr. KELLEY. If the point of order is reserved, I can in two minutes state the facts.

Mr. DURHAM. I have a dozen meritorious cases on the general Calendar which I would like to have considered.

Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia. Would not the gentleman consider it very ungracious for a gentleman to object to one of his bills without understanding it?

Mr. DURHAM. I do not see why this bill should not stand on a par with other claims equally meritorious.

Mr. SAYLER. If the point is insisted upon, I presume during the course of the evening we shall have to go into Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sustains the point of order. The bill is referred to the Committee of the Whole.

BARK GRAPESHOT.

Mr. PHELPS, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (S. No. 964) for the relief of the owner of the bark Grapeshot.

The bill was read. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to George Law, the claimant and owner thereof, the sum of $15,861.50, gold, the said sum having been paid into the Treasury of the United States for safe-keeping on or about July 1, 1862, as proceeds of a sale of the bark Grapeshot, which proceeds have been decreed by the circuit court of the United States for the fifth circuit to belong to said Law.

The SPEAKER. The report will be read.

Mr. EDEN. I desire to renew a point of order on this bill.

The SPEAKER. The point of order will be reserved.

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

Before and on the 15th day of July, 1858, George Law, of the city and State of New York, was the sole owner of the bark Grapeshot. On that day Wallstein, Massett & Co., of Rio Janeiro, Brazil, to enforce payment of a bottomry bond previously given them by the master of said bark, to secure the payment of a loan of $9,769.45, and a premium thereon of 194 per cent. for the pending voyage, filed a libel against said bark in the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Louisiana.

Such proceedings were had in the cause that under said libel the said bark was sold, and the net proceeds of the sale, amounting to $13,805.85, and also $2,055.20, the net proceeds of the freight earned by said bark on said voyage, amounting in the aggregate to $15,861.05 in gold, were by order of said court deposited in the registry thereof, subject to the order of the libellants.

The cause was appealed from the district to the circuit court for the fifth circuit of the United States, and, before final adjudication by said circuit court, the late civil war was commenced and the cause taken before a provisional judge of the Confederate States and by him decided in favor of the libellants. It was subsequently returned to the circuit court of the United States and by appeal taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, by which it was remanded to the circuit court under an order for a commission to examine and report the amount justly due; and on the 29th day of March, 1875, a final decree was passed in favor of the libellants for $4,392.25, together with 194 per cent. maritime premium and 5 per cent. interest on said sum from July 3, 1858, until paid.

On the 27th day of May, 1876, the libellants received from George Law, the former owner of said bark, $9,175.89, being the full amount of the judgment, including interest and costs, to which the libellants were entitled. Whereupon, and by virtue of such payment, on proper motion to and order of said circuit court, the said George Law was declared subrogated to all the rights of the libellants and to be entitled, in his own right, to all and singular the proceeds of said sale of said bark, and to said freight, and to the said money deposited as before stated in the registry of said court.

The said sum of $15,861.05 so deposited was placed in the Bank of Louisiana, in the city of New Orleans, to the credit of the treasury of the Confederate States. On the 17th day of June, 1862, Major-General BENJAMIN F. BUTLER, then commanding the Department of the Gulf, ordered and compelled the same to be transferred, for safe-keeping, to the Treasury of the United States, where it has ever since remained as a technical deposit by the Government through its aforesaid military authority, but justly belonging to the said George Law, and payable to him in gold. The committee therefore recommend concurrence by the House of Representatives in the passage of the accompanying Senate bill.

Mr. EDEN. I insist on my point of order.

Mr. WOOD. I think the gentleman would not make a point of order if he understood the case. This is not money belonging to the United States; it is money of a private party, which has been paid into the Treasury and which he now desires to take out.

The SPEAKER. Is it in the Treasury?

Mr. WOOD. It is private money which was paid into court. The United States is merely the custodian of the money.

Mr. BUTLER. Before the Chair decides the point of order, I think a fact or two should be stated.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not yet decided the point. He will examine the bill. Does the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BUTLER] desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. BUTLER. Yes, sir. I want to say in the first place that I think Mr. Law ought to have his money. As appears by the report, I am somewhat acquainted with the facts of this case. When I was in command at New Orleans, I ordered all money deposited to the credit of the United States to be turned over to me, and I sent it all up here to the Treasury. The amount was some $500,000, more or less. A part of that amount was the sum now in question here, which was then in the Bank of Louisiana to the credit of the registry of the court of the Confederate States. There was no United States court there then, and the money evidently could not be kept in the registry of the court. This amount of $15,000 was sent here to the Treasury, accompanied with a letter stating what it was for. It was only sent to the Treasury for safe-keeping. If it remains in the Treasury, there ought to be no earthly objection to paying it over to Mr. Law or whoever may have obtained judgment for it. Some years ago I was applied to for a statement of facts, such as I am now making, by the officers of the Bank of Louisiana, who desired to have the money returned to them, from whom it had been taken. What the result of that application was I do not know. I made the statement requested. If this money is in the Treasury now, Mr. Law ought to have it. If it was sent back to the Bank of Louisiana, I am afraid he has lost it; for since that time the bank has failed. Does the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means know, from any inquiry, that the money is in the Treasury? Some gentleman—I do not remember who—called on me with this report and asked me what I knew about it. I told him what I now state to the House; and I said to him, "You had better inquire at the Treasury whether the money is there." If it is in the Treasury, there cannot be any earthly objection to Mr. Law having it; it is his money. If it is not there, that will raise another and a distinct question.

Mr. MILLS. Is there any dispute about the ownership of the money?

Mr. EDEN. It seems to me the Chair must sustain the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is trying to ascertain the fact whether the money is in the Treasury or whether it is merely in the possession of the Secretary of the Treasury in trust. Of course there is a distinction.

Mr. BUTLER. If the bill be so guarded as to provide for paying over the identical money, then if it is not there this man cannot get it; if it is there he will get it, and that will be right.

Mr. EDEN. I am somewhat familiar with the cases in regard to property taken possession of by the Government when the city of New Orleans was captured.

I make the point of order for the reason that there are a great many cases growing out of the capture and seizure of property in the city of New Orleans when that city was taken possession of by the Government forces. This may be a meritorious case for anything I know, but I know a good many others which also have merit.

Mr. WOOD. I will say this does not come in under the head in any way, directly or indirectly, of captured property.

Mr. EDEN. I make the point of order that this makes an appropriation and must have its first consideration in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to know whether this money is in the United States Treasury as other money?

Mr. EDEN. The bill does make an appropriation.

The SPEAKER. The Chair decides that it is subject to the point of order if the money is in the Treasury of the United States, and cannot be drawn out without an appropriation.

Mr. EDEN. If the bill makes an appropriation it is subject to the point of order.

Mr. WOOD. That is it. I think it does not make an appropriation. The Chair will see that it does not.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be again read.

The bill was again read.

Mr. EDEN. If the point of order does not lie against that bill, then simply by changing the language and directing the money to be paid to the person instead of making an appropriation every dollar in the Treasury under the captured and abandoned property act can be appropriated, and the point of order cannot lie against it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sees no difference in this bill and an appropriation bill because the words are left out "out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

Mr. MILLS. And that is surplusage in any bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the omission of those words does not relieve the bill from the effect of the rule, and therefore decides, giving the doubt in favor of the Government, that the bill is liable to the point of order and must have its first consideration in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WOOD. I move to suspend the rules and put it on its passage.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman cannot make that motion.

Mr. EDEN. You will have to have a quorum here to pass that bill.

Mr. BURCHARD. I hope objection will be withdrawn and the bill allowed to be considered and amended.

Mr. ATKINS. What is before the House?

The SPEAKER. Nothing.

Mr. MILLS. Has the bill been disposed of?

The SPEAKER. It has gone to the Committee of the Whole under the point of order raised by the gentleman from Illinois.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PHELPS. I am directed by the Committee of Ways and Means to take from the Private Calendar House bill No. 526 and to put it on its passage.

Mr. EDEN. I make the point of order that that is not a report from the Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. SAYLER. The report has already been made and is already before the House.

Mr. EDEN. Yes; when you go to the Committee on the Private Calendar to consider it.

The SPEAKER. The resolution under which the night session is held will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

On motion of Mr. Wood, by unanimous consent,

Ordered, That there be a session to-morrow evening, commencing at seven and a half o'clock, for the consideration of reports from the Committee of Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. The Chair rules under that order the proposition is not in order.

Mr. EDEN. I withdraw my objection.

Mr. THOMPSON. I renew it, because I think the committee should be held to the order.

The SPEAKER. The order does not mean to reach bills which have been heretofore reported from the Committee of Ways and Means and gone to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. THOMPSON. I have no objection to hear the bill read if it is a special case.

The SPEAKER. The committee have had their day, as it were, in court, when the report has once been made and the bill gone to another position.

Mr. SAYLER. I hope the Chair will not insist upon that ruling if there be no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not interfere at all, but when the gentleman from Pennsylvania makes the objection it is the duty of the Chair to rule upon it.

Mr. THOMPSON. Let the report be read.

Mr. CONGER. Let the business go on under the rules. If we go outside of the order we do not know where it will reach.

Mr. PHELPS. The report in this case is a mere legal argument.

Mr. CONGER. I object to any variance from the order.

Mr. PHELPS. There are other bills, but they are subject to the same point of order.

SURETIES OF FRANK SOULÉ.

Mr. BURCHARD. I am directed by the Committee of Ways and Means to report back Senate bill No. 2 releasing Frank Soulé, late collector of internal revenue for the first district of California, and his sureties, from liability on his official bond, and to recommend that it be passed.

The bill, which was read, provides that Frank Soulé, late collector of internal revenue for the first district of California, and C. C. Webb, Ira P. Rankin, J. J. Felt, F. H. Waterman, James Dows, Samuel Soulé, W. A. Dana, James McM. Shafter, John Center, Horace Kilham, and Samuel Brannan, sureties of the said Frank Soulé, by bond to the United States dated January 12, A. D. 1867, be, and they are hereby, released from their liability arising from any defalcation that may have occurred in the office of the said collector during his term of service; and the proper officer of the Treasury Department is hereby authorized and directed to dismiss any and all suits that may have been instituted and are now pending against the sureties aforesaid upon said bond.

Several MEMBERS. Let the report be read.

Mr. BURCHARD. I send up the report of the Senate committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the petition of Frank Soulé, late collector of internal revenue for the first district of California, together with the bill (S. No. 2) for the relief of his sureties, having had the same under consideration, respectfully report:

The petitioner, Frank Soulé, in this case was collector of internal revenue for the first district of California for the period of four years and one month, and prays for the passage of a bill releasing him and his sureties from liability on account of certain defalcations that are shown to have occurred in the office of said collector during his term of service.

That said sureties, C. C. Webb, Ira P. Rankin, J. J. Felt, F. H. Waterman, James Dows, Samuel Soulé, W. A. Dana, James McM. Shafter, John Center, Horace Kilham, and Samuel Brannan, by bond to the United States dated January 12, 1867, also pray for relief from said liability.

The evidence in this case shows that one of the clerks in the office of the assessor, in computing the aggregate amounts shown on the pages of one of the assessment-books, omitted to include the footings of one entire page, and added up short of the true amount a number of pages in other assessment-books, the aggregate of such omitted sums being sufficient to cover the amount for which Mr. Soulé is charged as being in default; that such omissions were made for the purpose of deceiving, and did in fact deceive, the assessor; that Supervisor Foulke, a witness on the part of the Government in the suit brought by the United States against Soulé and his bondsmen to recover the amount of his alleged defalcation, testified that it was more than a year after the said assessor's books were delivered to him for examination, and more than a year after Mr. Soulé had ceased to hold the office of collector, before said Foulke discovered that an embezzlement had been committed; that Mr. Soulé testifies that he did not receive notice from Supervisor Foulke that an embezzlement had been committed in the collection of revenues under him (Soulé) until sixteen or seventeen months after he had ceased to hold the office of collector; that it was the duty of the assessor to ascertain by proper examination that his books were correct before delivering them up to the collector; that with the limited clerical force allowed him by the Government it was impossible to make such examination of the assessor's books in the office of the collector for the purpose of detecting errors; that the clerical force of his office was so limited that the clerks were compelled to labor upon Sundays, for which extra service he paid them at the same rate per diem as was paid them upon ordinary working days, which amounts he charged to the Government, but which the officers of the Government refused to allow, claiming that there was no authority for such allowance; that he paid between six and seven thousand dollars to detectives and informers as their legal percentage of the moneys collected for fines and forfeitures, such payments having been made after the passage of an act of Congress requiring all moneys recovered by such fines and forfeitures to be paid into the United States Treasury, and the amounts due thereon to such detectives and informers to be paid out of the Treasury upon the certificates of the collector; that he made such payments in accordance with the law in force when he assumed the office of collector and before he was officially advised of the change therein by the enactment of Congress referred to; that upon the trial of the suit brought against said Soulé and his sureties the court instructed the jury that the amounts so paid by said Soulé for the extra work performed on Sundays by his clerks, as before stated, and also the amounts paid out by him to detectives and informers as their legal share of fines and forfeitures collected prior to his receiving official notification of the change in the law in relation to the mode of making such payment, should be allowed said Soulé as an offset to the amount claimed by the United States as due from said Soulé; that because of the long delay in advising Mr. Soulé that a balance was found due from him to the United States, such delay covering a period of sixteen or seventeen months, he was prevented from ascertaining which one of his clerks had been guilty of the embezzlement, or to so far fasten the guilt upon any one of them as would justify his proceeding against them by legal process to compel a restitution; that the only mode by which the guilty party could have been discovered would have been by obtaining possession of the receipts given by his collection clerks to the persons whose names were entered upon that page of the assessor's books the footing of which was omitted in computing the aggregate amount shown on said book, as also the names of the persons entered upon the pages footed short, as above stated, such receipts being the only evidence to show which of his collection clerks received the moneys embezzled; that each collection clerk reported the collection to the book-keepers by receipt-tags, which were destroyed as soon as the moneys collected were credited to the payer; that when Mr. Soulé was notified of such embezzlement, numbers of persons of whom the moneys so embezzled had been collected had left the State, and others had changed their residences to other parts of the State, hence making it exceedingly difficult to collect the receipts, even assuming that none had been destroyed; that Mr. Soulé held the office of collector four years and one month, during which time he collected and accounted for nearly $17,000,000, at an expense to the Government computed to be less than one-half of 1 per cent., including the present claim of the Government against him and his sureties.

In addition to this statement of facts, the prayer of the petitioners is supported by the recommendations of the jury, the judge of the United States circuit court, the United States attorney, and the chief witness on behalf of the United States in the prosecution, the United States supervisor of internal revenue. Their statements are as follows:

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

We, the jury before whom was tried the case of the United States against Frank Soulé and others, in the circuit court of the United States, at the February term of said court in the year A. D. 1875, hereby certify, that upon the trial of said case the United States claimed that there was due the United States from the said Frank Soulé a balance of $18,373.36 upon his account as collector of internal revenue for the first district of California, as stated by the Treasury Department; that transcripts were introduced by the United States attorney tending to prove that fact; that testimony was introduced by the defense tending to disprove the claim of the United States; that upon the testimony and under the instructions of the court we rendered a verdict in favor of the United States for the sum of $11,744.23.

We further certify that, from the evidence introduced upon the trial of the case, it was, and is now, our firm belief that no part of said balance of $11,744.23 arose from any default or negligence on the part of said Frank Soulé.

We also certify that it satisfactorily appeared to us that Frank Soulé was collector for a little over four years, during which time he paid over and accounted for to the Treasury Department nearly $20,000,000.

We, therefore, respectfully, but earnestly, recommend Congress to relieve the said Frank Soule and the sureties on his official bond from any liability on account of the aforesaid balance.

E. G. Foreman.
GEO. H. BELL.
CORN. STORM.
A. ROMAN.
S. S. MORTON.
N. C. PADDOCK.
PHINEAS HASKELL.
J. SPAULDING.
CHAS. METZNER.
THOS. ROGERS.

I do not think Mr. Frank Soule received any part of the deficit as above, and so far, no further, indorse the foregoing.

G. C. HALL.

Upon a careful consideration of the testimony introduced on the trial of this cause, I am fully satisfied that Mr. Frank Soule, the principal in the bond, in no way profited by the defalcation charged in the complaint.

LORENZO SAWYER.
Circuit Judge.

As United States attorney at the time of the foregoing trial, I will state that I fully concur with Judge Sawyer in the opinion that Mr. Soule never profited by the deficiency in his said accounts.

WALTER VAN DYKE.

As United States supervisor of internal revenue of California, Oregon, Nevada, &c., at the time of the above-mentioned trial, and principal witness in behalf of the Government in the case, I fully concur with Judge Sawyer and Mr. Van Dyke that Mr. Frank Soule never profited by the defalcation in his accounts.

L. M. FOULKE.

We think that, from the evidence in this case, Mr. Frank Soule administered the duties of his office honestly and faithfully, and that he exercised proper vigilance in protecting the interests of the Government. The defalcations, which were discovered to him nearly seventeen months after he had ceased to hold the office of collector, were occasioned by a subordinate or subordinates in conspiracy, who so successfully laid their plans of operation as to deceive all the officers whose duty it was to pass upon and examine their accounts, and were only detected long after it was beyond the power of the collector to compel them to make restitution. There has been at no time any suspicion of fraud against the said collector, who, on the contrary, is held in highest esteem by all who know him and by all the officers of the Government who have been engaged in prosecuting frauds against the United States.

Similar cases have been passed upon favorably by Congress, none having more merit than this one; and we may mention the following as similar in principle:

Act of July 19, 1876, for the relief of James Atkins; Statutes at Large, volume 19, page 455.

Act of July 19, 1876, for the relief of James F. Buckman; volume 19, page 470.

Act of February 4, 1873, for the relief of John T. Mason; volume 17, page 723.

Act of April 17, 1872, for the relief of Sherman S. Bailey; volume 16, page 652.

Act of March 3, 1871, for the relief of Logan H. Roots; volume 16, page 690.

Act of December 20, 1870, for the relief of Lawrence L. Murry; volume 16, page 675.

Act of May 4, 1870, for the relief of James L. Ridgely; volume 16, page 664.

The following officers have been relieved from the default of employes by acts of Congress, to wit: William J. Patton, collector of internal revenue, second district of Arkansas, $36,081.88; E. B. Pendleton, collector of internal revenue, fifth district of Virginia, $26,476.28; J. L. Thomas, jr., collector of customs, Baltimore, $27,540.25; F. E. Spinner, United States Treasurer, default of Seth Johnson, $37,894.20; also for default of F. A. Marden, $11,413.97.

The following cases are also similar in principle: E. H. Webster, 16 Stats., 703; R. R. Bolling, 17 Stats., 768; W. B. Thomas, 18 Stats., 555; Thomas Hillhouse, 18 Stats., 539; Willard Davis, 18 Stats., 533.

The Senate has recently passed favorably bills for the relief of collectors, also, similar in principle; and we may mention the cases of James C. McBurney, Senate bill No. 1033; W. L. Adams, S. No. 997; and J. W. Douglass, S. No. 55, all of this session.

We therefore recommend the passage of the said bill, S. No. 2, with an amendment including the name of the said principal, Frank Soule, relieving him and his sureties from liability on account of said defalcation.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

Mr. LATHROP. I would like to know what the amount of this defalcation was.

Mr. BURCHARD. That was read in the report. The judgment was, I think, for $11,000. The amount allowed by the report of the committee was recommended by the judge and the jury before whom the case was tried.

They exonerated this collector entirely, although technically he was liable, and they recommended to Congress that he be relieved from the payment of the penalties.

Mr. TURNER. I would like to hear the gentleman explain the report, for if I can understand what was read, and I think I heard it read correctly, it appears that the assessor made up the aggregate amount charged here to the Treasury, there was several thousand dollars less than the audited amount, and he did not discover it until some time after he had been removed from office and when it was too late to find out which of his clerks had made the false addition.

It is to my mind clear that the whole thing is wrong, if the report states the facts correctly.

I would like to hear an explanation. Where is the report of the committee of this House? What has been read is the report of the committee of the Senate.

Mr. BURCHARD. The matter has been fully examined by Congress. If there should be no recapitulation of the facts stated in the Senate report, by a committee of the House, of the amount charged here, the Treasury is saved thousands of dollars less than that which has been audited. This officer did not discover the error until he was out of office.

Mr. TURNER. Why was it not referred to a committee to examine?

Mr. BURCHARD. The whole thing was before the Committee of Ways and Means, and they were satisfied from the statement made here and the proofs and they believe that the distinguished Senator from Delaware [Mr. BAYARD] who made this report was entirely just in the conclusion he came to.

Mr. TURNER. Was it not referred to a committee of this House? Mr. BURCHARD. We adopted the report of the committee of the Senate.

Mr. TURNER. Where is the report they adopted? I have not heard it read. In the mean time the Committee of Ways and Means are asking Congress to pass a bill for the relief of this party. Will you be kind enough to explain it, for if the Clerk read the bill aright there is not a pretext for passing this bill.

Mr. BURCHARD. I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from California, [Mr. DAVIS.]

Mr. DAVIS, of California. Frank Soule was a collector of internal revenue in the city of San Francisco for a period of four years and two months. During that time, by the misconduct of one or more of the clerks in the office of the assessor, money was embezzled belonging to the Government to the amount of $11,744 and some cents. This embezzlement was not discovered until after Soule's term of office had expired, and until seventeen months after the expiration of the term of office, until the matter had passed entirely out of his hands, and it came in such shape that it was absolutely impossible for him to follow up this embezzlement. This gentleman now comes before you with the recommendation of the jury who tried the case in the United States court, and with the recommendation of the judge of the court and the United States district attorney.

Mr. TURNER. Read them.

Mr. DAVIS, of California. The officers of the internal revenue of the Treasury Department, through whom the matter was investigated, and with the recommendation from the evidence, the committee of the Senate unanimously recommended, by Mr. BAYARD, in the form of this printed report, which was adopted by the Committee of Ways and Means of this House, and on this ground we ask for the passage of this bill.

I will only add that Mr. Soule is a gentleman of high standing in the community, and that during the time he was collector of internal revenue over $17,000,000 of Government money passed through his hands and at expense of only one half of 1 per cent.

Mr. TURNER. Where is the recommendation of the jury and the court?

Mr. DAVIS, of California. They are in the report.

Mr. TURNER. Why not read them?

Mr. DAVIS, of California. I will send them to the Clerk's desk and have them read.

Mr. BURCHARD. It is not necessary to read them.

Mr. TURNER. If the report of the Senate states the truth there is not a pretext for the payment of this claim, if I heard it right.

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 64, noes 15.

Mr. TURNER. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair orders tellers, and Mr. DAVIS, of California, and Mr. TURNER are appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 92, noes 30.

Mr. TURNER. No quorum has voted.

Mr. BURCHARD. I ask the gentleman from Kentucky to withdraw the bill rather than break up the quorum.

Mr. PAGE. I do not understand that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BURCHARD] has any right to withdraw the bill.

Mr. BURCHARD. My instructions from the Committee of Ways and Means were to withdraw any bill which led to protracted discussion or debate. Perhaps the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TURNER] will not insist upon his point of order that no quorum voted.

The SPEAKER. The bill is withdrawn.

Mr. BURCHARD. Will not the gentleman from Kentucky withdraw his point of order?

Mr. PAGE. I ask the gentleman from Kentucky if he insists upon his point of order?

Mr. TURNER. I will withdraw it on condition that the bill be passed.

The SPEAKER. The point of order being withdrawn, the bill will be ordered to be engrossed, and read a third time.

Mr. TURNER. I do not withdraw the point of order except on the condition that the bill be passed over. [Laughter.] I am willing that it should be postponed, because if it is right I want to vote for it. According to the report as I heard it read it is not right. I want to investigate it further.

Mr. BURCHARD. Let it be postponed for the present.

The SPEAKER. By consent the bill will be postponed.

NEW YORK CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported a bill (H. R. No. 6517) to convey to the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York certain lands in the city of New York; which was read a first and second time.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster-General are hereby authorized and required to convey unto the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York the land and premises formerly occupied as the site of the post-office in the city of New York, lying upon Nassau street, between Cedar and Liberty streets, in the said city, upon receiving from the said Chamber of Commerce the sum of $200,000, in such payment as shall be agreed upon; and said conveyance, when executed and delivered, shall operate to transfer and grant all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the said premises.

Mr. FORT. I think the point of order should be reserved on this bill.

Mr. GIBSON. Let the report be read.

The SPEAKER. The point of order will be reserved until the report is read.

The report was read, as follows:

That the Government of the United States, while seeking in 1860 for a suitable location for the post-office in New York, determined to purchase the church and grounds on Nassau street, between Cedar and Liberty streets, as the then most eligible and convenient site for the purpose aforesaid.

The amount of money at the command of the Department was limited to $200,000, but the property in question could only be obtained for the sum of $250,000. So unanimous, however, was the conviction of the mercantile community and others of the propriety of the selection that they immediately subscribed the sum of $50,000 and presented it to the Government to be applied to the purchase.

The increased business, and the inadequacy of the building to afford the necessary accommodation for the Department, occasioned the subsequent appointment by Congress of a commission to select another location upon which to erect a building, at once central and commodious, that would answer the necessities of the Department and be creditable in its exterior appearance and internal arrangement to the chief commercial city of the country.

The commissioners at once fixed their attention upon the southern portion of the city park, and the city authorities with great liberality transferred and conveyed to the United States, for the sum of $500,000, a plat of ground valued at $2,000,000 by competent judges.

The new edifice is completed and occupied, and the Government has leased the old site for a small sum, having no occasion to occupy it, but which would be of great use to the Chamber of Commerce, which body represents through its members the various interests which contributed as aforesaid to its purchase, such of the contributors as survive and could be reached having assigned to the Chamber whatever claims in equity they might have by reason of their original subscription.

In view, therefore, of the premises, and taking into consideration the fact that the city of New York, through her constituted authorities, has conveyed to the Federal Government for its uses a beautiful and most valuable portion of her domain for what may be termed a nominal price, and as the said property is no longer in the use or occupation of the Federal Government, and it is now proposed that it shall be devoted to a beneficial public purpose and not to private or personal profit, your committee recommend that the Chamber of Commerce be permitted to purchase the old post-office site for the sum of $200,000, being the amount of the original cost to the United States.

The Chamber of Commerce is the representative of the great commercial metropolis of our country. Its organization antedates the Revolution; its influence has always been manifested in the interests of law and liberty; and by securing to it a proper site for a fire-proof building, its valuable archives will be protected from untimely loss. A bill is therefore reported.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FORT] still insist upon the point of order?

Mr. FORT. I insist upon the point of order. I think this bill should receive its first consideration in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The bill is subject to a point of order, because it proposes to part with the title of certain property of the United States. Mr. JONES, of Ohio. I desire to offer a substitute for the bill.

The SPEAKER. The bill is not before the House.

Mr. CLAFLIN. I hope the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FORT] will withdraw his point of order.

Mr. FORT. I find that some one has penciled upon a copy of the bill an amendment which I think is very proper. It is that the property shall not be conveyed for less than $200,000, but shall be sold for as much more as it may be worth. I understand that there is now a building on this ground.

Mr. CLAFLIN. The building is valueless; it is not worth being torn down. We have already given the State of Illinois all they wanted, and I hope the gentleman will not object.

Mr. FORT. I have a right to make a point of order, and I do not care to be lectured by the gentleman, even if I was not born where it is said if a man is born he need not be born again.

Mr. CLAFLIN. I do not wish to lecture the gentleman.

Mr. THOMPSON and others called for the regular order.

Mr. CONGER. Do I understand that the bill is not before the House?

The SPEAKER. The bill has gone to the Committee of the Whole on a point of order.

CHARLES CLINTON.

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 6102) for the relief of Charles Clinton, late assistant treasurer at New Orleans.

The bill directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Charles Clinton, late assistant United States treasurer at New Orleans, Louisiana, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,850, being the amount of public money stolen from his office on the 1st day of May, 1871, and refunded by him to the Government of the United States.

Mr. EDEN. I will reserve the point of order on this bill until I can hear some explanation of it.

Mr. GIBSON. Let the report be read.

The report, which was read, states that the Committee of Ways and Means have given full consideration to the bill providing for the relief of Charles Clinton, of New Orleans, late assistant treasurer at New Orleans, and all the facts connected therewith: that it appears from the information furnished from the Treasury Department that on the morning of May 1, 1871, the sum of $5,850 was stolen from the office of the assistant treasurer at New Orleans by some party unknown, and that immediately thereafter the amount was refunded to the Government by the assistant treasurer. It also appears from the testimony submitted to the committee that a thorough examination of the facts and of the business of the office of the assistant treasurer by the special agent of the Treasury Department exonerated the cashier and employes of the office in New Orleans and the assistant treasurer himself from all fault or blame.

It is made to appear that in addition to the usual duties of the assistant treasurer he was required by the Secretary of the Treasury to take charge of all internal-revenue stamps to be sold throughout the Southwest, and to sell the same from his office without being allowed any increase of force, although he frequently applied for authority to employ a clerk to take special charge of this business, and informed the Secretary that without an increase of force he could not conduct the office satisfactorily. To this the Secretary replied that no appropriation had been made for this purpose, and therefore the request of the assistant treasurer could not be complied with.

It appears that while the cashier was engaged for a moment in attending to the duties of his office, away from the counter on which were several packages of money lying, some thief fished up one of them by reaching over the barrier in front of the counter, and immediately disappeared. There is no ground of suspicion against the assistant treasurer, or his cashier, or any of the employes of his office. The committee state that it appears the assistant treasurer was a zealous and careful officer, and the cashier was also diligent and faithful. Large sums of money passed through this office, every dollar of which was faithfully accounted for. There was at no time any complaint. It is also made to appear by the testimony before the committee that the assistant treasurer exercised due diligence and watchful care over the appointments and over the actions of his subordinates. In the opinion of the committee the proof absolutely excludes any presumption of fraud or misconduct on the part of the assistant treasurer or his subordinates, or any privy or knowledge on the part of the assistant treasurer. The committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is the point of order insisted upon?

Mr. GIBSON. The point of order, I understand, is withdrawn.

Mr. HARTZELL. I renew the point of order.

The SPEAKER. As the Chair understands, the assistant treasurer at New Orleans was robbed of $5,850. This amount was refunded to the United States and went into the Treasury. The bill proposes to take this amount from the Treasury and pay it to this party. The case differs from one where merely a credit is allowed. In the opinion of the Chair the bill comes within the scope of the rule and must go to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Speaker, sometime ago I objected to a bill presented by the gentleman from Connecticut because it was not exactly in order. I now withdraw that objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut is not new in his seat. The Chair will notice the fact that the objection is withdrawn.

ALBERT U. WYMAN.

Mr. GARFIELD. The Committee of Ways and Means have unanimously directed me to report a bill for the relief of Albert U. Wyman, late Treasurer of the United States. A bill precisely similar to the House bill has been passed by the Senate and is now on the Speaker's table. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the bill (S. No. 1763) for the relief of Albert U. Wyman, late Treasurer of the United States, be taken from the Speaker's table and put upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that a bill of the Senate, exactly similar in language and purpose to one which has been favorably considered by the Committee of Ways and Means, be taken from the Speaker's table and considered. Is there objection?

Mr. EWING. I reserve the right to object until the bill has been read.

The Clerk read the bill. It authorizes and directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Albert U. Wyman, late Treasurer of the United States, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,351.70, to reimburse said Wyman for two bonds of the United States known as "sixes of 1881," of the denomination of $1,000 each, and coupons thereon, purchased by him to replace two bonds of like issue and amount, the property of the First National Bank of Newport, Rhode Island, lost or abstracted from the vault of the national-bank division while Treasurer of the United States.

Mr. GARFIELD. I will merely state—

Mr. HARTZELL. I reserve the right to make the point of order.

Mr. GARFIELD. Of course the bill is liable to a point of order, if it be insisted upon; but when I have stated the case I think there will be no objection to passing the bill.

The present assistant treasurer of the United States was for the period of one year the Treasurer, being the successor of Mr. New, of Indiana. When Mr. Wyman became Treasurer a count was made of all the funds in the Treasury for the purpose of transferring the whole custody and responsibility from the outgoing Treasurer, Mr. New, to the incoming Treasurer, Mr. Wyman; and at that time there was a period of four or five days when there was no Secretary of the Treasury, it being just prior to the assumption of the office by Mr. Morrill. During that time, as is supposed while the process of counting was going on, two bonds of $1,000 each were by some means or other stolen. All the power of the secret-service division of the Government has been employed to discover the thief, but without success. The coupons of those bonds have been presented at several places for redemption, so that it is known they have passed into other hands than the rightful owners; but the thief has never been found, and probably never can be found.

Now, the Treasurer of the United States gives bond to indemnify the Government against all such losses. But of course it is not supposed possible that he or his bondsmen can make good these losses. A theft was committed during the incumbency of Treasurer Spinner, and Congress, satisfying itself only that he had used all due diligence, released him from the payment of the amount. But Mr. Wyman, having just become Treasurer at the time when this theft occurred, and not wishing to appear as a claimant on the Government for the loss, paid it himself by purchasing in open market two bonds to replace those stolen. The certified receipt for that purchase is here in my hand. After having spent nearly two years in trying by every means in his power to discover the thief, but without success, Mr. Wyman now asks—I think very properly—that he be reimbursed for the loss which happened through no fault or neglect of his. The probability is that the theft was committed during the very act of counting the bonds and their transfer to him.

This bill received the unanimous recommendation of the Senate committee and the unanimous vote of the Senate. It has also the unanimous approval of the Committee of Ways and Means; and I trust it will have the unanimous sanction of this House. Of course it is liable to a point of order, if any gentleman chooses to make it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HARTZELL] has reserved the point of order.

Mr. HARTZELL. Let the bill go to the Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The Chair must sustain the point of order. The bill is referred to the Committee of the Whole.

RELIEF, ETC., OF THE HEIRS OF RICHARD STEVENSON.

Mr. GARFIELD, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported back the bill (H. R. N. 5271) for the relief of the heirs and legal representatives of Richard Stevenson, late assistant quartermaster of volunteers, and his bondsmen.

The bill, which was read, provides that the heirs and legal representatives of Richard Stevenson, late an assistant quartermaster of volunteers, and his official sureties or bondsmen, are hereby released from any liability to the United States on account of any moneys or property received or disbursed by said Richard Stevenson as such quartermaster; and the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department are hereby directed to close all accounts of said Richard Stevenson as such quartermaster, in accordance with the intent of this act.

Mr. GARFIELD. I will make a brief statement of this case. It relates to a very serious defect, I think, in our laws, yet we thought it best to present the specific case rather than to amend the general law. What brings this case here is this: upon the death of Senator Morton, of Indiana, when his executors came to settle up his estate, they found his name was on the bond as surety of the late Captain Stevenson, quartermaster of volunteers in the Army, although that officer had been dead sixteen years. Yet because his accounts were as yet unclosed by the accounting officer of the Treasury the estate of Senator Morton could not be released and there is now no law on the statute-book by which the estate of the person dying even can be released as surety, however long time may have elapsed since he became surety. I think that is a hardship in the general law and ought to some time be remedied. But as we were not willing to open the whole question I am authorized to report this special case.

I will state in a moment or two the merits of the case. In 1862 Captain Stevenson was disbursing quartermaster at Nashville, Tennessee. It was in the midst of the active operations of the war, and it was his duty to pay about twelve hundred laborers of the quartermaster and other departments at Nashville. He made out his payroll toward the close of the month, and forwarded it to his superior officer as proof he needed the amount of money summed up on the pay-rolls. The amount was forwarded to him and disbursed in accordance with the duplicate roll which he himself kept. Thus $100,000, in the course of his whole term of service, was paid to him, and all of it is supposed to have been fully and properly disposed of because every month he paid his employes he made the return of receipted vouchers and, of course, showed his work was thus far completed. But he was suddenly taken sick with typhoid fever in the month of September, 1862, and died just a little time after he had sent on his request for a sum of money to be paid out. We suppose he paid that sum of money as usual, and the best proof in the world that he paid it is that the twelve hundred people whom he drew for remained silent for sixteen years without demanding pay for that month. The statement of Quartermaster-General Meigs and the statement of Captain Bingham, who was his immediate superior, all establish the strongest moral evidence which could well be received, that he did disburse those moneys honestly and faithfully; but he was taken sick, and died suddenly, and in the transfer of his office to other hands the roll was never found.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. Did the gentleman say that the number of employes paid by Captain Stevenson was twelve hundred?

Mr. GARFIELD. Yes, sir.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. Is there any evidence from any of those twelve hundred that this money has been paid?

Mr. GARFIELD. I cannot say there is; but employes who are in the regular receipt of pay from the Government every month, who do not present a bill for a given month after a period of sixteen years, it is fair to presume they were paid.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. I presume these parties would be well known on the rolls.

Mr. GARFIELD. They were fugitive people employed as laborers.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. They could procure testimony of one or more who had been paid for that time.

Mr. GARFIELD. It would be impossible now, after the lapse of sixteen years, to skirmish the country over and get affirmative proof this money was paid. This bill therefore provides the sureties of Captain Stevenson shall be released and the captain's accounts closed. Power is given to the accounting officers in the Treasury to do it in their discretion, and that is all. If gentlemen have no further questions, I will call the previous question.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. One other question. The gentleman refers to the fact that these employes have not brought a bill for money due them. Let me ask how long is it since this bill was introduced?

Mr. GARFIELD. It was introduced recently.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. Then why did you wait for this quartermaster sixteen years before applying for relief?

Mr. GARFIELD. The point is this: these were all transactions of 1863, and it is perfectly proper for these people at any time to present their claims for payment to the War Department. They would not present them to Congress, but would go to the War Department.

Mr. TUCKER. I will satisfy my colleague. The reason this bill has not been introduced before is because the executor of the late Senator Morton wants to settle up his estate, and he cannot settle it up so long as there is any outstanding claims. There has been no claim made for this sum of money during the life of Senator Morton, and his executor only wants to settle up the estate.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. How long has Senator Morton been dead?

Mr. TUCKER. Only a year.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. Did he during his life-time apply for relief?

Mr. GARFIELD. Senator Morton never applied for relief, because he was never applied to to pay any one of these claims. He did not know—perhaps he had wholly forgotten—that he was upon the bond. As a mere matter of law his executor finds his estate cannot be settled until the United States releases the surety in Senator Morton's case.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. I do not see the force of the argument of the gentleman; but unless other gentlemen object I will withdraw my objection to the bill.

Mr. GARFIELD. I call for the previous question on the passage of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. I think I must object.

Mr. GARFIELD. It is too late.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. Points of order were reserved.

Mr. GARFIELD. I do not think the bill is subject to the point of order. It is not an appropriation of money out of the Treasury.

The SPEAKER. The bill really takes no money out of the Treasury which is in there but keeps money from going into the Treasury, and that is not within the scope of the rule.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. I do not know as much about this claim as gentlemen of the Committee of Ways and Means, but certainly it does not come within my view of such bills as we ought to pass. I will, however, withdraw the objection if other gentlemen are satisfied.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. GARFIELD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF REVISED STATUTES.

Mr. GARFIELD. At the request of my colleague on the Committee of Ways and Means, [Mr. BANKS,] I present a bill which was unanimously agreed to by that committee. It is the bill (H. R. No. 100) to amend section 2958 of the Revised Statutes.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That section 2958 of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended, as follows:

Add in the sixth line, after the words "other merchandise" the words "and marble in blocks may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, be bonded in open yards, under the care of an officer of customs, at the expense of the owner or importer."

Mr. GARFIELD. I will say that under the present law it is found that the principle of carrying on the manufacture of marble in bonded warehouses is inconvenient, and it is not thought desirable to have marble brought in large blocks if it has been imported into a house to be manufactured. It is impossible to carry out that law, and this bill simply provides that the marble in large blocks may be bonded in open yards rather than to take them into a building. The present provision of the law is inconvenient in regard to this class of business. I ask that the bill be put upon its passage.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. GARFIELD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

N. AND G. TAYLOR COMPANY.

Mr. GARFIELD, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported a bill (H. R. No. 6518) for the relief of "N. & G. Taylor Company." The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to refund and pay to "N. & G. Taylor Company," of Philadelphia, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $11,017.66, being the amount of duties paid by them under protest and appeal on certain importations, in excess of the legal rates, as ascertained by the decision of the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, giving construction to the law, said decision having been acquiesced in and said rate thereafter adopted by the Treasury Department.

Mr. GARFIELD. I ask that the bill and accompanying papers be printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar.

There being no objection, the motion was agreed to.

Mr. GARFIELD. I ask unanimous consent that an amendment which I desire to offer to the sugar bill may be printed for the use of the House.

The SPEAKER. That is other business than that which the House determined to consider to-night.

Mr. WOOD. There was a general bill passed to-night by unanimous consent which would cover that case.

Mr. GARFIELD. By unanimous consent the House can order it to be printed.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has once already to-night refused to ask unanimous consent for business, and the Chair does not like to be inconsistent.

CUSTOMS-REVENUE LAWS.

Mr. SAYLER, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported back, with a recommendation that it do pass, the bill (H. R. No. 5150) for the correction of errors and amendments of customs-revenue laws. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That nothing contained in section 26 of the act entitled "An act to amend the customs-revenue laws and to repeal moietyties," approved June 22, 1874, shall be construed to prevent any individual from pleading or offsetting any claim or deduction he may have or heretofore have had against any claim or demand prosecuted on behalf of the United States, and existing prior to the passage of said act.

Sec. 2. That whenever it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury, or of a judge of a United States court of the district wherein any goods, wares, and merchandise have been imported, that an error of fact, committed prior to June 22, 1874, and subsequent to the passage of the act of June 30, 1864, has been made by a collector or appraiser of United States customs revenue in such district in the ascertainment or collection of duties, such error shall be corrected on the certificate of a United States appraiser in said district, under section 2950, Revised Statutes, by order of the Treasury Department or of said United States district court judge, who is hereby empowered to grant such order and the entry relinquished, with right of protest and appeal, and suit arising therefrom, notwithstanding that the technicalities of law, in whole or in part, have not been complied with, and payment of the uncollected duty shall be required of the importer or the excess refunded, respectively: Provided, That no payments of such refunds shall be made in excess of the amount of the receipts or recoveries on account of such uncollected duties; and that all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Sec. 3. That certificates of appraisal or returns by the United States appraisers upon importations subsequent to the passage of this act shall be made in writing, giving a true description of the merchandise declared in the invoice and entry; the classification thereof in the terms of the tariff act usual in designating similar merchandise under the laws existing at the date of importation or entry for payment of duty; the commercial name by which such merchandise is known in the United States; the market value at the principal markets of the country whence imported; the material or materials of chief value of which a class of merchandise is composed, when so required by law; the number of threads per square inch, and the length, width, and weight per square yard, of such textile fabrics manufactured from vegetable or animal fiber as may be requisite for a basis for classification for duty.

Sec. 4. That upon such return in detail, or certificate of the United States appraiser, the collector, and naval officer, if there be one, shall assess the duties and liquidate the entries under the general instructions of the Treasury Department. Such liquidation shall be made within thirty days from the date of the appraiser's return or certificate, and at such ports as may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury. Notice thereof shall be given by an official statement published in a commercial morning newspaper in the collection district (to be annually designated for such purpose by the collector) within three days after the date of said liquidation, giving date of importation, name of vessel and importer, and amounts due to the Government or to the importer. Such liquidation shall be final and conclusive on all parties except in case of fraud, or of error of fact when discovered within one year from date of payment, and notice given within ten days of date of discovery by the collector to the importer of amounts claimed to be due to the United States, and by the importer to the collector of customs of amounts claimed to be due by the United States to the importer; and payment of the uncollected duty shall be required of the importer or the excess refunded, respectively, unless the owner, importer, or consignee shall be dissatisfied therewith, in which case he shall have the right of protest and appeal within ten days succeeding said notice of liquidation or the payment of duty on said merchandise, setting forth specifically the grounds of protest; and that thereupon the collector shall forward said protest and appeal, with a report thereon, to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall within thirty days thereafter issue a decision on said appeal; and that if the importer, agent, or consignee be dissatisfied therewith, he shall have the right to commence suit in the United States court within ninety days after said Treasury decision.

Sec. 5. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to make such equitable rules and regulations as shall give effect to the foregoing act; and that all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Mr. SAYLER. I do not desire at this late hour to attempt an elaborate explanation of this bill. It is approved, if I understand aright, by the entire body of the Committee of Ways and Means. It gives the same provision for the protection of merchants in the customs revenue that now prevails in the internal-revenue service. It interests chiefly the merchants in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, and Baltimore, and yet at the same time it interests, favorably as I think, the internal cities. That is all I desire to say in regard to the bill, and unless some member objects I will call the previous question, although I do not desire to cut off debate upon the bill.

Mr. CONGER. I ask if this bill is a unanimous report?

Mr. SAYLER. It is the unanimous report of the Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to inquire further if it is in accord with the wish of the Treasury Department?

Mr. SAYLER. I have been informed that it is, but I do not know personally. I suppose some member of the committee, probably the chairman, can say whether it has the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. WOOD. I understand that the Treasury Department would prefer a different phraseology for a part of one of the sections of the bill. The assistant treasurer, Mr. French, has suggested something in reference to the legal effect of one of the provisions of the bill. Otherwise I understand that the bill is in accordance with the desires of the Treasury Department.

Mr. STARIN. I move to strike out the third, fourth, and fifth sections of the bill, with the consent of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SAYLER.]

Mr. SAYLER. I am perfectly willing to yield the floor to the gentleman to make that motion if he desires it. I do not think there is anything in those sections that will result as he believes. I certainly would not be a party to do anything that would destroy any industry in his district, and I do not believe this bill will do so in any way. I will yield for the amendment, and then will call the previous question on the bill and amendment.

Mr. CONGER. It seems to me that this bill makes such radical changes—

Mr. BUTLER. That part of the bill is to be taken out.

Mr. CONGER. It makes such radical changes that it would be well to discuss it before the bill is passed, unless it has been presented to the Treasury Department and has received the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. GARFIELD. I hope my colleague will consent to striking out those three sections.

Mr. SAYLER. Certainly not. I will consent that the amendment may be offered.

The SPEAKER. The House can strike them out; but the gentleman has no power to consent to striking out any portion of the bill reported from the committee.

Mr. SAYLER. I certainly am very much opposed to striking out those sections.

Mr. CONGER. If the gentleman will allow me, I desire to say one or two words.

Mr. SAYLER. I will hear the gentleman.

Mr. CONGER. If I have understood the bill from hearing it read the first time, the intention is to provide two or three places or more on the sea-coast of the United States where this law shall take effect, and not extend it to other ports.

Mr. BUTLER. Oh, no; it is a general law.

Mr. CONGER. There are certain places to be named where this law is to take effect.

Mr. SAYLER. Not at all.

Mr. CONGER. Is it a general law?

Mr. SAYLER. It is a general law.

Mr. WOOD. It applies throughout all the United States, to every port of entry and every port of delivery.

Mr. LATHROP. Will the gentleman allow me to ask a question?

Mr. SAYLER. Certainly.

Mr. LATHROP. Does not this bill open up all cases of importation from 1864 to 1874 for readjustment and settlement?

Mr. SAYLER. It does wherever there has been error. It gives precisely the same protection in other words to the importer in regard to the collection of customs revenue that the producer has now in the collection of internal revenue, and we think that ought to be done.

Mr. LATHROP. It opens up to new controversy every dispute that has arisen between 1864 and 1874 as to the assessment of duties.

Mr. HISCOCK. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. SAYLER. Certainly.

Mr. HISCOCK. Will not the effect of this bill be to send to the courts the question of the valuation of goods, whereas now only the question of classification goes to the courts?

Mr. SAYLER. The bill allows an appeal to the courts.

Mr. BUTLER. That portion goes out with the amendment which has been offered.

Mr. HISCOCK. It will go out with the sections which it is proposed to strike out if that motion is carried. But I desire to say that under the present law the question of valuation does not go to the courts; simply the question of classification. Under this bill the proposition is to send the question of valuation also to the courts.

Mr. SAYLER. That is, it allows an appeal to the courts.

Mr. HISCOCK. Has that the sanction of the Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. SAYLER. My understanding is that the bill in all its sections has the indorsement of the Secretary of the Treasury. I understand what the chairman has stated, that there was some question raised as to the verbiage of one of the sections, but substantially the bill has the indorsement of the officers of the Treasury Department. That is my understanding and the understanding of the committee, and it is undoubtedly the fact.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that the better way would be to read again this bill omitting the sections which it is proposed to strike out, in order that there may be no misapprehension about it.

The Clerk read the bill as proposed to be amended, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c. That nothing contained in section 26 of the act entitled "An act to amend the customs-revenue laws and to repeal moieties," approved June 22, 1874, shall be construed to prevent any individual from pleading or offsetting any claim or deduction he may have or heretofore have had against any claim or demand prosecuted on behalf of the United States, and existing prior to the passage of said act.

Sec. 2. That whenever it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury, or of a judge of a United States court of the district wherein any goods, wares, and merchandise have been imported, that an error of fact, committed prior to June 22, 1874, and subsequent to the passage of the act of June 30, 1864, has been made by a collector or appraiser of United States customs revenue in such district in the ascertainment or collection of duties, such error shall be corrected on the certificate of a United States appraiser in said district, under section 2950, Revised Statutes, by order of the Treasury Department or of said United States district court judge, who is hereby empowered to grant such order and the entry reliquidated, with right of protest and appeal, and suit arising therefrom, notwithstanding that the technicalities of law, in whole or in part, have not been complied with, and payment of the uncollected duty shall be required of the importer or the excess refunded, respectively: Provided, That no payments of such refunds shall be made in excess of the amount of the receipts or recoveries on account of such uncollected duties; and that all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Mr. EDEN. I desire to ask a question. Having just heard the bill read, of course I could not give an exact construction of it. If I understood correctly the reading of one of the sections, it allows persons who allege that any mistake occurred from 1864 to 1874 in reference to the collection of duties on imports to go back through that period of ten years and have the correction made. Now, it occurs to me that that is opening a pretty wide door.

Mr. SAYLER. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. BUTLER.]

Mr. BUTLER. I desire to give the House my understanding of this bill. It was first read to me, I think, in the Treasury Department. The act of June or July, 1874, contained a provision which was construed by the courts in a manner that was not intended in the passage of the act. It was held under that act that neither the Government nor the importer could go back and correct errors of classification; that if, under a certain law, goods ought to be classified in one way, but were in fact classified in another, neither the Government nor the importer had any redress. From the beginning of the Government the power of correcting errors had always resided with the Department itself. The first two sections of the bill, which are not stricken out, and which constitute the bill before us, give that power.

The Department also desired, as did many others, that there should be a correction of a law under which great wrongs had been done to the revenue. The law was, and is, that wherever goods are manufactured abroad they may be sold in open market there, and the invoice valuation fixed by that sale. Under that provision of law great wrongs were done. For instance, gloves were manufactured in Naples for our hands, which are larger than those of the people there. Offering those gloves in that market, they would not bring anything. Yet the sale there fixed the value at which they might be invoiced. Therefore this bill undertook in the sections which have been struck out to establish a home valuation and a home denomination in this country for the purposes of the invoice. But the glove-manufacturing interest in this country, which is a very large interest, thought that by going to the courts it might be possible for large importers to oppress the domestic interest. Hence those sections have been struck out. If the Secretary of the Treasury desires a restoration of those sections, they may be inserted in the Senate, and then the question will again come before the House.

Mr. EDEN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Massachusetts, who I have no doubt is entirely familiar with this question, whether the bill does not propose to give to importers a right to correct alleged errors beginning as far back as 1864 and extending to 1874, a right never existing heretofore?

Mr. BUTLER. The right to go back and correct errors existed before the law of 1874, and nobody ever supposed that that law was intended to prevent such action.

Mr. EDEN. That law, as I understand, did not give the right to go to the courts and correct these errors.

Mr. BUTLER. Yes, sir; it gave that right after protest. Now, here this right is allowed both to the Government and to the importer. It is understood that large amounts of duties can be recovered by the Government as well as by importers.

Mr. EDEN. Under this bill will the Government be enabled to go back for fifteen years to collect duties where errors occurred that long ago?

Mr. BUTLER. For my part I am for going back and doing justice at any time when it can be done.

Mr. EDEN. I presume that if the Government goes back fifteen years to collect old duties, it will not get much. It will probably lose much more than it will make.

Mr. BUTLER. My friend from Illinois would not, I am sure, object to going back more than twenty years to correct an error when convinced that he had made one.

Mr. EDEN. Certainly not.

Mr. BUTLER. And I do not think he would want the Government to do differently from what he would himself.

Mr. FOSTER. As I understood the reading of the bill, the refund is limited to the amount of uncollected duties.

Mr. SAYLER. It provides for both sides—for the Government and for the importer.

Mr. CONGER. I wish some gentleman would state how large a thing this is, so that we can come anywhere within hundreds of thousands.

Mr. BUTLER. My belief is that it will go beyond that.

Mr. CONGER. Into the millions?

Mr. BUTLER. Oh, yes.

Mr. CONGER. Well, I think we had better not dispose of the millions to-night.

Mr. HISCOCK. As I understand, the effect of the bill is to waive on the part of the Government the "right of protest and appeal and suit arising therefrom, notwithstanding the technicalities of law in whole or in part have not been complied with." Now, as I understand, under the law as it now exists it is necessary that claims should have been filed within a given period of time. The object of this bill is to waive that provision of law on the part of the Government. Now, I wish to ask what effect this will have on the claim for two or three million dollars which was investigated by the Senate committee last year and the appropriation for which was thrown out on account of those technicalities not having been complied with, it having turned out that notices had been falsely filed, affidavits falsely made and surreptitiously placed in the custom-house? Does this bill affect that claim at all?

Mr. BUTLER. Not at all. It cannot do so, because there must be a new appraisal under this bill.

Mr. HISCOCK. In the case I refer to the parties had no cause of action, because they had not complied with the law. The notices had not been filed, and for that reason the Senate refused to make the appropriation.

Mr. SAYLER. I shall have to insist on my demand for the previous question.

Mr. BUTLER. That was in a case where by fraud upon the Government they had got themselves by fraudulent papers rightly into court.

Mr. HISCOCK. Now the point I make is this: whether this does not waive that fraud?

Mr. BUTLER. Oh, no.

Mr. SAYLER. I decline to yield any further; it is getting quite late, and I demand the previous question.

Mr. HISCOCK. The point I make is this: that under those claims it was held they had not the right to recover those judgments if they were paid by the Government because it was proved that those protests or those reclamations had been illegally filed. Now this act does away with the necessity of filing them at all, and under this act they would be entitled to have those judgments paid.

Mr. BUTLER. Will my friend look and see nothing can be done until there is reappraisalment.

Mr. HISCOCK. But it puts every one of these claimants in court, as I understand it.

Mr. BUTLER. Not at all; they have already had their judgments.

Mr. HISCOCK. No, they had not collected their judgments.

Mr. BUTLER. I have not said they have collected them, but they have got their judgments; it is said by wrong, but I do not know whether by wrong or right. It does not meet that question.

Mr. SAYLER. I demand the previous question.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 22, noes 49.

The SPEAKER. The previous question is not seconded.

Mr. GARFIELD. I hope my colleague will withdraw his bill.

Mr. SAYLER. Will this be regarded as the pending business in the morning?

The SPEAKER. It will not, as the previous question has not been seconded.

Mr. ATKINS. I move the House do now adjourn.

Mr. SAYLER. I wish to yield to a gentleman on the other side.

Mr. ATKINS. I move that the House do now adjourn, and I insist on my motion.

Mr. SAYLER. I have other bills to present from the Committee of Ways and Means, but will not present them, as this does not seem to be a good night for private bills. [Laughter.]

Mr. ATKINS. I withdraw the motion to adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HARTZELL] objected some time ago to the bill (S. No. 1763) for the relief of Albert U. Wyman, late Treasurer of the United States. He now withdraws his objection. Is there further objection?

Mr. SAYLER. What became of my bill?

The SPEAKER. The House refused to second the demand for the previous question, which throws the bill open for further objection.

Mr. REED. Is it in order to move to lay that bill upon the table?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. BURCHARD. I hope the gentleman from Ohio will withdraw his bill, as there is a majority against it.

Mr. SAYLER. I do not believe there is a majority against it.

Mr. REED. I move to lay it upon the table.

Mr. SAYLER. I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the bill for the present.

Mr. BRAGG. I object.

Mr. SAYLER. I will introduce it when there is a full House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the gentleman has the right to withdraw it.

Mr. SAYLER. I do withdraw it.

ALBERT U. WYMAN.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HARTZELL] withdraws his objection to the bill (S. No. 1763) for the relief of Albert U. Wyman, late Treasurer of the United States. Is there further objection?

There was no further objection.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. GARFIELD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. FORT. I wish to withdraw my objection to House bill No. 6517. I founded my objection upon a letter which I deemed to be trustworthy.

Mr. SPARKS. What is the bill?

Mr. BUTLER. I shall renew the objection.

Mr. TURNER. I move the House adjourn.

SURETIES OF FRANK SOULÉ.

Mr. BURCHARD. I ask to have entered the motion to reconsider the vote by which the House postponed the bill (S. No. 2) releasing Frank Soulé, late collector of internal revenue for the first district of California, and his sureties, from liability on his official bond.

The SPEAKER. That motion will be entered under the rules.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TURNER. I have made the motion to adjourn, and I insist on it being put to the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's motion will be put.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 22, noes 70.

So the House refused to adjourn.

NEW YORK CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Mr. FORT. I wish to withdraw the objection that I made to the bill to convey to the Chamber of Commerce of New York certain lands in the city of New York, and to state that I made it on information contained in a letter which I deemed correct, and a worthy and responsible letter.

Mr. BUTLER. I renew the point of order on that bill.

Mr. STEELE. What is the bill?

Mr. GIBSON. I will state that the bill was the unanimous report of the Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. BUTLER. I renew the point of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ROBBINS. I trust I shall be allowed to report three private bills. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

WILLIAM A. COURTENAY.

Mr. TUCKER. I am instructed to report the bill (H. R. No. 6519) for the relief of William A. Courtenay, agent for the Clyde lines of steamers from Charleston, South Carolina, to New York and Philadelphia.

The bill was read. It provides that the time within which William A. Courtenay, agent for the Clyde lines of steamers from Charleston, South Carolina, to New York and Philadelphia, may appeal from the decisions of the collector of the port of Charleston, South Carolina, to the Secretary of the Treasury, as to the rate and amount of duties paid on the tonnage of the vessels (called entrance fees) of said lines entering at Charleston from 1870 to 1877, is hereby extended until the expiration of ninety days from the date of the approval of this bill.

Mr. TUCKER. At the time this claim arose William A. Courtenay was the agent of the Clyde lines of steamers from Charleston to New York and Philadelphia.

Mr. BRAGG. I would like to inquire, has the time expired under which he can make his appeal?

Mr. TUCKER. It has.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

The question recurred on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 46, noes 3.

Mr. BRAGG. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER. No quorum having voted, the Chair will appoint tellers; and appoints Mr. BRAGG and Mr. TUCKER, who will act as tellers.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 56, noes 5.

Mr. BRAGG. No quorum has voted.

Mr. BURCHARD. I hope the gentleman from Virginia will withdraw the bill and send it to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. KEIGHTLY. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. TUCKER. There are some other private bills which I would like to report.

Mr. ROBBINS. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Committee of Ways and Means I have been jumped all night, and I want to know why I have been jumped and under what rule I have been jumped.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not know of any rule by which the gentleman has been jumped.

Mr. ROBBINS. I want to report three bills to go upon the Calendar and be printed, and I do not care if they remain upon the Calendar forever or not.

Mr. TUCKER. I desire to state to the gentleman from North Carolina that I only wish to report three bills, but as there seems to be an indisposition on the part of the House to act upon anything, I suppose it is better to adjourn, and I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. BUTLER. I objected to a bill, and if it can be amended as reported by the gentleman from New York, I shall have no objection to it now. The difficulty is that it will allow property worth $400,000 to be sold for $200,000.

Mr. BURCHARD. I think the gentleman from North Carolina is reasonable.

The SPEAKER. The Chair was instructed by the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means to recognize the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER.]

Mr. ROBBINS. I do not understand that the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means is authorized by any rule to award the floor to one colleague rather than to another. I stand third upon the committee, and have made every possible effort to be recognized.

Mr. TUCKER. I stand second on the committee, and all that I ask is that he allow me to put upon the Calendar some bills which I am instructed to report. Let them go on the Calendar, at least, if nothing more be done with them.

Mr. BRAGG. I have no desire to deny jurisdiction to the Committee of Ways and Means, but they have reported bills this evening that should have come from the Committee on Public Lands, or from the Committee of Claims, and one that should have come from the Committee on the Judiciary, regulating proceedings in the courts, to which I objected.

Mr. TUCKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin shows that he made the objection to that bill in profound ignorance of the nature of the bill. [Cries of "Regular order!"] I now offer the bill which I send to the Clerk's desk. I ask that it be placed upon the Calendar.

Mr. KENNA. The motion to adjourn has been pending for nearly half an hour. Why can we not have the question put upon it?

Mr. SPARKS. Is there any objection to these bills being placed upon the Calendar?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks there ought not to be any.

Mr. TUCKER. If the motion to adjourn be insisted on let the question be put upon it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair wants to remark that no possible harm can result from reporting these bills to be referred to the Committee of the Whole and placed on the Private Calendar.

Mr. COVERT. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. There does not appear to be a quorum present in the House and the only motion in order under the circumstances is for a call of the House or to adjourn.

Mr. MCGOWAN. I insist upon the motion to adjourn.

The motion to adjourn was not agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will now ask that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROBBINS] be allowed to report their bills, have them read by their titles, the accompanying reports to be printed, and the bills to be referred to the Committee of the Whole and placed on the Private Calendar.

Mr. ROBBINS. And the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARRIS] has a bill to report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia also.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. If there is no discussion.

The SPEAKER. To be reported without discussion and without action.

There was no objection.

BILLS REPORTED.

Mr. TUCKER, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported the following bills; which were read a first and second time, with the reports ordered to be printed, and referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar:

A bill (H. R. No. 6520) for the relief of Minthorne Tompkins and others;

A bill (H. R. No. 6521) for the relief of J. Henry Rives, collector fifth Virginia district; and,

A bill (H. R. No. 6522) to refund to Calvin Bronson, of Toledo, Ohio, the amount paid by him illegally assessed upon a tax on tobacco.

Mr. ROBBINS, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported back the following bills; which were referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 1307) for the relief of George Eyster, assistant treasurer of the United States at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania;

A bill (H. R. No. 2065) for the relief of W. W. Mills; and

A bill (H. R. No. 757) for the relief of William H. Powell and F. A. McDowell.

Mr. HARRIS, of Georgia, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported back the following bill; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 2244) for the relief of Ford, Moorman & Co., of Lynchburg, Virginia, by refunding a sum of money, the proceeds of sale of certain tobacco seized and sold by the Government.

NEW YORK CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Mr. GIBSON. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BUTLER] withdraws his objection to the bill to convey to the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York certain lands in the city of New York.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. As modified?

Mr. GIBSON. It is not a private bill, but a bill in reference to the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York.

The SPEAKER. The proposition is that the bill be amended so that the property in New York may be sold at public auction for not less than $200,000.

Mr. ROBBINS. I understood that the amount was to be fixed at $250,000.

Mr. GIBSON. No; the Chamber of Commerce has already paid $50,000.

Mr. BRAGG. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. Why? It has nothing to do with public lands.

Mr. BRAGG. Does not the United States own this land?

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. The United States owns it.

Mr. BRAGG. All lands belonging to the United States are public lands. I do not know why propositions in regard to lands in New York should not go to the Committee on Public Lands as well as those relating to land in my State.

Mr. ROBBINS. I must object unless the sum is fixed at $250,000, as agreed to in the Committee of Ways and Means.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROBBINS] says that the understanding in the Committee of Ways and Means was that the sum should be fixed at $250,000.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. Very well, then, let it be so.

Mr. GIBSON. The Chamber of Commerce should be credited with $50,000, which they subscribed to the original purchase of the property.

Mr. SPARKS. Let it be made $250,000.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I will consent to that.

The SPEAKER. The proposition, then, is that objection be withdrawn to the consideration by the House of the bill in question, provided it is amended as will now be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read the bill as proposed to be amended, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster-General are hereby authorized and required to sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for not less than $250,000, the land and premises formerly occupied as the site of the post-office in the city of New York, lying upon Nassau street between Cedar and Liberty streets, in the said city; and if the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York shall be the purchaser they shall have credit for the sum of $50,000 heretofore contributed to the United States by the citizens of New York, and the conveyance thereof when executed and delivered shall operate to transfer and grant all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the said premises.

Mr. PRIDEMORE. I object to that bill.

Mr. STONE, of Michigan. I move that the House now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at ten o'clock and fifty minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, &c., were presented at the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as stated:

By the SPEAKER: The petition of certain women of Ohio, for the enforcement of the anti-polygamy law—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, the petition of certain women of Terre Bonne Parish, Louisiana, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. BACON: The petition of Etheridge, Fuller & Co. and others, in relation to the tariff on sugar—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. BAYNE: Resolutions of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, favoring an appropriation for Davis Island dam—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. BURDICK: The petition of M. A. Shaw and 50 others, citizens of Fayette County, Iowa, for the amendment of the patent laws—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, the petition of wholesale grocers and dealers in sugar, of Dubuque and 50 other cities and towns in Iowa, against the passage of the pending sugar bill—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. CONGER: The petition of William Anderson and others, citizens of Decatur, Michigan, for a commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic—to the same committee.

By Mr. DANFORD: The petition of Mrs. May A. Armstrong and 85 others, citizens of New Athens, Ohio, for legislation to make effective the anti-polygamy law of 1862—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DUNNELL: The petition of citizens of Minnesota, that the tariff on sugar be regulated on the ad valorem principle—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. EKRETT: Resolutions of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, favoring an appropriation for Davis Island dam—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. FORT: The petition of Mrs. J. B. Deselm and 8 others, of Rockville, Illinois, for legislation to suppress polygamy—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HANNA: The petition of Henry Wood and others, of Indiana, against the passage of the bill known as the Robbins sugar bill—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. HATCHER: Memorial of wholesale grocers and dealers in sugar in Missouri, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. HENDERSON: The petition of P. B. Durley, William E. Eddy, and 349 others, citizens of Putnam County, Illinois, for the building of a ship-canal from Chicago to the Illinois River, and for the improvement of said river—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. KEIGHTLEY: The petition of Grange 291, Saint Joseph County, Michigan, for the passage of the Reagan interstate commerce bill—to the same committee.

By Mr. KELLEY: The petition of 81 citizens of Erie County, Pennsylvania, for liberal appropriations for public improvements—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Also, the petition of 46 citizens of Erie County, Pennsylvania, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. LORING: The petition of Levi Stockbridge and others, of Amherst, Massachusetts, for aid to the industry of agriculture—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, the petition of George W. Putnam, of Massachusetts, for the extension of a patent—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. LUTTRELL: The petition of Jane M. McCrabb, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MORGAN: The petition of William O. Butler and others, of Lawrence County, Missouri, for the passage of a law equalizing bounties of soldiers of the late war—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, the petition of wholesale grocers and dealers in sugar, of Saint Louis, Missouri, that the duties on sugar be regulated on the ad valorem principle—to the Committee of Ways and Means.

By Mr. PRICE: The petition of the Women's Christian Temperance Union and 30 others, of Sabula, Iowa, for a commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. THORNBURGH: The petition of James S. Fain for compensation for services rendered in the United States Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, the petition of ladies of New Market, Tennessee, relative to polygamy in Utah—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. STONE, of Michigan: The petition of Lydia U. Bingham and 75 other women, of Plainwell, Michigan, for legislation to make more effective the anti-polygamy law of 1862—to the same committee.

By Mr. STRAIT: Memorial of the Legislature of Minnesota, to grant Government lands to ex-soldiers—to the Committee on Public Lands.

Also, a memorial of the Legislature of Minnesota, for the improvement of the western channel of the Mississippi River at Saint Paul, Minnesota—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. WRIGHT: Memorial of the Brotherhood of Labor of the District of Columbia, praying for reforms in government by which the rights of the people may be recognized—to the Committee on Education and Labor.

IN SENATE.

FRIDAY, February 28, 1879.

The Senate met at eleven o'clock a. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. BYRON SUNDERLAND, D. D.

THE JOURNAL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will delay the reading of the Journal for the present.

Mr. INGALLS, (at eleven o'clock and five minutes a. m.) I ask for the reading of the Journal.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is not a quorum present.

Mr. INGALLS. Then I ask for a call of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll of the Senate.

The Secretary called the roll, and thirty-nine Senators answered to their names.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is a quorum present. The Secretary will read the Journal of the proceedings of yesterday.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from Major C. M. Terrell, chief paymaster, Department of Texas, denying the statement contained in the letter of Major A. E. Bates to Hon. H. B. Banning, published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the 2d instant, so far as it commits him as in favor of the bill (S. No. 1491) to reduce and reorganize the Army of the United States and to make rules for its government and regulation; and a letter of Major A. E. Bates withdrawing the statement; which was ordered to lie on the table.

SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a communication from David T. Corbin.

The Secretary read as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 28, 1879.

SIR: I have been before the Senate for two years actively asserting my right to a seat in the Senate as Senator-elect from the State of South Carolina. I have most persistently pressed my claim because the lawful legislature of South Carolina on the 12th day of December, A. D. 1876, duly elected me to said office. The committee of the Senate on Privileges and Elections has, after elaborate investigation into the law and facts of my case, reported to the Senate that I was duly and lawfully elected by the Legislature of South Carolina to a seat in this body, as Senator from the State of South Carolina, for the term of six years commencing on the 4th of March, A. D. 1877, and that I am entitled to be sworn in as such. This report is before the Senate waiting action, but I now learn, to my great surprise, that some of those Senators, supposedly willing to consider and dispose of the subject-matter of said report on its merits, are not disposed to consider it at all. Their action formally appearing on the record indicates conclusively that my right to a seat in the Senate will not be passed upon during the present session of Congress. It will be useless for me to return here to prosecute my claim before the next Senate.

Not wishing to prolong a fruitless contest, already extended over a period of two years, and at great sacrifice and expense, I now withdraw from the same. I wish to emphasize and I repeat, that I withdraw now from this contest because I am satisfied beyond question that I cannot by any proper effort of mine obtain my seat. I believe that I have in the contest I have made discharged to the full measure of my ability my duty to the Legislature of South Carolina that elected and sent me here, and have also done my duty to the many personal and political friends whose interests and rights were involved in my admission to my seat. That I have failed to obtain my seat I sincerely regret, as I represented many and peculiar interests. Had I been admitted to the floor of the Senate, I might there have spoken for them and been heard. I might have been able, among other duties, to have rendered essential service to the colored race of South Carolina and the South, now sadly in need of help, and with whose wrongs I am very familiar. But I am shut out from this service, and through no fault of my own. The responsibility of my failure to obtain my seat rests with others, and if it proves a burden to them they will no doubt assume and bear it as best they may.

I am, very respectfully,

DAVID T. CORBIN.

Hon. WILLIAM A. WHEELER,
President of the Senate.

Mr. THURMAN. To whom is that paper addressed?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. To the Senate of the United States.

Mr. THURMAN. It is a very singular paper, I must say. I am half disposed to move that it be returned to the man who sent it here; but I make no motion about it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The paper will lie upon the table.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. PADDOCK. I present a memorial and joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Nebraska, with reference to the Santee Sioux Indians and relief of Knox County. As it is an important matter, and a very short memorial, I ask that it be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Memorial and joint resolution with reference to the Santee Sioux Indians and relief of Knox County.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

We, your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Nebraska, would respectfully represent to your honorable body that a part of the Sioux Nation of Indians remain trespassers upon the soil of Nebraska, notwithstanding their participation in recent treaties between the United States and various tribes of the Sioux; that the lands which they now occupy in the county of Knox, in our State, were never owned or claimed by them, or by the Sioux Nation, but were seized and appropriated by the Interior Department for the use of the Santee Sioux Indians contrary to law, after being settled upon and cultivated by citizens of Knox, formerly L'Eau-qui-court County; and that certain islands in the Niobrara River, within the boundaries of Knox County and State of Nebraska, withdrawn from market for the use of the Ponca Indians, have not yet been restored to such market, notwithstanding said Ponca Indians have been removed to the Indian Territory south; and

Whereas that portion of the now unoccupied lands known as the old Ponca reservation, incorporated in the great Sioux reservation and recently vacated by the Spotted Tail band, is most desirably situated, and equal in all respects to the lands now held by the said Santees in our State; and

Whereas the aforesaid old Ponca reserve is not more than six miles distant from the said lands held by the Santees as aforesaid, in the county of Knox, and no hardship, but lasting benefits, would result from their permanent location upon their own land, namely, the said former Ponca reservation; and

Whereas the speedy removal of these Sioux Indians is of vital importance to the county of Knox and Northern Nebraska; Therefore,

Be it resolved, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress are hereby requested to use all honorable means to secure such action of Congress as may be requisite for the removal of said Indians, and for the restoration to their former condition as public lands of the United States all the lands within the said county of Knox, including the above-mentioned islands in the Niobrara River.

Resolved, That the secretary of state be, and is hereby, instructed to transmit a certified copy of this memorial and joint resolution, together with a copy of the report of the committee thereon, to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

CHARLES P. MATHERSON,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

EDMUND C. CARNS,

President of the Senate.

Mr. PADDOCK. Accompanying this memorial there is transmitted by the order of the Legislature a report of the committee on federal relations of the house of representatives of that Legislature, with full exhibits in regard to this matter. I move that be referred, in connection with the memorial, to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. McMILLAN presented a memorial of the Legislature of Minnesota, praying legislation for the relief of certain settlers on railroad lands in the town of Birch Cooley, in Renville County, in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. WITHERS presented a memorial of Friendship Grange, No. 32, of Frederick County, Virginia; a memorial of Elon Grange, No. 405, of Amherst County, Virginia; a memorial of Angola Grange, No. 46, of Cumberland County, Virginia; and a memorial of Totaro Grange, No. 104, of Brunswick County, Virginia, in favor of a reduction of the tax on tobacco; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of Friendship Grange, No. 32, of Frederick County, Virginia; a memorial of Elon Grange, No. 405, of Amherst County, Virginia; a memorial of Angola Grange, No. 46, of Cumberland County, Virginia; and a memorial of Totaro Grange, No. 104, of Brunswick County, Virginia, in favor of the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 3547) to regulate interstate commerce and to prohibit unjust discriminations by common carriers; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. WALLACE presented a memorial of Mount Joy Grange, No. 537, of Armstrong County, Pennsylvania, in favor of the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 3547) to regulate interstate commerce and to prohibit unjust discriminations by common carriers; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented resolutions of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in favor of an appropriation for the completion of the dam at Davis's Island; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. MAXEY presented a memorial of Valley River Grange, No. 88, of Cooke County, Texas, in favor of a reduction of the tax on tobacco; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of Valley View Grange, No. 88, in favor of the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 3547) to regulate interstate commerce and to prohibit unjust discriminations by common carriers; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, presented resolutions of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in favor of an appropriation for the completion of the dam at Davis's Island; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Canonsburgh, Pennsylvania, soldiers of the late war, praying for the passage of the bill granting equalization of bounties; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois, presented additional testimony in support of the claim heretofore presented of W. C. Flagg, late collector of internal revenue for the twelfth district of Illinois, for payment of a balance alleged to be due him for services rendered as collector and disbursing agent; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. TELLER presented a memorial of the Legislature of Colorado, praying for such legislation as will confirm the equitable rights of settlers upon the Maxwell land grant in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. FERRY presented a memorial of Ashland Grange, No. 545, of Newaygo, Michigan, in favor of the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 3547) to regulate interstate commerce and to prohibit unjust discriminations by common carriers; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Armistead Burwell, praying for himself and on behalf of others, for the refunding of taxes collected on cotton during the years 1865, 1866, 1867, and 1868, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was ordered to be printed, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2885) for the relief of Mary C. Webber, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

He also, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. R. No. 227) for securing reports of the products of the fisheries, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 5030) to extend the operations of the Light-House Board over the Saint Croix River and Lake, in the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, and the Chippewa River, in the State of Wisconsin, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. RANDOLPH, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 5897) to amend section 4400 of title 52 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, concerning the regulation of steam vessels, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. MERRIMON, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 5704) extending the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in the District of Columbia, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. VOORHEES, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1473) granting a pension to Sally Murray Buchanan, reported it without amendment.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to which was referred a memorial of the American Geographical Society, asking for the printing of certain documents relating to a canal to connect the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, have instructed me to report back the same and ask to be discharged from its further consideration. The committee are of opinion that these documents should be printed, but it is so late in the session that they cannot be sent for and furnished to the Senate so that the estimates required by law may be made at this session.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The committee are discharged.

Mr. KELLOGG, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4360) granting a pension to Isaac Winans, of the Ohio militia, in the war of 1812, reported it without amendment.

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4365) granting an increase of pension to Mary F. McKeever, reported it without amendment.

EPIDEMIC DISEASES.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Committee on Printing, to which was referred a resolution to print copies of the report of the select committee appointed to investigate and report the best means of preventing the introduction and spread of epidemic diseases in the United States, together with the accompanying documents, have instructed me to report it with amendments, and to ask for its present consideration. By unanimous consent, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The amendments reported from the Committee on Printing were, in line 1, to strike out "— copies of;" in line 14, after the word "printed," to insert the words "and also 6,000 additional copies, 2,000 of which shall be;" and after the word "Senate," at the end of the resolution, to add "and 4,000 for the use of the House;" so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring.) That the report of the select committee of the Senate appointed to investigate and report the best means of preventing the introduction and spread of epidemic diseases in the United States, with the testimony taken by said committee, and the report and maps of what is known as the yellow-fever commission organized by the Supervising Surgeon of the Marine Hospital Service in 1878, and the report of the board of experts appointed by said committee, and certain communications from medical associations and eminent medical men, be printed; and also 6,000 additional copies, 2,000 of which shall be for the use of the Senate and 4,000 for the use of the House.

The amendments were agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

PARIS EXPOSITION REPORTS.

Mr. ANTHONY. The same committee, to which was referred a concurrent resolution for printing the reports of the Paris exposition, have instructed me to report it without amendment and to recommend its passage. I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent the Senate proceeded to consider the following resolution:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring.) That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, authorized to have the reports of the commissioners of the United States to the Paris exposition of 1878, or such of them as may be accepted by him for publication, printed and bound at the Congressional Printing Office, and that in addition to the usual number there shall be 3,000 extra copies for the use of the Senate, 6,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 4,000 for the use of the Department of State.

Mr. HOAR. I ask the Secretary to read again the number which is given to the Department.

The Secretary read as follows:

And 4,000 for the use of the Department of State.

Mr. HOAR. I move to amend by adding these words:

Of which 600 copies shall be distributed among the authors of the reports printed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. COCKRELL, it was Ordered, That John A. Shaw have leave to withdraw from the files of the Senate the papers filed with the bill for his relief, which has become a law.

On motion of Mr. COCKRELL, it was Ordered, That C. W. Brink have leave to withdraw from the files of the Senate the papers relating to his applications for relief.

PERMANENT ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia, submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to furnish the Senate at its next regular session a tabulated statement showing the annual amount paid under what is known as "Permanent annual appropriations," from 1866 to 1879, inclusive, separating the amount expended by each Department; and also payments on account of the public debt, giving reference to the laws under which the different amounts were paid.

TENTH CENSUS.

Mr. MORRILL. I am directed by the Select Committee on the Census, to which were referred the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. No. 1685) to provide for taking the tenth and subsequent censuses, to move that the Senate non-concur in the amendments and ask for a committee of conference.

Mr. CONKLING. I should like to hear read the House amendments in which we are to non-concur.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments will be reported.

The Secretary proceeded to read the amendments of the House of Representatives, and continued the reading until he reached the amendment on page 10, at the end of line 25, in relation to obtaining certain facts from railroad and other corporations.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to say that this provision is in relation to the railroads of the country and in relation to the insurance companies, and contains provisions that were provided for by the Senate bill by a general clause without going into all of these details in the very elaborate manner now proposed.

Mr. CONKLING. If the Senator will allow me to interrupt him a moment, I want to reserve all points of order upon this bill. I do not desire to interrupt the Senator; but I do not wish to be told hereafter that I am too late. I understand this came here this morning.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It came yesterday.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It is reported this morning just now.

Mr. MORRILL. I merely desire to say that I do not suppose that any one member of the Committee on the Census agrees to this proposition of the House, but all are in favor of the original proposition. The substantive amendment of the House is in relation to the appointment of supervisors, upon which there is a difference between the House and the Senate.

Mr. CONKLING. I do not think there is.

Mr. MORRILL. I think there is. In relation to the other amendments, they are mainly formal.

Mr. CONKLING. I ask for the reading of the amendments, not wishing to do anything unnecessarily to retard the bill. I think, however, they ought to be printed and I am ready for one to say that some of them are in my judgment great improvements upon the bill, the amendment to which the Senator refers, among others. I see no reason why these officers, important as they are to be, should not be appointed in the customary way, instead of in the very unusual way, I think, that is prescribed by the bill as it passed the Senate. Therefore, at the proper time I shall wish to test the sense of the Senate upon agreeing to at least some of these amendments. In the mean time I should like to have them printed, and I think the bill should lie over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments will be printed, and the bill will go over under the rule.

Mr. MORRILL. Will not the Senator be willing to test that point, for I think that is the only one?

Mr. CONKLING. I would rather see all the amendments in print. I think myself this bill as it passed the Senate is a great mistake. I think we are going to devote an enormous sum of money to the doing of a thing which can be done equally well with much less money, and I confess I look at this bill, in the light of other bills which have been passed by the Senate and are to be, with a great deal of concern, and I do not wish myself to vote $9,000,000 to count the noses of this people if in truth, three millions will do it.

Now, I do not wish to dispute about this matter with any member of the Committee on the Census. I have given some attention to the subject now and heretofore. I have a very fixed belief about it. I am opposed to the Senate bill; and without meaning to make any factious opposition to it, I do not intend that that bill shall become a law without doing what I think is fairly incumbent upon me, to present to the attention of the Senate some points in regard to it. Therefore I want to see these amendments in print, and when they are in print I will move as to some of them that the Senate concur.

Mr. MORRILL. I suppose, of course, it is in the power of almost any Senator to prevent the passage of any bill at this late period of the session of the Senate. I do not desire that any part of this bill shall become a law against the will of a majority of both Houses; but yet the proposition to delay it until the several amendments can be printed and acted upon in detail, I think almost practically prevents the action of the Senate upon this bill during the present session. I hope that the motion to delay this bill for the purpose of having the amendments printed will not prevail.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is not a motion. The report having been made to-day, it goes over, under the rule, on a single objection.

Mr. CONKLING. I beg to say one word. The Senator from Vermont puts himself, I submit, in a rather odd position in bestowing the criticism upon me that he does. As a matter of parliamentary proceeding, the first motion is to bring the two Houses together. In place of making that motion, he proposes that the Senate shall disagree to all these amendments, and then commit this whole subject to a conference committee, which means probably but one Senator and one member of the House, considering how much occupied all the members and all the Senators are; so that that being his motion, I think he can hardly charge upon me a proceeding for delay. To print these amendments will take until to-morrow morning at most. That is a very short delay. And, moreover, should the bill pass beyond this session no harm whatever will come to the proceeding at which it professes to be addressed. This is February, 1879. This census is not to be taken, and the beginning of it is not to be made until months after the next regular session of Congress begins. Therefore if you assume that a new act of Congress is necessary should the bill go beyond this session, which it will not by any factious opposition of mine, there would be no loss in the end.

Mr. MORRILL. Of course it is impossible to struggle against the rules of the Senate as to the delay from to-day until to-morrow. I therefore ask that the amendments of the House, as proposed, shall be printed together with the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. They will be printed. That order has already been made.

HENRY M. MEADE.

Mr. McPHERSON. I ask unanimous consent to take up House bill No. 138.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Jersey asks the Senate to consider at this time the bill named by him.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 138) for the relief of Henry M. Meade, late paymaster in the United States Navy. It authorizes the accounting officers of the Treasury Department to adjust the accounts of Henry M. Meade, late a paymaster in the United States Navy, and to credit him with $2,545.22 for unavoidable losses and checkages sustained by him in the legitimate performance of his duties as paymaster in the Navy from 1862 to 1872.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us hear the report.

Mr. McPHERSON. I will state, for the information of the Senator from Vermont, that this bill passed through both Houses of the Forty-fourth Congress and failed to receive the signature of the Executive. It has been again considered by a committee of the House at this Congress, also a committee of the Senate, and been favorably reported. I have a copy of the report here, and it can be read if desired.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report submitted by Mr. McPHERSON on the 20th instant:

The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 138) for the relief of Henry M. Meade, late paymaster in the United States Navy, submit the following report:

The said Meade was paymaster in the United States Navy from January 31, 1862, to February 23, 1872, a period of over ten years, during which his accounts were promptly rendered, showing great care, fidelity, and accuracy. During his service more than twenty millions of dollars' worth of money and property passed through his hands, and his duties during the war were extremely arduous. All his commanding officers bear willing testimony to his scrupulous honesty, zeal, and industry. The unfortunate dissipation into which he fell during the last four months of his official career was not the cause, either immediately or remotely, of the losses mentioned in his petition, and provided against in this bill; but such losses are the result of incomplete vouchers to the amount of about $2,500, which the accounting officers of the Treasury Department regretted their want of authority to allow.

In the peculiar situation in which said Meade was placed during the war, it was impossible for him to avoid losses, and relief has been frequently granted by Congress in cases not so deserving as the one presented by him. He was disbursing officer of the flagship Mattabesett, which did duty in the sounds of North Carolina, from February, 1864, to June, 1865. This entailed upon him heavy responsibilities with very meager facilities. In addition to his duties as disbursing officer for the entire fleet, he assumed control of the powder division. While he was thus acting, he suffered for the want of sufficient depositories in the loss of clothing and small stores to the amount of about $1,000. It was impossible under the circumstances, amid the excitement and confusion of the frequent engagements by the fleet with the enemy, to avoid such losses.

While the United States steamer Kearsarge, of which said Meade was paymaster, was in April, 1869, at Talcahuano, Chili, he sold to Barton & Turnbull, ship-chandlers, ten barrels of salt beef, condemned by survey, for $7.97. Soon after the vessel was ordered suddenly to sea, before the collection was made. The agents of the Government had had large dealings with this firm, and they were considered entirely reliable. But they dissolved without paying for this beef. We consider that said Meade in this transaction was not guilty of any negligence, and should be allowed this voucher. So he should be allowed $49.98 for coffee stolen from him in Callao, Peru, without any fault or neglect on his part. As the vessel was on the eve of sailing, no board of survey was called and the Treasury Department could not make this allowance.

There are other small items, running through his ten years' service, aggregating $536, as equally deserving, and which should be allowed. The petitioner holds vouchers against the United States steamer Nyack for supplies purchased by Commander Eastman while at Callao, Peru, in the spring of 1870, to the amount of $175, and paid for by said Meade at the request of said Eastman. If any one should lose this money it should be Eastman and not Meade, and we recommend it be allowed the latter as credit. The checkage of $93.42 against said Meade in favor of Paymaster Fulton was not proper. It was an error upon the books of said Fulton, and Meade should not suffer the loss. The Treasury Department allowed one Charles Stewart a credit of $100 in his settlement of accounts, claimed to have been advanced officially by him to said Meade. This was a private loan, and promptly paid back by said Meade, and the said Stewart imposed upon the Department. He had no legal voucher, and the allowance to him by the Department was erroneous, and Meade should not be forced to pay both the Government and Stewart.

While said Meade was paymaster of the Kearsarge, one William S. Huddell was paymaster's clerk from January, 1868, to April, 1869, when he was transferred to the United States steamer Tuscarora as acting assistant paymaster. In making up his accounts it was discovered he had overdrawn to the extent of $425.33. The said Huddell had free access to the books of the paymaster, but there is no evidence that he intended anything wrong; but, as he fell a victim soon afterward to the yellow fever, he had no opportunity to reimburse the Government, and left no means out of which it could be done. This seems an unavoidable loss upon the part of the petitioner, and is a proper item for relief. Therefore this committee do recommend that said bill do pass.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning hour has expired. Is there unanimous consent that this bill be further considered at this time?

Mr. McPHERSON. I hope unanimous consent will be given.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COURTS IN LOUISIANA.

Mr. THURMAN. I have been trying for two or three days to get up a bill that ought to pass at once—a bill of a local character, to divide the State of Louisiana into two judicial districts.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. HOWE. I want to say to the Senator from Ohio that I am extremely reluctant to stand in the way of anything he or any other Senator wants done; but day after day and for weeks I have sat here with bills on the Calendar. Persons interested in them besiege me morning and evening to move those bills. My only explanation why I do not is that I have to antagonize the whole Calendar when I do. Now I beg Senators for the present to consent to the execution of the order and let the Calendar have its chance.

Mr. THURMAN. This bill could have been passed while the Senator has been speaking.

Mr. HOWE. So in a short time I could have passed every bill I am interested in.

Mr. THURMAN. This bill came from the House; it has been considered in the Judiciary Committee; we have reported it with an amendment; both the Senators from Louisiana are anxious for its passage. It is absolutely necessary if the court down there is not to be utterly deluged with the amount of business it has, and its sessions prolonged until, if not through, the summer.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made to the request of the Senator from Ohio. The consideration of the Calendar is now in order.

THE CALENDAR.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. Mr. President—

Mr. EDMUNDS. Regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded, which is the consideration of the Calendar of general orders under the special order.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I trust the Senator from Vermont will permit me to call up a bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will report the first bill on the Calendar, commencing at the point reached yesterday.

Mr. VOORHEES. May I ask consent of the Senate to consider order of business No. 1057, a bill for the relief of Mark Walker, which I have tried to call up several times? I do not wish to be persistent or disagreeable to the Senate, and it is not necessary for me to take time to explain that I am not. I hope there will be no objection.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I see that Senators prefer to make the Calendar a grab-bag and I withdraw my objection, first in favor of the Senator from Pennsylvania, [Mr. CAMERON.]

Mr. VOORHEES. I did not hear the Senator's remark.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I said that I perceived we were all disposed to make the Calendar a grab-bag as they say at the church fairs, and I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania who first appealed to me.

Mr. VOORHEES. The Senator from Vermont does not mean to apply that remark to me.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. VOORHEES. I object to any other business except the Calendar, if the bill I have called up cannot be considered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made. The Secretary will report the first bill on the Calendar.

Mr. THURMAN. In view of the fact that I allowed the Louisiana bill to go aside at the request of Senators, I ask unanimous consent to take it up now.

Several SENATORS objected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made. The Secretary will report the first bill on the Calendar.

PHILIP W. STANHOPE.

The bill (H. R. No. 1901) for the relief of Philip W. Stanhope was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Philip W. Stanhope, late captain of the Twelfth United States Infantry and brevet lieutenant-colonel of the United States Army, having been placed upon the list of supernumeraries, from which he was mustered, under the mistake of groundless charges as the superinducing cause thereof, the President is authorized by the bill to restore him to his proper rank and promotion in the Army; and the Secretary of War is directed, on account of his disabilities incurred in the line of duty, to place him on the retired list, without regard to the limit as to numbers heretofore fixed by law. He is to receive no pay or allowances for the time he was out of service other than that already received at the time of his muster-out.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senator reporting this bill from the committee if this officer is not also drawing a pension, and whether it is not the policy that an officer shall not draw a pension and be on the retired list at the same time; that is, that he shall not draw his pension while he is drawing his retired pay?

Mr. SPENCER. Certainly he cannot draw a pension if he is on the retired list. Whether or not this officer draws a pension now I do not know; but of course he cannot draw a pension while on the retired list.

Mr. SARGENT. That is a proposition I endeavored to establish here the other day, but it was disputed by Senators from the Pension Committee who reported a bill giving a pension to a person who was on the retired list of the Navy. I think if there is any doubt in Senators' minds it would be better to put a clause in the bill to provide for that.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move, then, to amend the bill by adding:

And provided further, That he draw no pension while on the retired list.

Mr. SPENCER. I have no objection to that.

Mr. BURNSIDE. That is a proper amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ALFRED MULLER.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 1162) for the relief of Alfred Muller, assistant surgeon United States Army; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It appropriates $600 for the reimbursement of Alfred Muller, late acting assistant surgeon in the United States Army, at Fort Ridgely, Minnesota, for the loss of property destroyed by the burning of Government buildings at the post on the 19th of January, 1865.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY E. WILKINSON.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 1301) for the relief of Henry E. Wilkinson, late first lieutenant of Company I, Ninety-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for the payment to Henry E. Wilkinson, late first lieutenant of Company I, Ninety-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, $414.20, being the amount justly due him as first lieutenant from September 1, 1862, to December 26, 1862, for which time he has never received any pay or other allowance.

Mr. EDMUNDS. How does that happen? Let us hear the report. The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. HERFORD in the chair.) The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report submitted by Mr. SPENCER on the 28th of January:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred H. R. No. 1301, "An act for the relief of Henry E. Wilkinson, late first lieutenant Company I, Ninety-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers," have had the same under consideration, and submit the following report:

This bill provides for payment to said Wilkinson the sum of $414.20, amount claimed to be due him for pay as a first lieutenant of infantry from September 1, 1862, to December 26, 1862.

The following is the report of the House Committee on Military Affairs, the record sustaining the facts therein set forth, together with the conclusions of the committee:

[H. Report No. 260, Forty-fifth Congress, second session.]

Mr. STRAIT, from the Committee on Military Affairs, submitted the following report, to accompany bill H. R. No. 1301:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 1301) for the relief of Henry E. Wilkinson, late first lieutenant of Company I, Ninety-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, have had the same under consideration, and report the same back to the House and recommend its passage.

It is shown by the evidence that Henry E. Wilkinson, late first lieutenant Company I, Ninety-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, was sentenced by court-martial in November, 1862, to loss of two months' pay, and to be reprimanded in general orders.

It is shown that by the operation of military law, and not by sentence of the court, he was dismissed the service with the loss of all pay and allowance.

It is also clearly shown that the officer was in fact not guilty, and but for the ignorance of military law on the part of the officer and the court which tried him, no conviction could have been had, as the charge on which he was tried and the circumstances of the case were such that the charge was considered frivolous and not well founded by the officers of the command to which said Wilkinson belonged.

It is shown that said officer was restored to duty by competent authority previous to and was absolutely on duty at the time of his trial, and it was believed the charge, "breach of arrest," had been or would be dismissed.

It is shown that he continued on duty and in command of his company after his trial, and that he greatly distinguished himself in the battle of Fredericksburgh, Virginia, after the date of the order of dismissal was issued, and before it reached his regiment.

It is shown by the evidence that said order was subsequently so modified by the War Department as to allow the officer to again enter the service, which he did, and served to the close of the war, and was honorably mustered out with his command.

It is also shown that said Wilkinson was among the first to volunteer at the beginning of the war in the three months' service; and that it was greatly owing to his own money and personal efforts afterward that the Ninety-ninth Regiment was brought into the field, with which he bore an honored and conspicuous part.

It is shown that said Wilkinson was a brave, worthy, and exemplary officer. It is also found that he has never been paid, and that there is still due him pay as first lieutenant, from August 31, 1862, to December 26, 1862, being the sum of $414.20; and your committee would therefore recommend the passage of the bill for his relief for said amount.

This case was passed upon favorably by the Senate Committee on Military Affairs first session Forty-fourth Congress, and reported without amendment by Mr. Logan, then chairman. (See Senate Journal, page 604, first session, Forty-fourth Congress, June 21, 1876.)

Not having been reached prior to the expiration of the Forty-fourth Congress, it is now presented to the Forty-fifth Congress. Inasmuch as the facts are the same, your committee recommend concurrence of the Senate in the act.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MATHIES AND M'KAY PATENT.

Mr. EATON. I gave notice yesterday that I should call up to-day a certain bill and ask to suspend the rules and all other business for that purpose. I now move that Senate bill No. 1629 be taken up.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us hear the notice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the notice of the Senator from Connecticut.

The Secretary read as follows:

Mr. EATON gives notice that at or before the expiration of the morning hour on Friday, February 28, he will move the suspension of the Anthony rule and all other rules and the postponement of the pending and all other orders that the consideration of Senate bill No. 1629, to allow the Commissioner of Patents to extend the patent numbered 6535 of reissues, may be proceeded with.

Mr. EATON. This is a bill to allow the Commissioner of Patents, if he thinks proper on the evidence, to extend a patent that will expire—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut make a motion to suspend the rules at this time?

Mr. EATON. I did give notice yesterday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator make that motion now?

Mr. EATON. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BOOTH. I do not know whether I ought to object to the consideration of this bill, but I desire to call attention to the fact that it is a bill for the extension of a patent and will involve considerable discussion, I think. I make that statement.

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope the Senator from Connecticut will withdraw his motion until we get to the end of the morning hour, which is ten minutes only. That will enable us to pass one or two more bills.

Mr. EATON. It is only a little over five minutes. I do not think it is worth while to withdraw my motion for that. I insist on my motion.

Mr. INGALLS. Will the effect of that motion be, if adopted, to displace the unfinished business at the expiration of the morning hour? I give notice that at the expiration of the morning hour I shall call up the unfinished business.

Mr. PADDOCK. I do not wish the Senator from Connecticut to understand that I object to this motion.

Mr. EATON. But I fear my friend will vote against it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Connecticut to suspend the Anthony rule and all other rules and orders for the purpose indicated by him.

Mr. BLAINE. What is the immense pressure for that particular case that the Calendar should be stopped? Will my friend tell us?

Mr. EATON. I desire to have it acted on, if possible.

Mr. BLAINE. There is not a Senator on this floor I would rather oblige than the Senator from Connecticut; but it seems to me we shall all deal fairer with each other by going on with the Calendar and taking things as they come.

Mr. EATON. The trouble is that there is too much on the Calendar ahead of me, and I want to get this bill up if I can.

Mr. BLAINE. That is not my friend's fault, but his misfortune. It may be the misfortune of his case. If we begin the business of picking out cases here and there and making a struggle for what we shall get, nobody will get anything. If you will let the Calendar run, there will be some sort of impartial dealing with every case; but if you begin the struggle which my friend initiates in this way for precedence for this case and that case, the result will be that nothing will be done. I hope the Calendar will not be arrested.

Mr. HOWE. I am extremely anxious to act with the Senator from Connecticut in reference to the measure he moves, but if it be moved now, in antagonism to the Calendar, in which my life I really think is invested, I feel compelled to vote against him.

Mr. EATON. If my friend is in such a bad condition as that, and really his life is in danger, I hardly know how to answer him. Hoping that his particular disease will be cured to-day, I now give notice, Mr. President, or rather I renew the notice, that I will ask that this be taken up to-morrow, Saturday morning, because I desire to save the society of my very valuable friend from Wisconsin. I will make the same motion to-morrow morning that I proposed, by giving notice, to make this morning.

Mr. HOWE. I know I was making as strong an appeal as possible to my friend from Connecticut.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had, on the 27th instant, approved and signed the following act and joint resolution:

An act (S. No. 1099) to provide for the settlement of tax-lien certificates erroneously issued by the late authorities of the District of Columbia; and

A joint resolution (S. R. No. 66) authorizing sale of public property in Cincinnati.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

Mr. WALLACE. I give a notice, which I send up.

The notice was read, as follows:

Mr. WALLACE gives notice that he will to-morrow, or as soon thereafter as he can get the floor, move to suspend the Anthony rule and all other orders to proceed to the consideration of House joint resolution No. 176, order of business No. 544.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I reserve all points of order on that notice, Mr. President.

THOMAS W. SEGAR.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next bill on the Calendar will be reported.

The bill (H. R. No. 4289) for the relief of Thomas W. Segar was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of War to place the name of Thomas W. Segar on the rolls of Company D, Eightieth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, as a second lieutenant, and his muster into service as such heretofore made, to date from the 8th of October, 1862, and authorizes the proper officers of the War and Treasury Departments to pay him the difference between the pay of a sergeant of infantry and a second lieutenant from October 8, 1862, until April 8, 1863.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us hear the report, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. SPENCER January 28:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 4289) for the relief of Thomas W. Segar, having had the same under consideration, submit the following report:

The Committee on Military Affairs of the House of Representatives, at the second session of the Forty-fifth Congress, made the following report:

[House Report No. 480.—Forty-fifth Congress, second session.]

“Mr. BRAGG, from the Committee on Military Affairs, submitted the following report, to accompany bill H. R. No. 4289:

“The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred petition for the relief of Thomas W. Segar, have had the same under consideration, and submit the following report:

“On the 25th August, 1862, Thomas W. Segar was mustered in the service of the United States and appointed sergeant in Company D, Eightieth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry.

“On the 9th day of October, 1862, he was appointed a second lieutenant of Company D, Eightieth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was commissioned such by the governor of Illinois, with rank from said 9th day of October, 1862, the company having at the date of the appointment a quota of men sufficient to authorize the muster of second lieutenant, and there being a vacancy, which he was promoted to fill.

“From the date of his promotion until his capture, hereinafter stated, he discharged all the duties and assumed all the responsibilities of the office of second lieutenant.

“On the — day of —, 186—, Lieutenant Segar was captured by the enemy while in the line of his duty with his command at ——. The commission issued to him had not reached him before his capture by reason of the continued change of base of his command. He remained a prisoner until March, 1864, when he was exchanged, and received his commission, which had been issued to him as aforesaid.

“On the 6th day of April, 1864, he was regularly mustered, but under the mustering regulations of the Army he was unable to be mustered back to the date of his commission. And the officers of the Pay department, upon application, have decided that they had no authority to pay him as an officer while he was a prisoner and not mustered as an officer, but only paid him his pay as first sergeant.

“These facts bring the case directly within the letter and spirit of joint resolution No. 102, (46 United States Statutes at Large, page 385.) And without such joint resolution the committee believe the facts would entitle this officer to payment.

“The committee therefore report the bill (H. R. No. 4289) and recommend its passage.”

Your committee adopt said report and recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROPOSED RECESS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The morning hour has expired.

Mr. VOORHEES. Pursuant to the notice that I gave yesterday, I now renew the proposition I then stated, that the Senate this evening take a recess until half past seven, and then proceed with unobjected cases on the Calendar.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I call for the regular order.

Mr. VOORHEES. I will fix the hour at which the recess shall be taken at five o'clock.

Mr. BLAINE. I suggest to the Senator from Indiana that that ought to be made—I am heartily in favor of having it made—when it is done, subject to appropriation bills, which are very pressing and urgent.

Mr. VOORHEES. We can consider the conflicting duties that may present themselves at that time. Let the proposition stand as I make it, and take a recess at five o'clock until half past seven, and then we will consider the order of business; but the proposition I make is that we then proceed to the consideration of unobjected cases on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SARGENT. I shall object to any arrangement that does not except appropriation bills when the appropriation bills are ready to go on.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I call for the regular order.

Mr. VOORHEES. I submit to the Senator from California that it is not altogether certain whether the appropriation bills will be ready to be proceeded with this evening; but if they are, it will be within the power of the Senate to change the order and proceed to whatever business is deemed most pressing.

Mr. SARGENT. The sundry civil appropriation bill is now ready.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Indiana that an objection will carry his proposition over. The regular order is demanded.

Mr. VOORHEES. It does not require unanimous consent. I ask for a vote on the proposition.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It does require unanimous consent to make such a motion.

Mr. VOORHEES. I make that motion.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I make the point of order that the motion is not in order.

Mr. VOORHEES. I move that the Senate at five o'clock take a recess until half past seven o'clock, then to proceed with the unobjected cases on the Calendar, subject to appropriation bills.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I make the point of order that the motion is not in order under the rule. The rule says that when a question is under debate no motion shall be received but so and so, specified, and this is not one of them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not understand the point of order made by the Senator from Vermont.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont will state his point of order.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Yes, sir, I will state it again. Rule 43:

When a question is pending, no motion shall be received but—

To adjourn,

To adjourn to a day certain, or that, when the Senate adjourn, it shall be to a day certain,

To take a recess,

To proceed to the consideration of executive business,

To lay on the table,

To postpone indefinitely,

To postpone to a day certain,

To commit,

To amend,

which several motions, &c.

This motion is not either one of those named in the forty-third rule. It will be in order for the Senator at five o'clock to move to take a recess until half past seven, and it will be in order to move at any time to postpone the present and all prior orders and take up the Calendar. The Senator can do that now; but I do not wish to hamper the action of the Senate on appropriation bills in advance by any order or understanding whatever. I shall be just as glad as the Senator is if there is any time to take up the unobjected cases on the Calendar, he may be sure.

Mr. VOORHEES. In the midst of the constant conversation that is going on around me, it has been most difficult for me to catch the point of order made by the Senator from Vermont. I aimed to do so, for I always feel instructed by him on questions of this kind. I was quite sincere, for I am not apt on parliamentary points; but if I can get a motion in order, I will do so, to take a recess at five o'clock this evening until half past seven, and then proceed with the unobjected business on the Calendar. If that motion is in order, I make it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It is not in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order made by the Senator from Vermont is that the motion made by the Senator from Indiana is not in order, for the reason that if the Senator desires the Senate to take a recess the motion must be made now.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am making it now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The recess must be taken now, or the Senator from Indiana can at five o'clock make the motion to take a recess at that time.

Mr. EATON, (to Mr. VOORHEES.) Give notice that you will move it.

Mr. DAWES. Does the Senator from Indiana desire to take a recess from now or from five o'clock?

Mr. VOORHEES. Certainly not from now. Everybody understands that. Does the Chair sustain the point of order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. VOORHEES. Then I give notice that at five o'clock I shall move to take a recess until half past seven o'clock.

Mr. DAWES. That will be in order then.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I do not make the point of order now against a simple motion. I agree to it for one, by unanimous consent, that we take a recess from five o'clock until half past seven simply, and then at half past seven determine what shall be considered, whether it be an appropriation bill or the unobjected cases on the Calendar.

Mr. VOORHEES. I will agree to that as the best thing we can do. Is there unanimous consent?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not hear any objection.

Mr. HOAR. I must object to tying up the Senate to lose those two hours. We may find that we need them very much indeed. I have no doubt a recess will be agreed to when the time comes, but it is an absolute mortgage on those two hours to make the order now.

Mr. VOORHEES. I understand it to be in order.

Mr. EDMUNDS. No, but I waived the point of order for that purpose, was all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts objects.

Mr. VOORHEES. Do I understand that there is objection to the motion in the form suggested by the Senator from Vermont that we take a recess at five o'clock till half past seven this evening, without indicating what the business shall be this evening?

Mr. HOAR. I object to anything which puts it in the power of any single member of the Senate at this time to determine that we shall not go on with business at five o'clock without a recess, if every other Senator then wants to go on, and that will be the effect of what the Senator asks.

Mr. VOORHEES. I conceive that I have done my duty in trying to get at the business on the Calendar, and I shall leave the question where it is.

Mr. HOAR. I do not object to the Calendar; I object to the recess.

CORRECTION.

Mr. ANTHONY. I desire to correct the Journal if the Journal reads as the RECORD does. The RECORD states that—

Mr. ANTHONY, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill submitted by Mr. PADDOCK on the subject of forestry, asked to be discharged from its further consideration and that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

The committee recommended the amendment to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the Secretary that the Journal does not show that.

Mr. INGALLS. I call for the regular order.

APPROPRIATION FOR PENSION ARREARS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 6462) making appropriations for the payment of the arrears of pensions granted by act of Congress approved January 25, 1879, and for other purposes, the pending question being on the amendment of Mr. INGALLS as additional sections to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the amendment.

Mr. INGALLS. It has been once read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] from the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. VOORHEES. Let it be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the amendment.

Mr. INGALLS. It is quite a long amendment, that has already been once reported. I presume that if attention is called to it that the reading will be unnecessary, as that would consume considerable time. It is the amendment which proposes the districting of the country for the purpose of taking testimony in regard to the admission of persons to the pension-rolls.

Mr. VOORHEES. I assure the chairman of the Committee on Pensions that my only object in having the amendment reported was in order that it might be called to the attention of Senators freshly before voting on it. If it is understood, I do not insist on having it read.

Mr. INGALLS. If any Senator wishes it to be read I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Indiana desire the amendment to be read?

Mr. VOORHEES. I withdraw my request for the reading of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. GORDON. Is that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is.

Mr. ANTHONY. Is that the long amendment altering the whole pension laws?

Mr. INGALLS. It is a long amendment, but it does not alter the whole pension laws. It proposes to change them in one particular, and that is as to the method of obtaining testimony upon which pensions are to be granted.

I only desire to repeat what I said last night, that I have no personal interest whatever in this amendment. I presume it is unnecessary for me to say that it has been reported from the Committee on Pensions after very mature deliberation. It is an effort in the direction of economy and reform. It is an attempt to correct evils that all admit to exist. It has been stated by the Commissioner of Pensions that not less than 10 per cent. of the entire amount expended for this purpose annually is improperly paid, making an amount not less than $3,000,000 per year. It is my belief, and the belief of a majority of the Committee on Pensions, that that estimate is too low, and that not less than fifteen or twenty per cent. is so improperly paid.

Mr. PADDOCK. May I inquire of the Senator if this particular amendment is recommended and advised by the Commissioner of Pensions himself?

Mr. INGALLS. It has been recommended by the Secretary of the Interior, by the Commissioner of Pensions, and by the Committee on Pensions, after mature deliberation, as the best scheme that can be devised for the purpose of correcting these evils that are admitted to exist.

Mr. PADDOCK. That is sufficient for me.

Mr. INGALLS. If any Senator has any proposition that is better, or can suggest any alteration that will perfect the scheme, I shall be very glad to hear it. As I said, I am not wedded to this or any other system, but when it is confessed that flagrant and extraordinary wrongs are permitted under the present system, it certainly is not just, it is not wise, for Senators to resist an effort that will save from three to five million dollars of this expenditure annually unless they submit something better than this.

Mr. President, I have had placed in my hands this morning a most infamous and scandalous circular, emanating from the claim agents and bounty jumpers of this city, who have been preying upon the great body of pensioners for the last fifteen years. While there may be some honorable exceptions, as a class they are the worst species of vermin that ever infested the body-politic. I may say that all the objection that has been presented against this scheme emanates from that source, and this circular, which I now hold in my hand, is their latest effort to prevent this scheme from being carried through to perfection, the result of which will be to deprive them of a very large share of their annual ill-gotten gains. There are hundreds of thousands of dollars paid annually to this class of men here in this town, and their objection to this amendment arises from the fact that under it they will be prevented from still further carrying on their schemes of robbery and speculation. This circular is headed: "A national returning board: a scheme to add $600,000 expenses to the tax-payers for the purpose of whipping in the ex-soldiers to vote the republican ticket in 1880."

In order to show the good faith of this scheme, I may add that this circular has been distributed exclusively among the democratic members of the Senate, and this copy came into my hands simply by an accident within the past few minutes. It closes by saying:

Senator INGALLS, on Friday, the 21st instant, from the Senate Pension Committee, reports in favor of tacking this pet republican scheme on the bill appropriating money for the arrears of pensions. He calls it an amendment to prevent fraud.

Respectfully submitted by order of the democratic ex-soldiers committee, Washington, District of Columbia.

See H. R. No. 2766.

Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on Pensions, on behalf of the republican members of that committee, on behalf of the democratic members of that committee, who acted with us in reporting this amendment, I denounce that as being an infamous and unwarranted aspersion. The measure is neither republican nor democratic; it is an honest effort on the part of the committee, irrespective of politics, to attempt to cure evils that we admit and that all deplore. I ask Senators before they are influenced by the accusations of this class of men to examine this scheme, and if they cannot support it, at least to offer us something better.

The pension system is one of very great magnitude. Since this Government was inaugurated more than $600,000,000 have been paid out in pensions. During the present year, under the operations of the arrears of pension act, more than $60,000,000 are to be expended; and now when we come here and ask that this system, which all admit to be erroneous, shall be so amended that testimony may be taken upon which the Commissioner can properly judge as to whether men are placed correctly upon the pension-roll or not, we are met by the charge that this is an attempt to whip ex-soldiers into the support of the republican ticket in 1880. That is not the proper kind of argument to address to the Senate nor to the country upon this subject; and I trust, notwithstanding the length of this amendment, and notwithstanding the assertion that it is intended to change the whole administration of the pension system, Senators will give it some attention and reflect that here is an attempt made to save not less than three, and probably five or six, millions annually in the disbursement of this fund.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. President, I do not wish to antagonize this amendment except to the extent of asking the attention of the Senate to the fact that, as I understand, it proposes almost an entire change in the administration of the Pension Office, at least in one very important branch of administration; it proposes a very large number of appointees and the redistricting of the United States into sixty, I think, or seventy-six divisions with officers appointed and a clerk to each one of these. This certainly involves a very grave change and a very large amount of machinery and expenditure to be acted upon in this late hour of the session.

I do not know but that I shall be prepared to vote for the amendment after thorough examination, but I submit that in a department where there are two hundred and thirty thousand soldiers now interested, with I think about one hundred and thirty thousand more applicants, with the expenditure of thirty millions of money per annum, to undertake to alter in so important a particular all the laws respecting this great department, is too grave a matter for these last hours of the session.

I would submit, therefore, as something better, in my judgment, that provision be made for a commission of say two Senators and three members of the House, who shall take this question in hand and report to us at the next session upon this measure or the advisability of some change in this matter.

I agree with the Senator from Kansas that whatever is fraudulent in this department ought to be lopped off. Wherever there are impositions upon the Pension Bureau we ought to ascertain the cause, but we ought not thoughtlessly or hurriedly to involve the interests of these two hundred and thirty thousand soldiers, here at this late hour of the session, in probably the inextricable difficulties which would arise from this new system. It is not by any means certain that we shall always find honest men to divide the honest from the dishonest pensions; and I simply rose to submit that it is a very grave question, and I think too grave a question to admit of full discussion at this late hour, in view of the appropriation bills which are now pressing upon us.

Mr. WITHERS. Mr. President, as a member of the Committee on Pensions, and as one who favors the legislation proposed, I think it incumbent upon me to say a word or two in this connection. The existence of frauds involving millions of dollars is asserted by the Pension Commissioner and by the Secretary of the Interior, and reiterated year after year. Some remedy must be devised. It is a patent fact that under the existing organization and administration of the Pension Bureau it is impossible to detect, ferret out, and punish the perpetrators of these frauds. For three years the effort has been made to secure a reform in this particular. This particular project, or a modification of it, has been presented time and again to the Pension Committee for their consideration, and it obtained the attention and assiduous labor of a subcommittee of the Pension Committee during nearly the whole of the last session, because it was then complicated with another proposition, to change the mode of paying pensioners and have them all paid at the Treasury as other claimants against the Government are paid. They could not devise at that time any bill which would embody all the points which were desired to be secured in a practicable form, and therefore no recommendation came from the committee.

But immediately after the passage of the arrears of pension bill the avalanche of applications that was at once precipitated upon the Pension Bureau and upon the committee indicated an indispensable necessity for some change in the mode of investigation and adjudication of these claims.

I would call the attention of my friends who differ with me in opinion on this subject, and who complain of the enormous amount of patronage which would be involved in the execution of such a law, and the large additions required to the officials connected with the Pension Office, to the fact that whether this amendment be adopted or not a very large addition is indispensable. It is imperative that it shall be made, even if no change is inaugurated in the mode of investigating these cases, if you recall to recollection the fact that the number of undetermined cases, notwithstanding the most earnest efforts and labors of the Pension Bureau, the additions to the clerical force which have been from time to time made under the operations of laws passed by Congress, has steadily increased and is to-day steadily increasing, and that they cannot dispose of the cases as rapidly as they come. If this was the case as it was before the passage of the arrears of pension law, now that difficulty has been intensified and applications which came in formerly at the rate of about thirty a week, are now coming in at the rate of about fourteen hundred a week. It is evident, therefore, that unless some great change is made, a large increase in the clerical force of the Department is necessary if you administer the law as it is at present administered. My view of the matter was that a commission, constituted as this is, would be better able to detect any attempt at fraud than the ex parte examinations now made; and that lies at the foundation of the whole question. If that be admitted, I think it is worth while to make the experiment. The Commissioner of Pensions and the Secretary of the Interior, who have devoted, I presume, more time and attention to the investigation and study of this question than any other persons whatsoever, have more than once recommended a change. They believe that it would result in a large saving to the Government, not only in the matter of correction of frauds, but in the expense of administering the office; and to their judgment I am willing to yield my own opinion. I believe that they will be found more nearly accurate than the random statements of opponents of the proposed change made on this floor without adequate investigation.

I would say in conclusion in connection with the statement made by the Senator from Kansas, that so far as I am advised not the slightest taint of political partisanship has ever influenced the Pension Committee in its deliberation or action.

Mr. VOORHEES. I must confirm the statement of the Senator from Kansas, chairman of the committee, and of the Senator from Virginia in regard to the entire and utter absence of all party considerations in the Pension Committee. Inasmuch as I oppose the proposed amendment, I think it proper to say that, in view of the paper which the Senator from Kansas has read and animadverted upon in this body. My opposition to this measure is based upon the fact that it directs a new and very expensive and extraordinary system of procedure outside of the Pension Bureau. I am not going to detain the Senate upon this point. I hope the vote will be taken as speedily as possible, and when that vote is taken I desire Senators to understand that they are voting for the creation of at least three hundred, and in less than two years it will be five hundred additional Federal officers at very extraordinary salaries. This measure provides that the Secretary of the Interior may appoint, without limit as to number except his own judgment, surgeons who shall have certain traveling duties, and with each one of them shall go a person denominated a pension clerk, that, according to the description of this amendment, shall be learned in the law and have had practice in his profession, and then the doctor and the lawyer are to be paid $2,500 a year each for their services. It is difficult to estimate the amount of money that will be required to carry on this system. Indeed no estimate can be made while the number of persons to be so appointed is left at the discretion of a Cabinet officer or a bureau officer; but it will be seen at once that these Federal officers will constitute a very important class of persons and will be receiving larger pay, I believe, than anybody connected with the Pension Bureau except the Commissioner of Pensions himself. I believe there is no class of persons connected with the discharge of pension duties which is paid as these persons are to be paid.

Further, this amendment provides for the division of the United States into various pension districts, as I suppose we may call them, and a post in each one of the pension districts is to be designated by the Commissioner of Pensions, a post to which the officers of the Government shall proceed and there, in some way, not clearly pointed out in this measure, obtain the attendance of the pensioners and such witnesses as it may be desirable to examine, and I see no provision in this measure by which a person whose claim for a pension is being examined can compel the attendance of witnesses for him. I see no provision of that kind in the measure; but there is a sort of court provided for as I have stated. The time and place is to be fixed by the Commissioner of Pensions, and then an advertisement of time and place is to be put in some newspaper, and that is to affect everybody with notice. There are some men, Mr. President, who have fought well who do not take newspapers, some who are not able to take newspapers, some who could not read them if they did take them, and there are the widows and orphans of those who died in the service of their country who have not had the opportunity of education and who would be practically denied notice under this measure of the time and place when and where their most vital interests were being passed upon.

There are numerous objections to this measure. I agree with the Senator from Kansas, likewise with the Senator from Virginia, that something ought to be done in order to facilitate the examination and transaction of pension business, not merely to prevent pension frauds but on the other hand to grant to the beneficiaries of the Government the boon which we proffer them by our pension laws, but I do not conceive that this measure is one that commends itself or ought to commend itself to our favorable consideration.

In regard to the consideration which this measure has had, I have only this to say: I believe I have been as prompt in my attendance in the Pension Committee room as any other member of that committee; but in some way or other—I can hardly say how—I have been ignorant of the fact that this subject was under consideration by a subcommittee, and I was not present when the measure was adopted and ordered to be reported here, and the first notice—of course nobody intended to deprive me of notice, but the fact is nevertheless so—the first notice I had that such a measure was adopted by the committee was yesterday when it was about to be called up.

It is great and important legislation, not in a political sense. The Senator from Kansas animadverted more strongly than I can upon the introduction of partisanship into this sacred subject of pensions; but if an abuse were sought to be inflicted upon the country, there is no instrumentality, in my judgment, more capable of being used by designing men than that which is embraced in this measure. Parties exist in this country, and they generally use the means at their command. I do not say that the republican party that the Senator from Kansas spoke of will try to get the soldiers' votes by this measure; yet if it were sought to be done, perhaps it could be used in that way. Nor do I say that the party to which I belong might not use it as an instrument of abuse hereafter when it succeeds to power, as well as the party on the other side. Let all that pass.

I am opposed to this measure because I do not think in a practicable or beneficial point of view it is advisable, and I think we had better address ourselves to making the inside of the bureau as it stands now more efficient. If more clerical force is needed, let us give it. I introduced a resolution weeks ago on that subject, calling on the Secretary of the Interior to tell us what additional clerical force was needed in that office, either to prevent frauds or to facilitate the transaction of business. The answer came here that they needed no more clerks, but they needed clerks of a different grade of intellect or education. They say now they need lawyers; they need men who are versed in sifting testimony. Very well; there may be something in that, or there may not be much in it; but whether there is or not, I think the place to begin reform is in the office here, instead of covering the whole country with perambulating courts, if I may so designate them.

Mr. WITHERS. I would not deem it necessary to continue the debate further after the statement which I have already made, except to call attention to the fact that the amendment as proposed can certainly be relieved of one of the objections so forcibly urged by the Senator from Indiana with reference to the unlimited number of appointments as provided in this amendment. It will be perfectly easy and perhaps eminently proper for the Senate, if they fear that abuses will creep into the administration of the pension laws under this amendment, to limit the number of appointees within such reasonable limits as will secure efficient service and therefore prevent its extension beyond that point.

It seems to me that the conjunction of a lawyer and an expert in medicine, which appears by some to be regarded as rather a ridiculous feature of this proposed amendment, constitutes in reality the very essence of its merit. Applications for pensions must be considered in two aspects: first, as to the amount and extent of disability, for which the opinion of a medical officer is imperatively demanded; and second, whether the testimony adduced to support the claim as to service and other various collateral issues is of such character as entitles the party to the pension; and that properly passes under the purview of the legal man, a man learned in the law, to use the technical expression. And, therefore, with all due deference to those who have suggested a different opinion, I think that this constitutes one of the essential elements which ought to be retained in this or any other system of examination.

My friend from Indiana avers that he had no knowledge that such a proposition was pending or to be reported. My friend has been certainly oblivious of the fact that I myself notified him that we wished a general meeting to consider this particular amendment before it was reported and expressed a desire to learn whether he would be able to be present. He said that if it were possible he would attend; but he was not present at the meeting and was the only member who was absent. I take pleasure in stating that that was an exception to his usual custom.

Mr. VOORHEES. The statement of the Senator from Virginia is binding on me as to the question of fact. All I can say is that my mind was so diverted by something else, or so absorbed when he made that statement to me, that I have not the slightest recollection of it. If he states it, it must be so of course.

Mr. BAILEY. As a member of the Committee on Pensions I wish to say that the amendment proposed by the committee meets my hearty approbation and met my hearty approbation in the committee. I think, if adopted, it will protect those who are borne on the pension-roll and who are entitled to have their names there inscribed from the practices of claim agents and others who have made out of that class of our fellow-citizens great fortunes in the last few years; and also for the reason that I believe the Treasury will be protected and can be protected if this measure shall become a law and shall be faithfully and honestly executed—and I have no reason to believe that it will be otherwise than honestly executed—against a great many fraudulent claims.

It is estimated by the Commissioner of Pensions, I believe, that from 5 to 10 per cent. of the sums of money now paid under the appropriations for pensions might be saved by a proper administration of the law; in other words, that from 5 to 10 per cent., or, as estimated by some persons, from 15 to 20 per cent., of the claims are fraudulent claims. The Commissioner is a clear-headed man, a sagacious business man, and he is of opinion that many of these fraudulent claims can be cast from the rolls by the method of investigation that is proposed by this amendment. What is it? It is that a lawyer—I have no objection to a lawyer; I belong to the legal profession myself, and I believe that it is essential to the proper investigation of these claims that one trained to the ascertainment of fact, to the investigation of facts, and one who by his profession is enabled to detect fraud—shall be appointed on this commission; and to accompany him shall be a physician who is capable of making an examination into the actual condition of the claimant and to determine whether his condition is that contemplated by the pension law.

I believe myself that this system may be administered fairly and honestly. I see no reason to apprehend that these persons appointed—lawyers and physicians—will be converted into partisans and will abuse the confidence of the country by becoming simply the tools of partisan leaders.

For these reasons I gave my consent in committee to the measure that was presented, and for these reasons I shall vote for it here as an amendment to this appropriation bill. If gentlemen are uneasy and apprehensive that none but partisans will be appointed who will lend themselves to partisan work, it is very easy by an amendment providing that these agents shall be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to avoid any such evil.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Mr. President, I have examined during the last two sessions of Congress with some care the condition of the Pension Bureau and the business of that bureau. There are two difficulties at present existing in regard to it, as I understand. With the exception of evidence that is of record in the Departments of the Government, the office of the Surgeon-General and the Adjutant-General, the evidence upon which pension claims are allowed is wholly ex parte. It is prepared by the attorneys or agents for the pensioner or claimants for pensions in the shape of affidavits and sent to the Commissioner, and upon that testimony we annually appropriate at least $30,000,000. Whether or not it is safe to continue to do that, Senators who vote these appropriations must judge for themselves. Whether that system is open to abuse or not, Senators are as capable of judging as I; but those who have had any experience in passing upon claims of any kind against the Government must know, it seems to me, that appropriating large sums of money in satisfaction of claims wholly by ex parte testimony is a dangerous proceeding.

I do not know how many of the pensions now being paid are fraudulent; doubtless some of them are so. It is unfortunately true that all soldiers are not honest men. There were shirks in the Army as well as elsewhere—men who were always at the rear and never at the front when a fight was going on; and while there are hundreds of thousands of just as good and true men as the world ever saw, it still remains that there were bad men in the Army, and men who would abuse the Government in procuring a fraudulent claim if they could, as they abused it in not doing their duty as soldiers while the war lasted. It is unfortunately true, too, that there are dishonest claim agents; I will not say that all are such; there are honest and true men among them; but it is also true that there are dishonest men among them who look to nothing but the compensation they will get for putting a claim through the Pension Bureau by any and every means. When you bring together the dishonest claimant and the dishonest agent, and compel the man who passes upon and directs the disposition of your money to act upon ex parte testimony alone, it seems to me you are organizing a machine that is almost sure to do injustice to the public Treasury.

Now, at least, in the present condition of our financial affairs, we must pay some regard to the men who pay the money that goes into the United States Treasury as well as to the men who receive that money. The capacity of the people to pay is limited; the capacity to receive seems to be unlimited. If the United States Treasury were like the widow's cruse of oil that never got empty by pouring out of it, it might be that we should pay no attention to the manner in which money does go out of it. But the money that comes into the Treasury is paid by men, many of whom can ill spare the amount they have to pay. I repeat, we must pay some attention to the capacity of the people to pay as well as to the capacity of ourselves and others to receive. Something can be done in that direction then, Mr. President, it strikes me.

The difficulty is complicated largely by the legislation at the present session. Every Senator has had, I suppose, my own experience. Not a day passes that I do not receive from some man who has been a soldier a letter inquiring of me as to the condition of his claim in the Pension Bureau. I refer it to the Pension Bureau, and get information that I send to him. I recollect a letter that I received a few days since from the Pension Bureau in respect to a letter of inquiry sent to me. It was that the claim had been referred to some other bureau, as required by law, in October last, and that they expected by about the 1st day of July next to get a reply from that bureau.

We know that at the last session the Surgeon-General's Office, not from any fault there at all, was some eight to nine months in arrear; certain queries sent to it for information required to be had by the Commissioner of Pensions before he could act could not be answered for eight or nine months. Now, when you throw upon that bureau the additional labor required by the passage of the arrearage bill, it reaches just this point, and Senators might as well meet it and consider it as not: that bureau must break down and be utterly unable to perform its duties, or some relief in some way must be afforded to it. It may be all very well for us to adjourn here and go home among our constituents and say how much we have been doing for the soldier, making appropriations for him, giving him his arrearages and everything else, and throw the blame of his not receiving the money that we say he is entitled to upon somebody other than ourselves; but I say it is cruel and cowardly—I repeat the words, it is cruel and cowardly for us to undertake here to hold out to these men the promise of compensation that they should receive and not provide some means by which they can get it. If you leave the Pension Bureau as it is without doing something for it, it is utterly impossible within a reasonable time to perform the duties to be thrown upon it, it is utterly out of the question.

Now, sir, I do not know whether the plan proposed by the Committee on Pensions is the best that can be proposed or not. No man can tell as to the future of a proposition of that kind. The best he can do is to give it his judgment, and my judgment is that the plan proposed is both safer and better for the honest, true soldier and better and safer for the Government than the present plan. I believe it will not be as good for the dishonest soldier, the cowardly shirk who did not do his duty while the war lasted and who is desirous of collecting a pension that he does not deserve. I do not believe it will be as well for him; I do not believe it will be as well for the dishonest agent who tries to force claims through the Pension Bureau whether they are honest or dishonest; but for the honest soldier, for the true soldier, the deserving soldier, I believe it will be better, and for the Government as well. It has received the careful consideration and examination and is supported by the recommendation year after year of the Commissioner of Pensions.

My connection with the Pension Bureau has enabled me to say, and I take pleasure in saying, that I believe the Commissioner of Pensions is an intelligent, capable, faithful, and honest officer; that he has been doing his duty as well as any man under the circumstances by which he is surrounded could do it; that the delays arising in the examination and determination of claims before him are not his fault; the fault lies elsewhere, and I think that we ought, if possible, to try to remedy it.

I do not choose to allude to the circular read by the Senator from Kansas this morning. I had never seen it nor heard of it until he alluded to it. I have but this to say: it seems to me that the persons who prepared it had a very low estimate of the intelligence of those to whom they addressed it.

It is said that this thing is thrust upon the Senate suddenly without time for examination. The action of this body themselves has compelled it. The enormous increase in the business of the Pension Bureau caused by the passage of the arrears bill has increased the labors of that office so enormously that I repeat again unless you do something you are but cheating the men in whose behalf you passed the pension-arrears bill.

Mr. SHIELDS. Mr. President, I feel it my duty to say a few words on this question. I have been acquainted with pension systems and pension claims and pensioners for some forty years. I have acted as agent for pensioners for service in two wars, and not like the pension agents whom my friend from Kansas speaks of—I never received a fee for any service I rendered. Nothing is truer than the statement of the Senator from Kansas and other Senators that something is needed to be done to prevent abuse in this system; but I fear the remedy now proposed will increase the difficulty, and I will tell you why, Mr. President. We have now the most complicated pension system on the face of this earth. We have more machinery and more provisions to prevent fraud than exist in any pension system in Europe, perhaps than in all Europe put together; and I say here in the Senate of the United States that my experience for forty years is this, that not a single provision has been added to the simple, plain old pension law to prevent fraud that has not tended to increase fraud. An eminent judge once said that in his opinion the statute of frauds created more fraud than any other statute on the book. Now, sir, the pension system requires revision from bottom to top; it requires simplification; it should all be reconstructed. That is my opinion, judging from my experience, and I undertake to say it is the opinion of every man in America who understands the subject thoroughly. One-tenth of the frauds did not take place when we had a much simpler system than the present. I agree with the Senator from Kansas that some remedy is needed, and especially now when we are increasing the business of the Pension Bureau. I have not had time to examine and investigate this amendment in detail. I fear it, however, because of the new complications it will engender; I fear it because of the amount of machinery it will create.

If I am right, I shall vote against the amendment, not because I am opposed to the reasons given by the Senator from Kansas, but I fear that instead of checking and preventing frauds it will augment and increase them. I know one thing: every provision now in the pension system calculated and intended by Congress to prevent fraud has obstructed the honest, humble, ignorant soldier, and has enabled fraudulent men to obtain pensions. And what I am afraid of is that this amendment will increase the complications. I should like to have further time to examine it, and I really think it would be dangerous at this stage of the session to adopt it. This is comparatively a total change of the whole system, and I think it is not really a revision and improvement of it.

Mr. THURMAN. Mr. President, I know so well the necessity of economizing time that I shall occupy but a very few minutes of the attention of the Senate.

Mr. SHIELDS. Will the honorable Senator allow me to say another word? I never saw the document or appeal made to this Senate until I heard it here to-day; I never heard of it before, and I do not think there are three Senators on this side who received it.

Mr. THURMAN. That induces me to say that I never heard of it until the Senator from Kansas produced it this morning, and in the distribution of it I was overlooked; I do not know why.

Mr. President, I have very great reason to distrust my own judgment where I find myself opposed to so able and industrious a committee as the Committee on Pensions, but I cannot as at present advised vote for this amendment. I am quite willing to admit that a better plan than the present laws provided for examining pension cases may be devised. It may be a difficult task, it is true, for our pension system is the result of many years' experience, more than three quarters of a century of experience, and a system that has grown up in that way may be fairly supposed to be reasonably sound and reasonably effective. Yet that it may be improved I have no doubt. Whether this particular bill improves it seems to me to be somewhat questionable, unless indeed I misunderstand it. It is possible I do, as I have never had occasion to examine it until this morning, and therefore I want to ask a question of my friend from Kansas who is so well informed on all the pension laws and of course informed on this amendment which he has moved to the bill.

It is said that fraudulent claims are allowed, and various estimates are made of the number of fraudulent claims. Some say 5 per cent., some 10, some 15, some 20, of all the pension claims that are allowed are fraudulent claims. If that is the case then one of two things is certain, or both in fact: either that our pension system and the means that we provide for ascertaining whether a pension ought to be granted or not are radically defective, or the administration of the Pension Office is radically defective and wrong. One of the two must be so, or both; and now how does this amendment remedy it? If I understand this amendment, notwithstanding the appointment of these one hundred and twenty peripatians, the Commissioner of Pensions can go on just as before, on just the same kind of testimony, in just the same mode, granting or refusing pensions. Am I right in that?

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator stated that he desired to ask me some question for the purpose of obtaining further illumination upon the subject now under discussion.

Mr. THURMAN. That is the first question.

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator's question is so elaborate and involved and intricate that I can hardly ascertain the precise branch to which he desires to direct my attention. If he wants to know why this amendment is an improvement upon the present system so far as evidence is concerned, I shall be glad to tell him.

Mr. THURMAN. The question I asked I thought was a very simple one. Suppose this measure should pass, cannot the Commissioner of Pensions proceed just as he has heretofore proceeded, upon just such testimony as he has heretofore received, to grant a pension?

Mr. INGALLS. I will answer the Senator in a moment. The difficulty that attends the discussion of this amendment arises from the fact that all the opponents of it candidly admit that they do not know anything about the system; that they are entirely unadvised as to the practical machinery and operations of the present pension system. There is the trouble about that. The difficulty is that under the present system there is no possibility for personal inspection of the claimant or for the cross-examination of witnesses, and the Senator from Ohio, who has been so long at the bar, and who for a long time adorned the bench, understands how powerful an instrument is the personal appearance and examination of a witness in the ascertainment of the truth. Under the present method an applicant for pension files his papers before a notary public, a justice of the peace, or a commissioner. That application is sent forward here to Washington. Then an order goes to an examining surgeon who lives in the neighborhood, who may be at the time the physician of the applicant, and he makes an examination of the claimant. Then there is further corroborative testimony, taken in the way of ascertainment, by his neighbors and comrades and friends, and this ex parte testimony is sent forward to the Commissioner, and the decision is made wholly upon that class of evidence. The object of this amendment as declared in the eighth and ninth lines of the first section is "to make medical and surgical examinations and to take testimony in pension cases," and its purpose is merely to allow some evidence to get before the Commissioner of Pensions that is derived from a personal inspection of the claimant and from a cross-examination of the witnesses by agents of the Government for that purpose. That is all the object of the section.

Mr. THURMAN. The Senator in his long speech has not answered my question at all. He has given a very clear statement of the mode in which applications for pensions are now made and the kind of proof by which they are sustained. My question to him was whether precisely that same mode may not continue to be followed even if this amendment should be adopted.

Mr. INGALLS. It cannot be, because all the testimony that goes before the Commissioner where an application is filed is to be derived from the sources provided in this amendment, which are entirely different from those now in force.

Mr. THURMAN. But is there a word in this amendment that says that? Is there a word in this amendment that puts an end to the provisions under which the former act has been abused?

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator from Ohio is adopting a singular method of argument, at least in regard to this measure. I state that the object and the purpose is precisely what I say, and that the intention is to have this evidence procured by the surgeons and experts who are provided for in the amendment. Now he asks me where is the provision that declares it shall not be taken in the other way. This is a provision of law that becomes immediately operative, and it is binding on the Commissioner of Pensions like any other officer of the Government. If the Senator desires a negative statement incorporated, that hereafter no testimony shall be filed except that taken under this provision, it can be put in; but that will not change the provisions on the face of this amendment.

Mr. THURMAN. Without something of that kind, it seems to me very clear that the old mode can be followed just as if this amendment never were adopted; but now it is said that the object is to make this the exclusive mode by which testimony in pension cases shall be taken. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the scope of this amendment. It contemplates that the Commissioner of Pensions in his discretion may have every case on the pension-roll re-examined.

Mr. INGALLS. They ought to be. A vast number of them are improperly there.

Mr. THURMAN. Will the Senator tell me how many there are on the roll—two hundred odd thousand are there not?

Mr. INGALLS. There are in round numbers two hundred and thirty thousand cases on the roll, and with the exception of those that are on the roll by reason of certain specific, defined disabilities, such as the loss of a member or of a limb or a gunshot wound that has been certified to when the person was discharged, I state that they ought all to be re-examined to ascertain whether they are now on the roll at the rate to which they are entitled, or whether they were properly placed there in the first place.

Mr. THURMAN. Then I must assume that that is the purpose of this amendment.

Mr. INGALLS. That is one of the purposes.

Mr. THURMAN. And if it is, it is an amendment which will carry terror into the whole ranks of these two hundred and thirty thousand men.

But now I want to come to the practical view of this subject. Having this statement before us, that some two hundred thousand, perhaps, of these men ought to have their cases re-examined, men who have been in the receipt of pensions for years, whose cases were long ago decided, whose witnesses may be dead; let us see what the machinery is for their re-examination.

Mr. INGALLS. If the Senator will allow me, I wish here to say that information reaches the Commissioner every day in regard to persons who are improperly on the pension-roll. In those cases special agents are detailed, and during the past year nearly $500,000 of pensions were suspended and cut off on account of discoveries that persons were improperly on the roll.

Mr. THURMAN. I am quite aware that there is a provision authorizing the Commissioner to send out and have examinations made, and that makes it a little stranger to me why any other or different provisions are necessary; why that is not sufficient. But I have got down to what I wish to call the attention of the Senator and the Senate.

This amendment provides that the United States shall be divided into districts, not more than sixty in number. The whole United States are to be divided into districts not exceeding sixty in number, and into each one of these districts are to be sent a lawyer and a doctor, who constitute a board to examine the applicants or the pensioners, and to take testimony. Now let us see what kind of a district they will have. We have thirty-eight States and nine Territories and the District of Columbia. That makes in round numbers, according to territory, for present purposes thirty-eight States and ten Territories, forty-eight in all, and you are to have not exceeding sixty districts. What is the consequence? The consequence is a district will be almost as large as a State.

Mr. INGALLS. How many districts does the Senator from Ohio suppose would be necessary south of the Potomac River?

Mr. THURMAN. Not a great many; that is true; but there will be some undoubtedly. I have heard of Kentucky troops that fought on our side; I have heard of troops from Tennessee that fought on our side; I have heard of even troops from Arkansas that fought on our side. So I think the Senator will find that his districts will be, as I say, each one of them almost as large as a State. Now, I will take the State of Ohio. These two gentlemen came into the State of Ohio with eighty-eight counties in the State, and not one single county in the State in which there is not a pensioner. I am quite safe in saying that. Where are they to hold their sittings and discharge this duty in the time that is specified, and how are these pensioners all to get notice? By publication in a newspaper in the district. The district may comprise sixty counties in Ohio, and this would not be more than a fair average size for each one of the districts; and in some one newspaper in that district there is to be a notice that this board will sit. Sit where? Sit for the examination of whom? It seems to me that it would be utterly impracticable for them to discharge this work, to perform this duty.

But that is not all. I doubt exceedingly the propriety of appointing these surgeons, because I believe that under the present system the examination made by surgeons in the neighborhood of the man who is under disability or has been wounded is much more likely to result in a correct opinion than would be an examination made by a surgeon who sees the man for half an hour, never saw him before, and never will see him again. There is no trouble when a man has lost an arm or lost a leg or lost an eye; it requires no surgeon to see that. But when a man is under a disability resulting from disease, how is this surgeon, sent perhaps from Washington City or detailed from the Army or Navy, and seeing a man for half an hour whom he had never seen before and with whose habits he is wholly unacquainted, to form a correct opinion of that man at all comparable with the surgeon in his neighborhood who has known him well and is competent to form a judgment about him? I do not think it can be done. I think the present system in that respect is better, especially when the appointment of the examining surgeon rests with the Commissioner of Pensions.

Sir, I know some of these examining surgeons in my State, and every one of them whom I know is a man of high honor, of high standing in his profession. There is not one of them that would give a false certificate, much less one of them that could be corrupted to give a false certificate. They are just as good men as these sixty men would be under this bill, and that, Mr. President, I take it is a much more economical plan if I am right. Here are to be sixty lawyers and sixty doctors, and they are to receive $2,500 apiece each year. That makes $5,000 for the two in each district. Multiply that by sixty, the number of districts, and you have $300,000 to be annually paid to these lawyers and these doctors. It may be that that would be a wise expenditure, it may be that it would result in economy, but at first sight it does not look so to me.

Mr. INGALLS. I do not mean to interrupt the Senator if he objects to interruption; but will reply when he gets through. The point he makes is one to which the measure is not obnoxious. I shall be glad to make a statement on that subject now, or make it hereafter as suits him.

Mr. THURMAN. If I have fallen into error I would rather be corrected; but I do not want to occupy the floor long, and if the Senator had not interrupted me I should have been done long since.

I think the Senator will admit that there is to be one lawyer and one doctor for each of these districts. That makes—

Mr. INGALLS. I do not dispute the accuracy of the Senator's figures at all.

Mr. THURMAN. Then if the Senator does not do that, I see nothing to correct.

Mr. INGALLS. I understood the Senator to say that that was in excess of the present expenditure.

Mr. THURMAN. Not at all.

Mr. INGALLS. An addition to the present amount expended for the administration of the Pension Bureau?

Mr. THURMAN. I did not say that at all. I say that I think that would be greater than the present expenditure, that is for medical examinations and for the taking of testimony. I may be mistaken about that, however; and I will not put my word against the superior knowledge of the chairman of the Committee on Pensions.

Now, Mr. President, one word more, and I shall not detain the Senate longer. There are several other points in relation to this amendment that I should like to speak about, but I do not want to detain the Senate at this late hour of the session. I regret that this is moved as an amendment to the bill now under consideration. I think it is calculated to embarrass the bill. While I will go as cheerfully as any one or as the Committee on Pensions in framing any system which they deem advisable for the prevention of fraud, I am sorry that at this late hour in the session this system comes for the first time, not to them, but to the attention of the majority of the Senate or, perhaps, nearly all the Senate, to be determined upon in these last days of this short session. I should be very glad, indeed, if some better system could be provided.

Now, while I am up, however, I want to say one word, occasioned by a remark made by the Senator from Kansas. I understood him to say we shall need $50,000,000, by reason of the arrears of pension next year.

Mr. INGALLS. No, sir. I stated the expenditure this year in consequence of additions to the pension-roll by arrears would involve an expenditure of about sixty million.

Mr. THURMAN. Then that includes the other. About $36,000,000 others say. I voted for the arrears of pensions bill and should have voted for it even if we had had the statement made that is made to us now, but I must confess my surprise. When that arrears of pension bill was under consideration, if my ears did not deceive me, the chairman of the committee read a communication from the Commissioner of Pensions, about a year old I think it was, in answer to a question put by some Senator here how much that would take out of the Treasury; and that statement, if I heard it aright, was that it would take about $18,000,000. It certainly was so understood all around me, and the Senator from Kansas ex gratia, I think, said it might be $20,000,000; he was disposed to put it at twenty millions. The very next thing after the passage of the bill that I heard was that the Commissioner of Pensions required $4,000,000 for the present fiscal year, and thirty-odd million dollars for the next fiscal year, and there is no telling where it is to end; and we are told in some quarters that it will take fifty, some say sixty, and some say one hundred millions out of the Treasury. I must say that, if that is so, there was a grievous error somewhere, a grievous mistake somewhere when the arrears of pensions bill was considered.

Mr. WITHERS. Perhaps I can explain to my friend one source of the error. The estimate which was read here was predicated upon the proposition of the Pension Committee by which the arrears of pension were to be paid only from the date applications for pensions had been filed, but as it subsequently passed it dated back clear to the time of discharge or disability, involving of course a very much larger amount of money.

Mr. THURMAN. All I can say is that the explanation may be entirely satisfactory, no doubt it is, but that is not what the Senate understood. Undoubtedly we did understand, we had the impression, that the amount to be taken out of the Treasury by the arrears of pension bill could not exceed $20,000,000 at the outside. I say again I should have voted for that bill if I had known all that I now know, but perhaps there are others who would not; at all events they are grievously disappointed to hear it said now that that bill will take fifty or sixty millions out of the Treasury. I hope it will not do any such thing, and I hope the chairman will be able to assure the country that there is no danger of its doing any such thing.

Mr. President, there are some other considerations, but I will not trouble the Senate with them now.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I am in favor of this amendment. While in charge of the Interior Department I sought in every way to search out and prevent the payment of fraudulent pensioners. I asked for an appropriation of at least $100,000 for the purpose of sending surgeons from one section to another to make investigations. The great source of fraud on the Pension Bureau arises from popular sympathy in the neighborhood where the parties seeking pensions reside. The surgeon before whom a case is tried has his sympathies deeply enlisted for the pensioner or applicant; the witnesses have their sympathies deeply excited for the pensioner; and we are looked on as a great and rich Government, so that with a poor soldier on one side and the Government on the other the Government stands no chance whatever in the controversy.

Now, sir, while this may not be a perfect measure, while I have not had time to examine to see how nearly perfect it is, it is a very great improvement upon the present system. Substantially it does what I asked to have done two or three years ago. It sends examining surgeons to points with which they are not familiar to examine persons of whom they know little or nothing, and it enables disinterested and well-informed men to decide upon each case on its merits.

Now, sir, allusion has been made to the expense. It is true it will entail some expense; but I said two or three years ago that if Congress would give me $100,000 to send experts from one portion of the country to examine the pensioners in another, I thought with that $100,000 I could save a million a year. I believe now that we could have done it, and I believe that this amendment, if passed, will be a measure of economy, commencing from its first inception. I am, therefore, in favor of this amendment to the bill, and hope it will be passed, because it is some improvement, although it may not be all that is desired. Future legislation can remedy any defect that may be found in it if the same system be not pursued, though to a certain extent it must be; but the great, the chief obstacle in the way of judicious allowances will be removed by this measure.

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President, the Senator from Ohio who has departed from the Chamber since he made the inquiry, and to whom therefore I cannot personally respond, made an allusion to a statement that I addressed to the Senate when what is known as the arrears of pension bill was under consideration, to the effect that I believed the amount required to render that measure operative would be about $18,000,000 or $20,000,000. Since that time there have been many allegations in the press and elsewhere that this was largely beneath what would be demanded, and that the amount might rise as high as thirty, or forty, or fifty millions, and I have heard it estimated even at twice the largest amount that I have named. Justice to myself requires me to again repeat the statement that, from authentic information then derived and still in my possession from the Department of the Interior, I still am of opinion that the amount required will not be in excess of $20,000,000, and I will state the data from which I form that estimate.

On the 6th day of June, 1876, this subject was under consideration by the Senate, and I obtained from the then and present Commissioner of Pensions, J. A. Bentley, a statement as to the amount that would then be required to pay arrears under existing laws. At that date, June 6, 1876, the total amount, under all cases then on the roll, invalids, widows, and dependents, required to pay arrears back to the date of death or disability was estimated to have been $13,417,109. Of course I must again repeat what I stated when the bill was under discussion, that these computations must be largely in the nature of conjectures, because it is impossible to state specifically what will be required in each individual case without positive examination. The Commissioner stated further that the sum of $2,000,000 would be necessary between the 1st day of January, 1876, and the 6th of June, 1876, in addition to the amount that he had named, making the amount required to that date $15,417,109. For the fiscal year 1877-78 he estimated that the sum of $4,000,000 would be required, making $19,417,109. I added to that upon the same basis the further sum of $4,000,000 for the fiscal year 1878-79, which would make a grand aggregate of $23,417,109. But it must be remembered that the pension-rolls are diminished about 2 per cent. annually by death, and arrears of pensions were not to be paid to the survivors of those who died. Therefore, after the period named, this would make a deduction of 10 per cent. on the entire amount, which deducted from the $23,417,109 leaves the aggregate of $18,733,687, which is within the largest amount I then named. Justice, as I said, to myself and to the Senate requires me to make this detailed statement of the estimate that I then gave as to the amount that would be required to put the bill into operation.

The Commissioner estimates, I believe, now that the sum of $25,000,000 may be required during the current year, including those already upon the rolls with those that may be placed upon the rolls hereafter; but I still adhere to the statement I made when the bill was passed, that $20,000,000 is a large and liberal estimate of the amount that will be required to make the bill efficacious.

But I want to call the attention of the Senate to one other fact which has escaped their attention hitherto, that the pending amendment which I have offered contains a section in addition to those regarding the administration of the bureau.

Mr. CONKLING. Before the Senator goes to that, will he indulge me in a question?

Mr. INGALLS. Certainly.

Mr. CONKLING. If $20,000,000 be the total required by the arrears of pension bill, why does the Pension Committee of this body report $25,000,000 on account?

Mr. INGALLS. The question of the Senator from New York would be pertinent if he were unaware of the fact that this bill was not reported by the Committee on Pensions, never has been before them. It was reported by the Committee on Appropriations, which absorbs very generally the entire functions of this body on financial matters, and we never were honored with an inspection of the bill until it came upon our table. So that the Committee on Appropriations is responsible for the estimate, and not the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CONKLING. Then I am glad I asked the Senator the question to enable him to make that statement. I supposed the Committee on Pensions in some form had had the bill under consideration.

Mr. INGALLS. I do not complain of the question. The ninth section of the amendment which I have offered, and which has the sanction of the Committee on Pensions, provides:

SEC. — All pensions which have been, or which may hereafter be, granted in consequence of death occurring from a cause which originated in the service since the 4th day of March, 1861, or in consequence of wounds or injuries received or disease contracted since that date, shall commence from the death or discharge of the person on whose account the claim has been or is hereafter granted, or from the termination of the right of party having prior title to such pension: Provided, The application for such pension has been or is hereafter filed with the Commissioner of Pensions prior to the 1st day of January, 1880, otherwise the pension shall commence from the date of filing the application; but the limitation herein prescribed shall not apply to claims by or in behalf of insane persons, and children under sixteen years of age.

The Committee on Pensions believe that arrears of pension should not be paid after the 1st of January, 1880; that that would leave a sufficiently long period since the termination of the war to allow all claims properly referable to the war to be adjudicated without giving pensions back to the date of the disability or discharge.

With regard to one other point made by the Senator from Ohio and also the Senator from Missouri, both of whom admit that they are unfamiliar with the provisions of the amendment and with the present system of administration, that this would involve a largely increased expenditure, I have to repeat again the statement I made last evening, that this will result economically in the present system of administration, to say nothing about the vast saving that will be made in the annual expenditure. To be specific, the present expenses of the administration of the Pension Bureau are $697,630, distributed as follows:

For official salaries, $488,330.

Examining surgeons' fees for 1877-78, $169,300.

Expenses of special agents, $40,000.

Making the aggregate which I have previously represented. Under the system proposed by the amendment offered by the Pension Committee, how will it be?

Mr. DAWES. Will the Senator state whether that includes the pay of pension agents?

Mr. INGALLS. This statement I have here does not refer specifically to that; and I am not positive about it.

Under the administration of the system proposed by the amendment offered by the Committee on Pensions, the amount was correctly stated by the Senator from Ohio, that the one hundred and twenty surgeons and clerks would require salaries to the amount of $300,000; actual expenses of transportation, estimated at $300 each, $30,000; making an aggregate of $330,000, which would leave from the present amount required to carry on the office the sum of $367,630. But it is estimated that in consequence of the operation of this law we shall be able to dispense with at least one-half of the working force of the bureau here in this city. They have now about three hundred and eighty employés, divided into copyists, heads of divisions, and reviewers, and we shall be able under this system to cut off one-half of them, leaving the sum of $367,000 amply sufficient and more than sufficient to carry on the office here at Washington.

Therefore, Mr. President, this is a matter of economy even regarded with respect to the administration of the office here, to say nothing about the fact that there is no doubt that, properly carried out, this system would result in an annual saving on the pension-list of from three to five millions of dollars.

The Senator from Ohio also made one other suggestion in regard to the practical operations of this amendment, that notwithstanding the adoption of this amendment the present method could be carried on the same as now; but he will find by examining the amendment very carefully that all the sections of the Revised Statutes, with regard to the administration of the system under the present method, are repealed. Therefore his objection is entirely without force.

Mr. SHIELDS. Mr. President, since I spoke a few words upon this question a while ago I have examined the details of the proposed amendment, and I submit to my learned and able friend from Kansas, as a lawyer, whether it is not one of the most singularly loosely worded bills that ever came into the Senate. Like the Heathen Chinee, it is a little peculiar. First, the Pension Bureau or the Department of the Interior can have as many posts or as few posts as it pleases in any and every State, from one to a thousand, with no limitation.

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator will allow me to say that the discretion must be lodged somewhere. Of course Congress cannot prescribe how many pension agents or pension surgeons shall be in any State, because they are without the information as to the number of cases in the State. There are some where none would be required, some where not more than two would be required; therefore the discretion must be left to the officer having this system in charge.

Mr. SHIELDS. I admit it, but it is a discretion that should have some limitation.

Mr. INGALLS. It has a limitation.

Mr. SHIELDS. Not here.

Mr. INGALLS. The limitation is that they at no time shall exceed sixty.

Mr. SHIELDS. The districts shall not exceed sixty, the amendment says; but the posts are unlimited. The Senator never drafted such a bill; he has too high legal ability to draft such an instrument as this.

First, they can appoint as many posts as they please, but in the State of Missouri I do not think we shall have more than one, for we are not a favored State. Next, they can drag every pensioner in the State of Missouri from his home, if his wife is dying and his children all sick, and drag him just as often as they please to that post, not merely once or twice a year, but any number of times, and they may compel him to go there with all his witnesses. That is also indefinite and without limitation. Is that the proper way to treat your pensioners?

Mr. INGALLS. It is entirely voluntary. A man is not obliged to take a pension unless he wants it. The Government does not compel a man to draw a pension. If he does not want to go and be examined he need not.

Mr. SHIELDS. He has not only to go to get the pension, but after he gets it they can drag him here and there fifty or one hundred times a year to debate his pension, according to their discretion.

Mr. INGALLS. Under what section does the Senator find that power?

Mr. SHIELDS. Look at that, sir, [pointing to a section;] there it is. Then they can have these pensioners going to these posts over and over, according to the discretion of these gentlemen here in Washington.

In the next place, what notice are they to give the pensioners?

What notice do you provide for these poor old pensioners? Just such notice as it pleases this bureau to give them; it may be a notice of one day or it may be one month. In how many papers is it to be published? One paper, such as the bureau chooses to select.

The whole measure is a sham from beginning to end. When I say "sham" I do not charge it upon the distinguished Senator from Kansas; but having run over it—I only wish I had time to point out its features—I should like to know who actually devised such a bill. He ought to have a leather medal, and I call upon the pensioners of America to give him one.

All this testimony is to be reduced to writing. After dragging the pensioners from their homes with all their witnesses, whom they must go to the expense of summoning, then the testimony is to be reduced to writing by way of simplifying the system, by way of making it a working system, and it is to be reduced to writing in the language of the witnesses; then it is to be forwarded to the Commissioner of Pensions, and then this board is to examine. And who are they? Surgeons who are experienced in the practice of medicine and surgery! And who are the clerks? What kind of clerks? "Clerks learned in the law." You are to go to this bureau to get "clerks learned in the law." I do not think they have clerks who are learned in the law. That is my opinion. And yet the "clerks learned in the law" are to be sent to regulate the pension system. That is a beautiful specimen of regulation! Sir, it needs regulation, and it needs regulation for the safety of the Government and the Treasury, and more for the safety of the honest portion of the pensioners and not the fraudulent ones. This will increase the difficulty of honest men. Are poor old pensioners who are now on the brink of the grave to be dragged from their homes before this commission, composed of a clerk learned in the law and a surgeon learned in medicine and surgery?

I dislike to speak in this way, but when I know how it is going to operate I cannot sit silent in my place and see such a thing done. I do not say injustice is intended, not at all, certainly not by the committee, nor even by the men who framed this measure, for I do not believe they are capable of seeing or knowing where or how injustice is to be prevented.

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President, this measure has been carefully examined by the Secretary of the Interior, by the Assistant Attorney-General assigned to duty in that Department, by the Commissioner of Pensions, by the Committee on Pensions, a majority of whom are lawyers, and they all stand by it and approve it. It is unnecessary for me to go further than that. If it is loosely drawn it has passed the supervision of men (laying the Committee on Pensions out of sight for the moment) who are learned in the law, and accustomed to consider the strength and the language of statutes.

The great difficulty that attends the administration of the present system has been well adverted to by the Senator from Michigan, [Mr. CHANDLER,] who was at one time at the head of the Department of the Interior, and that is, that the Government is continually at a disadvantage whenever a claim is made against it by a pensioner. The examining surgeons under the present system are always selected from the locality, and when a pensioner or a pension claimant goes before that man to be examined as to the rate to which he should be assigned, it may be that he is his family physician. In any event he is under the local neighborhood influences that dispose the officer to judge everything in favor of the claimant, and altogether against the Government, and that is the great difficulty that the Department has to contend with, and one great difficulty that this bill is intended to obviate by creating a board of examining surgeons independent of local and neighborhood influences, who will judge of these as they judge of any other claims against the Government. That is all there is of it.

And then, so far as the formation of this board is concerned, I suppose instead of having them learned in the law or having them skilled in medicine, the Senator from Missouri would have them composed of blacksmiths or of some other class of mechanical artisans, judging that a man who has no knowledge of law and no knowledge of medicine would be much better qualified to judge as to the physical condition of a man who claims to be disabled or the legal effect of testimony on which a claim is to be decided than those who had never had any knowledge either of law or of medicine. I do not think the Senator from Missouri, if he were to seriously consider that argument, would be inclined to urge it, that when a pensioner is to be examined as to the degree of his physical disability it is an objection to have him examined by a surgeon; that a surgeon would know less about it than a blacksmith; and that when testimony is to be examined and its effect to be considered as to the establishing of a claim against the Government it is more desirable to have a dry-goods merchant examine that testimony than it is to have some man who has had a knowledge of the law which enables him to judge of the value of evidence. I do not suppose the Senator from Missouri intended to be anything but facetious in making the objection against this measure that it provided that the men who examine the claimants shall be surgeons and the men who examine the testimony shall be lawyers.

Mr. SHIELDS. If the honorable Senator will permit me I ask him seriously in examining the disability of pensioners what service clerks from the Pension Bureau learned in the law can do in examining wounds?

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator from Missouri again shows what he candidly admitted, that he is not familiar with the provisions of this measure. The clerks learned in the law from the Pension Office have nothing to do with the examining of the wounds of a pensioner. The physical condition of the pensioner, the rate at which he shall be placed upon the pension-roll, is a subject to be reported upon by the examining surgeon, and in selecting those surgeons men who have had ten years' experience in the Army or Navy by the terms of the section are to be selected. Therefore I will suggest, with a great deal of deference to the Senator from Missouri, that before criticising the measure it would be well for him to familiarize himself with its provisions. I should admit that if clerks learned in the law were to be selected from the Pension Bureau to examine about diseases or wounds, the bill would be reprehensible; but I beg to assure the distinguished Senator that he is entirely mistaken in supposing that to be the object or purport of the bill. Those clerks learned in the law are to devote their attention to the examination of the testimony that is taken that is to be offered in support of these claims, and I presume the Senator would not object seriously to that class of men being selected for that purpose, because he is aware, or if he is not he should be aware, that there is a quasi-judicial determination in all these claims. The difficulty hitherto has been that that examination has been conducted upon testimony confessedly ex parte, and in which the Government has no opportunity either for the production of witnesses or their cross-examination, except in cases where specific allegations are made that fraud has been committed, and then it can detail special agents to examine particular cases.

I therefore think, Mr. President, that these criticisms fall harmless to the ground, and that if there is nothing more serious to be urged than this the amendment submitted ought to pass.

In this connection I beg to say one word further, asking the indulgence of the Senate for having trespassed so long upon their patience, and that is, unless some method is adopted by which the proceedings before this bureau can be simplified and the amount of labor removed from them, the whole administration will simply be crushed and the wheels will cease to revolve simply by the avalanche of papers and claims and letters and applications that are coming in at the rate of thousands every day. The Commissioner at the head of that bureau is a man, I believe, of singular capacity for the functions that he is called upon to perform. I believe that he has discharged his duties with ability and integrity, and with an honest desire to relieve the Government and the pensioners; but it is impossible for him, with the force at his disposition, if these additional duties are to be crowded into that office, to even answer the letters for information that reach him day by day. If Senators see fit, under captious criticisms or criticisms not captious, criticisms that are based upon objections to the bill not supplemented by suggestions for anything better, to allow this subject to go on and on until by the mere precipitation of business justice is to be denied to the honest and the dishonest alike, to the Government and the pensioner, all that I can say is that I have discharged my duty in calling their attention to the subject. Whether the amendment is voted up or voted down is to me a matter of absolute personal indifference, but I believe the subject is one that is of momentous importance, and that the amendment ought not to be fought upon mere frivolous objections; but if there is opposition to it, those who oppose it ought to suggest something better in the place of what is proposed by the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HOWE. Mr. President, I am sorry to see any opposition to the amendment moved on behalf of the Committee on Pensions. I am sorry to see an opposition come from any quarter. I am especially sorry to see an opposition urged in the name of honest pensioners. I am very sure that honest pensioners have no occasion to object to this amendment; they have nothing to fear from being dragged before any intelligent and any honest commission. Besides that, if there be a disposition in the Pension Office or elsewhere to deprive an honest pensioner of his monthly or quarterly stipend by a re-examination of his claim, the commissioner has the authority to do it and the agencies through which to do it now. He can send a special agent at any time to examine any such claim; but I think every Senator knows that it would be a very hazardous undertaking for a special agent or for the commission provided in this amendment to go into any neighborhood and make an issue with an honest pensioner. The sympathy surrounding all such citizens of the United States I think is abundant protection to him. The danger is not that honest pensioners will be deprived of their pensions, but the danger is that this public sympathy which exists, and exists everywhere in all communities, on the part of those who pretend to have been disabled in the military service of the United States, will open the Treasury to frauds and cheating. That is the state of the case.

Mr. President, every Senator sees what the issue is here, and who are parties to it. Everybody knows that you have imposed new work on the Pension Bureau, very heavy labor; and that is not all; you have exposed that bureau to new dangers in the way of frauds. Hitherto your laws have said, if a man made a claim for a pension you would pay him so much a month, and whenever his claim proved to be baseless he should be struck from the roll of pensioners. That holds out but slight inducement to fraud. A man is not so apt to go to work and manufacture the testimony to get his name on the pension-roll when he knows that the moment his cheat is discovered his monthly payments will stop; and yet, where there is no more inducement than that, enormous frauds have been perpetrated upon the Treasury. Recently one was exposed in the State of Maine. I am told where one individual there obtained, I think something like $80,000, though I will not be positive as to the amount, (I have been told by one Senator from that State what the amount was, I think something like $80,000,) upon claims presented in the names of widows of deceased officers who died without ever having been married.

Mr. INGALLS. If I may interrupt the Senator one moment, a Senator on the floor has stated to me within the last thirty minutes that he knew of a case in his own State where one of these pension agents had continued to draw the pension of a woman who had been dead three years to his knowledge, and recently it has been discovered.

Mr. HOWE. So you see that enormous frauds, bold, bald frauds, are perpetrated under the law as it stands, and with the little inducement that that law holds out. But in this recent enactment of yours, which says to every claimant for a pension, "If you recover you not only recover monthly pay for the future but you recover from several hundred to several thousand dollars cash in hand by way of arrears," there is a bonus; there is a specific sum to work for; there is a heavy inducement, because the man who succeeds now in recovering those arrears, if he is struck from the pension-roll the next month, has recovered a large sum and has got it in his pocket, and the Government will never recover it.

I put it to every Senator if this is not a singular condition of things. Ex parte testimony has been adjudged for three hundred years to be so unsafe, so unreliable, that the law will not permit judgment to be based upon such testimony which involves the title to an old kettle, which involves the title to any property whatever; and yet with that experience as to the unreliability of ex parte testimony you are to-day paying nearly $30,000,000 annually out of the Treasury to men who have recovered it upon precisely this kind of testimony.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I should like to ask the Senator from Wisconsin if we are not every day putting persons upon the pension-roll in the Senate and in the other House upon ex parte testimony alone?

Mr. HOWE. Yes, sir; I suppose so.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I ask the Senator if all the persons who have been put upon the pension-roll by special acts of Congress have not been put there upon ex parte evidence?

Mr. HOWE. I suppose so. Does that prove that it is safe?

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not think it is a safe rule; I do not think the general law upon the subject provided the proper safeguards for the protection of the fund; but as the Senator from Wisconsin was making his argument in favor of the amendment upon the ground that pensioners under the general law were placed there upon ex parte testimony I deemed it proper to call his attention to the action of this body and the other House of Congress daily in acting in the same way.

Mr. HOWE. Certainly, we pass claims of large amounts at every session on ex parte testimony. We are in a measure compelled to act upon ex parte testimony or not to act at all. We never should act if in the case of every private bill we called for a hearing before commissioners or sent the issue down to be tried before a jury, or if we called witnesses before our committees and subjected them to cross-examination. There is, in spite of the unreliability of ex parte testimony, abundant excuse for our legislating upon it when we cannot do any better; but there is no excuse for our relying upon it when we can do better. This amendment proposes to do better. It claims to suggest to us, to offer to us, an improved and a securer system of adjudicating claims for pensions. It does not, as was suggested by the Senator from Ohio, prohibit the Commissioner from acting still upon ex parte evidence in cases free from suspicion, but it gives to him the means of having a public examination before commissioners who are charged to inquire truthfully and fully, not merely to hear the formal declarations which make out a case under the law, but to inquire as to the means of knowledge which the witness has, to cross-examine, in other words, and to summon, if need be, witnesses on the other side. What honest claimant can be prejudiced by this method? On the other hand, is there any man who can suggest or will venture to state that this does not furnish some security to the Government against dishonest claims? Perhaps it is not adequate, but it is a security better than none, and it is the best security yet suggested. Who recommends that to us? First, the Secretary of the Interior, who is a skilled and known officer.

Mr. SHIELDS. Is there any assurance at all that the Secretary of the Interior favors the provisions of the amendment of the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. HOWE. I have in my hand in print a letter which purports to have come from the Secretary of the Interior. It bears his signature, and is dated on the 18th of the present month, and it calls attention to the necessity of these provisions. Although he does not refer to any amendment reported by the Committee on Pensions, if I understand the letter and understand the amendment, the Secretary is discussing this precise question. Therefore I say the Secretary of the Interior approves this measure. The chairman of the Committee on Pensions stated that as a fact when he was on the floor. The Commissioner of Pensions approves it, I know, for he spoke about it to me no longer ago than this morning. He also is a known person. I think he is known to most of the Senators, if not to all. He is well known to me, and has been for years, and I know him not merely for a faithful officer but for a very capable officer. He recommends this measure, and almost the whole Committee on Pensions recommend it.

In addition to that, our attention has been called to a protest against it. That is one of the strongest commendations the measure has, for that protest is nameless, is anonymous, and it originated in rascality. No Senator will doubt that rascality was at the bottom of that protest. It is pretty safe, then, to do that which professional rascals tell you to avoid. When you know men organized for plundering the Treasury advise you against a specific measure, it is pretty safe for you to take that measure if you want to protect the Treasury. On the one side you are exhorted by every responsible officer connected with this branch of the public service to clothe them with the means of protecting the Treasury, and on the other side you are admonished by the men whom you know have designs on the Treasury to let this measure alone.

But, Mr. President, it is said this measure will prove expensive. Undoubtedly it will prove somewhat expensive. The chairman of the Committee on Pensions thinks that less money will be expended in the administration of that bureau under this proposed law than under the existing law; but you cannot safely administer any of the affairs of this Government without its costing you something. If this measure is required to protect the Treasury the cost of it is not to deter us from acquiescing in it.

It has been said that the existing law is too complicated, and that this measure will only complicate it more. I am not very familiar with the pension laws. I did not suppose they were very complicated. As I understand them, they contain specific grants of specific sums to such persons as have been disabled in the military service of the United States, or to such persons as have been bereaved by the death of those who were in the military service—leaving those few facts to be adjudged by the Commissioner upon such testimony as the parties claiming pensions saw fit to collect and send forward. That does not seem to me to be very complicated. Very stupid people have succeeded, and very great rogues have succeeded, in taking advantage of it. Nor do I think this provision makes the law any more costly. It is just as easy for a witness to appear before these commissioners and answer questions as to appear before a justice of the peace, or the clerk of a court, or any other officer before whom affidavits are now allowed to be made. There is nothing complicated about it, only that it will happen that the whole duty of the witness is not discharged when he has answered the formal questions put to him by the claimant; but he will have other questions put to him by those representing the Government.

But the Senator from Ohio says, and I was rather surprised to hear that, that he would have no confidence in these examinations made by surgeons, that they were not to be trusted. He seemed to think the lawyers, the legal part of the commission, would be entitled to some confidence, but the medical portion not to any. When the question is whether a man is or is not disabled, whether he has or has not a disease, when and how that disease was contracted, ordinarily I would prefer to trust a medical gentleman to a legal gentleman with that inquiry. I think the Senator from Ohio when he has such a question to determine usually consults the medical profession in spite of his very natural and very laudable attachment to the legal profession.

Mr. HOAR. And a medical gentleman who sees the patient.

Mr. HOWE. And a medical gentleman who sees the patient, rather than to any kind of gentleman who reads affidavits as to what witnesses may say about the condition of the patient. I think it furnishes additional security. I think it is one means of protection. I think they will prove very important adjuncts to this commission, and I should be very sorry to see the Senate refuse to give to the Pension Bureau the assistance called for by this amendment. I can see no possible danger to grow out of it. It seems to me that positive security is promised by it.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. No. 852) granting a pension to Mary E. Pauley; and

A bill (S. No. 1763) for the relief of Albert U. Wyman, late Treasurer of the United States.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. No. 100) to amend section 2958 of the Revised Statutes;

A bill (H. R. No. 5271) for the relief of the heirs and legal representatives of Richard Stevenson, late assistant quartermaster of volunteers, and his bondsmen;

A bill (H. R. No. 6515) respecting protests or appeals from decisions of collector of customs, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 6516) to amend section 3697 of the Revised Statutes, with respect to interest on surrendered or called bonds;

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 247) authorizing the remission of duty on two articles of bronze presented to Hon. R. C. McCormick by American exhibitors at the Paris exhibition; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 248) in regard to remission of duties.

The message further announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution for the printing of 12,000 copies of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of the late Terrence J. Quinn, late a Representative from the State of New York; in which the concurrence of the Senate was requested.

The message further announced that the House had passed a resolution authorizing the Clerk of the House of Representatives to correct an error in the spelling of a name in enrolled bill (H. R. No. 4392) for the relief of Lucinda C. Dillahunty; in which the concurrence of the Senate was requested.

The message also announced that the House had concurred in the amendments of the Senate to the concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives authorizing the printing of memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of the late Gustave Schleicher.

The message further announced that the House had concurred in the amendments of the Senate to the concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives authorizing the printing of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of the late Julian Hartridge.

The message also announced that the House had concurred in the amendments of the Senate to the concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives authorizing the printing of the memorial addresses delivered in the Senate and House of Representatives upon the life and character of the late Alpheus S. Williams.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (H. R. No. 247) to grant a pension to George D. Phillips, a soldier of the war of 1812;

A bill (H. R. No. 541) for the relief of William H. Carmen;

A bill (H. R. No. 697) restoring the name of Benjamin Hollingsworth to the pension-roll;

A bill (H. R. No. 796) for the relief of Jenkins A. Fitzgerald, assistant surgeon United States Army;

A bill (H. R. No. 1144) for the relief of Ann Annis, widow of Harvey Annis, late second lieutenant Company G, Fifty-first Regiment United States Colored Infantry;

A bill (H. R. No. 1243) for the relief of Josephine C. Owen, postmaster at Randolph, New York;

A bill (H. R. No. 1277) donating condemned cannon and cannon-balls to the Colechester Monument Association, of Colechester, Connecticut, for monumental purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 1278) donating condemned cannon and cannon-balls to Ledyard Monument Association, of Ledyard, Connecticut, for monumental purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 1286) granting relief to John T. Neale, an employee of the Provost-Marshal-General's department in 1861, for injuries sustained in the line of his duties;

A bill (H. R. No. 1304) granting a pension to Anna M. Clippinger;

A bill (H. R. No. 2394) for the relief of Leonard L. Lancaster, late sergeant Second Regiment Cavalry, Wisconsin Volunteers;

A bill (H. R. No. 2961) for the relief of Jarvis Jackson, of Laurel County, Kentucky;

A bill (H. R. No. 3434) releasing title to a certain cemetery lot to the city of Montgomery, Alabama;

A bill (H. R. No. 3558) for the relief of Second Lieutenant Thomas T. Knox, regimental quartermaster First Cavalry;

A bill (H. R. No. 3575) granting an increase of pension to Josephine Da C. Thomas;

A bill (H. R. No. 3598) granting a pension to Alice B. Munroe;

A bill (H. R. No. 3853) for the relief of William F. Wheeler;

A bill (H. R. No. 3871) donating condemned cannon to the city of Boston for monumental purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 4092) donating a condemned cannon and cannon-balls to Post No. 145, Grand Army of the Republic, district of Massachusetts;

A bill (H. R. No. 4294) to increase the pension of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Roberts;

A bill (H. R. No. 4385) granting an increase of pension to Caroline Hawley;

